THE END OF THE CENTURY.

Next to the Sampson-Schley controversy in point of merit comes the discussion over the true end of the century. Some persons insist that we are now in the 20th century. It would be a sad thing if we were compelled to cut the 19th century out of the only year in which the figure 19 figures. The century begins with the first day of the first year, 1801, and ends with the last day of the hundredth year, 1900. But what doth it profit a man to gain the argument if he lose his own temper? If the century ended last Sunday there must have been a year 0.

Suppose that French scientist had discovered his elixir of life earlier and had squirted it into the veins of a child who was born on the 1st day of the 1st month of the year 1. On January 1, 1900, he would have been 1899 years old, being in his 1900th year.

When we write January 1, 1900, we do not mean that the Christian era is 1900 years old, but that it is 1899 years and one day old. We reckon the months and days the same way, but in computing the age of a man we say he is 40 years old during his 41st year. We write 1-1-'00. It would be proper to write what we mean: 1st—1st '00th—the first day of the first month of the 1900th year. We often see a date written as follows: January 1st, 1900. To make it conform strictly it should be either January 1, 1900, or January 1st, 1900th.

A friend of ours has a great desire to see a certain article published in the Greenbrier Independent about two years ago discouraging the building of a railroad from Caldwell up the Greenbrier to the forks of the river. It would be very interesting reading to us also, and if we had only not lost the copy in which it appeared we would take a malicious delight in publishing it ourselves. The Times had published a statement saying that that the route along the banks of the Greenbrier was the only practical route for a railroad to develop this section of the country. A correspondent who is to us, and, doubtless, "to fortune and to fame" unknown, answered it in the Greenbrier Independent, which able journal said neither yes nor nay to it, but published it in a conspicuous place. The correspondent was very hard on us for presuming to tell Mr Axtell anything about building railroads, but the burden of his song was the absurdity of the idea that a railroad could be built into Pocahontas by way of the river.

The Wetzel Democrat calls attention to the impropriety of ex-Senator Faulkner taking the case of N. B. Scott as an attorney. The Democratic party of West Virginia is united in opposition to Scott's retaining his seat under the election. It was only secured by depriving State Senator Kidd of his vote and consequently his district of representation. Scott might have had the benefit of the doubt if Kidd had been turned down for good, but afterwards his seat was miraculously restored to him. It is to explain and uphold such practices that Senator Faulkner has accepted a fee. Such a lawyer would take a case against his mother. He is to use his influence and his knowledge of law and precedents in cases of this kind which he has acquired as Democratic representative from West Virginia. He has been loaded with favors by his party all his life and this is the result? To quote from the Latin, "When you have pronounced him an ingrate you have said all."

According to the will of D. B. Ford, the late publisher of the Youth's Companion, that paper will be continued hereafter for the benefit of the Ingalls Social Union. He left an estate valued at $1,500,000, all of which goes to charities.

Some Pocahontas friends "knock" anything from that corn-growing section we hear of for a week to cop cussers at us for "Unionism" from there. "Tain't many we disagree about the four leaves." There are a goodish lot of ladies, some of whom were as big as Uncle Sam's Rock.

THE ABSENT-MINDED BEGGAR.

By Rudyard Kipling.

When you've shouted "Rule Britannia" when you've sung "God Save the Queen"
When you've finished killing Kruger with your mouth—
Will you kindly drop a shilling in my little tambourine
For a gentleman in khaki ordered South?
He's an absent minded beggar and his weaknesses are great—
But we and Paul must take him as we find him—
He is out on active service, wiping something off a slate—
And he's left a lot o' little things behimd him!

Duke's son—cook's son—son of a hundred kings—
(Fifty thousand horse and foot going to Table Bay!)
Each of 'em doing his country's work (and who's to look after their things?)
Pass the hat for your credit's sake and pay! pay! pay!

There are girls he married secret, asking no permission to,
For he knew he wouldn't get it if he did.
There is gas and coal and vittles and the house-rent falling due,
And it's more than rather likely there's a kid.
There are girls he walked with casual, They'll be sorry now he's gone
For an absent minded beggar they will find him;
But it ain't the time for sermons with the winter coming on—
We must help the girl that Tommy's left behind him.

Cook's son—Duke's son—son of a belted Earl—
Son of a Lambeth publican—it's all the same to-day!
Each of 'em doing his country's work (and who's to look after the girl?
Pass the hat for your credit's sake, and pay! pay! pay!

There are families by the thousand, far too proud to beg or speak,
And they'll put their sticks and bedding up the spout,
And they'll live on half o' nothing paid 'em punctual once a week,
For the man that earns the wage is ordered out.
He's an absent-minded beggar, but he heard his country call,
And his sep'ment didn't need to send to find him:
He chucked his job and joined it—So the job before us all
It to keep the home that Tommy's left behind him!

Duke's job—cook's job—garden, parapet, groom—
Mews or palace or paper shop—there's some one gone away!
Each of 'em doing his country's work (and whose to look after the room?)
Pass the hat for your credit's sake and— pay! pay! pay!

Let us manage so as later we can look him in the face,
And tell him—what he'd very much prefer—
That while he saved the Empire his employer saved his place,
And his mates (that's you and me) looked out for her.
He's an absent-minded beggar, and he may forget it all,
But we do not want his kiddies to remind him
That we sent 'em to the work-house while their daddy hammered Paul,
So we'll help the homes our Tommy's left behind him!

Cook's home—Duke's home—home of a millionaire,
(Fifty thousand horse and foot going to Table Bay!)
Each of 'em doing his country's work (and what have you done, spare?)
Pass the hat for your credit's sake and—pay! pay! pay!

WEATHER NOTES.

We can generally count on winter weather for Christmas in West Virginia. This year it set in on the 23rd of December and since then we have had cold, dry, enjoyable winter weather. Up to that time the fall weather was almost perfect. It was a season of frosts and clear blue skies, with little rain fall. A gentleman who has lived in the West said, that it was typical Montana weather. That every year that section experiences weeks of such sunshiny days and cold nights. It has been a long time since West Virginia had such a fall season.

The contractors on the public works in this county did not miss a single day in over two months. The rains we had fell at night or on Sunday. Most of the laborers would have stopped for the holidays anyway, though the contractors moved heaven and earth trying to keep them here. But if they had remained it would have been impossible to have done any work. The snow covers the right of way, hiding all signs that the work has recently been done.

There is more ice in the county than ever we remember seeing. Forty or fifty years since there came a winter when the Greenbrier froze so solidly that it was used as a highway. Owing to the lowness of its tide the river is frozen so that it would be good sleighing on the ice.

There is an old saying which is in true to a general way, that if there is a break up in the ice before Christmas there will be three that winter. Otherwise there will will be but one. If the flood comes suddenly there will be a great break up this year. In addition to the vast amount of ice formed on the river there is a lot of logs, cut in clearing the right of way for the railroad, lying in the bed of the river. Altogether we may expect a notable breakup.

We have not had a flood since last spring. When the rains set down came to Marlinton in August they hauled some logs in the bed of Knapps Creek, attempting them tremendously for fortunes to come upon. Since then there has not been a flood to move them. On many farms of this county water for stock has been very scarce, especially since the farmers cease digging up many of the spoiler springs.

Since the Sheriff took charge of Berger from grinding other they have the appearance of country newspapers. If the fires was due of not the confinement would get $2.5 per copy of their subscriptions. During the first eight months of 1899 the corporations engineers were $1,000,000 less than the corresponding engineers were $1,000,000 less than the corresponding months of 1898. The house will be run under the management of H. H. Berry, proprietor.

Unpopular Army Officers.

"Whether young Major Logan was shot by his own men is a question that will probably never be settled," said a Confederate veteran last evening; "but it is an undeniable fact that things of that kind do sometimes happen in battle. During the Civil War such incidents were by no means unknown on either side. They were kept from the public as much as possible, but were none the less notorious in the armies. It is a very dangerous thing for a company officer to incur the hatred of his men, because he is generally pitted or with the line during the engagement, and can be picked off without much trouble.

"During the second year of the war I was a first lieutenant in an Alabama regiment, and the captain of my company, who was a good soldier but a man of ungovernable temper, had managed to make himself very unpopular with the rank and file. One day a corporal, who was a fine fellow and universally liked in the company, made some trifling blunder in carrying out an order, and the captain in usual turned loose. He gave the poor fellow a most unmerciful public cussing, and ordered him under arrest until he could think up some unusual and humiliating punishment. Just then our kindly old colonel happened along, heard the story, and called the captain to his tent. When the latter came out he was the most subdued and thoughtful individual I ever saw, and he immediately ordered the corporal released.

"Later on he told me the substance of their conversation. 'You are fixing to get killed in our very next engagement,' the colonel said and then went on to relate how he himself had been severely wounded by one of his own men during the Mexican War, all on account of unnecessary severities. 'It isn't on a life long lesson,' he said, earnestly, 'and I want you to profit by my experience.' From that day on the captain was a changed man and reformed the sullen fellow decided to be. He was finally killed, poor fellow, but by a Yankee bullet. I have personally refrained from mentioning any names, but several Alabama veterans now living in this city remember the incident." New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Proof of His Sex.

Mr Thomas Coppinger, Dayton, Tenn., says: "I have used Ballard's Liver Pills and Yucca Pellets for years, and can say my strength of them for the good they have done in my family. I wish to tell you especially what they did for my youngest son. It is thought he was killed, poor fellow, but by a Yankee bullet. I have personally refrained from mentioning any names, but several Alabama veterans now living in this city remember the incident." New Orleans Times-Democrat.

THE END OF THE CENTURY.

Next to the Sampson-Schley controversy in point of merit comes the discussion over the true end of the century. Some persons insist that we are now in the 20th century. It would be a sad thing if we were compelled to cut the 19th century out of the only year in which the figure 19 figures. The century begins with the first day of the first year, 1801, and ends with the last day of the hundredth year, 1900. But what does it profit a man to gain the argument if he lose his own temper? If the century ended last Sunday there must have been a year 0.

Suppose that French scientists had discovered his elixir of life earlier and had squirted it into the veins of a child who was born on the 1st day of the 1st month of the year 1. On January 1, 1900, he would have been 1899 years old, being in his 1900th year.

When we write January 1, 1900, we do not mean that the Christian era is 1900 years old, but that it is 1899 years and one day old. We reckon the months and days the same way, but in computing the age of a man we say he is 40 years old during his 41st year. We write 1-1-'00. It would be proper to write what we mean: 1st—1st '00th—the first day of the first month of the 1900th year. We often see a date written as follows: January 1st, 1900. To make it conform strictly it should be either January 1, 1900, or January 1st, 1900th.

A friend of ours has a great desire to see a certain article published in the Greenbrier Independent about two years ago discouraging the building of a railroad from Caldwell up the Greenbrier to the forks of the river. It would be very interesting reading to us also, and if we had only not lost the copy in which it appeared we would take a malicious delight in publishing it ourselves. The Times had published a statement saying that that the route along the banks of the Greenbrier was the only practical route for a railroad to develop this section of the country. A correspondent who is to us, and, doubtless, "to fortune and to fame" unknown, answered it in the Greenbrier Independent; which able journal said neither yes nor nay to it, but published it in a conspicuous place. The correspondent was very hard on us for presuming to tell Mr Axtell anything about building railroads, but the burden of his song was the absurdity of the idea that a railroad could be built into Pocahontas by way of the river.

The Wetzel Democrat calls attention to the impropriety of ex-Senator Faulkner taking the case of N. B. Scott as an attorney. The Democratic party of West Virginia is united in opposition to Scott's retaining his seat under the election. It was only secured by depriving State Senator Kidd of his vote and consequently his district of representation. Scott might have had the benefit of the doubt if Kidd had been turned down for good, but afterwards his seat was unceremoniously restored to him. Is it to explain and uphold such grievous that Senator Faulkner has accepted a fee. Such a lawyer would take a case against his mother. He is to use his influence and his knowledge of law and precedents in cases of this kind which he has acquired as Democratic representative from West Virginia. He has been loaded with favors by his party all his life and this is the result. To quote from the Latin, "Were you here pronounced him as impure you have said all."

According to the will of D. S. Ford, the late publisher of the Youth's Companion, that paper will be conducted hereafter for the benefit of the Baptist Social Union. He left an estate valued at $2,500,000, all of which goes to charities.

Rome (Italian Report). "Great excitement from that last outrageous fine we levied at her. I want to report now on the Transvaal." Rome. "The latest is dynamite under the first hotter. There was a perfect hail of bullets, some of which were as big as hen's eggs."—Punch.

THE ABSENT-MINDED BEGGAR.

By Rudyard Kipling.

When you've shouted "Rule Britannia"—when you've sung "God Save the Queen"—
When you've finished killing Kruger with your mouth—
Will you kindly drop a shilling in my little tambourine
For a gentleman in khaki ordered South?
He's an absent-minded beggar and his weaknesses are great—
But we and Paul must take him as we find him—
He is out on active service, wiping something off a slate—
And he's left a lot o' little things behind him!

Duke's son—cook's son—son of a hundred kings—
(Fifty thousand horse and foot going to Table Bay!)
Each of 'em doing his country's work (and who's to look after their things?)
Pass the hat for your credit's sake and pay! pay! pay!

There are girls he married secret, asking no permission to,
For he knew he wouldn't get it if he did.
There is gas and coal and vittles and the house-rent falling due,
And it's more than rather likely there's a kid.
There are girls he walked with casual. They'll be sorry now he's gone
For an absent-minded beggar they will find him;
But it ain't the time for sermons with the winter coming on—
We must help the girl that Tommy's left behind him.

Cook's son—Duke's son—son of a belted Earl—
Son of a Lambeth publican—it's all the same to-day!
Each of 'em doing his country's work (and who's to look after the girl?
Pass the hat for your credit's sake, and pay! pay! pay!

There are families by the thousand, far too proud to beg or speak,
And they'll put their slacks and bedding up the spout,
And they'll live on half o' nothing paid 'em punctual once a week,
For the man that earns the wage is ordered out.
He's an absent-minded beggar, but he heard his country call,
And his sons' wives didn't need to send to find him;
He chucked his job and joined it—So the job before us all
Is to keep the home that Tommy's left behind him!

Duke's job—cook's job—gardner, baronet, groom—
Mews or palace or paper-shop—there's some one gone away!
Each of 'em doing his country's work (and whose to look after the room?)
Pass the hat for your credit's sake and— pay! pay! pay!

Let us manage so as later we can look him in the face,
And tell him—what he'd very much prefer—
That while he saved the Empire his employer saved his place,
And his mates (that's you and me) looked out for her.
He's an absent-minded beggar, and he may forget it all,
But we do not want his kiddies to remind him
That we sent 'em to the work-house while their daddy hammered Paul.
So we'll help the homes our Tommy's left behind him!

Cook's home—Duke's home—home of a millionaire.
(Fifty thousand horse and foot going to Table Bay!)
Each of 'em doing his country's work (and what have you to spare?)
Pass the hat for your credit's sake and—pay! pay! pay!

WEATHER NOTES.

We can generally count on winter weather for Christmas in West Virginia. This year it set in on the 23rd of December and since then we have had cold, dry, enjoyable winter weather. Up to that time the fall weather was almost perfect. It was a season of frosts and clear blue skies, with little rain fall. A gentleman who has lived in the West said, that it was typical Montana weather. That every year that section experiences weeks of such sunshiny days and cold nights. It has been a long time since West Virginia had such a fall season.

The contractors on the public works in this county did not miss a single day in over two months. The rains we had fell at night or on Sunday. Most of the laborers would have stopped for the holidays anyway, though the contractors moved heaven and earth trying to keep them here. But if they had remained it would have been impossible to have done any work. The snow covers the right of way, hiding all signs that the work has recently been done.

There is more ice in the county than ever we remember seeing. Forty or fifty years since there came a winter when the Greenbrier froze so solidly that it was used as a highway. Owing to the lowness of its tide the river is frozen so that it would be good sleighing on the ice.

There is an old saying which is in true in a general way, that if there is a break up in the ice before Christmas there will be three that winter. Otherwise there will will be but one. If the flood comes suddenly there will be a good breakup this year. In addition to the vast amount of ice formed on the river there is a lot of logs, just clearing the right of way for the railroad, lying in the bed of the river. Altogether we may expect a notable breakup.

We have not had a flood since last spring. When the railroad men came to Marlinton in August they hauled some logs in the bed of Knapps Creek, attracting their owners costly for features to come again. Since then there has not been a flood to move them. On many farms of this county water for stock has been very scarce, especially since the freeze more dry-ing up many of the small springs.

Since the Wetzel took charge of Harper from printing office they have the sympathy of country contemporaries. If the fire was started and the dwelling would get $2.5 per cent of their indebtedness. During the first eight months of 1899 the corporations registered over $40,000 in the county's name. The house will be run under the management of H. B. Davis' nephew.

Unpopular Army Officers.

"Whether young Major Logan was shot by his own men is a question that will probably never be settled," said a Confederate veteran last evening; "but it is an undeniable fact that things of that kind do sometimes happen in battle. During the Civil War such incidents were by no means unknown on either side. They were kept from the public as much as possible, but were none the less notorious in the armies. It is a very dangerous thing for a company officer to incur the hatred of his men, because he is generally picked up with the line during the engagement, and can be picked off without much trouble.

"During the second year of the war I was a first lieutenant in an Alabama regiment, and the captain of my company, who was a good soldier but a man of ungovernable temper, had managed to make himself very unpopular with the rank and file. One day a corporal, who was a fine fellow and universally liked in the company, made some trifling blunder in carrying out an order, and the captain as usual turned loose. He gave the poor fellow a most unmerciful public cussing, and ordered him under arrest until he could think up some unusual and humiliating punishment. Just then our kindly old colonel happened along, heard the story, and called the captain to his tent. When the latter came out he was the most subdued and thoughtful individual I ever saw, and he immediately ordered the corporal released.

"Later on he told me the substance of their conversation. 'You are going to get killed in our very next engagement,' the colonel said, and then went on to relate how he had himself had been severely wounded by one of his own men during the Mexican War, all on account of unnecessary severities. 'It isn't or a life long lesson,' he said, generally, 'and I want you to profit by my experience.' From that day on the captain was a changed man and undoubtedly the soldiers found devoted to him. He was finally killed, poor fellow, but by a Yankee bullet. I have purposely refrained from mentioning any names, but several Alabama veterans now living in this city require but the hint."—New Orleans Times Democrat.

Proof of His Son.

Mr Thomas Coppinger, Dayton, Texas, says: I have used Hostetter's Stomach Bitters and Tonic Pellets for three years and they have been the best medicine for the good they have done to my family. I wish to tell you especially what they did for my youngest son. He brought to me one young to take pills, but when he was a little out of his depth I gave him Tonic Pellets at night for weeks for one child. So we endeavored during those to him regularly and from a pale, sickness child he improved considerably, and today he is as robust a lad as any boy of his age in the country. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters and Tonic Pellets are for sale by druggists and dealers generally.

Just a Cough

Not worth paying attention to, you say. Perhaps you have had it for weeks.

It's annoying, because you have a constant desire to cough. It annoys you also because you remember that we said it is ultimately fatal.

At first it is a slight cough. At last it is hemorrhage. At first it is easy to cure. At last, extremely difficult.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral

quickly conquers your little hacking cough.

There is no doubt about the cure now. Doubt comes from neglect.

For over half a century Ayer's Cherry Pectoral has been curing colds and coughs and preventing consumption. It cures Consumption also if taken in time.

Keep one at Dr. Ayer's Cherry Pectoral Plasters over your lungs if you cough.

Shall we send you a book on this subject?

Our Medical Department.

If you have any complaint which you may like to submit to the doctor, write him freely. Address for letter to Dr. J. C. Ayer, Lowell, Mass.

One of the very useful things for a housekeeper to know is to keep on hand a package of plaster of Paris. It can be made useful in mending broken chinaware. Mixed with the white of an egg an excellent cement is made. Apply to some side of the fracture and join the edges quickly. This cement is said to be stronger than the ware is white it does not show.

A meeting of the securities of J. C. Arbogast on his school bond was held at the court-house last Tuesday. We are authorized to say to the school draft holders that the money to pay them in full will be paid to the receivers appointed for that purpose by January 17, 1900. The receivers will immediately disburse the amount to those entitled to receive it.

A party of young people from Buckeye came up the river as far as Marlinton on skates one day last week. They were accompanied by Miss Dunbar, Miss Sharp, Miss Overholt, Minnie Buckley, John B. Buckley, Harper Adkison, Lute Young, Charles Young, Park McNeill, Jay Buckley, Job Buckley, D. P. Barnes, George Lightner, and Elmer Dunbar.

Five miles of track has been laid on the Greenbrier Railway. The work will progress steadily, it is thought, until the road is done. As the lower end is completed the rails will fall back and will be employed on the sections remaining unfinished, so that the work will progress more rapidly as it nears the end. A man connected with the railroad, and who is in a position to judge, said last week that trains would be running into Marlinton by June 1st. If this be the case the whole line will be completed next year.

By common consent the grippe is spoken of as one of the most pernicious maladies that has ever befallen afflicted humanity. Among the remedies that have been used the following is recommended as one of the simplest, and very efficacious when tried in time. The recipe is as follows: Take 30 grains of a half teaspoonful of bicarbonate of potash, which is the same thing, pure baking soda will do) in a couple of ounces of water. Take the ingredient every two or three hours, until relief is secured, which will seldom require over twenty-four hours.

Twenty-five or thirty years ago Jim Hill, Jerry Dilley and Jim Hamilton got the advantage out of Stewart Crawford, living near Huntersville, Pocahontas county, West Virginia, by buying a tract of land from him, which Stewart had purchased from the state of Virginia. The contract was on the condition that he give for an entry and locate it within a specified time. Stewart, by a mistake in the description, failed to locate the land within the time specified, and the land reverted to the state. Hill, Dilley and Hamilton, who had purchased the land from Stewart, then entered it and secured a patent for it. Stewart, who had lived on the land for many years, and had cleared a portion of it, was left without a foot of land. This is but one of many instances where land sharks have taken advantage of the ignorance of the mountaineers of Pocahontas.

Against the Pulp Mill.

The following dispatch to the Baltimore Sun shows that Cumberland is not taking its defeat very quietly.

A decidedly animated citizen's meeting was held in the Council chamber to night (Cumberland, December 28) to discuss the verdict of acquittal in the pulp mill case. It was decided to form a league to make an organized fight against the alleged pollution of the Potomac river. General Joseph Spring, who was chairman, said he believed in appeals to Congress and to the Maryland Legislature. He suggested trying to have a statute passed prohibiting the introduction or testimony with regard to other pollutions.

A committee on resolutions was appointed, consisting of Robert Schriver, president of the Council; J. W. S. Cochrane, Sigmund Tauber, George P. Hart, ex-Justice J. B. Widener, Samuel D. Young, C. C. Hedges, William P. Riser, William C. Devecmon, and Justice R. Morris. Upon advice of this committee it was decided to meet again Saturday to formulate definite plans.

Dr. Harvey Lane suggested the formation of a league, to fight for pure water, in which Rabbi J. S. Stern concurred, and a motion prevailed that the recretaries gather names for membership to such a league. J. Semmes Devecmon said he proposed to get a shot at the pulp mill himself tomorrow, when he would sweer out three warrents against them. Mr. David J. Lewis emphasized the necessity of spending money in fighting the issue. He said he was willing to have his own taxes doubled. Ex-Councilman Isaac Hirsch said a leader was necessary and Mr Cochrane declared strongly for a permanent league. Mr J. Semmes Devecmon, who is a member of the Cumberland bar, sent to Lake Forest for Robbin's sample of river water at the pulp mill. He waded toward the Maryland shore, and says he was interrupted by a dozen men, who told him he could n't get any water there, and taking him by the arm conducted him to the office of the pulp mill. He wanted to know by what authority he was arrested and the reply was: "By the company's authority." Mr Devecmon says he was taken before Mr Luke, who told him he was or private property.

W. A. Bratton Fights Fire.

W. A. Bratton, attorney-at-law, saved his home from burning last Sunday, but was himself badly burned in the effort. His parlor had been prettily decorated for Christmas with paper festooning, bunting and evergreens. He was sitting in the room Sunday afternoon about 3 o'clock, reading a Pearson's, when the decorations caught fire. In a few seconds the whole room was blazing.

He pulled the light inflammable stuff down, throwing some of it out of the window and putting the rest in the stove. The alarm of fire was given and several neighbors rushed in and succeeded in putting out the flames. The entire interior of the room was damaged, the piano, carpet, pictures, couch, etc., being badly burned. Mrs Bratton lost the greater part of a valuable lot of sheet music.

When the excitement was over to some extent Mr Bratton noticed that his hands were terribly burned. At one time it was thought that he might lose some of his fingers but it is thought that with care he will recover the use of both hands. He will be confined to his room however for sometime to come.

The loss to his personal effects is fully covered by an insurance policy which expires this month.

Wm. T. Beard Seriously Hurt.

Wm. T. Beard, one of the best known citizens of the county, is lying at his home near Mill Point in a very precarious condition. Last Friday afternoon the hands on his place were engaged in butchering hog, and thinking that they might not be in until late he started to the barn to do some butchering. He came back to the house in a few minutes and has been in a helpless state since, not able to give a clear idea of how he came to be hurt. It is supposed that he started to climb a ladder to the mow and fell back on the frozen ground.

Mr. Beard is 73 years of age and has been in delicate health for some time.

Let it Contract.

The Huntersville road was let to contract this week. J. S. Kramer receiving it at a bid of $2540. He has had an excellent bond but the securities living in Highland county, West Virginia, the contract was on the condition that he give for security some one living in or owning property in the county. The other bids submitted were:

Arnold, by A. H. Pickering, $2,600; J. W. Gibson, $2,700; Wade & Clark, $2,750; George W. Wagner, $2,800.

Shryock's Response.

At the request of the Baltimore Traveling Men, General Shryock, of the St. Lawrence Boom and Manufacturing Company responded to the toast: "The State of Maryland."

General Shryock was introduced by the toastmaster as one who had shown that "in the State of Maryland a man could be a gentleman and a politician at the same time," a sentiment which brought forth tumultuous applause, especially since Mr Lorch had previously said that General Shryock had tried to be a commercial traveler when he started out in his business career, but that he failed because on his very first trip he took the wrong train and got a hundred miles in the wrong direction before he found it out.

"GENTLEMAN AND POLITICIAN."

"I have always had some idea," said General Shryock, "that I was a gentleman, but I think it has been demonstrated quite recently that I am a pretty poor politician. (Applause and laughter.) I have during the last four years tried to do many things for Governor Lowndes, and I tried to do something for him during the last State campaign, but I would be surprised if he were sorry that I had ever undertaken the job. Once upon a time I believed that there was a chance for me some day to respond to this toast with real right, but that dream has since gone glimmering. The trouble with me is, I guess, that I have stuck to one party too long. (Laughter.)

"The traveling man should always be a thinking man. He should not be led astray by any harrah or any partisan feeling. His is a great and influential power to wield, and he should wield it in the right direction. Take the question of trusts, for instance. I regret to say that it seems likely that this important question is about to be made a subject of partisan debate. I am not much of a partisan in a matter which concerns 70,000,000 of people. The settlement of the trust question will demand the best minds of all parties, and the commercial travelers, who are so vitally interested in the matter, can do much toward bringing it to a satisfactory settlement.

Serious Accident.

John Shrader, a teamster at Wm Irvine's Camp on Knapps Creek, was found last Monday morning lying insensible with a fractured skull on the slide near his team. He had started to work about 5 a. m., and it is supposed he had been lying an hour before he was found. Dr Lockridge attended him. It is supposed that he was struck by the trail bar.

He is a young married man about 33 years old. He is a son of Luther Shrader, of Davis.

Accidental Shooting.

Last Thursday evening Sherman Curry of Frost was accidentally shot by C. C. Sharp with a breech-loader shotgun and No. 6 shot. They were out rabbit hunting about a quarter of a mile from Curry's home; Curry was walking about twenty feet in front when the gun went off, shooting him through the left side not entering the abdominal cavity. Medical aid was rendered at once by Dr Lockridge, and he is improving rapidly.

From Colorado.

G. W. Duffield, of Niwot, Colo., sends us a dollar for a year's subscription to The Times, and writes:

"By the kindness of my sister, Mrs Ashbridge of Tipton, Iowa, I came in possession of 3 copies of your excellent paper. I got so much news of the country that I was well acquainted with 40 years ago, and saw the names of old friends and acquaintances of that country, it made me wish I was back among them."

Railroad Extension.

A dispatch from Elkins to the Baltimore Sun says that the contracts will be let this month for an extension of the West Virginia Central Railroad from Harrisonville to the Forks of the Greenbrier. This proposed extension includes two tunnels.

Rocking the Cradle.

J. Delaughter, Sparkman, Ark., says: For the past fifteen years I have counselled physicians and used patent medicines, but Bucklen's Arnica Salve and Elec. Bitters have done me more good than all the rest. I would say to all, use Bucklen's Arnica Salve and Elec. Bitters and be cured. Sold by Dr. Price's Pharmacy.

STOCKHOLDERS' MEETING.

January 10th, 1900.

Regular annual meeting of the stockholders of the Pocahontas Bank for the election of the Board of Directors for the ensuing year will be held at the banking house, January 10th, 1900, in the town of Marlinton, West Virginia, at 10 o'clock a. m.

GREEN BANK.

C. L. Barnes, C. P. C., was in town Monday.

The thermometer registered 18 below last Sunday morning.

J. H. Curry was on the sick-list last week.

Mrs Caroline Nottingham is visiting Mrs J. H. Curry at this time.

Norley Barnes and James Burner of Durbin were in town Friday.

Ed Jackson, Charles, Bland and Lawrence Nottingham were up from the Frost camp for Christmas.

William M. Sigle turned a somersault and lost his whiskers—Its a girl!

Harrison Sheets and Willie E. Arbogast are on the sick - list threatened with pneumonia.

F. H. Warwick was home from camp Christmas and returned last Tuesday.

Did you ever see a spider wearing as cold a day as last Sunday? I saw one, and I wondered if it was a sign of warm weather. Lets see?

Mrs J. P. Wooddell gave a social dance on last Thursday night, which was enjoyed by those present until next morning.

W. A. Eskridge has finished painting the church here, and he has done a first-class job. We recommend him as a fine painter.

We are having some very cold weather at present time with about 6 inches of snow, and the jingle of the sleighbell is heard in the land.

P. D. Yeager of Travelers Repose was in this vicinity last week a few days waiting to buy cattle. He bought some nice yearlings from C. A. Lightner.

Christmas in Green Bank was very quiet. Not even a firecracker was heard on the streets. One boy had eaten a frozen apple, but it did no harm. Only ran his horse and rolled a time or two.

The Christmas tree at Arbovale was very pretty and well supplied with presents, but whiskey spoiled the enjoyment of many of those good wives and mothers. What a shame, boys!

Owing to the cold weather there was not a large turnout to the festival, but a nice sum was realized for which the members of the Society present wish to thank the people for their generous liberality. The society has painted the church nicely, and all paid for; and they think of covering it and papering the inside in the near future. They deserve great credit for their work, and we wish them success and hope the community will give their aid in so good a cause.

SUNBEAM.

EDRAY.

The holidays have passed off and they used us as we used them.

Asa Barlow has moved into his new house on the banks of the Big Spring among the sugar trees.

Henry Barlow was called out to Marlinton last Friday on business and has not been very well since.

Prof Barlow is preparing to boom the Big Spring. He is erecting a planer just below Grandpap McLaughlin's grist mill.

George P. Moore figured prominently in erecting a telephone line from Edray to Clover Lick. The line is in good working order.

George Baxter, our County Surveyor, wrapped up well and started out yesterday on a surveying expedition.

Samuel Moore and wife, of Alleghany, visited Mrs Moore's relatives during holidays.

Elmer Moore was at home from the Buchanon school, and came to Edray last week, so Dame Rumor said, to see his girl.

There was a gathering at Rankin Ponce's Saturday. The occasion was said to have been interesting and passed off pleasantly.

A. J. Smith passed the sixty-first mile stone of his life last Friday and called in some of his friends to have a social time with him.

Our people are enjoying the sleighing as well as they can, notwithstanding the cold and stormy weather we are having. The thermometer was ten degrees below zero Sunday morning. According to Ed S. Hicks we may look for colder weather still this week.

We wish the readers of The Times a happy new year. That they may enjoy the blessings of this life and live in readiness for whatever may come. So if they are called to quit this life in an unexpected manner they may be ready to go. "To clap the glad wing and wear away to struggle with the blast of day." Truly, A. M.

Wanted—A good girl to do general house work. A small family. Wages $1.50 per week. D. W. Beatrice, Beard, Bath County, Va.

LORELIA.

Christmas passed very quietly in this section.

P. Henry is on the sick list and has been for two or three weeks.

Cold and frosty now, thermometer ranging from 10 above to 10 below zero.

W. B. Hill and family returned from Lovers yesterday after a few days visiting his sister.

The boys are fixing for foxchasing as soon as the hounds can stand the cold.

Miss Annie Sullivan has returned to Missouri after a long stay with her relations.

Peter Hill of Jacox has captured ten foxes this season, all trapped by himself, 5 reds and 5 greys.

There have been on the roads across the creeks from here to Lovers ice bridges the past week, and they are of great benefit to the public.

Prof A. L. Anderson of Alderson is in our midst at this time. He makes us feel good whether we do or not,—full of life and sport.

There were 40 deer killed on the headwaters of Cranberry, Cherry and Williams rivers this fall. This will set them back below par. The wild turkeys have all left this part.

What is the matter with the newspapers? Mr C. J. Hill of this place was married about two weeks ago to Miss Jennie Hedrick of Blue Sulphur District, Greenbrier county, and we have not heard it mentioned. Yet it is so and we all must join and wi him much happiness and success and prosperity. He deserves all that can be bestowed on him as he is one of the best citizens in our county.

More anon. OBSERVER.

Spanish shepherds, ranking among the best in the world, have a saying, "the sheep has a golden foot." In the opinion of some flock-masters that sheep will restore the worst of worn-out ranges to a better condition than the original fertility. While the stones may remain, yet if bushes are cut sheep can prevent their growth again; briars and blackberry bushes when mowed will soon disappear from the soil, along with most of the noxious weeds. Nutritive grasses will appear in their places, and farmers will soon realize the significance of the Spanish proverb referred to above. As long as warm clothing will be needed, wool will be essential to human comfort and sheep must be reared, and experience shows that when sheep are properly cared for they make better returns for the time given and the money invested than any other live stock that can be handled in our county.

In writing the new date a singular sensation is experienced. It seems strange to cease 18 and substitute 19 for the next hundred years. Before the time comes to displace 19 and write 20, it is strange to think that few or none of the living will be here. These lines so aptly come to mind that we repeat them as fitly spoken and appropriate:

We all within our graves shall sleep
A hundred years to come.
No living soul for us will weep
A hundred years to come.
But other men our land will till
And other men our streets will fill,
And other birds will sing as gay,
As bright the sunshine as to-day,
A hundred years to come.

CIGAR LABELS.

They Do Not Indicate the Quality of the Goods.

There is much difference between a "brand" of cigars and a "label." A good "brand" is very often taken to mean "a good quality." Very likely that was the original intention of cigar brands, as it still is of whiskey brands. But by the actual present custom of the trade the name which is burned or branded on the wood of the cigar box—the "brand" properly so called—has no necessary connection with the quality of the cigar, but only accidentally, so far as some particular make, peculiar to one factory, may be for the time exclusively applied to the manufacture of good tobacco. The "brand" tells the cigar seller something about the size and shape of the cigar. As years go on the application of these brands becomes more and more loose and irregular. Until recent years there used to be a regular gradation of size in about this order, beginning with the largest: (1) Perfecto, (2) Puritano, (3) Concha, and (4) Conchita. Even this arrangement was not by any means the earliest. "Regalia" was known in the trade as a designation of large size long before anybody ever heard of "Perfecto." "Henry Clay" was once a brand indicative of both size and quality, a brand and a label in one, when the cigar was made in only one Havana factory. And later results of competition, as well as of Cuban disturbances, are seen in the actually prevailing scale of brands. A brand differs from brand in shape as well as in length, it would take much complicated mathematical research to place the brands in the exact order of the volume of tobacco indicated by each.

Roughly speaking, however, they run, beginning with the largest, as follows: (1) Perfecto Elegante, (2) Perfecto Fino, (3) Puritano Fino—a thick cigar, (4) Puritano Extra, (5) Breva—thick and blunt, (6) Breva Chica, (7) Concha Regalia, (8) Concha Especial, (9) Conchita, (10) Reina Fina, (11) Petit Duc, (12) Upera, and (13) Chiquita.

About all this matter of brands nothing is so certain as that the whole business is in a shifting and revolutionary condition. Thus, the Panetela, not mentioned above, would be placed by some after the Perfecto, because it is about as long, and by others after the Concha, because it is thinner. It was much easier to maintain a hard and fast rule when the whole cigar making industry was ostensibly confined to Havana, and all cigars, even if made elsewhere, had to pretend to Havana origin and conform to Havana customs in order to maintain the illusion.

It is curious to note, however, that factories all over the world still stick to Spanish words and traditions in branding and labelling their output. If a Rhode Island cigarmaker wishes to say that this box is something really uncommonly fine he marks it "delicioso." The colors of Spain still rule in the ribbons that tie the bundles of cigars—yellow and red, the latter very rare. When Cuba has become Americanized red, white and blue ribbons may make their appearance in cigar boxes, but that sign of the times has not yet been observed.—N. Y. Tribune.

Canada's Greatest Glory.

The greatest glory of Canada is not its modern progress, but its vast and ancient wilderness. If you weary of the commerce and society of the civilized world you know, go where I went last year, to the upper waters of the Ottawa, where the beaver is the master architect and the moose king of the woods. See for yourself, as I saw, that the Ottawa and the Gatineau, appearing to come from widely distant regions, have their origin close together and are twins. Behold these two children of the lakes, nourished from the same generous breast. Trace their courses and see that, though journeying far, in widely different directions, they finally arrive at a consummation.

Nobody knows all about that headwater country around the sources of the Ottawa. It is a prolific game region, where sportsmen rarely go, for the simple reason that they can get all the hunting they want nearer to the railroad. There are plenty deer close to almost any Canadian Pacific station west of Pembroke, and if is not much trouble to get a chance at a moose in two days from Deux Rivieres, Rockdale, or Mattawa. Not many hunting parties start from there either, and I suppose the reason is that for thousands of miles to the west the woods, prairies, and mountains lie close to the railroad and afford almost limitless opportunities.

The territory inclosed by the Ottawa and the Gatineau has been from immemorial times the home of the Algonquin Indians, and they still remain there, in such primitive innocence that they receive no annuity from the Dominion Government. In history are unlike the Indians of the United States or their brother tribes of Canada.—Scribner's.

Decision Against Tugboat Managers.

Judge Dougherty, of Santa Rosa, Cal., has rendered a decision in the case of Bonham vs. Bonham, recently brought to annul a marriage contracted on board a private schooner outside the Francisco Heads. The Court declares that weddings taking place at sea in contravention of the statutes or by consent, or under any circumstances without a proper license and some form of public solemnization are entirely illegal. The Court further holds that children resulting from such unions, where contracted since March 18, 1880, when the existing act governing such matters was enacted by the Legislature, are without legal illegitimate. Plaintiff and defendant in the case at bar were married on a sea captain on Aug. 15, 1895, and Bonham having acknowledged the paternity of a child born to him the Court holds that it becomes the plaintiff's legitimate and adopted son.

established two years ago. It has a faculty of seven instructors, trained under the best teachers in this country and Europe. It occupies a separate building fitted up especially for its needs. Instruction on all stringed instruments, including violin, viola, mandolin, guitar, etc., is free. For views and plans the fees are very low. A magnificent pipe organ for Commencement Hall is being constructed and it will be for the use of students of the School of Music. TO CELIA.

Drink to me only with thine eyes,
And I will pledge with mine;
Or leave a kiss but in the cup,
And I'll not look for wine.
The thirst that from the soul doth rise,
Doth ask a drink divine:
But might I of Jove's nectar sup,
I would not change for thine.

I sent thee late a rosy wreath,
Not so much honouring thee,
As giving it a hope that there
It could not withered be.
But thou thereon didst only breathe,
And sent'st it back to me;
Since when, it grows, and smells, I swear,
Not of itself, but thee.

A Bargain in Real Estate.

If poor old Stephen Bradford, who was so hard pressed to make both ends meet and buy a piece of land each year to add to the thousands he owned already, could have known Miss Ainslee, the free school teacher, better, he might not have been so opposed to his son Gabe marrying her. Miss Ainslee was teaching her second term at the Cedar Hill Schoolhouse to the satisfaction of all the patrons. She was the bright, pretty daughter of a preacher, whose home was in a Virginia town.

She had experienced the hardest kind of poverty—the trying to keep up appearances on inadequate means—but the Cedar Hill neighborhood could not realize this, for she was better dressed than those who were well off. Her good taste and skill with the needle accounted for this, and while she was but twenty-two she had managed her father's and her own resources so that he had a piece of ground and a house of his own, where the family could live and be in a measure independent of the Church,—that institution so grand to live for, and so bad to live by. If old man Stephen had but known it he would have found a kindred spirit in Miss Ainslee.

Gabe had fallen in love with the school teacher after the manner of men, and Mamie, after the manner of women, had considered the pros and cons and decided to return his affection. But even after Gabe had wooed and won her—and that's no slight task according to the rules and regulations laid down by these latter day angels, his father's consent was lacking.

Gabe had taken her to see his folks one day, and the poor little girl knowing that she was going to see the richest people of the countryside, put on her most fetching dress and her most graceful pose, and was ushered into the room where an old man sat on one side of the fireplace mending a set of harness, and a old lady on the other side darning socks.

Miss Mamie realized that the visit was a failure, especially as far as the old man was concerned. He got out of the room as soon as he could and went to town and was seen no more that day.

As Mrs Bradford did not need any winning, going it blind as she always did on the side of Gabe, nothing was accomplished by the interview.

Matters had been drifting along for a year or so without any definite results. If Gabe but hinted at the fact that it was time he was marrying and settling down his father would treat it as a good joke and ask if he thought he could make a living on his 20,000 acre survey for two. A year before he had walked into a trap and bought the 20,000 acres for the taxes.

He concluded that he would play his trump card, and if that failed he would marry the girl any way and risk it. So he waited for a favorable time and asked his father point blank if he would marry Mamie Ainslee and bring her home, and his father had told him plainly that he would not marry her or any other high falutin' woman. Things had come to a pretty pass when a Bradford had to go over from home to get married.

Then it was that Gabe risked all on a single throw and said that he would go West. How his father had been considering in anticipation this direful threat and had come to the conclusion that that was no bad way to break off a match which was distasteful to him, and so he very calmly inquired:

"How far West did you 'low to go?"

Gabe had shot his bolt but managed to say to this unexpected question that he was "Thinking some of going to Montana."

His father frowned and remarked:

"Gabe, your old dad has called your little bluff. Your ma and me would n't mind your pickin' your own wife if you had a leetle more management about you. You aint fit to be trusted, you aint; and your only chance is to git the right kind of a woman, and we don't believe that that school teacher would suit this family."

"When did I ever have a chance to show I could n't be trusted? You have treated me like a child all my life, father."

"There was a small matter of 20,000 acres of land"—

"What can I do to make you forget that, father?"

"Why, if you was to make your money outen it would dull the mem'ry some," replied the old man.

"And do as I pleased about every thing too, I suppose?" asked Gabe scornfully.

"Yes, your ma and me kin safely promise that," said the old man; and this interview being reported to the young lady by Gabe they shared each other's sorrow.

Now a short time after Mamie's visit to the old folks, she was in the kitchen of the house where she boarded, making herself useful to the lady of the house, when a wail came from upstairs from the six year old son of the house, Jimmy Dent: "Ma, I want to get up!"

"All right, dearie, in a few minutes."

"Why can't he get up?" asked the school teacher,

"I have to patch his pants," said his mother but Miss Mamie was patching them in short order, for she had not been the eldest daughter in a large family for nothing, and if her prospective father-in-law had seen the skill with which she made a large, invisible patch on the little breeches he might have been won out of hand; and it was thus she had a talk with Mrs Dent.

"How did you like Pa Bradford?"

"I don't know anyone of that name," blushingly replied Mamie. But he was identified, and Mrs Dent told her how unbending old Bradford was, and how he had never spoken to or had anything to do with his youngest sister who married against his will, and there *grew in Miss Ainslee's mind a de*termination not to break up the Bradford family. This being conveyed to Gabe made him more desperately in love than ever.

But things were about to take a turn. In a city on the other side of the State the magnates of the Hillside Lumber Company were about to make an advantageous sale of their 20,000 acre tract which they had won from Samuel Stringer. The purchaser was a New York millionaire and his legal representative had just returned from Waschope County, where he had thoroughly investigated the title of the 20,000 acres.

"Gentlemen," he was saying, "I am sorry to tell you that I do not like the looks of your title to this tract. That Stringer claim is dangerous and always will be dangerous."

"But that matter is adjudicated," said the President of the Company.

"Not exactly," said the lawyer. "A test case was made of the 100 acre tract adjoining the big tract and involving the same questions. The suit could be brought on the 20,000 acres any day, and another court may look upon that question of possession very differently."

Then Hudson, the Waschope County lawyer, who was present as counsel for the lumber company, said: "If we were to secure the Stringer title as well as our own would that satisfy you?" And the lawyer said that it would.

About one year and one month after the sale of delinquent lands heretofore mentioned, when Gabe Bradford had begun in his 20,000 acre tract, Hudson saw Gabe on the street and called to him to come into his office. Gabe hated the lawyer as the source of the most of the trouble he had ever experienced, and was very loath to comply.

After some fooling around the bush the lawyer said he wanted to redeem the 20,000 acres, but Gabe, to whom was vouchsafed the one and only gleam of business sense he has ever experienced, asked Hoskins $5000 for his title and stuck to it for several days and got it. He had been substituted to all the rights that Stringer ever had and he made the sale.

When he laid the $5000 down at his father's feet, he could have married a butterfly of fashion and not been rebuked. As it was he married his sweetheart, who soon became a favorite with her father-in-law. They talk over the heads *of Gabe and his mother; but when*ever Gabe is hard pressed he can remind his father of the deal he made in real estate.

THE PEACE CONFERENCE.

All right thinking persons who have respect for both the form and power of Christian godliness are humiliated by the stupendous farce played off at The Hague.

There was America in one of the chief seats of the peace promoting synagogue. England on another, if anything higher. America, with a war that may be classified under many names on hand, would favor no interference practical or sentimental, but at the same time her trusted representatives were more than willing to join agreement assuring from danger through foreign complication, with the reservation that America should hold a free hand in western world affairs.

During the conference Great Britain seemed to have nothing in hand except some police duty in Soudan, and so there was no war to embarrass the situation. Nevertheless, as the event has shown, there were plans for territorial expansion in Africa in process of maturing. The Boer Republic,—good, peace-loving, Christian people tho they were, yet they had no invitation to the love-feast of the nations such as they could accept with due self respect.

It is pleasant to read the proceedings, for the gathering was very agreeable. Much was said in a very taking way of the beneficial results of a peace universal; yet these broad-minded, well paid delegates merely comforted the lovers of peace with nothing but words, while all the time any and all obligations were carefully excluded, that were essential to the realization of universal peace.

Victor Hugo gives his idea of what tact or common sense will do by this fable: "Who is stronger than thou?" asked Brahma, and Force replied, "Address." Bovel remarks that, "Address or tact makes opportunities, but the want of tact gives them." Eliza Cook expresses herself about the tactful person in this couplet:

"He'll suit his bearing to the hour, Laugh, listen, learn or teach."

And the genial Dr Holmes puts in his opinion in this way:

"Tact clinches the bargain,
Sells out of the bay,
Gets the vote in the Senate,
Spite of Webster or Clay."

Among the pleasantries reported at the expense of an absent minded person is one told of Lessing, one of the intellectual celebrities of his century. In a fit of absent mindedness he knocked at his own door one dark night. The servant passed from the window, and not recognizing him, he called to the supposed rogue: "You Professor is not at home." "Oh, very well," replied Lessing in his absent manner. So saying he went off in sullener tone.

SCOTS FLED FROM BOERS.

Awful Fire, at Magersfontein, Was More than Highlanders Could Stand.

The most appalling battle picture, from a British point of view, yet painted by a correspondent in the field comes by mail from J. B. Whigman, the representative of the London Morning Post with Lord Methuen's column. It shows the collapse of the Highland Brigade at Magersfontein. Describing the effect of the unexpected Boer fire when the Brigade was just about deploying from quarter column, he writes:

"Some one shouted 'Retire!' and the day was lost. The Highlanders broke and ran—there is no other word for it.

"In a few minutes the brigade had been decimated and the issue decided.

"They did not run far, only a few hundred yards, but when they *rallied they were shaken and con*fused for hours. They lay flat on the ground between the British and the Boer trenches.

Highlanders in Flight.

"About 2 o'clock the Boer rifle fire greatly increased. Simultaneously, the brigade was seen in full retreat. Back they came in a wave. No officer could stop it. It was perhaps the most unpleasant sight the British soldier has ever beheld; certainly a sight never to be forgotten.

"It is difficult to say what happened next until Major Ewart rode up with an order from General Methuen, which was almost an entreaty, to the effect that all he asked of the brigade was to hold the position until dark. So riddled and scattered was the brigade that Ewart actually had no other officer to help him give the order to the cattered men. It was no small thing to ask of the Highlanders that they should again face the galling fire for five mortal hours.

"Still a very fair rally was effected. The pipers played somewhat dolefully and the brigade got back to a spot where it had a certain amount of cover. Here they remained.

"There the men lay until Boer guns, until then absolutely silent, suddenly came into play. It wanted but this last straw to break the nerve of the rallying Highlanders. When the first shrapnel burst what remined of the brigade with one accord came right back as far as the field hospital, hopelessly beaten for the day. They were not even fit to guard the the baggage. They had lost 57 officers killed or wounded. Could human nature stand more?"

An Indian Tale.

In Ohio many years ago when Indians were troublesome, an excited man galloped up to the log-cabin of the Moore family.

"Get ready for the redskins!" he called out, "and give me a fresh horse as soon as you can. They killed a family down the river last night, and nobody knows where they 'll turn up next!"

"What shall we do?" asked Mrs Moore, becoming very pale. "My husband went away yesterday to buy our winter supplies and will not be back again until morning."

"Husband away? That 's bad! Well, shut up tight as you can, cover up your fire, and do n't show a light to-night." Then mounting the horse the boss had brought he galloped away to warn other settlers.

Mrs Moore carried the younger children up the ladder into the loft, leaving Joe and Obed to watch as they insisted upon their mother to do. Seeing several shadows moving across the fields early in the evening, Obed whispers, "They are coming, Joe. Stand by that window with the ax while I get the rifle pointed out of this one."

Upon opening the bullet pouch to take out a ball, Obed nearly fainted when he found it was too large for the rifle; his father having taken the wrong pouch. While Obed was feeling around to see if there were any smaller balls in the cupboard, he almost strangled on a large pumpkin, one of the two which he and Joe had been using to make jack-o-lanterns, when the scent aroused them. Pulling off his coat he flung it over the pumpkin lantern, made in imitation of a gigantic grinning face with eyes, nose and mouth. With a few deal from the ashes he lighted the candle inside.

"They will sound the war whoop in a minute if I give them time," Obed whispered as he raised the covered lantern to the window. "Now for it," he remarked upon pulling the coat away.

The Indians uttered a terrible yell when they saw the grinning monster and fled pell mell to the woods. "Quick, Joe! Light up the other one. Don't you see that is what scart them so?" demanded Obed. At the appearance of the second fiery face the Indians gave a final yell and vanished in the forest. Mr Moore and daylight came together but the Indians were gone for good.

A LACK OF GUMPTION.

There have been people in this world, and possibly some of the breed is still left, who show their lack of gumption by resenting every slight and petty insult, however unworthy it might be of their notice. Other's make Don Quixote's mistake of fighting a windmill by engaging in controversies with public speakers and editors who always have the advantage of having the final word. One of the most marked elements of strength in the character of Washington consisted in his forbearance when he was unjustly attacked or ridiculed. Artemus Ward, the noted humorist, punctured the bubble some people call sense of honor with a sharp pointed pen when he wrote this squib:

"It was in a surtin town in Virginny, the Mother of Presidents and things, that I was shamefully abused by a editor in human form. He got my show up steep and called me the urbane and gentlemanly manager, but when I for the purpose of showen fair play all round went to another office to get my handbills printed what does this pussillanermus editor do but change his tune and abuse me like a injun. I read my self over and I was a humbug, and called me a horey-headed itinerant vagabone. I thort at fust Ide polish him orf ar lar Beneki Boy, but on reflectin that he could polish me much wuss in his paper I gav it up; and *I would here take occashun to ad*vise people wh o they run agin, as sometimes they will, these miserable papers, to pay no attenshun to 'um. Abuv all don't assault a editor of this kind. It only bim mortifies which is just what he wants, and don't dar you no more good than it would to jump into every other mud hole. Editors are generally fine men, but there must be black sheep in every flock."

The Supervision of Banks.

The New York Sun is constantly harping on the necessity of preserving the credit of the nation by gold standard legislation, as the that was the one and only thing need. But it prints the following letter from a correspondent which explains itself:

"While smoking my after-dinner cigar I read in the columns of The Sun the following under the head of "The Currency," an editorial: "The National Bank act should be repealed and the supervision of banking restored to the States."

"The State banking system is the same as the English banking system. It was brought to this country by Robert Morris, the famous financier, during the Revolutionary War in the creation of the Bank of North America in Philadelphia, whose shares now sell at $400, and it has always been one of the best fixed institutions in this country. It was fostered by State banks, but is now a National bank, owing to the 10 per cent tax on State bank notes.

"It is more in accordance with the business of the country and with our constitutional laws for the banks to be regulated by the State governments. I hope you will stick to this point. We all know that neither the national, nor the State, nor even the individual credit of this, or any other civilized country, is based on the deposit of gold, but upon a wealth and integrity. Our Government's entire fiat credit is based on the enormous wealth of the nation and the sterling integrity of the American people. The credit of the United States is unquestioned, and all talk about legislation to improve or improve the business credit is a mask for fraud.

COUNTY POLITICS.

The outlook for a Sheriff is brighter. During the past week two very good men have appeared on the horizon, either of whom would fill the office admirably. They are Uriah Bird of Marlinton and George W. Callison of Academy. Their friends are urging them to enter the race. A fact in the sheriffolty fight always to be counted upon is the deputy. While they are appointive offices yet the sections they serve must depend solely upon them and not see the high sheriff during entire term. If the deputys' plays a part in the campaign t year Samuel Sheets, the present deputy of the upper end, will a great strength to the head of ti ticket. A deputy is not eligible for sheriff, but he can be a deputy indefinitely. The office suits Mr. Sheets. During the past term his promptness and efficiency have been noted and favorably commented upon, and he will probably have his choice as to the head of his ticket.

S. B. Hannah of Green Bank has been talked of as a candidate, but we do not know whether he has any idea of offering himself. He is one of our foremost citizens.

Colonel Levi Gay, twice sheriff of this county, and who is as good in figures and the handling of public money as any man we ever knew, said that he was not in the race,—adding that he was too old. We were not greatly impressed with his age, but it set us thinking that was the first time we had ever heard of a man being too old to be sheriff of this county.

All the sheriffs we have had since the reconstruction days have been men of middle age, at least,—a good many of them grave and reverend seigniors who had arrived at the age when they find more joy in sitting by their firesides than in the hard work entailed by this office. Some day the young men will combine and elect one of their number sheriff, and give their fathers a rest. Men like Davis Barlow of Edray, or John Andrew Moore of Knapp's Creek, would make as good sheriffs now as when mellowed by age.

A gentlemen (from the upper end of the county, by the way,) said that if they could get nobody else to run, and the people would volunteer to go on his bond, and do numerous other things, he would not mind accepting the place.

It is rumored that Hon. C. E. Beard will not offer for the County Court at the expiration of his term. In fact he is about as tired of serving his country by sitting on the bench as ever was a poorly paid county commissioner. His successor will be chosen from Edray or Levels district. Colonel Gatewood, over at Linwood, would make a good commissioner; or J. S. McNeel in the Levels. J. C. Price, the minority candidate of 1898, will not run this year.

For the State Senate it does not seem probable that Pocahontas will have a man in the field from either party. Senator McNeil has announced the fact that he is not a candidate, and the question of rotation seems to bar Pocahontas from the Democratic nomination. It lies between Monroe and Greenbrier this year. If Marlinton would hurry up and get a saloon and the railroad we might secure the convention to nominate a Senator, but many of the delegates would like to take a trip over the new railroad.

Every Pocahontas county person will see that The Biggle Books advertised in these issue of The Times contain a greater amount of reading matter, more news, more general information than any books ever have been offering to their patrons at the same price. The price of each is 50 cents, but by doing so the publishers of Wilmer Atkinson Co. Philadelphia

A Card from Attorney H. S. Rucker.

Editors Pocahontas Times,
Marlinton, West Virginia.

GENTLEMEN: In the past few months I have heard so much about my being a poker player, and here recently I have heard that I am fast becoming a drunkard, so I have concluded, (as I can not play the sneak, as most of the parties are who are doing this talk,) I will quit both whiskey and poker, so there cannot even be a pretense for the falsehoods that are being circulated to injure my business.

In future I will never play any game of chance, and will never take a drink of whiskey unless prescribed for me after I am confined to bed.

This statement is not made because I feel that I have injured my one or been injured by either whiskey or poker, but I make it merely as a notice to a few pretenders, and I desire them to heed it.

These same hypocrites whisper around that I played poker with Major Arbogast while he was sheriff,* and that I struck a man by name of Lynch on my office porch, a short time ago, over a game of poker. I never played poker with Major Arbogast in my life, and you all at Marlinton know it. Lynch was drinking and about to get into a row with a young man on the street, and finally got on my porch, cursed and tried to strike me, and I struck him with the poker, which I happened to have in my hand when I went to the door.

Now, you poker players who are doing this talk, either be "pig or pup." Stop playing poker and doing worse, or be open in your actions. Do not try to hide your drunken actions by pretending to condemn me.

And you, unconverted, pretended Christians,—wolf with a fleece on him,—don't think that you can deceive God, if you can fool some men. Don't try to give that receding forehead and chin a reputation for integrity by lying on people with whom you pretend to be on friendly terms. We all know all that keeps you from being a genuine criminal is your fear of retribution,—all that keeps you from being a poker player, your hog disposition; and all that keeps you from being an open drunkard, and all that took you into the church is your innate propensity for deception.

If any of you desire me to particularize, just come to the front with some of your statements.

Very truly,

H. S. RUCKER.

*[Major Arbogast is not a cardplayer, and never has been, and he has never bet or gamed in any way. Any rumor to that effect does him great injustice.—EDITOR.]

The Importance of By-Products.

"This is the day and date of the by-product," said a cotton seed oil buyer. "Instead of launching into new lines the tendency is to back over the ground and gather what we have wasted. I could name scores of industries that are at present actually paying their running expenses by the utilization of something they used to hire people to carry away.

"The cotton seed oil business is a great illustration of modern economic methods. It is all the development of a few years, comparatively speaking, and to day the demand for what was formerly a waste material is far ahead of the supply. In 1894, for example, I had 250 oil mills on my list, located within certain boundaries in the cotton belt. At present I have 500 in a considerably smaller territory. Meanwhile the area to which the seed is applied have been steadily increasing with no signs of reaching a limit. The oil enters into a dozen different food products, and has practically replaced olive oil for table use. Thousands of gallons are exported and come back with Italian labels on the bottles as good or better than the real thing. Every part of the seed is now saved except a few chemical elements of the outer hull that pass away in smoke; in fact we do nearly as well as the Chicago packers, who utilize all of the pig except his squeal.

"We have just organized a company, and a Chicago man, to take the squeal down on phonographic cylinders for use in toy pigs."—New Orleans Times Democrat.

BEN BOLT.

O! do you remember sweet Alice, Ben Bolt,
Sweet Alice whose hair was so red,
Who at your caresses would kick like a colt
And shy brie-a-brac at your head?
She captured a ranchman from out in the West
Who came on a chase for a bride,
And in skirting divided and cowboy hat dressed
She rides on a broncho astride.

And do you remember the schoolhouse, Ben Bolt,
With the playground so smooth and so wide,
And the master whose head was beginning to moult,
And whose gad often worried your hide?
The schoolhouse is used as a smokehouse for pork,
The playground looks dirty and bum,
And the master now plays on the streets of New York
On a Salvation Army bass drum.

And do you remember the mill dam, Ben Bolt?
That ran its old mill with its power,
And the corpulent miller we thought such a dolt,
With his clothes dusted over with flour?
The mill is not there by a dam site, I hear,
Though the dam by a mill site remains,
And the miller grows rich raising corn by the ear,
Way out on the broad Kansas plains.

The changes are many and painful, Ben Bolt,
I cannot recount them all here;
It gave my old heart the worst sort of jolt
To revisit the scenes once so dear.
The men whom I meet are all strangers to me,
Who stare in surprise as I pass,
And the one only face that's familiar I see,
When I look in the old looking glass.—Denver Post.

There have been poultry books printed costing fifteen dollars and more, but there never has been one at any price with more beautiful colored reproductions of poultry, than those found in the Biggle Poultry Book, an announcement of which appears in another column. The paintings were made direct from treat birds of the different breeds, and the coloring and characteristic shape of each breed are perfect. As for the text, there never was a book printed containing more prretical, level-headed information. Its chapters include, Eggs for Hatching, Hatching the Eggs, Care of Chicks With Hens and Brooders, The Successful Care of Incubators, The Farmer's Flock, The Village Heanery; chapters on Breeds, on Fattening and Marketing, and Diseases and Remedies, with the old and new school methods of treatment. One man wrote the publishers that "The mottoes alone, at each chapter heading were worth the cost of the book." Twenty thousand copies of this admirable work have been printed. See advertisement of The Biggle Books in this week's issue of The Times. The price is 50 cents, free by mail; address the publishers, Wilmer Atkinson Co., Philadelphia.

Sure Cure for Colds

When the children get their feet wet and take cold give them a hot foot bath, a bowl of hot drink, a dose of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, and put them to bed. The chances are they will be all right in the morning. Condense the Cherry Pectoral a few days, and all cough has disappeared.

The president of the county court wishes us to call attention to the fact that encroaching on the public high ways by building fences too near the road cannot be permitted. The county court has received complaints lately that the law being violated in this respect, and it wishes all persons who are to blame to take notice that their fences may have to be set back at their expense. We suppose this notice is given because of the maxim: "A word to the wise is sufficient."

C. Reinick a farmer near Elkins was accidently shot and killed by his dog recently. He was carrying a loaded gun by the muzzle, and his dog came out to meet him and in fawning upon his master struck the trigger and the gun went off, the charge going through Reinick's body killing him instantly. There is a rule that all persons handling guns should never forget, it may be called the gunner's golden rule. "Never hold or point a gun so that anybody could be hurt if the gun goes off."

A special term of the circuit court convened last Friday. R. C. McNeil was elected special judge. Robert Fitzpatrick, an attorney of the national company prosecuting claims for pensions, made that company by Marlinton, and A. S. Beard were appointed commissioners and were to report on

THE LAW'S STRONG ARM.

Frank Reed Arrow Eleven and Caused Trouble.

Frank Reed, a colored laborer at work at Pitts' Camp No. 1, was arrested last Wednesday night and lodged in jail. He had a hearing before Justice Bird on Thursday.

Mr Hankins, the superintendent of the work, was present and he said that shortly after he had gone to bed Wednesday night he heard two shots from one of the camp buildings and shortly after the sound of some one running to his camp calling on him for protection. He went to the door and found a colored fellow named Jim Peck who said that the prisoner had shot at him twice. Just then Reed came running after him, but when he saw the superintendent he drew his pistol and holding it in his hand retreated to the woods near the camp.

The witness said he considered the shooting serious enough to be investigated by the law, and his foremen and others went into the woods to see if they could arrest Reed. It was bright moonlight and they found him hid in a clump. He pulled out his pistol to hide it in the clump, and the glint of the moonlight on the polished barrel was what revealed his position. The witness said that the prisoner was a tough customer, always had a pistol, was absolutely fearless, and had raised trouble in the camp before.

Reed was perfectly self possessed, and when the Justice asked him if he wished to ask Mr Hankins any questions he answered very promptly, "Yes, sir."

"When you saw me have my gun I was going from you all the time, wasn't I?"

"Yes, you were. If you had ever turned your face around it would have been the last of you."

"You never saw me have a gun anywhere except in camp, did you?"

"No."

The court then asked if he had brought the pistol with him into this county. The darkey said he had but that he had carried it in his grip; that it was against the law to carry a pistol about his person and that he would never think of doing such a thing.

His statement was to the effect that they were all gambling in a shack and he came in and "dey asks me 'was I in,' and I say I was and Jim asks me 'what does I throw,' and I says 'I throws five.' I throwed and lost fifty cents and steps out of de game. I comes back in a little bit an' starts to throw agin an' I wins twenty five cents, an' I says, 'I'm twenty-five wif you, Jim'; and Jim picks up de money an' starts away and I says, 'Jim, give me my money or I 'll shoot you! I throwed eleven, didn't I Hunter?' and Hunter said dat if Jim could n't loose he had no business comin, in dere, and den I shot in de floor twice to skeer him."

This was the case against the prisoner, none of the several witnesses being present. It would have to be a pretty serious affair to stop men from work on the railroad to testify in court. Mr Hankins said he did not like to put the county to the expense of boarding the prisoner but he would ed to keep order at his camp.

The justice decided to give him a jail sentence for raising a row, and when he comes out he will receive a polite invitation to leave the county.

Wolf Killed.

The wolf which has been committing depredations to the great loss of the farmers in the upper end of Webster and the edge of Randolph for a number of years, was shot and killed last Monday evening by Snider Hamrick, a son of Peter Hamrick, Sr. A large number of persons with about a dozen hounds had been chasing the animal for several days, and had fired many shots at it without any effect. When killed the sheep killer was near the Webster line in Randolph, where the County Court had offered a reward of $50 for the scalp. The Webster County Court had offered $100, but no chances could be taken on chasing it back into Webster to be killed, as he was very much like the Irishman's flea. This is thought to be the only wolf left in this part of the country, its mate having been killed a year or two ago. Pecks as many as fifty sheep and lambs were required to satisfy the animal's hunger each year, and the people feel truly relieved. May they never have any experience with the likes of it again. – Webster Echo.

EDRAY.

We are glad to have our wells again to replenished by the recent rains.

J. W. Tyler was somewhat indisposed last week, but he is about again.

Mrs William Sharp has been very sick for some time, and is still not very well. Her many friends are very anxious to see her up again.

George P. Tyler has been doing no small amount of shoeing for the railroad men of late. It is needless to say that it was well done.

John S. Moore stopped on the Elk side of the mountain during the cold and stormy weather, but since the weather has become mild and balmy he comes home at nights.

Dr and Mrs Price have the sympathy of their many friends in the illness of their little son Ward. They are untiring in waiting upon him. We certainly hope he will recover.

W. D. Sharp will close his school in the Normal School building in about six weeks and go to finish out Miss Lucy Baxter's school on Dry Branch, Miss Baxter having engaged another school in the upper end of the county.

J. W. Curry and Lee Carter hauled the preacher two loads of feed for his horse and cow yesterday—Monday. John Young hauled him a load also for a New Year present. He and his family have enjoyed the good fires that wood his kind and good neighbors hauled him just before the real cold and stormy weather of the winter began. God in His love su infinite goodness having replenished the water in the well, and through the good people filled the flour barrel and supplied other necessities, all goes on smoothly and pleasantly at Pinebush. Truly, A. M.

Reece Pritchard of Dunmore was in town last week.

Dr J. P. Moomau has been quite feeble for some days, but is improving some now.

A. M. Oliver of Wanless, E. M. Arbogast, and Samuel Sheets were in town recently.

John Woodell of Gillispie and Howard Armstrong were in town Saturday.

A. D. Williams of the engineering corps was in town Saturday.

Mr Ed.: The only remarkable thing about the 21st verse of the 7th chapter of Ezra is, it contains all the alphabet except the letter J.

Samuel Sheets has made us a good deputy sheriff and why not elect him for Sheriff? He has given entire satisfaction and he should have the office. And give us Bratton for Prosecuting Attorney, and H. A. Yeager for House of Delegates; and, well, William B. Woodell for Assessor, or some other good man.

BILLY BOWLEGS.

Waugh—Friel.

January 10, 1900, at 3 p. m., a very enjoyable society occurrence took place at the home of Joseph N. Friel near Verdant Valley, when Charles Waugh and Sarah Arlena Friel were united in the holy state of matrimony, Rev William T. Price officiating minister. The bridal pair was preceded by Miss Rhoda Waugh as maid of honor, escorted by Charles Friel brother of the bride.

Immediately after the ceremony all present were treated to a bountiful and nicely spread dinner tendered by Mr and Mrs Rudolph Waugh, which was enjoyed by about forty guests, mainly nearest neighbors and relatives.

The groom is a son of Beverly Waugh near Mount Pleasant, and is a much respected young farmer; the bride is the third daughter of J. N. Friel, and is highly esteemed for her nice deportment as a young lady.

Quite a numerous circle of friends wish these young people all the happiness and prosperity possible. W. T. P.

Don't worry over the wind and cloud, but buy a pair of good beads of the Golden Shoe and perhaps save a doctor's bill, as wet feet are a source of many ills. A winter overcoat, the kind you have to pay $5 for, is only $3 at the Golden Shoe.

DEER CREEK.

The doctors are kept very busy.

S. B. Hannah is putting up a large ice shed.

Dr Joe is with engineer corps at Leather Bark.

Heb Hannah is clerking for Cogar Bros.

Mrs M. F. Slaven is complaining.

Mrs S. B. Hannah is not so well since the cold weather came in.

W. W. Slaven has quit complaining, and says it's all a habit.

Willie Slaven is going to Huntonsville for a load of corn and salt.

The snow is about all gone, but the ice is still in the creek. It is thawing out gradually.

Uriah Hevener bought C. C. Arbogast's hay and is feeding it out. Feed will be scarce around here.

G. L. Slaven is hauling supplies from Huttonsville. He says the roads are in a desperate fix; ice till you can't rest.

Davy Gregg lost two fine horses at Durbin. James Galford lost a good horse by falling on the ice near Sam Casell's.

They are working about 25 hands at Mulligan & Fergison's camp. Clarence Wilmoth, Clide Auiby and Roe Phillips have returned and are pushing their jobs. New hands are coming in every day.

I see a motion made for a Primary, and two names mentioned for Prosecuting Attorney. Let us not look at a man's politics, but let him be sound in limb and of good wind and something of a bear fighter.—J. H. Buzzard is mentioned for Assessor. He is a man every inch and can get the office, but why not bring him out for Sheriff if he will accept the nomination? Where Joe can't go, his mule can.—For House of Delegates let L. M. McClintic come. He is a very acceptable candidate.

RECOMBEND.

HUNTERSVILLE.

Col Dan O'Connell is off to camp Mud, mumps and weather in an abundance at this time.

Mrs Sarah P. Hazel is visiting her son S. J. Boggs.

J. J. Boggs has been very sick for the past few weeks, but is better now.

Mrs Mary E. Adkison, of Buckeye, is visiting her daughter Mrs O. E. McKeever.

The singing at the Methodist church Sunday evening was excellent. Miss Grace Harper was organist. We are glad to see the congregational singing so much improved. Singing next Sunday evening, January 21. All are cordially invited to attend.

George Buzzard has had a bad case of mumps, but is better at this time. XX.

MILL POINT.

We are having fine weather.

William Sharp is doing some good gridding at the Smith mill.

Henry McClure has a contract for clearing right of way.

Seamer Gladwell is on the sick list.

The protracted meeting by Rev. Lough at Riverside closed a few nights ago.

The school at Riverside is progressing nicely under the management of Miss Alice Clark.

Rev J. H Lough has been confined to his bed several days with the measles. He will not be able to fill any of his appointments for sometime.

Building Notes.

J. D. Pullin has moved into his new store house on Main street. The Pocahontas Furniture Co's building is almost completed. The frame of the Tyree store house, opposite the Times office, is up. The postoffice will be kept in this building in six weeks if the weather permits the carpenters to work. It is a two story building 22x66 feet. Martin Carter will build a store house this spring with living rooms overhead, and on the lot adjoining it he will build a dwelling house. G. F. Crummett's dwelling is ready for the roof. His barnese shop is located near the McLaughlin Hotel. The editor of this paper has let a contract for a dwelling house, which means, by the way, that he will be on the war path presently collecting subscription money. A number of other buildings are to be built next spring.

Rise Toward Zero

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address F. J. CHENEY & Co. Toledo, Ohio.

FROST.

Mrs Samuel Curry has been on the sick list for some time.

Sherman Curry, who was shot, is improving slowly.

Mrs T. J. Williams is somewhat ill at this time.

George Sharp is teaching school at Traveler's Repose.

The hop, step and jump at Dunmoore was all right, so Wm. Gibson says.

Aaron Sharp is teaching the Cove Hill school with good success.

There was enough water in Knapps Creek last week to break all the landings in.

There has been quite a cold snap for the past two weeks and has been a good time for sliding logs. Gilmer Sharp and Reed Griffith slid 1300 logs in one night last week at Warren's camp. In sliding logs one team slides from 10 to 100 logs at one trail, instead of 4 or 5 as published in The Times.

RALPH.

Fine weather for January.

Smith & Whiting have been splashing out some of their logs the past week.

Several cases of measles in this neighborhood.

Moore & Herold have not finished their job of lounging.

Hannah & Harper are doing a rushing merchandise business.

J. B. F. Sharp went to the Hot Springs last week for Hannah & Harper.

J. A. Moore went to Marlinton on business last Saturday.

We need a jail, a dozen policemen and a dozen detectives in Frost to keep order and keep the thieves out people's pockets.

Miss Nannie Warwick has been visiting frrends and relatives on the Creek the past week.

Rev O. M. Pullin preached at Trinity church Sunday.

Drs Jordon and Lockridge are kept going both day and night.

I. B., J. A. and Price Moore are getting out a sawset.

There are six cases of measles at J. B. Moore's.

We are sorry to learn that Button McElwee and his mother, of Hot Springs, are in such a critical condition. We hope they may recover soon.

Some of the citizens on the creek object to the lumberman hauling logs through their farms.

DR DOOLY.

And still it rains.

Clark Gum made a trip to Virginia last week.

Ed Spitzer made a visit to Anthony's Creek last week.

William Bussard is doing a good job of sawing for Wilson Rider.

Ben Sharp was out to the railroad for H. & H. last week.

Mrs Hook has been on the sick list.

John Warren was breaking the landings last Friday.

Ellis Bussard is hauling some sawlogs to William Bussard's sawmill at Wilson Rider's.

C. C. Sharp was home from Ervine's lumber camp Sunday.

There was a very interesting game of football here Saturday.

REUBEN.

We had a nice shower of rain last week.

Johnie Warren and crew have been splashing out some of their logs.

Clark and T. M. Gum were called to Virginia to see their mother who is very ill.

Price Sheets has been spending a few days in town.

Bro Ben was to the Hot last week for H. & H.

Cris Dilley still comes to Frost "Keep your eye on the gobbler."

Feed is plenty in this part and is just the same with those who have none.

Mr Cunningham, of Monterey, passed here last week.

We notice in last week's Times about a span of horses pulling 4 or 5 logs. What do you think of a span pulling from 30 to 40 logs with the grab in the rear log?

MY FAVORITE.

Chesapeake & Ohio's Record.

The Chesapeake & Ohio earned in 1899 about $12,500,000, the largest sum in its history. The increase for the last six months, compared with the same period of 1898, is estimated to $500,000. A part of the improvement in business is due to the completion of improvements to the system. It now has two lines between Richmond and Clifton Forge, and 151 miles of double track completed or under construction. This enables the C. & O. to carry a much larger freight tonnage without delay than in the past. During 1899 111 miles of new rails were laid, while seventy large stone and iron bridges replaced wooden work. It is calculated that the new grain elevator at Newport News will be ready for business on the 1st of March, and the coal and other wharves. Manufacturer's Record.

McELREE'S Wine of Cardui

THE NEW GAS LIGHT

USES OF ACETYLENE AND HOW IT WAS DISCOVERED.

Insurance Underwriters Will Not Permit Its Use Under Pressure. Its Cost and How It Is Made—How It May be Used.

It was discovered by a German chemist in 1861, that if a mixture of lime and carbon were heated to an enormous temperature the two fused together and produced what is now known as calcium carbide. Nothing further of note was accomplished with this new substance until 1894, when Moissan invented an electric furnace and found that by placing carbon and lime directly in the electric arc an enormously high temperature was available at comparatively little expense, and that resulting calcium carbide possessed the property of generating a new gas very rapidly when brought into contact with water. Moissan did not pursue his experiments much further because the proper and economical construction of electric furnaces was then very little known.

As usual in such cases, the invention of Moissan was perfected in America. Thomas L. Wilson, of St. Catherine's, Ont., was a poor boy, assisting his mother in the management of a boarding house. When twenty-nine years old he crossed the border to the United States, where his talent was soon recognized, and soon afterward he built a very large electric furnace for the purpose of experimenting in the production of alloys of different metals.

While doing so he found that the spattering of the molten metal in the furnace frequently produced a conducting path between the carbon of his arc lamp, so much so as to seriously interfere with and sometimes extinguish the arc. To overcome this he placed in the furnace a mixture of coke and lime, which he found to his astonishment immediately combined under the great heat and produced beautiful, white calcium carbide at a comparatively low cost.

Capital was at once interested in Mr. Wilson's discovery, and it was not long before companies were organized in every State to control the Wilson patents, but it was also only a short time when it was discovered that acetylene gas, under certain circumstances, was of a highly explosive nature.

Contrary to the advice of Mr. Wilson, many of the companies undertook to place the gas upon the market in a liquid form. In order to do this it was compressed until it became liquid, almost in the same manner as liquid air is produced. It was found, however, that during compression the explosive qualities of the gas increased rapidly until when, in a liquid state, it was extremely dangerous.

In using the gas in this manner many disastrous explosions occurred, and the public quickly denounced the gas, but further experiments soon proved that if the pure gas were used without being compressed there was only one way of causing an explosion, and that was by exploding in the gas tank a small quantity of fulminade of mercury or some other violent explosive. It was also found quite possible to make the electric arc within a tank of pure gas with perfect safety.

It was decided that the gas would have to be used without being compressed, and this action was quickly inforced by insurance underwriters, who will not now permit the use of acetylene gas under pressure.

Calcium carbide was first sold at a very high price on account of the fact that it required the use of about five hundred horse power for twenty-four hours to produce a single ton, but there are now works at Niagara Falls where great quantities are turned out daily by the use of the tremendous water power there. The use of the carbide, however, has become so general that those works will soon be doubled, and even then it is expected that it will be almost impossible to supply the rapidly growing demand.

The flame of acetylene is entirely different from ordinary gas, and is much brighter and richer than the incandescent lamp. It is a solid flame of twenty-five candle-power, about one inch in height and one inch in width, and is controlled by a specially designed burner, which only consumes about one-quarter foot of gas an hour.

At first glance it would seem from this that the new light is very much less expensive than the old, but while the acetylene burner consumes such a very small quantity of gas the cost of the carbide is still so high that it is found that acetylene is very little cheaper than ordinary gas.

In order to light one's home with acetylene it is only necessary to replace the old burners with the new style, disconnect the house pipes from the meter and connect them to a small gas generator. This generator is very much like an ordinary city gas holder, and consists of a tank of water, in which is inverted another tank, the gas of it, it being generated being led into the holder between the water and the inverted tank, so that this tank will rise as the gas is generated until a sufficient amount is obtained to fill the holder.

The rising of the tank then automatically cuts off the supply of water from the carbide, and thus prevents the gas from going using until such time as more is needed, when the tank will descend, in doing so it opens a valve which allows the water to again come in contact with the carbide and again generate gas.

West Virginia University,

MORGANTOWN, W. VA.

The growth of the University is quite as notable in its equipment, its faculty, and its new departments as in its attendance. For example, look at

The School of Music

established two years ago. It has a faculty of seven instructors, trained under the best teachers in this country and Europe. It occupies a separate building fitted up especially for its needs. Instruction on all stringed instruments, including violin, viola, mandolin, guitar, etc., is free. For voice and piano the fees are very low. A magnificent pipe organ for Commencement Hall is being constructed and it will be for the use of students of the School of Music. If you are interested in the study of music, write for full information.

Other departments of the University are developing with equal rapidity. The Professors' Department pays no fees. Instructors, however, deserve special mention. Write for a special pamphlet thereon.

The Undergraduate Body has a faculty of thirty-five instructors, graduates of the foremost schools in the world.

The Winter Quarter begins January 3; and the Spring Quarter April 3.

ODE.

How sleep the brave who sink to rest,
By all their country's wishes blest!
When Spring with dewy fingers cold,
Returns to deck their hallowed mould,
She there shall dress a sweeter sod,
Than fancy's feet have ever trod.

By fairy hands their knell is rung,
By forms unseen their dirge is sung;
There Honour comes a pilgrim gray,
To bless the turf that wraps their clay,
To dwell a weeping hermit there!

THE PLATFORM QUESTION.

It affords the New York Independent much satisfaction that the Democratic leaders have expressed such a variance of views on the leading questions and it calmly asserts that the breeches are so wide that the party can never be solidified by any platform. However bad such a state may be for the political supremacy of the party, such brave and independent views lift the men above the danger of being termed "dumb driven cattle," and constitute the one and only safeguard of the institutions of the country. When voters consent to act like a machine both before and after the conventions, we have sign of that apathy which breeds corruption in those in the high places.

The platform which will bind the party together is so hard to frame that one is reminded of the condition of the Whig party, which was twice successful in electing a President, but only by not adopting a platform the planks of which would cause diversions among the honest Whigs.

We suppose that we will be compelled to adopt a platform. It should be one which would be as broad as Democracy itself. If not we had better follow the Whig policy and nominate our candidates and vote for Democracy, free and untrammelled according to the way each of us understands it.

Some of the history connected with the the two successful campaigns which were waged by the Whig party without a platform to stand on may be recited here.

In 1836 Van Buren's term was drawing to a close. Immediately after he took his seat in 1837 the country experienced an era of hard times equal to the two first years of the present Administration. Van Buren was induced to call a special session of Congress, the Congress convening the 4th of September. The currency question was agitating the country and the Administration wished a brand new bank, while many were in favor of the establishment of a national bank. A piece of a bill was passed, and no definite action was taken on the currency question. The Administration was waging a war against the Florida Indians, very similar to the Philippine contest in that time after time it was reported that the war was practically over, only to break out worse than ever.

Texas was in about the same condition that Cuba is now and wanted annexation. A revolution started in Canada and an invasion was threatened from the United States.

The elections began to show a falling off. In December, 1839, the Whig convention was held at Harrisburg to nominate a candidate for President. Clay, Webster, Winfield Scott, and Harrison were before the convention, and Harrison—the least known—was nominated. Tyler was chosen vice-President. The campaign of that year was one of unprecedented excitement. The followers of "Tippecanoe and Tyler too!" were successful. The Whigs received 234 electoral votes, and the Democrats 66.

Four years of Whig rule satisfied the country and the Democrats came in. They waged a successful war against Mexico, and were defeated in 1848. Taylor and Filmore were elected as Whigs with no platform. Again were Clay, Webster, and Scott before the convention to be turned down in favor of another quiet soldier, Zachary Taylor. He, like General Harrison, died in office, and the vice-president reigned in his stead and like John Tyler represented the minority of his party.

The Whig party is now no more. In our county their descendants are Democrats, and the descendants of the Democrats of those days are Republicans. But they showed their good sense twice when they divested themselves of that bone of contention called a platform, and went in to beat the other man on general principles.

SCENES FROM THE PENITENTIARY.

Advance Sheets of a Play Which is Never to Be Written.

Scene in France. French Army officers plotting against the life of Captain Cartfus.

General Mercinit—Ay, he must die!
That much is settled! It but remains
For us to choose the instrument
By which his dissolution may be brought to pass.
Cartfus or France! The ant or elephant!
Our country must be saved; our tracks be covered up;
He knows too much, this Captain Cartfus!
He is too smart! He gets too gay!
He is inclined to be too previous!
Now, since it is decreed our blades
Can not be bathed in blood so treacherous,
We are compelled to pizen him;
The meeting now will come to order—
What is the pleasure of the house?
Colonel De Bund—Suppose we give the traitor Prussic acid
So they will blame the Germans with his death.
Mercinit—It is no time for levity
France is in danger.
De Bund—'Tis even so, and that Jew Cartfus aint so safe.
Methinks I see an army doctor present;
He may know of something which will end him.—
Some juice that will evanisate a Jew.
Army Doctor—There be many things which taken inwardly will free
The spirit, life, from the encumbering clay.
But since confined, this most perfidious Jew,
Has had free access to a stock of poison
Such as would set a druggist up for life
He will not take them; he desires to live.
He is as stubborn as an army mule
But I have recently concocted a scheme
By which he may become felo de se
Save Frenzy and touch all Frenchmen not
Not to know his touch.
My plan is this.
We all know Cartfus is a heavy eat;
He'd swim the Hellespont to get a drink
He begs his jailer every day for alcohol,
Or beer, or brandy, or some substitute;
Tonight his jailer gives to him a quart of pure
And unadulterated new corn whiskey;
Tomorrow morning he will cry for more;
The jailer will not get it for him, but will give him this:
It is the deadliest poison of them all;
Essence of cinnamon, product of a heartless fraud
In the United States; wood alcohol
Is the chief ingredient. He'll use this as a substitute,
And he will go where he will tell no tales.

(SCENE.—Cartfus in his cell the next morning. The jailer reading the Cartfus Case in the morning paper.)

Cartfus—A drink, a drink, my hope of heaven for a drink!
Whew! I tell you I feel bad, I do!
My throat's a thousand times more dry
Than ever was the Desert of Sahara;
Dog of a jailer, get me at once a stimulant,
Or I will break these bars and throttle you!

Jailer—Be still! I want to read; you know yourself
That you are in a prohibition town.
Sometimes you can get liquor, oft times not;
Unless you send around the corner for some essence.
You will have to wait a day or two.

(The prisoner shudders, sends for the deadly drug, drinks it, and expires.)

Curtain.

LAYING THE TRACK.

The track on the Greenbrier Railway is laid as far as Caldwell, and a track has been put in beside the main line from Whitcomb to Ronceverte. No more track will be laid this winter on account of the freezing and thawing, which causes landslides on newly completed work on hillsides. There is no danger of slips on the road already completed.

The plan is to store all the rails and everything necessary at Caldwell this winter. For this purpose a train and crew will be kept busy the whole time. Immediately after the first of April the work of laying the track will be pushed through without delay. The track should reach Marlinton by the middle of June, and the whole road be completed this season.

BIOGRAPHIC NOTES.

JAMES RODGERS, Sr.

Among the worthy, industrious persons whose arduous toils and severe privations helped to make our county what it is, deserving of respectful mention was the late James Rodgers, Sr. He was a native of Madison County, Virginia; born February 13, 1789.

His first marriage was with a Miss Jackson, of Madison County. The issue of this marriage was seven children. The sons were Robert, whose wife was a daughter of John Smith, one of the pioneers of Stoney Creek; Joseph and Drury. The daughters were Sarah, Elizabeth, Mary and Tabitha. Respecting these children we have virtually no particulars in hand.

James Rodgers came to our county in 1824 and settled in the woods on Lewis Ridge, at a spot overlooking the Buckeye Cove. There he and his family became indentified with Pocahontas almost from its organization.

His second marriage was with with Nellie Lewis, of the Little Levels, a granddaughter of Alexander Wooddell, whose descendants are so prominently represented by prosperous and influential citizens in our county at this time. By the second marriage there were six children. Margaret became Henry Adkinson's first wife; James Lewis Rodgers, Rebecca, who became Mrs Felton.

William Rodgers married Polly Fleming, daughter of the late James Fleming, of Bough, and settled on a part of the Fleming homestead, near Buckeye, where his widow and two daughters now reside. He was a Union pensioner for service in the Federal army.

Chesley Rodgers married Mrs Sally Morrison and settled near Jacox.

John Rodgers married a Miss Harter.

James L. Rodgers, the eldest son of the second family reared by James Rodgers, Sr., was married twice. The first wife was Eliza Burgess. There were ten children in the first family: N. C. Rodgers of Jacox; the late Mrs Hannah Wade, G. W. Rodgers, on Beaver Dam; Davis Rodgers, deceased; John H. Rodgers, also dead; Maggie became Mrs William Adkisson of Buckeye; Eliza became Mrs Oliver Auldridge and lives at Hillsboro; Mary is at Clifton Forge; Alvin W. near Buckeye.

By the second marriage with Mrs Mary Kellison, nee Galford, there were a son Lewis, now dead, and a daughter Laura.

Thus the writer has endeavored to present the available information concerning this worthy old citizen and his family, aided by his grandson A. W. Rodgers.

In his time James Rodgers had the reputation of being one of the most industrious of working men. He tried to train his sons and daughters to habits of industry and strict economy. Soon as they became old enough for service they went from home and found ready employment as field hands and house keepers. This veracible man was a zealous and devoted adherant of the Methodist Protestant church. He was one of the first members in the Buckeye society and probly one of the first in the county. His prayers and experience talks were in good language, interspersed with allusions to the parables and quotations of the promises. All this indicated that in early, impressible youth he must have been familiar with persons of more than ordinary culture, such as Madison County was distinguished for. In his speech he had the tone and style which characterized the old Virginia gentry, as the writer learned to know in subsequent years from actual acquaintance with East Virginians.

The writer cherishes the memory of this old citizen with feelings of much respect, as the two often toiled in the meadows and harvest fields side by side in his boyhood. He remembers being often impressed by the pathos and fervency of the old man's occasional prayers in the morning worship. This was something which was never omitted in the old Marlinton home. The belief of the older people at that time was that "Prayer and provender hinder no man," and so time was always found for prayer as well as for breakfast and supper. Some of his expressions still linger in memory after more than fifty years. One was an allusion to the grapes of Eschol, as typical of the richness of the Promised Land. His idea was that God would give his humble, praying people here, while on their pilgrimage, a cluster now and then from the heavenly vine so as to refresh and encourage them to put forth their earnest faithful endeavors to go up and receive possession of the heavenly land.

This allusion was utilized as suggestive of a sermon prepared and preached by the writer thirty years ago. May we meet and see for ourselves the blessed land in all its richness and glorious beauty and especially the vine from which the clusters were gathered that cheered and encouraged him.

Rocking the Cradle.

J. Dalaughter, Spartanburg, Ark., says: For the past fifteen years I have counselled physicians and used patent medicines, but Ballard's Liver Pills and Yucca Pectoral excelled them all. I could get no relief from constipation, and after using one box I was as sound as a dollar. Have been a sufferer for my good friends, and none of the numbers ever complained, and now we are rocking the cradle of the army in perfect health and enjoyment. My advice to all is never to part home to clear of Ballard's Pills.

COLLECTION SONG.

(The following spirited poem was handed us by a gentleman from Lobelia, who informs us that it was composed by an old gentleman living in that neighborhood.—Editor.)

If not adverse,
We will rehearse
A stanza for each one,
And while we sing,
The cash just bring,
And meet this gospel dun.
To one and all
We make this call,
Come, draw your pocket book,
And pay a dime,
For every time
You at a preacher look.

Ye romping girls,
With bangs and curls,
And fingers bid in rings,
If you to-day
Will promptly pay,
We 'll call you pretty things;
And, ere we close,
We 'll pray for beaus,
With true and honest hearts,
Who all will be Most easily
Shot down by Cupid's darts.

Old maids now gray,
For you we say
The fools are not all dead;
So pay your mite,
And we will cite
You to the man who'll wed;
And when you clap
Old Hyman's trap
Og him you most admire,
You then will learn
Why burnt cats turn
Their tails toward the fire.

Now mothers dear,
You need not fear
That awful future day,
For if you'll give,
And let us live,
We all for you will pray,
That when you die,
Your souls may fly,
On wings of chicken-hawks,
Where you will be Forever free
From darning holey socks.

Ye sporting boys,
Who make great noise,
With shotgun, bounds and horn
Throw in the coin,
And when you join
The chase at early morn,
You then will see
The foxes flee
Before the yelping pack,
And have more fun
Than any one
Who keeps his money back!

Old bachelors,
Who wear no scars
From rolling-pin or broom,
Throw in the chink
And never think
Of an eternal doom.
For when your breath
Goes out in death,
No sound of Gabriel's horn
Will ever shake
The world to wake
You on the judgment morn.

Now Fathers bold,
Who oft have told
Of your great love for Jesus,
Throw in a V,
And you will see
How your good actions please us
And when we raise
Our notes in praise
To Him who all things rules,
The loudest notes
That bear our throats
Shall be, God save the fools!

This song is sung by the preachers, while the stewards wait upon the congregation to receive contributions, and as it is money that furnishes the oil to keep the gospel machine in running order, all preachers should spare no pains in singing with the spirit appropriate to all collections.

MRS REBECCA J. HILL.

Mrs Rebecca J. Hill, relict George C. Hill, died near Lo November 24, 1899. She was in Greenbrier County April 8, 26, and was married in 1848 by James M. Clark. She was mother of eleven children, fo whom are living. She was a mother and a loving wife. many years she was a membe the M. E. Church South.

Our sky is hung with black sombre cloud curtains; our v is overcast with the gloom of row and every sound that st our ear has in it a cadence of spair. Without the presence of loved one who has gone before world seems empty and cheer and in our heart there is a dre aching void. Our consolation the sweet realization of the that our loved one is at p "Where the wicked cease t troubling and the weary a rest." The one upon whom have lavished our affection heard the words from the Fat lips: "Well done thou good faithful servant. Enter thou the joys of thy Lord."

We have lost our darling mother We have hid it all alone, The loss grows to live in heaven, And her person is lost to view. Oh, that darling, how we loved her, And yet grieve now we must, But an angel came down for her, And removed her from our dust.

It is hard to break the tender cor When love has bound the heart, It is hard, so hard, to submit the And mourn forever more. Dear loved one, we must lay thee, In the peaceful grave's embrace, But the memory will be cherished Till we see thy heavenly face.

Farewell, dear mother, sweet rest Where all is free from pain, Farewell, till in some happy clime We shall meet to part again. Farewell, dear mother, we must leave you Here in the grave to rest, And commend your soul to God Who gave it, who gave it best.

POLITICS.

W A Bratton announces himself this week for the office of Prosecuting Attorney of Pocahontas County. He is a good, conservative lawyer, and during the eight years he has lived in this county has made many friends. In 1896 he made a close race for this office against the present incumbent. He is a very good man for the place.

Constable Frank Patterson of Dunmore is a possibility in the choice of deputy sheriffs. He is a good business man and very popular, and is said to be not adverse to serving his country in this manner.

We see by the Greenbrier Independent that Dr W. H. McClung is out for the Senate. If we mistake not this gentleman was one of the twelve who made their famous stand the result of which was the election of Mr N. B. Scott's attorney to the United States Senate. What's the matter with Albert Sidney Johnson, who discovered Henry G. Davis, for Governor? Or the Pocahontas Times' candidate of 1898, Thomas H. Dennis, member of the State Committee.

OUR WEAK POINT.

One of our London subscribers (how we swell whenever we think that we have subscribers in London) hits the Pocahontas Times in its tenderest place. He writes the insendo, and we get to hear of it by his correspondent's burst of misplaced confidence. We can not afford to miss printing a good joke just because it is on us. It is:

"The Pocahontas Times has slain more English since the war began than the armies of Paul Kruger."

We fear it does not help crimes of this kind to say that they were committed unintentionally. We belong to the vast majority over whom Mr Lindley Murray wept and tried to reclaim. A murderer of the King's English in our 'teens we have committed many a capital crime since.

Little combinations such as "have went," "had n't ought to," "have came" creep into the copy and shock our friends. But we plead in extenuation that our editor was reared in a hard school—a weather-beaten old school on top of a hill, where the school teacher wore his breeches on the inside of his boots, and where Sammy Sauerkraut, who earned twenty-five cents a week by not eating meat at home, came to be publicly instructed. In that school the predicate never agreed with the subject except by chance.

He fed on the public swill at the public trough, and his mother tried to beat out of him the language he thus acquired, with partial success. The result is the chaste Algonquin style with which our readers are familiar. His most intimate friends are sorry for him. Sometimes they meet around the office spittoon and discuss him and point to many things indicating that he has not brain like "present company."

He is sorry to give anyone pain, but the English language has many pitfalls. If he ever succeeds in handling it with impunity, he will sing with Dr Oliver Wendell Holmes:

"Oh, Life has many a reef to skim,
Before in port we drop the anchor;
But when our course is safely run
Lord, oh, for there the work is done—
Life owns no headway to the spanker!"

Every time we lick a stamp we wonder how the present administration can hope for success at the polls. To believe Richard Carvel before the Revolutionary war one of the strongest opposition arguments those who ordinarily used such oaths as "Indeed," "Truly," &c., was "Well, I'll be strangled and taxed." And we swear by this great and holy oath that we have as much cause for complaint as ever had the patriots of the Revolutionary times.

Congressman Sibley was on the Democratic side of the House, but his opposition when he spoke voice from the Republicans. He who chooses his home outside neither COIN HARVEY'S NEW BOOK.

W. H. Harvey, a West Virginian by birth, whose books on the currency question have made him famous, has just issued another book, called "Money, Trusts and Imperialism." The author is essentially a democrat, believing that the voter should know within himself as the result of his reasoning powers why he votes a certain ticket.

His stand on the question of bimetalism is familiar from his previous works. In the present book he denounces banks in general and national banks in particlar.

Two billion dollars represent the actual amount of money coined or printed by the United States. This includes gold, silver, nickel and paper coins and paper money, but the 12,804 banks in the country have individual deposits of $7,634,954,361, or more than three times the actual amount of money in existence. Thus if bank depositors should with one accord demand the amount of their deposits in money it would be physically impossible to accomodate them. This illustrates the benefits of commercial paper as a supplementary currency, but Mr Harvey views it as a constant menance of panics in the business world, and would have more money put in circulation to prevent these periodical panics. The loans and discounts of the 12,804 banks amount to $5,751,487,610; thus the banks are lending nearly three times as much money as there is in existance, and getting interest on it too.

But if the State bank is bad, the National bank is the embodiment of evil. The Government, instead of issuing a "greenback," which does not bear interest, and which the common people would gladly take, issues interest bearing bonds and allows banks to buy them. It pays the banks 4 per cent per annum, and allows them to issue money for which the government stands good. Surely Uncle Sam has fallen among thieves. When the common people advocate issuing paper money for government indebtedness, the financiers howl about the nation's credit, as if the nation could not take care of itself. But it meets with their approval when the government backs the money of a certain bank to the same effect only paying interest in addition. Harvey shows this so plainly that it comes in the nature of an exposure. Owing to the moral support of the administration has given national banks in its late currency bill, the remarks on this subject are timely. Harvey would have a system of postal savings banks which would not only allow money to be deposited subject to check but would also lend money on real estate at the rate of one per. cent per annum. The scheme does not seem impracticable to the reader of his book.

The book is written in Harvey's usual style. The 1895 book represents a kid of ten in knee pants uttering the profoundest thoughts on the money question. This year it is a youth of 16 who has reached the smart-alec stage. We do not appreciate this juvenile not, but if the grown up reader can overlook this idiosyncrasy of the author he will find much that is intensely interesting in the book.

As he lectures he frequently interrupted by people who put posers at him, all of whom he bowls over with his answers with perfect ease. Mr H. C. Simms, of Huntington, is immortalized in this way.

"Mr Henry C. Simms, of Huntington, West Va., now rise and said:

"The true principle of Democracy is to have as few laws as possible. Inhibitions and prohibitions, and a law-ruled people is the opposite of Democracy. The government should have a hand in as few things as possible and let the people run themselves. And for this I object to the government going into the banking business." And saying this he sat down."

Cole's reply is too long to print here, but the gist of it is that either the government must run the banks, or the banks will run the government.

We will review his views on trusts and imperialism another day.

Miss Wesly Irvine, near Vandevalt Valley, died on the 15th inst. after a protracted illness and was laid to rest in the family burying ground on the farm. A short but impressive funeral service was conducted by Rev. John Dilley near Dilley's Mill.

A Suggestion.

Dear Mr Editor: I have noticed your articles and the suggestions of your correspondents in regard to bringing out candidates to be voted for at the coming election. At present, I have no names to suggest but write to submit the following:

Please let us bring out our very best men—Christians, for all the offices. Do you know, Mr Editor, when you laud the praises of a wordly man for office that the evil is far-reaching in its effects? It has been said that "politics is too dirty a pool for Christians to dabble in." In one sense this is true, be it said to our SHAME; but if our very best people, who, of course, are Christians (and including ministers of the gospel) do not take a hand in matters of state, what will become of us? It seems to me to be their bounden duty.

Mr Editor: Suppose we had true Christians in all the offices, from President of the United States down, what would be the result? It is too wonderful to contemplate. Why is it that we are already so prosperous and enjoy such glorious liberty? Simply because of God's people in the land. It has been Divinely said that "a little leaven leaveneth the whole lump."

It matters not so much for high educational or financial standing standing, we want, for all of our officers men of good judgment, good common sense, and above all GOD FEARING MEN.

Yours for "Love, Purity, and Fidelity, A VOTER.

HUNTERSVILLE, W. VA., Jan. 20, 1900.

[Note by the Editor: We would beg leave to call the correspondent's attention to the fact that never has Mohammedan, a Sun Worshipper, a Brahmin of any caste, a follower of Buddha, a cannibal, an Atheist, nor any other kind of a heathen ever offered in Pocahontas County. A ticket like the following would be absurd:

For Sheriff, Abul el Ben Haddam, of Turkey.

For Prosecuting Attorney, Ah Ling, of China.

For House of Delegates, Man-Who-Talks-Long, of the Reservation.

For Assessor, Dambesi, of the Congo.

For County Court, Isaac Finklestein, of New York.

All the successful ones are men who love theis fellow men (at least for a season) and so their names lead all the rest.]

The object of this suit is to enforce the vendor's lien retained in the deed from Andrew M. McLaughlin and wife to John T. McGraw, dated February 13, 1891; and have the land granted by said deed sold to pay the purchase money due thereon, which now amounts to over $13,000; said land lies in Pocahontas county, West Virginia, and includes a portion of the site of Marlinton.

This day came the plaintiff by his attorneys, and upon their motion and appearing by affidavit filed that diligence has been used on be*half of the plaintiff in this cause to* ascertain in what county the defendant Mary Moneypenny is without effect it is ordered that she do appear here within one month after the first publication of this order and do what is necessary to protect her interest in this suit.

He could have found a large assortment made for fine trade. The prices are the lowest. All have a good satisfied suit for one at the Golden Store.

What has become of the Edray Dancing Hog law? Last summer a good many of us signed the petition necessary to prevent four footed hogs from running at large in the district very nearly and generally. The petition was completed, but was never presented and we cannot conceive who holds it. It is another case of dog luck, it is supposed.

The log deed from J. H. Dewing to John G. Locke has been recorded in this county and in Randolph. It conveys about 50,000 acres of land for the consideration of $500,000. There is a clause in the deed providing that the rights of the original Shenandoah Improvement Company shall not be interfered with. The most interesting thing about the deal was the private auction at it. The amount is $500 and there is now among the men of a number of offers. Supposed to be from Mr. Locke's agent. PICKING BILLIONS OF FLOWERS.

Work Where the Perfume Industry Is Carried On in France.

Grasse, in the southern part of France, is the centre of the perfume industry. There women and girls may be seen, with broad hats on their heads, gathering flowers from 5 until 11 A. M. and then returning with their fragrant burdens to the houses, where they pluck the leaves from the blossoms and pass the rest of the day in preparing them for the work of extracting the essences or essential oils, which contain the perfume itself.

In March they begin plucking violets, from which violet water is made, and from the beginning of May to the end of June they gather the jessamine, roses and orange blossoms, as well as the tuberoses in July. The mignonette in August and the cassia in September. The nimble fingers of the women must move rapidly to pluck the millions of leaves that go to make up the 1,300,000 kilograms of rose leaves alone that are used each season. Besides there are 4 million kilograms of jessamine to be plucked, and violets and orange blossoms to the extent of two million kilograms a year. To give an idea of the number of plants that are raised for this huge result, it is calculated that each stalk of jessamine yields two kilograms of blossoms a season. So there must be at least five hundred thousand stalks to yield the million kilograms required.

But the gathering of the blossoms is only the beginning of the work, for then the flowers must be picked apart and all the spoiled leaves thrown aside. Then the making of the perfume begins. The leaves are spread one by one upon layers of pure lard that cover plates of glass. Three or four times these flower-layers are renewed before the lard has absorbed all of the purfume that it can hold for the fat has a peculiar attraction for the essential oils of the flowers. This purfumed lard is the pomade of commerce, not the pomade used for hair or beard but the crude material out of which this is afterward manufactured. The lard is then either shipped as it is to other manufacturers, or put into alcohol which draws off the perfume from the fat, having a stronger attraction therefor than the lard and the result is the finest eau de cologne. Most of this pomade is shipped as it stands to all parts of Europe and America, but some of it is reserved and the oils are extracted by distilling processes, making the purest extracts.—Exchange.

A BROKEN HEART.

Queer Case of a Philadelphia Dog With Two Owners.

Do dogs die of broken heart? That is a question which has frequently excited the interest of dog physicians and of particularly fond owners of canine pets, and with a view to answering that question to a particular owner's satisfaction a post-mortem examination was held recently at the dog hospital of the University of Pennsylvania.

The animal in question was a huge, shaggy English mastiff, white in color, and with a fond attachment for its master, C. B. Mellor of West Philadelphia. It seems that a dispute arose as to the dog's ownership, and one day it went away to Haverford by Andrew McPhillips, a drover. McPhillips claimed to have owned the dog two years, but Mellor claimed that the brute was but 16 months old, as the detention of the teeth would show. Mellor then swore out a warrant, charging the drover with larceny, and the case was called before Magistrate Jermon in the city hall. Mellor's counsel demanded that a veterinarian be brought into court to testify that the dog's teeth proved to be less than 2 years of age, but the court had been advised that a dog's age could not be determined in that way, so the dog itself was ordered into court to act as a witness in the case. Court was then adjourned till the dumb witness could be summoned, and when the case was called for trial again it was found that the dog had suddenly died. McPhillips brought its body to the city hall in a wagon. The magistrate thereupon dismissed all legal proceedings on the ground that both parties in the suit seemed sincere in their claims to ownership. There was evidently a mistake somewhere.

But Mellor did not like the idea of the dog's sudden death, and declared that if his pet was dead it had died of a broken heart, caused by being separated from him, its right master. An autopsy he averred, would prove it.

McPhillips resignfully gave up the body, and Mellor, with an officer of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, hauled the corpse out to the university veterinary and canine department. There Dr. J. N. Adams, the veterinarian, held a post-mortem examination to determine the cause of the dog's death.

The dog's heart, when cut into, was found to be swelled almost to bursting, and filled with dark, half-coagulated blood. The head and neck veins were swollen and blue, and in places a bloody serum had been forced through the walls of the blood vessels into the cavities of the body.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

Chinese Can Endure Pain.

"A very curious thing about the Chinese is their indifference to pain," said Dr. E. S. Hansen, the veteran missionary of Canton, who was in the city a few days ago. "I have had a great deal of surgical work in the great hospital conducted by the United Brethren in Canton, and it was at first supposed that there was some peculiar anatomical formation which caused this insensibility to pain. In preventing the natives to take an anesthetic but the doctors found to their surprise that anaesthetics were not generally needed, and that their patients endured the most serious operations without flinching. The Chinese will go to the dentist and have a tooth pulled without the slightest wincing. The average Chinaman will go under the required position and hold it for a minute. When the knife touches the nerve of pain he will not flinch, but will grin and groan if he must. I never saw a Chinaman or patient, or a combination of both, have nerve enough to take chloroform, and I have been told by physicians in other parts of China that the Canton Hospital was a curiosity in that line and that the Chinese generally were of the kind to endure pain without flinching."—New York Tribune.

SHE WIELDS A CLEAVER.

Miss Daisy Stevenson One of the Few Lady Butchers of the Country.

Rochester has been referred to by some cynical persons as a "back number," but she can boast of being a leader with but a single exception in one respect—that of a female butcher. The name of this fair knight of the saw and cleaver is Miss Daisy Stevenson, and she dispenses of her wares at an up-to-date little market at the corner of Plymouth avenue and Grieg street. The proprietor is a modest, unassuming little woman, 21 years of age, slightly below the average height, and fair. She is a brilliant conversationalist and possesses exceptional executive abilities. Miss Stevenson has now been cutting meat for a living for two years and three months, having first undertaken the task when her father, who had become sick and unable to carry on his work, concluded to take a rest for a few weeks. Miss Stevenson was at that time keeping the books for the concern. Rather than allow strangers to take the business, Miss Stevenson opened the market and continued the business just as though nothing had happened. Under her management the trade was steadily increased, until now it is established upon a firm basis.

When asked how she liked the work she replied: "It is not through choice that I do the work, but because it is a means of support for the family. It was difficult at first, but now it does not seem harder than home work. I am my own boss, which means a great deal. I open the market at 6:30 in winter and 6 in summer. I find it difficult to get good help; any one can sell cut goods, but it is the odds and ends which go to make up the profit, and which must be dispensed of as well. I seldom lose any thing from bad accounts, as my customers are prompt. If I send a statement and receive no returns, I immediately drop those people from my roll and refuse to trust them again."

So far as can be learned there is but one other woman in the United States who is at present pursuing this business as a means of livelihood, and that one is in Syracuse. During the returns, I immediately drop these people thing which attracted his attention was the evident satisfaction with which the patrons received goods. There was not the usual fault-finding as to weight and quality of the meat, in fact, several went so far as to say that it was an exceptionally good cut. Miss Stevenson went about her work in a manner which denoted the utmost confidence.—Rochester Democrat and Chronicle.

SEEDING RAISINS.

Machines Will do It at the Rate of Ten Tons Daily.

Unlike the ancient imitation, the California seeded raisin is subjected to a dry temperature of 140 degrees Fahrenheit from three to five hours, after which the fruit is submitted to a chilling process, and while in this reduced condition of temperature is passed through the cleaning or "brushing" machines, which remove every particle of dust and capstems, thus making it a pure and wholesome article. It is then taken automatically by elevators to a room where spread upon wire trays. It is exposed to a temperature of 120 degrees Fahrenheit, which brings the fruit back to its normal condition, and in this "processing" the berry is converted into pectin, that delicious jelly which gives to fruit its best flavor.

The raisins having been prepared through this afterward heating and chilling to keep indefinitely and resist climatic influence are passed through seeding machines, each of which has a capacity of from ten to twelve tons daily. The raisins are pressed between rubber or similar surfaced rollers, which at first flatten the berry and press the seed to the surface, when an impeding roller catches the seeds forward of the berry, both affixed to its periphery deftly removing them from the fruit, while the latter passes on, stripped of seeds, but possessing every particle of its flesh. The seeds are removed from the roller by a "flicking" or whisking device, and are sent aloft to the seed receptacle, finally ending their journey in the engine room, where they are burned as fuel.

Four hundred and fifty carloads of ten tons each, or 9,000,000 pounds of seeded raisins, were shipped from the Fresno district last year, and a very much larger tonnage will be turned out this year.

Some estimate can be formed of the possibilities of the Fresno seeded raisin plants when it is stated that their aggregate capacity for this season will approximate from 1,700 to 2,000 carloads. While it is probable that 1,400 cars will be the output. Each seeding plant, as from five to twelve machines of ten tons daily capacity per machine. Some of the packing houses cover a ground space 150 by 225 feet and are three stories high.—California Vineyard.

Snapshot Cook's Lemon Pies.

"Good cooks are born like poets," said Major J. B. Quinn. "Once upon a time I bought a lot of turnips for a government snapshot on one of the interior waterways, and visiting it not long afterward, was surprised to find lemon pie being served out to all hands for dinner. I ate a piece of it myself and, although it was delicious, I felt it my duty to call down the steward for squandering government funds.

"'Where did you get the lemons for these pies?' I asked gleefully.

"'You next thing up with the others, sah,' he replied, grinning.

"'Why, I didn't send anything up except turnips,' I said in surprise.

"'Well, that's what these pies is made of,' he admitted reluctantly. 'The men don't like turnips no other way, sah, so I made em up into lemon pies.'

"It was entirely true, and, beyond the fact that he had used a small amount of chemicals to secure the flavor, I was never able to ascertain how he did it."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

There have been poultry books printed costing fifteen dollars and more, but there never has been one at any price with more beautiful colored reproductions of poultry, than those found in the Biggle Poultry Book, an announcement of which appears in another column. The paintings were made direct from best birds of the different breeds, and the coloring and characteristic shape of each breed are perfect. As for the text there never was a book printed containing more practical, level-headed information. Its chapters include, Eggs for Hatching, Hatching the Eggs, Care of Chicks With Hens and Brooders, The Successful Care of Incubators, The Farmer's Flock, The Village Hennery; chapters on Breeds, on Fattening and Marketing, and Diseases and Remedies, with the old and new school methods of treatment. One man wrote the publishers that "The mottoes, alone, at each chapter heading were worth the cost of the book." Twenty thousand copies of this admirable work have been printed. See advertisement of The Biggle Books in this week's issue of The Times. The price is 50 cents, free by mail; address the publishers, Wilmer Atkinson Co., Philadelphia.

The Paper of the People.
For the People, AND With the People

HONEST IN MOTIVE
FEARLESS IN EXPRESSION
SOUND IN PRINCIPLE.

A newspaper is an educator; there are all kinds of educators, but the man who spends money judiciously and liberally is better able to impart his knowledge than the man who has little or nothing to spend.

THE SUN is the highest type of a newspaper.

THE SUN'S reports from all parts of the United States are unsurpassed.

THE SUN'S Cable Service is the finest known; the troubles in the Philippines and in South Africa demand competent correspondents and vast expenditure of money and labor in getting the news. When you get THE SUN you get news and intelligent presentation of facts with it, as well as carefully prepared articles of editorial writers of highest standing. When you get a daily paper, whose principal recommendation is its cheapness, you get the dregs—generally very poor dregs at that.

By mail Fifty Cents a month; six months, $3; one year $6.

THE BALTIMORE WEEKLY SUN

THE BEST FAMILY NEWSPAPER

All the news of the world in attractive form; an agricultural department second to none in the country; market reports which are recognized authority; short stories, complete in each number; an interesting woman's column, and a varied and attractive department of household interest.

VIRTUE.

Sweet day so cool, so calm, so bright,
The bridal of the earth and sky;
The dews shall weep thy fall to-night;
For thou must die.

Sweet rose whose hue, angry and brave,
Bids the rash gazer wipe his eye;
Thy root is ever in its grave,
And thou must die.

Sweet spring, full of sweet days and roses;
A box where sweets compacted lie;
Thy music shows ye have your closes,
And all must die.

Only a sweet and virtuous soul,
Like seasoned timber, never gives;
But, tho' the whole world turn to coal
Then chiefly lives.

—George Herbert.

County Sketches

The Editor's Revenge.

The editor of the Greenville Avalanche took life seriously. He even took politics seriously, and when a country editor does that he is in the habit of ascribing every ill to which he is heir to the policy of the opposing party, and he is able to discover many villainous intentions which are only to be thwarted by the exposure of the plans, such as an editor is able to make. When the villains see who pursues them they abandon their evil scheme, trying to make out the editor to be a false prophet. "Common liar" is the word they use when the newspaper cries, "Stop, thief, in your contemplated steal!"

For a century or so the editors have stood sentinel guarding the people's rights, and that is what makes American politics so pure to-day. They arm themselves with words like these: Corruption, bribery, rottenness, trickery, bossism, plutocracy, jobbery, favoritism. They do not content themselves, like the city papers which have no real faith in goodness, with clean, penetrating, artistic thrusts. When they go after a man they mangle him. They seek to reform him with an axe.

Theodore Potts, the editor of the Avalanche's motto was that a paper without a policy was as a man without a soul. He arraigned the Republican party once a week at the bar of public opinion. Every now and then he would be startled at the power of his words and say to himself that when the Republican party saw that they would not leave one stone of his office upon another. He edited his paper in a board shante, but he liked the figure. Yet his office remained standing, and the Republicans continued to exist in considerable numbers. Of late years his pen has been particularly galling, for the antiquarians differed somewhat as to what Thomas Jefferson and Andrew Jackson would have done under present circumstances, and it was not altogether safe to advocate any special policy. He thundered at the Administration, but if the Administration was aware of the bombardment it gave no sign.

Now after a particularly severe arraignment of the party in power, Thomas Gardner, a local Democratic politician who had been once mentioned for the office of Justice of the Peace without success, decided to invest a dollar to bring light to a certain brother-in-law who lived in the northern part of the State, and who was so benighted as to vote the Republican ticket. He subscribed for the Avalanche and had it forwarded to his brother-in-law's address. When the latter received it he did not take kindly to the blood and thunder style in which it was condemned, and believing that it was a scheme on the part of the editor to make him a complimentary subscriber to his paper, he refused to take the paper from his office, in spite of the wishes of his wife who had a hankering to read the entertaining serials.

The postmaster read the paper for a few weeks while business was slack and for being a devout Republican holding a lucrative office under the government found he was not pleased with it. When he determined that he did not care to read it, and not till then, he complied with the instructions of the Postmaster General and begged leave to inform the editor on a postal card that his paper addressed to Newton Bellwinder was not taken out of the postoffice of Middletown, but remained dead in said office, and would be please discontinue the same; the reason, Refused.

Now Potts knew Form No. 1528 as far as he could see it and he had never gotten used to receiving these cards. They are unwelcome visitors to country newspaper offices. One of them insures a bad quarter of an hour whenever it arrives. The idea conveyed is gruesome; the product of your brain, the child of your intellect, "remains dead in this office. You will please discontinue the same."

"Of all the said words, the saddest are these, 'It remains dead in this office,'" quoth Mr Potts. But in this case he did not like the idea of returning the dollar. It was impossible besides, for it had been spent, so he compromised with his conscience, said nothing and continued to send the paper and paid no attention whatever to the notice nor those that followed it.

The week before Christmas Potts was informed that there was an express package at the railroad office for him, and he called for it in person. The depot agent grinned as he delivered it, for it was a large, wholesome looking package marked, "GLASS. HANDLE WITH CARE." The charges on it amounted to 80 cents. This was paid cheerfully, and the agent said: "Touch not, taste not, handle with care!" Potts took the box home and opened it in the editorial sanctum after office hours. The contents besides some rubbish were three copies of Grasshill Roche, addressed to Newton Bellwinder, Middletown, West Virginia. The postmaster was a practical joker and had expressed him some copies of the paper he had been sending to the refractory Bellwinder. The editor was out 80 cents in money and a barrelful of hope.

It was a dirty trick and a dangerous one to play on the common enemy, the printer. Potts took it hard. He stated the case to the department in Washington, setting out the whole facts as we know them. The Administration seeks to be the same kind father to the loyal postmaster and the ungrateful editor who scourges it in his paper, but the clerk who opened the letter in the department smiled when he read it and went smirking to lay it before his chief for his delectation.

Now the chief had been a country editor in his youth and there had been a time when his papers lay dead in strange offices through no fault of his, and he took the letter seriously. He looked up with a frown at his smiling clerk and said:

"Our postmaster seems to be inclined to get too funny, Mr Manners."

"Very uncalled for thing to do, I am sure," said the clerk, taking the cue instantly.

The department wrote a polite inquiry to the postmaster asking for an explanation. This made him slightly uneasy. He explained that it was all a joke. In a few days another letter was forwarded him from the department asking him his reason for returning second class mail matter by express without prepaying the charges on the same. He then sent the editor the amount of the express charges and announced the fact in a letter to headquarters. The department then said that his conduct was so unusual in the service. That perhaps he had better resign. By this time the postmaster was interesting that he had ever had anything to do with the Avalanche and he wrote a rather incoherent letter to the department saying that he had a wife and children dependent upon him and that he had forfeited a good position by taking the postoffice, and that he now was starving to immediate relief. He made application to the editor to be reinstated and begged to have the charges withdrawn.

He went to Greenville and gave elled before the editor. Potts let him squirm for a time and then intimated that he might not prove implacable. The two being men of business soon arranged a compromise by letting the postmaster became poorer and wiser, and the editor wrote to say that finding the loss of the office would be a great blow to a poor man with a large family, and as ample apologies had been tendered him, he hoped the department would overlook the matter, and so the incident was closed.

An Old Poem.

The following lines were written long since by James F. Slaven, late of Missouri. The young lady alluded to so pathetically was Miss Laura Campbell, who died unexpectedly at the age of nineteen more than fifty years since from the effects of exposure to a heavy rain and flood at the close of a September day spent with a select and happy nutting party on the Alleghany ridges west of Meadow Dale, Highland County. She and Mr Slaven were engaged to be married in a few weeks. On the day of her burial,—one of the saddest ever witnessed in that vicinity,—Miss Isabella Campbell, now Mrs Moses Moore, near Frost, a special friend as well as near relative of the lamented deceased, procured a tress of her beautiful hair and gave it to Mr Slaven. This he treasured for years and finally had it used in forming the name LAURA on perforated cardboard and was a book-mark for his Bible. Since his decease this book-mark and these verses were sent to Mrs Moore. To gratify her and the numerous friends of both she they are printed in this issue of The Times.

A LITTLE RAVEN TRESS.

Here is a little raven tress
Of soft, unbraided hair,
The all that's left of loveliness
That once was thought so fair.

And yet, the time has dimmed itssheen
Tho all beside hath fled,
I hold it here a link between
The living and the dead.

Yet from this shining ringlet still
A mournful memory springs
That melts my heart and sends a thrill
Through all its trembling strings.

I think of her, the loved, the wept,
Upon whose forehead fair,
For seventeen years like sunshine slept
This raven curl of hair.

Oh, sunny tress! the joyous brow
Where thou didst lightly wave,
With all thy sister tresses now
Lies cold within the grave.

That cheek is of its bloom bereft,
That eye no more is gay;
Of all her beauties thou art left
A solitary ray.

With sorrow, time has passed away,
Since last we fondly met,
And parted—yet it seems too soon
To let the heart forget;

Too soon to let that lovely face
From my sad thoughts depart,
And to another give the place
She held within my heart.

Her memory still within my mind
Retains its sweetest power;
It is the perfume left behind
To tell us of the flower.

Each blossom that in moments gone
Bound up this precious curl,
Recalls the form, the look, the tone,
Of that enchanting girl.

Her step was like an April rain
O'er beds of violets flung,
Her voice the prelude to a strain
Before the song is sung.

Her life was like a half blown flower,
Closed ere the shades of even;
Her death the dawn, the blushing hour
That opes the gates of Heaven.

A single tress—how slight a thing
To sway such magic art,
And bid such soft remembrance spring
Like blossoms in the heart.

It leads me back to days of old,—
To her I loved so long,
Whose heart in kindness did unfold
Love's truth and hatred wrong.

A lonely, shining tress of hair
To bid such memories rise;
But tears are on its fairies there
I lay them my locks.

The Battle of Magersfontaine.

This picturesque account of the battle comes from the London Daily News' Australian correspondent, who writes as follows:

Our troops extended over many miles of country. Every move had to be made in full view of the enemy upon a level plain where a collie dog could not have moved, unperceived by those foemen hidden so securely behind impregnable ramparts. During the whole of Sunday our gunners played havoc with the enemy, the shooting of the naval brigade being of such a nature that even thus early in the fight the big gun of the blue jackets, with its 42 pound lyddite shell, struck terror into the hearts of the enemy. But the Boers were not idle. Whenever our infantry, in manoeuvring, came within range of their rifles, our ranks began to thin out, and the blood of our gallant fellows, dyed the sunbaked veldt in richest crimson.

During the night that followed, it was considered expedient that the Highland Brigade, about four thousand strong, under Gen. Wauchope, should get close enought to the lines of the foe to make it possible to charge the heights. At midnight the gallant but ill-fated General moved cautiously through the darkness toward the kopje where the Boers were most strongly intrenched. They were led by a guide who was supposed to know every inch of the country, out into the darkness of an African night. The brigade marched in line of quarter column, each man stepping cautiously and slowly, for they knew that any sound meant death. Every order was given in a hoarse passed along the ranks from man to man; nothing was heard as they moved toward the gloomy, steel-fronted heights but the brushing of their feet in the veldt grass and the deep drawn breaths of the marching men.

So, onward, until 3 o'clock on the morning of Monday. Then out of the darkness a rifle rang, sharp and clear, a herald of disaster—a soldier had tripped in the dark over the hidden wires laid down by the enemy. In a second, in the twinkling of an eye, the searchlights of the Boers fell broad and clear as the noonday sun on the ranks of the doomed Highlanders, though it left the enemy concealed in the shadows of the frowning mass of hills behind them. For one brief moment the Scots seemed paralized by the suddenness of their discovery, for they knew that they were huddled together like sheep within fifty yards of the trenches of the foe. Then, clear above the confusion, rolled the voice of the General: "Steady, men, steady!" And, like an echo to the veterans, out came the crash of nearly a thousand rifles not fifty paces from them. The Highlanders reeled before the shock like trees before the tempest. Their best, their bravest, fell in that wild hail of lead. Gen. Wauchope was down, riddled with bullets; yet gasping, dying, bleeding from every vein, the Highland chieftain raised himself on her hands and knees and cheered his men forward. Men and officers fell in heaps together.

The Black Watch charged, and the Gordons and the Seaforths, with a yell that stirred the British camp below, rushed onward to death and disaster. The screamed wires caught them round the legs until they floundered like trapped wolves and all the time the rifles of the foe sang the song of death in their ears. Then they fell back, broken and beaten, leaving nearly thirteen hundred dead and wounded amid the masses of the dead; a ghastly tribute to British gunners. For hours I stood within speaking distance of the great naval gun as it spoke to the enemy, and such a sight as their shooting the world has possibly never witnessed. Not a shell was wasted; and as if on the decks of a pleasure yatch our tars moved through the fight obeying orders with smiling alacrity. Whenever the signal came from the balloon above us that the enemy were moving behind their lines the sailors sent a message from England into their midst, and the cause of the messenger was destruction, and when at 1:30 p. m. Tuesday we drew off to Modder River in compassion we left nearly three thousand dead and wounded of grim old Cronje's men as a token that the iron of England had tasted his health to restored.

Police Intelligence.

On New Year's Day, 1900, at the World Wide street police court John Bull, an elderly gentleman was charged before Mr Hardtruth with traveling as a first-class Power with a third-class ticket. Evidence was given by O. P. Kruger a Dutchman, who, in giving his evidence, remarked that the hate friends, especially pious ones, [illegible] stated that the prisoner Bull has been carrying on the fraud for nearly twenty-five years, and that he had always been reluctant to appear as a witness for the prosecution until he could be absolutely certain of the facts. He had given information to two European inspectors, but they had been loth to take action, and had always been for the fact that the prisoner Bull had recently dropped his third-class season ticket when getting in a first-class carriage the facts as now stated might never have been discovered. Mr Hardtruths convicted the prisoner and thanked Kruger for his kindness in coming forward. Bull was sentenced to a fine of one hundred millions, as he was understood to be rich. The fine was at once paid and Mr Hardtruths handed the money over to the English War Office, which, he informed the court, had recently gone into some greatly needed alterations and repairs.—Westminster Gazette.

Senator Beverage's speech in support of the Administration's Philippine management is pronounced to have been a very brilliant effort, and is complimented by the friends of expansion imperialism." Senator Hoar, however, in his good old fashioned republican way, being most loth to learn new tricks, commented on the speech of his brother Senator in this vein. He said that practically every statement of fact made by Senator Beverage was refuted by official reports above Admiral Philippine officials. And by way of a back action compliment Senator Hoar remarked that the eloquence and beauty of the speech as a whole recalled to his mind the incident of Satan taking Christ to a high mountain and promising him everything in sight if he would only kneel down and worship him. Christ replied, "Get thee behind me, Satan"; and so Mr Hoar hopes and believes the American people will sooner or later say, "Get thee behind me imperialistic tempter!" Mr Hoar had also a great regret on his mind to the effect that Mr Beverage filled his speech so full of "wealth" and "glory" and like things that there was no place in the speech left for such words as "right," "justice," "duty," and "freedom." The eminent Senator from Massachusetts is a Republican and conscientiously opposed to the Administration's imperialistic policy.

There have been poultry books printed costing fifteen dollars and more, but there never has been one at any price with more beautiful colored reproductions of poultry, than those found in the Biggle Poultry Book, an announcement of which appears in another column. The paintings were made direct from best birds of the different breeds, and the coloring and characteristic shape of each breed are perfect. As for the book, there never was a book printed containing more practical, level-headed information. Its chapters include, Eggs for Hatching, Hatching the Eggs, Care of Chicks With Hens and Brooders, The Successful Care of Incubators, The Farmer's Flock, The Village Hennery, chapters on Broods, on Fattening and Marketing, and Diseases and Remedies, with the old and new school methods of treatment. One must write the publishers that "The mothers perfect, and each chapter leading is worth the cost of the book." Twenty thousand copies of this admirable work have been printed. See advertisement of The Biggle Book in this week's issue of The Times. The price is 50 cents, free by mail, address the publishers, Wilmer & Kinnon Co., Philadelphia.

J. Bolingbroke, Spackman, Ark., says: For the past fifteen years I have constant experience and considerable medicines, but Ramon Lyon Pills and Tonic Pellets excel all these or any I could get or name. I have no reputation, and after using one box I was so much in a better condition than all the doctors and medicines I had taken in a year. My friends, that tried the medicine as were cured, and now we are reaping the results of his using it, and we are all in favor of Ramon Lyon Pills and Tonic Pellets. Sold by druggists at 50 cents per box. Manufactured only by the Ramon Medicine Co., Chicago.

POLITICS.

The State Executive Committee of the Democratic party met in Charleston last Thursday and set the date for the holding the State convention and selected the place. The meeting was harmonious and the sentiment of the leaders who attended might be voiced in the following couplet:

While the lamp holds out to burn
The vilest gold-bug may return.

Colonel McGraw, the leader of the party in the State, was present and took an active part in the business before the committee. The State convention is to be held at Parkersburg, Wednesday, June 6. The convention comes earlier this year by about two months than has been the custom, and probably means that the Democrats of this county will have to utilize the April court for holding the convention to select delegates instead of June court as usual. The representation is based on the vote for the head of the ticket in 1896, one delegate for every hundred votes and fraction thereof, giving Pocahontas 10 delegates.

The conventions to nominate delegates to the national convention will be held in each Congressional district May 1. The representation will be the same.

X

The executive committee of the party in Pocahontas county is composed of 14 persons. The present members are:

L. M. McClintic, Chairman; B. F. McElwee, C. A. Lightner, Dr. C. L. Austin, J. C. Price, G. W. Mann, John Waugh, J. C. Loury, John A. Moore, M. F. Herold, Dr. F. T. McClintic, C. E. Beard, G. R. Curry, and Andrew Price, Secretary.

As the occasions of the holding times at which anything like a full representation of the voters of this extensive county can be gathered together at any one place, the chairman has intimated that he will call the committee together at the March county court to afford an opportunity for arranging for a convention to select delegates at the April court. By June court the conventions will have been held.

X

We are authorized to say that Uriah Bird, of this place, will be before the people this year for Sheriff. He is a first class business man and stands high in the estimation of all who know him. One good thing about his candidacy is his expressed intention that in case he is elected he will pay the fees and give a Security Company on his bond. We do not know whether he wants this mentioned at this time, but this feature of the sheriffalty race meets with such universal approval that we take the liberty of letting it be known.

X

Too much can not be said in praise of "buying a bond." Business men will not see a friend fail for want of a bond, but after they lend their names they do not know how the business is being conducted. A security company, on the other hand, personally supervises its bondsmen and sees that the public funds are kept separate and apart from individual accounts and that the settlements are made promptly each year. The security company believes in prevention of failure and in the majority of the cases where sheriffs have gone under they would have been saved if they had had a security company to keep them up to the mark. We hope to see the practice of buying a bond become universal in this county. The first security company's bond ever filed in this county was accepted last October.

X

We hear from several sources that S. B. Moore, one of the leading men of Greer Rock district, will probably be a candidate for Sheriff. There is not a better man in the county for the office. He has recently suffered severe losses, as many of our readers know, and would be universally glad to see him given an opportunity to recoup from the same source. The people of the snake is the cure for its bite."

X

We take pleasure in recommending to the party T. S. McNeel who announces himself for the office of prosecuting attorney in this issue. He is a member of one of our representative families, and if there is any truth in the adage to the effect that "blood is thicker than water," he will not lack for votes when the time comes. He is thoroughly well grounded in the law and perfectly competent for the position.

X

We wish to nail another campaign lie. Joe Buzzard has been accused of stealing a hound pup. The truth of the matter is that another man took the dog and it came to Mr Buzzard's house. He took care of it and delivered it on demand to the owner, J. W. Yeager of this place. Do not allow yourself to be influenced by the canard.

X

S. B. Scott, Jr., is "in our midst" again, and we gather from an interview with him that in all probability his friends will have an opportunity to vote for him for prosecuting attorney.

X

A brief statement of a practical principal derived by an ex-candidate from actual experience is:

"When a man promises to vote for you, take his note for it."

METAPHYSICS.

An item in the Times some weeks since in reference to thirty persons being shot and killed for deer and others wounded during the hunting season, has awakened a train of reflection regarding a singular characteristic of the human mind. Perhaps it would not be out of place to say that this characteristic has been a theme of very earnest controversy among mental experts from time almost immemorial, and lies at the basis of some very dangerous opinions in reference to morals and statesmanship and jurisprudence.

It sees what is looked for and expected. A citizen tells how he was looking for a horse in a mountain pasture and saw what he was certain was his horse and started for him, and when he came within a hundred yards found out that it was a red cow instead of a sorrel horse. Had he left the pasture at the time he thought he saw the horse he would have been willing to qualify he saw the horse with his own eyes and could not be mistaken. The same person tells how he saw an object in the road, near a place notorious for rattlesnakes, and was certain it was a snake and made preparations to kill it when near enough to hit, found out that it was a mere stick.

A party near Edray went turkey hunting. They separated, some to beat the bushes and others to wait developments. One of the party in waiting heard a noise and looking in the direction saw an object that he was certain was a ferocious gobbler and prepared to shoot and snapped repeatedly, but the gun missed fire. Gave the gun a careful examination, and when prepared to make a sure thing of it saw it was a boy's cap he had been snapping at, one of the party sent out to do the beating.

A party from Hill's Creek went to a famous blackberry patch to kill a bear that was known to be about from the sign. They took a position and were in waiting. In a short while a noise was heard in the briers, and from the glimpses obtainable nothing seemed more certain than it was the looked for bear coming right to them. One of the party took aim and was just in the act of pulling the trigger when he saw a man's head reaching up and pulling down a brier to get the berries. It was John B. Kyle, who had been out salting his cattle and had heard there was a party in the patch, one of whom he wanted to see on business.

Many years ago, when Andrew Herold near Frost was a young man he was on the hillside opposite his dwelling when he saw the mice to be a bear slowly climbing the hill. Taking his musket to be in range along keeping the brier between him and the supposed bear, until he was almost ready to pull the trigger he thought he would go nearer and see what a great monster of the kind standing over and coming down to the road. It was an old school master on his usual Saturday jag, and had been playing bear for his own amusement. Now had it been in the day of Winchesters, or other long range guns, Mr Herold would have simply gone to the yard fence and brought down his game without the trouble of trying to get within a hundred yards by creeping two or three hundred yards behind a cross fence.

A citizen of our county, fully up to the average citizenship for mental and acquired endowments, if not a degree higher than the average, went to a home to meet the proprietor on some business requiring immediate attention.

When near the house he heard him apparently in earnest conversation, and believing him to be preoccupied at the time, concluded not to go in the house but call on his return an hour or two later.

Circumstances, however, developed the fact that the proprietor was miles away at the moment in question, and were it not for these circumstances that citizen would have been ready to qualify on a "stack of Bibles" high as the court house that to the best of his knowledge and belief that at such a place and hour he heard that person talking to some one at his own home. That citizen expected at that place and hour to meet the person referred to, and what he expected he all the same as saw; and was just as certain that he was at homeas if he had actually seen and talked with him.

The moral of this is obvious and it goes to explain many things in various aspects in the workings of the human mind, that people usually see what they wish to see, or are expecting to see. Now before they act they ought to take special pains to get at the facts of the case in hand, even if some deer should get away, or some cherished opinions changed or given up.

—W. T. PRICE.

We are ready to do the sackcloth and ashes act that we ever said a harsh word concerning poor old England. We had supposed a county or two in South Africa, and that her back was broad enough to bear all the gibes to which she was subject. In this day of defeat and real misery we extend our sympathy, reminding her that she had better "retire" from South Africa without honor than to sacrifice more good men in her vain attempt to secure this Naboth's vineyard.

Do You Want Consumption?

We are sure you do not. Nobody wants it. But it comes to many thousands every year. It comes to those who have had coughs and colds until the throat is raw, and the lining membranes of the lungs are inflamed. Stop your cough when it first appears, and you remove the great danger of future trouble.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral

stops coughs of all kinds. It does so because it is a soothing and healing remedy of great power. This makes it the greatest preventive in consumption.

At Bull Run

Comrade Chas. Elton, of Mechanicsville, N. Y., was struck by a piece of shell, which later caused severe heart trouble. He says:

"At second Bull Run a piece of shell lodged in my shoulder, and later rheumatism set in, which in turn affected my heart to such extent that several doctors pronounced my case incurable. Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure relieved my pains, shortness of breath and enabled me to work; also to sleep soundly, and prolonged my life."

DEED BOOK STATISTICS.

As an indication of the unusual amount of land which changed hands last year it may be mentioned that the County Clerk filled a 500 page deed-book from March 30th to November 14th, or in 7 months and 15 days. This does not include the trust deeds as they were recorded in another book. The deed book referred to is No. 29. No. 28 lasted 16 months and 22 days.

The county has been formed nearly 78 years and in that time the number of deed books has risen to 30, the one now being filled. Of these No. 24 is used to record the deeds to the town lots in Marlinton and is not quite full.

Deed-book No. 1 was sufficient to record the transfers from Feb. 18, 1822, to April 16, 1832. The first deed recorded was from Thomas Cochran to James Rankin.

X

In the adjoining county of Randolph the numbering of the deed-books has led to some confusion. The founders of that county showed their simplicity or their mistrust in the stability of the world by left ring their deed-books A, B, C, etc. The end of the alphabet was reached long ago, and clerk had to resort to numbers.

PEOPLE vs SCOTT.

The case of John T. McGraw and 49 members of the West Virginia Legislature, remonstrants against N. B. Scott, was argued before the committee of the United States Senate last Saturday.

The Democratic side of the case was presented by Messrs John H. Holt, Frank L. Welles, and Henry M. Russell.

Ex-Senator Faulkner occupied the anomalous position of a West Virginia Democrat fighting for a Republican against every Democratic member of the legislature which had twice heaped honors on his unworthy head. His argument was mainly that what the legislature of West Virginia had done was a sealed book not to be opened by the United States Senate. To argue that whatever is, is right is to argue that whatever has been was right.

His argument was weak but still he spoke as one not without hope that he would prevail.

A Sight of Terror

"Awful anguish was felt for the widow of the brave General Burnham of Mobile, Ala., when the doctors said she would die from pneumonia before telegram could reach Mrs. S. H. Lincoln who attended her to at fearful night, but she begged for Dr King's New Discovery, which had wrought them cures in her life, and saved her of coldness then. All night taking the drops at night. Found was entirely freed from it. This marvelous medicine is guaranteed to cure all Throat, Chest and Lung Disease. Only 50c and $1.

ANNOUNCEMENT.

To the Voters of Pocahontas County:

I hereby announce myself a candidate for the office of Prosecuting Attorney of Pocahontas County for the ensuing term, subject to the action of the Democratic Primary.

Thanking my many friends for their hearty support in the last primary, I promise that if elected I will discharge the duties of the office without fear or favor, with all the ability I possess, and with the dignity the office demands.

Respectfully,
W. A. BRATTON.

I hereby announce myself a candidate for the office of Prosecuting Attorney for Pocahontas County, subject to the action of the Democratic party. Very respectfully,
T. S. MCNEEL.

The address of E. L. Dunn, Supervisor of the Census for this Congressional district, is Alderson W. Va.

L st—A fire insurance rate Book between Mill Point and Marlinton. The finder will please return to T. S. McNeel, Marlinton, W. Va.

The central telephone office is now located over the Pocahontas Bank. The town will be rewired in a few weeks, placing each phone on a separate wire.

Mrs F. M. Darbin, who is well and pleasantly remembered by many of the Marlinton residents, died at Grafton Friday morning, January 19th.

Superintendent James W. Warwick informs us that, owing to the illness of his wife, he will be compelled to abandon the further visitation of the schools of our county for this year.

The Bank of Marlinton has purchased the lot adjoining its present banking house for $550. The two lots will form the site for its new brick banking house which it will erect this year.

Marlinton will have a brass band *at an early date. There is an abun*dance of good material here. The young ladies will give a benefit to raise funds. A number of men have subscribed liberally besides.

Justice Bird turned over to the county clerk $51, the amount of the fines which he has collected during the past year. If we had had the town incorporated this sum could have been expended on the streets.

A report has been circulated that Douglas McNeil of Swago was exposed to smallpox while on his recent trip to Washington. Upon inquiry we find that he was with a man who was taking the measles, at Millboro, which gave rise to the report.

Owing to the unsettled status of the court house matter, Judge Holt thought it best not to hold court on January 21st and adjourned until everything be arranged so as to know whether Beverly or Elkins is the proper legal place for holding court.

In printing the list of directors of the Bank of Marlinton last week the name of W. W. Beard was inadvertently omitted. The board is as follows: M. J. McNeel, J. C. Gay, W. W. Beard, Dr C. L. Anstin, Dr J. W. Price, Isaac McNeel, S. H. Clark, Henry Barlow, J. C. Price, Dr J. P. Moorman, M. L. Beard, and B. F. McElwee.

A deed has been admitted to record conveying the hotel near the bridge from C. R. Darbin to H. A. Yeager. This property consists of a large frame house and an acre of ground. The prospect of early railroad development in 1892 was the cause of the erection of the building. It was the subject matter of a long chancery suit which finally confirmed the title in Mr Darbin, who purchased it at public auction from a trustee. The consideration mentioned in the deed is $3500.

Stand Death Of

E. S. Monday, a lawyer of Hensette, Tex., once footed a grave digger. He writes: "My brother was very low with malarial fever and jaundice. I persuaded him to try Electric Bitters, and he was much better and continued them for one month, when he was entirely cured. I am sure Electric Bitters saved his life. This remedy expels malaria, kills disease germs and purifies the blood; aids digestion, regulates the liver and bowels, cures constipation and dyspepsia. It cures diseases of female complaints to which they are subject. Only 50c at Dietz & Schultz Brothers' drug store. Sold also by W. J. Reese, 8 25 Fisher & Hedrick, Cass; Arbogast & Bro., Durbin; Yeager & Hull, Frank; Taylor & Boyles, Parkersburg, W. Va.

The Union Extension.

The contract for the second section of the railroad between Elkins and Durbin has been let to Rogers, Coleman & Rogers, of Louisville, Ky. There are two bridges on the 30th foot and the other 100 feet.

The grade should be ready for track now on the building of the Elkins-Durbin Railway, for only a couple of miles remain to be graded and most of it is operated from Durbin southward.

From the Lumber Camps of Williams River.

William Gray is logging the Gauley River. He is putting in the tree timber on the disputed tract of land between the Gauley Company and the Pratt heirs, the former buying the timber. He has in about five million feet.

Isenhart is logging the Little Fork. The Middle Fork Driving Company is logging the Middle Fork. W. McClintic general superintendent. He has about forty men, and has cut about seven million feet. Sliding has been fine for a week or so. The company has about four million slid in and three to slide. They slide day and night in good sliding weather.

Some of the boys have gone home to take the measles. Our favorite teamster O. W. Kellison is one.

A Mr Philips was badly but not seriously hurt at P. Henry's camp. Dr McNeel was in to see him and says he will be out in a few days. The Doctor is not afraid to tackle the road. He is a great favorite with the men.

W. McClintic is off to Camden on business.

Pat Kearney of Pennsylvania is doing the scaling for the Company.

LOGG LIZZIE.

Fish Hatchery.

A bill has been introduced in the Senate by Senator Elkins appropriating $25.000 for establish*ing a fish hatchery at some point* yet to be determined in West Virginia. Its passage is regarded as certain.

If Pocahontas County does not secure this institution it will be one more case of the miscarriage of governmental affairs which are deplorably frequent.

Within a radius of fifty miles the Potomac, the James, Greenbrier, Tygarts Valley, Cheat, Gauley, Elk, Williams, Cranberry and Cherry Rivers head.

The list is so long we may have omitted a few important watercourses. These are the streams to be stocked and nowhere can they be so conveniently reached.

Within a mile of the Greenbrier Railway, on Swago Creek, a spring issues from a cave in sufficient volume to turn a mill. This stream, which is cold, clear and pure, has never been known to freeze. It would make an ideal place for a fish hatchery.

*If the commission will only com*pare the facilities Pocahontas county offers with that of other fields we will have no fears of the result.

Robert Ward Price.

Died at Edray, W. Va., Monday afternoon, January 29, 1900, Robert Ward, second son of Dr J. W. and Mrs Lura Price, aged three *years and twelve days. His ail*ment was pneumonia complicated with meningitis, and his sufferings for three or four weeks were heartrending.

Ward was a lovely and interesting child and had greatly endeared himself to his parents and grandparents, so no words can fitly express their sorrow over his suffering and decease. May they con*sider this sad bereavement as a* Bible worthy manifested resignation when a loved child suffered and died.

"While the child was yet alive I fasted and wept; for I said, Who can tell whether God will be gracious to me that the child may live. But now he is dead wherefore should I fast? Can I bring him back again? I shall go to him but he shall not return to me."

Alas how changed that lovely flower
Which bloomed and cheered my heart.
Fair, fleeting comfort of an hour,
How soon we're called to part.
How high beyond the bounds of time
When what we now deplore
Shall rise in full, immortal prime,
And bloom to fade no more.

Vida Helen Moore.

Died, near Sunset on Knapp's Creek, January 14, 1900, 8.20 p. m. Vida Helen, only daughter of Mr and Mrs B. N. Moore, aged 1 month and 10 days. While delicate and fragile in body, Helen was precocious mentally and had greatly endeared herself to her parents by many winning ways.

The bereaved with special thanks to be tendered friends and neighbors for sympathetic, helpful services during the sickness and the absence of their loved child.

That once loved form, now cold and dead,
Each earthly thought smothers;
We weep, our mortal members shed,
And mingle all our tears.

From agonies of fierce and lingering pains
She hastened away to be born,
And with you bright angelic throng
she lives to die no more.

FROST.

The past week has been very nice but our roads have no bottom.

Abraham Sharp, who has been sick for the past few days, is better.

Wm. Bussard moved his engine to Armenius Bussard's.

S. P. Sheets has been here two weeks helping Clark Gum in the shop.

Anyone wishing to trade for a good riding or driving mare will do will do well to call on Professor Lantz.

Sherman Curry is getting along well with his wound. His two little children are down with the measles.

Mrs Hannah has been at the bedside of her sick sister at Edray for the past week. We are glad to hear that she is recovering.

Prof. Joseph Lantz was in our place this week. He is teaching a very interesting school four miles below here.

Luther Shrader, of Davis, is on a visit to his son John F. Shrader. He is looking fine and from all appearances doing likewise.

Some horse traders passed thro' our place trying to "swop" with our honest farmers. They have had their eye teeth cut before.

We have some men here who are taking five grain capsules of sand after each meal, which will give them plenty of grit and put sand in their craws.

Clark Gum, our blacksmith, is turning out some red wagons. He is a good smith, a good neighbor and a firstclass man in the neighborhood.

Marvin Gum and family, who have been in Highland County, where they went to see Mr Gum's mother who was dangerously ill, have returned. He reports her some better.

Old Logie, a twenty-four year old colt, belonging to Aaron Rider, has been on the lift for several days. He should have a gallon of good meal three times a day with a little good hay mixed in.

Frank Patterson, constable, was here for a few days looking after some busines. Mr Patterson is spoken of very highly for Deputy Sheriff. He deserves the office and is a first class man for the place as he is honest and upright in all his dealings. Let us hear from others on this subject.

You know, Mr Editor, that "self praise is half scandal," and has ru*ined many a good person. Never* yet has this old saying been disputed, but many brag and boast; never once thinking of their own faults, believing that they never had any. Oh, Mr Editor, sanctification has never struck this place.

We notice in your last week's paper that Mr John A. Moore's name was mentioned for our next Sheriff. John is a man well spoken of throughout the county, and one that can be relied on and would make us an all-round Sheriff. This is an important office and as business becomes larger it takes more *the character of trust. It is a bus*iness in which hundreds of people are deeply interested, and it is their desire to have this important office filled with an honest, upright man. So give us Johnny Moore as we are confident the responsibility that will be placed upon him will be carried out to the very letter.

GYP.

EDRAY.

Harlow Waugh is collecting for Dr Cunningham.

Miss Rish Smith came home on January 20.

Beverly Waugh is slowly recovering from the injury he received from a fall recently.

Newton Duffield got badly hurt early in the month by his wagon running over him. He will be well soon in all appearances.

S. B. Moore, one of our enterprising merchants, has been im*proving his store house recently.*

The measles are spreading among the people in this vicinity but the measle scare is spreading much faster.

There is much sickness through this section, though we hope that *the people generally are not seri*ously ill. Dr Price is kept so closely at home looking home folk that he cannot give much attention to the outside sick.

Geo. F. Moore, who perhaps takes as much or more interest in public matters generally as any one man in this section, put up a phone for the railroad engineers at C. P. Dorr's house at Clover Lick.

Rev Atkinson received a picture of the members of the Virginia Conference, M. E. Church, last Saturday. It is printed on a card board 16x20 inches, and sells for $2c.

GREEN BANK.

If Mr Sheets is not eligible for Sheriff let us have him for deputy.

E. N. Moore and Deputy Sheets were in town last Thursday on business.

We favor the suggestion made by the Huntersville correspondent in regard to the new jail in office.

The thermometer fell Thursday night but did not freak. It went to zero. Cold and stormy and snowing soon.

Hon J. W. Warwick, superintendent of schools, was in town last Friday visiting schools. He received a message that his wife was very ill and he left at once.

E. N. Moore, of Dunmore, would make a good Sheriff, and why not bring him out? He is a man all over and any thing entrusted to him will be safe.

G. R. Curry, of Academy, was in town Monday. TIMOTHY.

IF YOU ARE TIRED OF SAVING MONEY

We thank our many customers for their patronage the past year, and we are glad to say that we made a success of selling for cash. We are going to have a large ear building, increase our stock and double our trade. Everybody claims to sell cheap, but we convince them by demonstration. In Values that count and save you money the Values like ours that bring to our store those who know what they want and where to get it. Others have our low prices but would not wish to give credit. Unless you can appreciate bargains our prices must commend your attention. Our cash gets more bargains and better bargains than credit gets in a year. We buy for cash, and can be no misunderstanding when prices are quoted in plain and white.

John T. McGraw, The Greenbrier River Lumber Company, a corporation duly created and existing under the laws of the State of West Virginia, having its principal place of business in the City of Rochester, county of Monroe, State of New York, and the New York Security and Trust Company, a corporation existing under the laws of the State of New York and located in the City of New York, Trustee, Defendants

The object of this suit is to enforce the collection of a vendor's lien of $3000.00 with interest thereon from August 3d, 1897, subject to a credit of $750.00 paid August 26th, 1898, and the costs of this suit, which lien is reserved in a deed executed by the plaintiff to the Defendant McGraw, on the 3d day of August, 1891, on 2788 acres of land thereby conveyed, which land lies on the waters of Knapp's Creek in Pocahontas county, W. Va., and of Little Back Creek in the county of Bath, Virginia, and which has been conveyed by the said McGraw to the Greenbrier River Lumber Co. and by it to the New York Security and Trust Company;

This day came the plaintiff by his attorney and on his motion, and it appearing by affidavit filed that the defendant The New York Security and Trust Company, is a corporation, and that its process can be served in said county upon whom process can be legally served, it is ordered that said New York Security and Trust Company do appear here within one month after the date of the first publication hereof, and do what is necessary to protect its interest in this suit.

established two years ago. It has a faculty of seven instructors, trained under the best teachers in this country and Europe. It occupies a separate building fitted up especially for its needs. Instruction in all stringed instruments, including violin, viola, mandolin, guitar, etc., is free. For voice and piano the fees are very low. A magnificent pipe organ for Commencement Hall is being constructed and it will be for the use of students of the School of Music. If you are interested in the study of music, write for full information.

Other departments of the University are developing with equal rapidity. The Preparatory Department, with its four new instructors, deserves special mention. Write for a special pamphlet about it.

THE DRUGE.

What is the existence of man's life,
But open war, or slumbered strife?
Where sickness to his sense presents
The combat of the elements;
And never feels a perfect peace,
Till Death's cold hand signs his release.

It is a storm—where the hot blood
Carries in rage the boiling flood;
And each loose passion of the mind
Is like a furious gust of wind,
Which beats his barks with many a wave
Till he casts anchor in the grave.

It is a flower—a rose—whose gayest
Is scarce disclosed but 'tis opprest
With some approaching fate—faint season's Work.
Like fits of waking before sleep;
Then sinks into that fatal mould
Where first its being was enrolled.

It is a dream—whose seeming truth
Is moralised in age and youth;
Where all the comforts he can share,
As wandering as his fancies are;
Till in a mist of dark decay,
The dreamer vanish quite away.

It is a dial—which points out
The sunset, as it moves about;
And shadows out in lines of night
The subtle stages of Time's flight;
Till all ossecuring earth hath laid
His body in perpetual shade.

It is a weary interlude—
Which doth short joys, long woes, include;
The world the stage, the prologue tears,
The acts vain hopes and varied fears:
The scene shuts up with loss of breath
And leaves no epilogue but death.

—Dr Henry King.

Odds and Ends.

RELIGION AND POLITICS.

Our esteemed Huntersville correspondent's words upon bringing professing Christians out for county offices has set people to thinking, which is all he could ask even if a greater part of them consider his views rather uncharitable.

Among other things it brings up the question whether there are not some following "in His steps" outside of the church organizations, who may some day belong to the church. The poet said that the name of the one that loved his fellow men was written first on the lists of those who were to enter into light, and this receives Biblical support in the words: "Faith, hope and charity, but the greatest of these is charity." We take that a generous minded man, law abiding, clean, and who provides for his family is not so far from the light that a man who looks back from the pale of the church can say, "We are holier than thou." It widens the breach and makes it harder for that man to join the church where he rightfully belongs.

And when the church attempts to say that none shall work nor prosper nor rule over the people except he who belongs to it, love declines and hate increases in the world. The most un-Christ-like governments we have ever had were those in which the dominant church was the government. In modern times Christ rules the world because his people preach the doctrine of love, and not of coercion nor fear. All modern governments formulate their laws by the Bible, and the world is undoubtedly growing better.

ELAINE FOR THE CAPITAL.

The Charleston Gazette says that the town of Elkins is to try for the capital of West Virginia as soon as the many railroads are completed, which will make it one of the railroad centers of the State. The two roads now under contract, giving the town a connection with the Greenbrier Railway, and with Clarksburg, will make it accessible from every part of the state. However the difficulty it is experiencing in borrowing the money with which to build the road will be an apology to the readers that will come in trying to get the capital from the mountain part of the State. If General Elkins has any such designs for his town there will be an opposition city from the Republicans who are threatening Charleston to stop his wagon.

A LA MODE.

The Webster Echo complains of some fashion performance going on in Webster. We are glad to hear of the same in Webster, for it's like it is the same in last wolf. For years this wolf has ravaged the sheep raisers in that section of country on Elk River where Randolph, Pocahontas, and Webster join, and it is estimated that it has killed several thousand dollars worth of sheep. For ten years it has been pursued by dogs and men without success. On January 1, 1900, the chase was begun and continued until January 4th, when he was killed by Stophor Hamrick.

He is said to designate that one quality hunter is a namesake of the late Captain Stopher of this county, who had many friends in Webster.

There were 15 men and 40 hounds in the chase. The wolf started on Elk River near Peter Hamrick's home. Men were put on the various stands and the first day he was shot at 7 times, the day's work leaving him on Point Mountain.

January 2 the wolf crossed the mountain and was followed nearly to the headwaters of the Back Fork of Elk. January 3 the quarry started back and as he passed near Peter Hamrick's six shots were fired without effect, tho the wolf nearly ran over some of the men.

January 4 he retraced his steps and went nearly to Pickens. During the night he killed a sheep for L. M. Hull. January 5 he went towards Hacker Valley, but was turned back by a party of hunters. January 6 and 7 he was hunted over Point Mountain and around the headwaters of Back Fork. January 8 he was surrounded by men and dogs but broke through the lines. A second time he was surrounded and all the dogs were loosed. As he was passing out of the circle Stopher Hamrick shot and killed him.

CONFERRING TITLES.

The Attorney General of this State has always been brevetted General by his friends as soon as he qualified. This is the way that General C. C. Watts and General Edgar P. Rucker and others receive their titles, and whether they care for this distinguished title or not it sticks to them.

A few years since the writer was in Judge Jackson's court in Charleston, or the United States Court for the District of West Virginia. The court's jurisdiction extended from the determining the rights of property for vast sums of money to the trying a ragged negro for selling a pint of whiskey on pay day. The darkies would be brought in by the deputy marshall and when they would address the court they would get excited and call the Judge "captain," "colonel," or "boss." When he was the recipient of a military title the Judge would thunder, (that is the only way to describe the Judge's voice), "Stop, do n't call me 'captain'," and turning to the bar would add: "I did n't ever belong to the militia."

JUDGE OKEY JOHNSON'S VOICE.

Speaking of stentorian voices, Judge Johnson, the Dean of the University Law School, has a remarkable one. Even in pressing a case to the Supreme Court, where the custom is to be clear and concise rather than impassioned and oratorical, the Judge has been heard for several minutes in Charleston. He has been on the Supreme Bench in this State and he is supposed to know how to address the court. When he was last there Charleston for Morgantown, at a banquet in his honor one other dinner speaker described how sorry they were to lose him, but the next one to rise by acclamation was Judge Johnson, and he could still be heard a distance of three

A PERSONAL SIN.

One of the heroes of the Democratic party in Kansas says we have no Customs. In 1896 when he was nominated by McKinley with a lot of other prominent men for appointment to some foreign mission he was so sorry he could not go to Europe that he went to Kansas and voted for Bryan.

RELIGION AND POLITICS.

Mr Editor—Your article last week from "Voter" of Huntersville brings forcibly to mind that biennial cry for a Christian Government, and that twin abomination the perennial prayer of christians to God to make this a christian nation, and the periodical agitation of the subject of incorporating into the Constitution of the United States some recognition of Christianity.

"I would reaffirm the Declaration of Independence, and go to the people on that issue. On such a platform the campaign of 1900 would resemble the campaign of 1800 in its issues, its temper and its results. Who can doubt that Jefferson's immortal work would obtain in 1900 an endorsement as emphatic and as salutary as its author received in 1800?"

The Century Question in Denmark.

Danish diplomacy has never been famous. It used to be said that it "clattered with wooden clogs," which is only another way of saying that the Danes are honest, simple minded folk, not up in lying or subterfuge to the standard of European statecraft. But the little State ought to have a large mark for its performance in the century discussion. It has straddled the fence very neatly.

Called upon to decide the views of the Church upon the ending of the century, the Minister of Education issued an edict in which, after alluding to the "especially festive" fashion in which the question has been debated, he decides that "though the department must hold that New Year's, 1900, does not begin the new century, in view especially of the known fact that both in church and civil affairs 1801 officially began the old, yet one can understand the solemn feelings of many persons upon entering the year which in any event is the boundary line between the two centuries." Hence the clergy of the land were permitted, if they saw fit, to choose for New Year's day any text they wished to preach from in preference to the one set down for that day in the prayer-book. Likewise they might, if they so desired, have the church bells rung from midnight to a quarter past twelve.

The ordinary Danish fashion of saluting the New Year is to smash on one's door all the cracked pots and jars that have been saved up for the purpose during the year. A Danish citizen's popularity in his town may be fairly measured on New Year's morning by the size of the pile of potsherd at his door. The racket made in this process of "breaking in" the year is prodigious. With electric bells and the church bells ringing from midnight to a quarter past twelve.

With electric bells and the church bells joining in, they must have had a regular Fourth of July over there this "solemn year."—New York Sun.

A rival to Klondike is now in much evidence, owing to information given by Consul Smith, of Victoria, B. C. It is Cape Nome, Alaska, found to be rich in gold, the sands along the coast being exceedingly productive. Five thousand gold seekers are in the district already and sixty-five thousand more are trying to arrange for transportation to the Cape during the coming spring. The distance to Cape Nome is 2,500 miles and all the way by water, hence so much more accessible than Klondike and other points in the interior. The Nome digging cannot be monopolized by grabbers, monopolies and syndicates and hence they say the poor man's diggings. The gold is obtained between tides and gold digging is as free as fishing.

Roberts, the Utah member, was refused his seat in Congress, but being pure enough to enter those hallowed walls. If he had been a rake, a drunkard, a gambler, he would have had a chance. But having followed a custom of the ancients which was prevalent in Utah, he is cast out by an overwhelming vote. He had the law on his side, but it availed him not.

It looks as if the Maryland Legislature is to have an exhibition much enjoyed in Kentucky for years and years to prevent the representation of the contested seats. The Republicans will be allowed to take their seats and vote. The Democrats will be allowed to take their seats and vote. Then the Republicans will be allowed to take the seats of the Democrats and vote. Then the Democrats will be allowed to take the seats of the Republicans and vote. And so on, ad infinitum, during the sitting of the Legislature. It will be the same as in Kentucky.

Mofanction and Calvin and Knox and Zwingli marshalled the forces of reason and thundered at the gates of the spiritual kingdom.

Men said that the Roman Church was Great Babylon and proclaimed its fall. But what did all the modern churches known as Protestant? They do sooner had the power than they such and all forgot the lessons of Rome and Jerusalem; and had any one of them the power it would repeat in America under the influences of those former times, uniting once more Church and State, rendering unto Cæsar the things that are God's.

If any doubt this, look at the government of the protestant churches, with their complicated imitations of worldly government; many of them having their spiritual princes, and where they have not these they supply their places by assembly and association to lord it over God's heritage.

No, sir, Christians have nothing to do with the kingdoms of this world; and of for Christians seeking the offices and honors of worldly governments, the very ambition and self-seeking which such quest implies make the pilgrim, bound for the heavenly kingdom, the last man to think or to be thought of for such a place.

No, sir, such places are not for those who follow "in His steps." Neither will this nor any other gentile nation ever be a Christian nation. The iron will not mix with the clay. All the Christian has to do with these things is to condemn the evil and praise the good.

Who is there with ordinary powers of observation—can not see that we are even now in a state of social and political disruption, WEAK AND with no apparent Forces, but the approaching storm of anarchistic socialism is even now ready to drop its deluge of fire upon our devoted heads.

Instead of trying to mix the iron with an imitation stone of clay, let us pray that the stone cut out without hand may soon break in pieces the clay, the iron, the silver, and the gold. Let us preach Christ and salvation, instead of politics and damnation. Let us practice the Golden Rule instead of turning the Church of Christ into a cheap free masonry, whose chief tenet shall be, you help my selfish interests and I will help yours.

A CHEMICAL EXPERIMENT.—Gentlemen, I will now illustrate to you the combustibility of chemical compounds. This experiment, you perhaps know, is delightfully dangerous; it has undoubtedly caused more deaths in various schools and colleges than any other experiment known to science. Only yesterday three laboratories were totally wrecked and five hundred and fifty seven students were instantly killed during the performance of this experiment. When exposed to view gentlemen, it explodes with terrific violence. A night jar will set it off, therefore no one is allowed to sneeze or breathe while the substance is in the room. Those men under the chairs may save themselves some inconvenience by climbing up to the gallery. That pale individual who is pushing vigorously against the door might better save his strength for future emergencies. The door gentlemen, is already locked and barred. Do n't be alarmed at that distant rumbling, my assistants are only bringing the compound up the stairs and the bomb-proof cases are heavy. Before the experiment begins I feel obliged to inform that lucky person in the farthest corner that he had better get up from his knees and open his eyes as he may get a first view of the heaven he is professing to now readily. I will instruct before the thousand and call for the Cambridge five minute again while my assistant performs the experiment.—Harvard Lampoon.

OUR CANDIDATES.

E. E. Moore, who comes out for Sheriff this week, is a wealthy farmer of the Green Bank district who has often been spoken of in regard to to different county offices but who heretofore has never been induced to stand for any of them. He is all that a man should be who seeks an office of trust.

Urish Bird, of Marlinton, who offers for the Sheriffalty, is well known throughout the county. He has served two terms as Superintendent of free schools, and has for the past term held the justice's place at the county seat. There is no question as to his fitness for the place.

L. M. McClintic, for the Legislature, is a native of Pocahontas County, and learned the advantage of a thorough college training. He is a forcible sort of man and would make Pocahontas an exceptionally good representative. It has been about twenty years since Pocahontas was represented in the law making body by a lawyer. The last lawyer to go to the Legislature from this county was Hon. Geo. H. McNutt, who was speaker of the house.

Pocahontas people have not the fault to find with Joe Bonnard and his private life and official career, and that is the way he wears his whiskers. They like the primitive way in which he has conversed the people in the last four years, seeing every taxpayer personally, and they are going to elect him unanimously. But those whiskers are thrown away here. In the Transvaal they would be a great electioneering scheme, but we do not appreciate hirsuteness. The odds offered in betting circles will not be taken are "ten dollars to one and that Joe Bonnard will be our next sheriff."

S. B. Small, Jr., announces his candidacy for the office of Prosecuting Attorney. He has made his way at the bar in this county and is an active aspirant for the office.

The Virginia legislature is busy between adopted resolutions of sympathy for Governor Goebel, and impassioned heaps of invectives to Goebel and to the powerful municipality of the high office to which he was elected by the Kentucky people.

KENTUCKY'S DISGRACE.

The effect of the assassination of William Goebel, lawfully Governor of Kentucky, had the effect of righting him in the minds of the people. Before he was shot he was regarded as a politician, wary, shrewd, and not over scrupulous, seeking to overcome Taylor's apparent majority.

When he was shot by an assassin lurking in the same house with Taylor, people remembered at once that Goebel was pursuing strictly legal means to become Governor asserting such rights as could not be denied him. Over 400,000 votes were cast in the late election. On the face of the returns Taylor received 48 per cent and Goebel 47.47 per cent. Nine candidates out of ten would have contested an election where such a small plurality was shown.

The people of Kentucky remembered when Goebel was shot that he was a man who had risen from the ranks by fighting wealthy railroad companies which sought to rule the State. They remembered that here was a man who when he was no longer poor and obscure fought for and upheld the class from which he sprang.

His enemies can not point to one illegal act in his contest. Taylor, on the other hand has much to clear himself of.

He allowed a thousand or so of his partisans to come from his strongholds. The result was that no sooner had they reached town than they patronized the saloons so freely that they had to be sent home. He then barred the way into the executive mansion, where the Frankfort police were seeking the murderer of Goebel. He then proclaimed the legislature adjourned. This may not have been unlawful. It was simply beyond his power. He then ordered the legislature to convene at London, a stronghold of his partisans. He took possession with an armed force of the State House and prevented the legislature meeting. This may be treason. He has disobeyed an injunction of the courts and arrested the officer who served notice on him. On the whole he might be called the "man who dared."

If Kentucky can not take her politics a little more calmly it will settle with petitioners from Indiana and ask that the state of Kentucky be shelved and Wisconsin substituted. Tennessee, Illinois, Indiana and Ohio take their equal parts of the territory and people the people with no true hand.

Meeting of Executive Committee.

The Executive Committee of the Democratic party of Pocahontas County is called to meet at the office of the chairman on Tuesday, March 6th, 1900, at 1 o'clock p. m. to arrange for the holding of a Primary Election for the nomination of county officers, and to call a convention of proper members for the selection of delegates to the State Congressional and Senatorial Conventions, and to the convention to select delegates to the National Convention, and to transact such other business as may come before it.

PUBLISHERS' NOTES.

The Pocahontas Times begins the year 1900 with the names of more than 1000 subscribers on its books. We have secured the 100 new subscribers we aimed to get by last New Years, and 193 persons so far have taken advantage of our great offer in combination with the Farm Journal. We won 300 new subscribers during 1899 and will get them if we can. We therefore continue our arrangement with the Farm Journal, both papers for $1.00.

We especially urge old subscribers to pay up arrearages, (added at $1.00 per year, no interest charged), and one year ahead, and get the Farm Journal five years, thus sharing in the benefit, and everybody pleased.

We are having sample copies of the Farm Journal sent you, which will reach you in a week or so, and will let it speak for itself. All who do not get it already will get a sample copy, free. Look out for it. Show it to your neighbor who does not take the Times, and tell him of the combination offer: this paper and Farm Journal, several years—$1.00!

Henry Watterson asserts the many a man has been hanged upon less evidence than that which connects Governor Taylor with the assassination of William Goebel.

THE VANISHED RACE

A BUILDING THAT HOUSED 6,000 CLIFF DWELLERS.

A Ruined Aboriginal City on a Cliff a Thousand Feet High—Skulls of People That Had Double Teeth All Around—Some Remarkable Relics.

Laden with relics of the vanished race of the Cliff Dwellers, the Rev. Dr. Georges E. Cole has returned from a journey in the ruined cities of Southeastern Colorado and New Mexico. Valuable results were secured by excavations in an ancient communal dwelling, as yet unnamed, which stands on the cliffs of the Santa Fe River, fourteen miles from Espanola, N. M. This is the largest pueblo yet discovered in the United States, and Dr. Cole was practically the first to visit it with scientific objects in view. He found stone implements and pottery of extreme rarity, and the bones of a race all of whose teeth were molars of grinders. Among the bones excavated from a burial mound on the mesa were a woman's femurs measuring nineteen inches, a length which indicates that this aboriginal stateless must have been at least seven and a half feet tall.

The cliff on which the unexplored ruins stand is 1,000 feet above the surrounding country. On one side of the isolated rocky mass is the valley of the Santa Fe River, on the other that of the Santa Clara. Up to 600 feet is a shelf which furnished a nesting place for the Cliff Dwellers of nobody knows how many centuries ago. In the soft pumice stone they burrowed dens for their families. Eventually the original shelters in the cliffs grew to be a great warren. Room after room was flown out until the rows were four or five deep. Under the shelter of the overhanging cliff, walls were built, extending the rows of rooms. The Cliff Dwellers were sheltered from rain or storm and their homes were inaccessible for their enemies.

Not satisfied with their rock caverns, the Cliff Dwellers climbed onward, and on the mesa, 400 feet above the shelf on which the caves opened, built a communal dwelling.

This mesa is about three-quarters of a mile wide and a mile and a half long, witnessing all about and the best of opportunities for defense. On its edge was reared a watch tower of granite, whose height Dr. Cole believes to have been not less than sixty feet. The blocks were painfully carried up the 1,000-foot cliff, for the nearest granite deposits are at a considerable distance. For greater security a wall was built across the middle of the mesa.

On this rock platform, 1,400 feet up in the air, there stand to-day the ruins of two communal dwellings, one evidently much older than the other. The older dwelling is as yet untouched, and what little exploration of the more modern one Dr. Cole had time for amounts to a mere scratch on the surface.

There were not less than sixteen hundred rooms in the larger building in its prime, says Dr. Cole, and probably two thousand. The building measured 240x300 feet. It was of blocks of stone measuring six by six by fifteen inches, quarried from the cliffs below, and carried up by the workmen. The rooms were roofed with timber, and the walls were carried higher. In the centre was a great court, a common kitchen for all, from which radiated immense numbers of rooms. The building spread with the growth of the community, and it was three stories high and the rooms stretched away twelve deep from the original court. Of these there were here and there. Dr. Cole estimates that the population averaged about three to a room, which would make between 4,200 and 6,000 people dwelling in the immense pueblo, besides those who lived in the cliff caves.

The ruins at the sides of the communal dwelling averaged about fourteen feet in size. On the upper stories they were mostly smaller, some being only seven or fourteen, others seventy-one. Some rooms were found as large as fourteen by twenty feet.

With the trophies of his summer's explorations spread out about him, Dr. Cole has turned his parlor into an anthropological museum. One table is covered with water jugs and incense pipes, the sofa hidden under stone axes, mortars, pestles, and specimens of pottery. Another table is dotted with a row of grinning skulls and huge crossbones, beneath it comfortably reposes all the rest of the skeleton. Here the toe bones to the shoulder blades, waiting to be wired together, and thrown along with arms and arrows, baskets, jugs of twisted twigs, and water-tight by pitch, modern Indian pottery, photographs by the score, and a mump of perished skull. The skulls are a particularly valued possession.

"Look at those teeth," said Dr. Cole, under a flaming jaw of the ghastliness. "She has no incisors, no cutting teeth in front, as have all the others of which I have any knowledge. She has grinders all around, and they have the other skulls. That shows they were grain-eaters rather than meat-eaters. The forehead is high and the shape of the skull shows intelligence, but notice how curiously they are bulged at the back.—Los Angeles Times.

A Discovery Story.

A pet tortoise, owned by a lady in North London, was recently lost by the housedog, to the owner's grief, but was the minimal reptile put out of sorrow. A friend, a medical student, determined to recover the animal, and, filling with a mixture of soda, so he placed the thing in a box along with a dose of chloroform. The next morning it was found that the soda, which had apparently escaped on the box with the force of liquid dripping to form, had taken away the tortoise's shell.

The Golden Store.

The attachment case of J. B. McNeel vs Uncle Tom Thompson was heard by Justice Bird last week Monday. McNeel for plaintiff and McClintic and McNeel for defendant, resulting in the plaintiff paying the cost and the defendant the debt.

Last Friday seemed to be such a cold day that the perverted proceedings thought it best, at the risk of a cold snap, to leave his winter coat at home. Of course the weather is showing that it is best to avoid such, and we no longer smoke and it is waiting for spring.

For several years a wild hog has infested a swamp near the mouth of Tuckahoe River, eastern Maryland, and was very destructive to the depredations he made among hogs and stolen gardens. A few days since he was chased to his death and was found with shoes affixed to his feet. He weighed about 400 lbs. His weight was never handled properly and the hams outside the age was in the long.

Frank McCreery's little daughter Mary, aged 6, was playing around the kitchen stove last Sunday when her dress took fire. She ran out of the house and her mother, Mrs. McCreery, ran after her and tore the burning clothes from her body. Fortunately the burns were not very severe and the child will soon be well. The little girl's escape is a happy one, as several children have been burned to death in this county during the past few years.

Keep your eye open and watch for the announcement of the Golden Store's opening. It means a saving of from 25 to 50 per cent. on your purchases.

Railroad Notes.

Nolde & Horst, a New York firm have sublet three miles of road-bed above the mouth of Beaver Creek. The greater part of this work is cliff and hillside excavation.

The firm of Cogan & Haechel, building the bridges at the first crossing of the Greenbrier and across Knapp's Creek, has been dissolved and a new partnership of Cogan, Noble & House has been formed, assuming the contract and liabilities of the old firm.

The contractors are making good headway on the tunnel near Bird's Mill. They are working the full twenty-four hours from both ends.

The contractors are all working to finish their grading contract by May, and it is possible that the trains will run into Marlinton in June.

Several contractors have steam drills. Where rock is drilled by hand three men constitute a crew, two to strike and one to "turn steel." 12 feet of solid rock is a day's work for three men. A steam drill, with the steam applied with hose, drills two feet in four minutes. The drill is then changed for one two feet longer and as soon as torn be adjusted it drills at the same rate.

Work in the tunnels can go on as well in bad weather as good and whether the work is done by day or night it requires artificial light. Not every can do this work as the fumes from the explosion of dynamite give some men such a headache that they cannot do this class of work.

Two typical railroad accident occurred at Mike Jones & Co.'s camp recently. Three darkies were driving steel and the one who was turning the drill noticed some mud on the top as the drill was being set. Now if the hammer came down on it it might fly in his face, and he passed his hand across the top of the drill to brush it off just as the hammer came down, cutting off his second finger so clean that it needed only to be bound up.

Another day a colored man started to move a heavy piece of a steam drill just at six o'clock. He had nearly shouldered it when time was called but he said: "All right, Captain. I've got it up now I'll just tote it along." He took a few steps in the direction he wished to go and fell in such a manner that the weight knocked his shoulder out of place. It was impossible to get a doctor before the next day, and when he came he told the darkey to a tree and five men took the second pull before the shoulder was put in place, the patient yelling as loud as he could the whole time.

Measles vs Smallpox.

Editor Times:

Will you kindly allow me space in your paper to correct a report that has been circulated over the county, that my son (Massie) came home from the West Virginia University with the smallpox. There is not one word of truth in the report. The facts are that my son had been feeling badly for several days before he left Morgantown. He went to a physician who examined him and told him he was threatened with typhoid fever and advised him to come home at once. He came to Huntersville on Saturday, the 20th, where he stood all night. On Sunday morning Dr Bosworth pronounced it not be had a genuine case of measles.

I understand that the patrons of Mr James W. Warwick's school at Academy fear that he might have carried the measles into the school in justification of Mr Warwick they state he left my home before my son came home, and only passed along the public road the next day, where he could n't possibly have contracted the measles from him.

I hope this statement will settle the panic of the timorous report, if not Drs Bosworth and Cameron who attended him will verify my statement.

Respectfully,
A. C. L. GATEWOOD.

DRIFTWOOD.

A little snow at present.

Mrs. Ad Kesler is very low with pneumonia.

J. W. Tery and Lee A. Gaither are dosing with the measles, and several more chances.

Miss Bertie McLaughlin has closed her school at Clover Creek where she taught a fine school, although this was her first school.

D. A. Thorp will close his school here Friday.

Emery Waitz has moved from Clover Lick to S. H. Sharp's where he will board with.

D. D. McLaughlin was on a business trip to Marlinton one day last week.

J. W. Tallman was visiting in this part Sunday.

Miss Bertie McLaughlin has commenced her second school at Clover Lick. We wish her much success during the term of school.

Daniel Thorp was looking after his interest here Sunday.

DIED.

William H. Collison.

William H. Collison of Locust Creek died January 31st, aged 50 years. He was ill for more than three months, but his friends thought he would recover. He was a true man in all the relations of life. Kind and affectionate in his family, a true friend to his neighbors, and faithful to his church. He married Miss Laura Whiting and five children survive him.

William Collison was converted in the great revival conducted by Rev J. R. Van Horne twenty-four years ago. He joined the Methodist Church, South, and remained within its pale to the day of his death. He worked hard for the erection of our church on Locust Creek and gave $400. He was a good steward and was always alive to the interests of the church.

A good man is gone. His place will be hard to fill. He was needed here, but God's will be done. He rests from his labors. There remaineth therefore a rest for the people of God.

JOHN H. DILLS.

H. L. Casebolt.

Died, Mr H. L. Casebolt of Locbelle, after a few day's sickness, but unexpectedly to his many friends. He was able to sit up and keep fires the day of his death. About an hour before his death he was affected by something like heart trouble and died suddenly. He had often told his faithful wife he wanted to die as he did. His age was 81 years. He had lived in this county all his life and worked very *hard and laid up a nice for*tune for old days, and a stock holder in the Pocahontas Bank. A wife and son and daughter survive him. He will be missed in this part. He had been a member of the Baptist church about four years, and professed submission to the Divine will at all times. His last work here was the building of a new church near Lobelle, where we trust many souls will be gathered ready to enter in at the strait gate which leads to life eternal.

MR POOR.

Editor Pocahontas Times:

Dear Sir: Within the past few days we have been asked by several different parties to make a card in it is a fact that Mr Isaac B. Smith said to us a personal story, from which it is to be presumed that such information has been affurbished to the public, and in justice to Mr Smith we have the following statement to make, which if you will kindly print in your next issue.

Mr Isaac B. Smith has been furnishing butter, eggs, milk and cheese to us since November 15th, 1899, and we hope he will continue to accommodate us for some time to come. We have never had a better dairy, and we can offer no better cow cause for the purpose of testing of the cream, which perhaps is based upon the composition of some fraud of Mr. Smith.

Yours truly,
J. F. Brewster & Co.

We have quite a batch of second-hand stoves that we took in exchange during the fall of 1899, which we will sell cheap. When people discover our prices on the other ones we will sell some.

Keep your eye open and watch for the announcement of the Golden Store's opening. It means a saving of from 25 to 50 per cent. on your purchases.

OLADE HILL.

Henry Briscoe was in town last week.

Preaching at New Hope Church next Sunday.

Marvin Gum is doing a fine lot of sawing for Taylors.

Homer Hoover, spent last week at Edray.

R. R. Mason came up from camp last Saturday.

E. N. Moore lost a fine cow last week.

General Grant and family have the measles.

Edward Taylor went to Highland last week for his health, we presume.

Snow, rain and mud, and Frank Patterson visits these parts regularly of late.

A fine deer came in here recently and if it had not been for the law some of the boys could have gotten a shot at it.

Miss Alice McLaughlin's school will close in two weeks. She has taught a good school and is liked by all.

Chris Dilley made a flying trip to Frost last Saturday.

Two wagons and some men passed here Sunday, going to work on the grade, we presume.

Preaching at Mt Pleasant school house on the fourth Sunday.

H. F. Arbogast made a step upward last Saturday night; he went from vice-president to president of the debating club.

The literary society is in a flourishing condition. It is the best society ever organized in the upper end of the county. The entertainment is good, there is good behavior and the house is always filled to overflowing with people.

We understand that E. N. Moore is a candidate for Sheriff. There could not be a more suitable man found in the county. He is fully qualified, and is a good Christian man, such as the Huntersville man thinks should fill such places.

BRUSO.

FROST.

And still it rains.

Dr Jordon is getting quite a bit of practice. He has had good success so far.

Jacob Kernal is at the depot.

Hannah & Harper are doing a rushing business.

Butler Sharp, who has had his team at Smith & Whiting's camp, is at home.

Ben Sharp made a trip to the Hot Springs last week.

Miss Ada Sharp, who has been staying at Wise Herald's, has returned home to stay.

Mervin Sharp, who has been staying at A. W. Moore's, was at home Sunday.

Give us E. N. Moore for Sheriff.

J. W. Warren finished his lumber job on Thursday. About six million feet of lumber is lying in Knapps Creek ready for the drive.

Three wagon loads of railroad hands passed through town Sunday.

C. S. Curry is able to be out again.

B. Jones Sharp started to preach one Sunday, but got lost and found himself at Joseph Moore's.

This Paper One Year. Farm Journal 5 Years.

PAY UP AND GET BOTH PAPERS AT PRICE OF ONE.

We want to get 500 subscribers to our paper during 1900, and are going to do it if we can; we therefore contract our circulation with the Farm Journal for 5 years, and not to advance our own the Pocahontas Times one year and the Farm Journal five years, both for $1.00. And we make the same offer to all old subscribers who will pay up all arrearages and one year in advance.

We have used our paper to boost the Farm Journal, and we know it to be a good paper, and we want every subscriber to have it. Remember you get both papers for the price of one. You ought to take it.

NOTICE.

We are going to need the room a certain days of the Farm Journal, soon, and so it speaks for itself. Look out for it.

GREEN BANK.

We are having fine winter weather at this time.

A. S. Gillispie of Gillispie was in town last Friday.

George Beverage of Top Alleghany was in town Saturday.

Give us John Hevener for Justice of the Peace in Green Bank District and F. P. Patterson for Constable.

Why not send S. B. Hannah to the Legislature this time?

It has been suggested that G. R. Curry of Academy be run for Commissioner of County Court, and why not.

Deputy Sheets was in town Saturday paying the school teachers' drafts.

If a hen and a half lay an egg and a half in a day and a half, how many eggs will six hens lay in seven days? Answer through Times.

Why not give us John Waugh of Edray for Assessor. He is a good man for the position.

Miss Lucy Sheets spent last Saturday and Sunday in town and went home in the rain.

Miss Daisy Eskridge closed her school last week and returned to her home at Academy.

Attorney Bratton was in town last Friday shaking hands and asking for support, as he is a candidate for Commonwealth Attorney.

DILLEY'S MILL.

Singing at Mt Zion next Friday night by C. K. Moore.

William Dilley was in the town of Dunmore one day last week.

J. C. Dilley commenced his tie contract last week.

A. L. and Hevener Dilley say the singing at Mt Zion last Friday night was just right.

The measles are still traveling in this part.

C. L. Moore, on Brown's Creek, lost a fine horse some days ago.

Miss Emma Dilley and Otho Gum were united in the holy bonds of matrimony by Rev Anderson, January 31, at the home of P. S. Dilley.

Miss Minnie Eskridge and Clyde Beard were the guests of W. B. Dilley last Saturday.

Strickler Hoover is trying to level the Hills with dynamite.

Uncle Billie Slaton is visiting up above this week.

Peter McCarty got severely burned while extinguishing the flames which had caught his daughter Mary's dress.

Miss Pearly Dilley has pneumonia. Dr Lockridge is attending her.

Ira Moore made a flying trip to Marlinton Saturday.

G. E. Moore has taught a number of schools in this part and gets the praise of being one among the best instructors that ever taught in this vicinity. He is now teaching the Mt Tabor school and is giving the best satisfaction.

The Bethel correspondent last week must have had swimming in his head when he said the "singing at Mt Zion had been a failure so far." The singing is conducted by O. B. Sharp and is progressing nicely. POSEY.

Stood Death Off.

E. B. Monday, a lawyer of Henrietta, Tex., once fooled a grave diggers. He writes: "My brother was very low with malarial fever and jaundice. I persuaded him to try Electric Bitters, and he was soon much better and continued their use until he was wholly cured. I am sure Electric Bitters saved his life." This remedy expels malaria, kills disease germs and purifies the blood; aids digestion, regulates the liver, and bowels, cures constipation, dyspepsia, nervous diseases, female complaints; gives perfect health. HONEST IN MOTIVE
FEARLESS IN EXPRESSION
SOUND IN PRINCIPLE.

A newspaper is an educator; there are all kinds of educators, but the man who spends money judiciously and liberally is better able to impart the knowledge than the man who has little or nothing to spend.

THE SUN is the highest type of newspaper.

THE SUN'S reports from all parts of the United States are unexcelled.

THE SUN'S Cable Service is the finest known; the troubles in the Philippines and in South Africa, for instance, are described by able and competent correspondents at vast expenditure of money and labor to getting the news. When you get THE SUN'S report you get news and intelligent presentation of facts with it as well as carefully prepared articles of editorial writers of highest standing. When you get a daily paper whose principal recommendation is its cheapness, you get the cheapest quality very poor cheap at that.

By mail Fifty Cents a month; or months, $2; one year $6.

THE BALTIMORE WEEKLY SUN

THE SUN'S FAMILY NEWSPAPER

All the news of the world in attractive form; an agricultural department second to none in the country; market reports which are recognized authority; short stories complete in each number; no objectionable matter admitted; a pure and attractive paper for the family and fireside.

RUSSIA'S GREAT CANAL.

A Long Ditch To Connect the Baltic And Black Seas.

European papers and scientific magazines are discussing chronicles generally at the present moment with criticisms concerning the great ship canal which is destined to connect the Baltic with the Black Sea, work on which was begun last year by the Russian Government, and is being pushed forward with the greatest zeal, and at the same time with a quietness astonishing almost to secrecy. When finished the work, on account of its immensity and the almost insuperable difficulty to be overcome, will be worthy of a place beside such modern wonders as the St. Gothard tunnel, the Suez Canal, the tunnels of Fréjus and the Simplon.

The projects offered for the construction of this really herculean labor were many and various, but the choice finally rested between two schemes—one, a proposition to unite the river Dniepr, which flows into the Black Sea, with the Dwina, which empties its waters into the Baltic at Riga, the other a plan to connect the Dniester, west of Odessa, with the river Vistula, which has its mouth at Danzica on the Baltic.

The first of these projects met with the special favor of Alexander III., and is the one which has been adopted for the carrying out of the great work of uniting the two seas. The route starts at Riga, following the course of the Duna River as far as Dunsberg, where it is united to the Beresina by means of an immense course cut right through the country. The Beresina and the Dnieper are then used to complete the connection. The total length of the line is 1,600 kilometers, or about 1,000 English miles, 200 kilometers of the entire distance being artificially cut through the land. The work is to be finished in five years if all goes well and a sufficient number of men are kept at work during that period.

The canal is 66 meters, or about 207 feet wide, and about 30 feet deep, thus allowing the largest vessels means of passing from one sea to the other. Seventeen large sports, or artificial bays, are to be constructed along the line as well, each capable of containing a large number of ships, so that a Russian vessel, however large it may be, may make the entire transit in six days, without hindrance of any kind.

The cost of the work, at the lowest estimate, and taking into consideration the means at the disposal of the Russian Government as to the adoption of unpaid labor, will amount to about $120,000,000.

The principal of the reasons for the adoption of the above mentioned plan in preference to the Dniester-Vistula project is that the whole distance is kept within the limits of the Russian Empire, thus allowing Russia absolute sovereignty over the entire course.

Putting aside the great political advantages given to Russia by the new enterprise, the gain commercially and economically will be an incalculable one, and beneficial in many more ways than one. With her great power and resources the great semi-Oriental kingdom is in position to carry out with ease works that, in their immensity, recall the wonders of ancient history, and before the undertaking of which a lesser power would retire discouraged.—Rome Correspondent New York Times.

CAT ADOPTS RABBITS.

Robbed of Her Own Litter She Is Content With Substitutes.

A cat on the farm of Andrew Harris, near McKeesport, Pa., has adopted four baby rabbits in the place of the litter of kittens which she recently brought into the world and which Mr. Harris thought the world could get along without. The day after the kittens disappeared the cat was observed carrying something in her mouth to the barn. Three times she was seen making the same journey and then Mr. Harris made an investigation. He found, hidden in the hay, three baby rabbits. While he was looking at them pussy appeared for the fourth time carrying another little rabbit in her mouth. It was deposited with its brothers and she lay down with them, content with the greatest of pride and satisfaction.

The young rabbits are getting along finely. They hop all about with their foster mother. Mr. Harris is proud of his cat, and is getting her to raise her queer family undisturbed, except for the visitors who are constantly calling to witness this queer freak.

It Did Not Work.

A good, strong bluff at the proper time is a very good thing, but it may fail, and a well known, interesting man who is at present visiting Washington. It was at one of the best hotels in Kansas City a few days ago that one of the guests stepped into the lobby to leave his umbrella and not desiring to go to his room thought he would try a scheme of his own to prevent some one from walking off with it. Taking a slip of paper from his pocket he laid it before him, wrote the following notice: "Beware! The man who owns this umbrella weighs over two hundred pounds, and can whip a big man before he gets through with him in fifteen minutes. It was not long after that some one was attracted to the place, and he learned with the utmost consternation of the dire threat. Quickly taking the awkward umbrella he rushed the owner, and turning it over on the floor he found a little man who took the umbrella weighs just one and one-half and after grappling with him for a few minutes he was seen making back to Washington.

An Unsatisfactory Treaty.

Rhe—Why should they not always have peace? Why should they fight?

He—Don't think that it is the result of the natural antagonism of nations to each other. It is the result of the jealousy of the women. Every time a treaty is made between two nations the women of both countries are offended because they are not consulted. So as soon as the treaty is signed the women of both countries begin to make trouble between the two countries, and it is not long before they succeed in getting up a war.

She—Do you think that we have any cause for war?

He—No, I don't think we have, but I am afraid we will have one just the same.

VOL. 18, NO. 30 MARLINTON, WEST VIRGINIA, FEBRUARY 15, 1900. $1.00 PER YEAR

West Virginia University,

MORGANTOWN, W. VA.

The growth of the University is quite as notable in its equipment, its faculty, and its new departments as in its attendance. For example, look at established two years ago. It has a faculty of seven instructors, trained under the best teachers in this country and Europe. It occupies a separate building fitted up especially for its needs. Instruction on all stringed instruments, including violin, viola, mandolin, guitar, etc., is free. For voice and piano the fees are very low. A magnificent pipe organ for Commencement Hall is being constructed and it will be for the use of students of the school of Music. If you are interested in the study of music, write for full information.

Other departments of the University are developing with equal rapidity. The Preparatory Department, with its four new instructors, deserves special mention. Write for a special pamphlet about it.

The University has a faculty of sixty-five instructors, graduates of the foremost schools in the world.

The Winter Quarter begins January 2, and the Spring Quarter April 2.

County Sketches

The Town of Spartansboro.

One day Bill Burrows drew his pay at the lumber camp where he had been working, and declared his intention of taking Spartansboro alone and single handed. The town had been taken so often that it did not cause a cessation of the poker game in progress. His comrades lifted their eyes only the fraction of a second required by Jack Turnbull to play the extra ace he held between his knees, and sweep off the jackpot of plug to banco. Beyond suggesting that he take somebody of his size, such as might be found in present company if he wanted to fight, no comment was made on this declaration of war.

Burrows tramped to town and was hailed joyfully by the village drunkard, whose mission it was to help such visitors spend their wages. The lumbermen would go out in a body to the woods to recuperate, and find themselves little the worse for the spree, but the village drunkard having to take them all on found the life he was leading one perpetual drunk and was hesitating to show the effects of the west end tear of such a life.

On the next day Burrows was ready to receive the unconditional surrender of the little town. Mr William Bunley, the most prominent man of the town who stood high in church and state, came down the street. He was an elderly gentleman, of very venerable appearance.

"Howdy Bill," said Burrows, offering a very dirty paw to be shaken, which was ignored. "How'd it be for a game of draw poker about terwards?"

Mr Bunley's nephew, Sam Lovejoy, who was a small boned fleshy man who clerked in a store, came by and advised his uncle to pay no attention to Burrows, no attention whatever.

Burrows instantly demanded what he was putting in his pie for. The two men walked away and entered the store. The news flew from mouth about Lovejoy's unsuccessful interference the men engaged in became. He took a position in front of the store and took off his coat and cast it away; he removed his hat and trod on it and shouted for Lovejoy to come forth and testify. His oaths were loud and long. He had once counted his swearing vocabulary and found he knew 169 cuss words and he now recited them all. Lovejoy said he could not stand it and longer and took his pistol with trembling hands, but was restrained by his friends. The proprietor of the store went upstairs and opening a window told Burrows to go away or he would have him arrested. Burrows defied the officers of the law, who were not present, until the village drunkard who had come back to life in the meantime, came and took him away. For a day or two Burrows owned the town, and the people of Spartansboro had but one consolation and that was that they would soon be enabled to incorporate the village and set up a town government. Then with a mayor, and council and sergeant, and lockup they would attend to disorderly people who insulted them in their own town and who cursed so that their women folk could hear.

For fifty years or so the town had been holding its own in regard to population, having upwards of one hundred people. For the past ten years it had never had less than ninety and never a hundred. The time of which we write there were ninety-nine souls in the town, and when there were one hundred persons the village could be incorporated as a matter of right and a town government set up.

Some months before the time of which we write there arose a rumor in the town that the number of children in the Potts family was [illegible] est the patriotic pair who are endeavoring to do the state some service, and the gossips of the neighborhood alone, but this particular affair was of municipal importance. The leading men of the village saw great potentialities in the arrival of the hundredth soul. A young man of sacrilegious tendencies made a bad joke about the ninety and nine that already peopled the place of being of little moment compared to the one who was to make up the complement. The safe arrival of the little fellow one cold frosty morning was the scene of much hilarity in the village, men who usually smoked a pipe indulging in a cigar, and even treating their neighbors.

The celebration was short lived however for about noon the farmers heard the bell of the village church toll the slow notes telling that some one had died. One stroke being tolled for each year of the age of the dead person, when the bell stopped on the 84th stroke they knew that Aunt Fanny Eaton the midwife was dead. She had successfully presided at the birth of the youngest Potts, and the exertion or the excitement proved too much for her, for she died as she sat smoking in an arm chair. Her great forte was saving doctor bills, and she was true to her principles to death.

In a few days a family moved away, reducing the population further, and Spartansburg gave up hope of immediate incorporation. Bill Burrows, accumulating another stake, came down on the defenseless village again like a wolf on the fold. His friend the village drunkard was ready to be entertained, and soon Burrows thought of his friend with the timid Lovejoy. Breathing out threatenings of slaughter he started to go to the store. He spoke to a young lady on the street, who hurried away from him and somewhat old and hill her brothers for fear they would get into trouble with him. Arriving at the store he shouted for Lovejoy to come out and be killed. Lovejoy not immediately responding, Burrows regaled the town with the latest epithets concerning the women folks to steal the wonders and hustle their folks into nice church at they might not hear the dreadful language.

While he was thus engaged Tom Bunley, of Arizona, who was visiting his native town, came sauntering down the street smoking an after dinner cigar. He took in the whole situation at a glance, and he advanced steadily, picking up a stout little cudgel as he walked along. When at the proper distance he let the club descend and the bad man fell to the ground. The doctor worked over the wounded man and brought him around in a week or so, and Burrows explained profusely that when he was under the influence of liquor he said and did things unbeknownst to himself.

On talking the matter over with his father, Tom Bunley decided that it were better to incorporate the town, something that had been ardently desired by all the burghers. Tom being a man of action had a board shanty erected on a vacant lot belonging to his father and colonized it with Dave Peets and his family of thirteen children. Peets was a man who had been compensated for a world of ill luck by a healthy hearty family of little ones. The certificate of incorporation was obtained and the town sergeant at the risk of his life has run in many bad men, and safely kept them until the hour was past, and has built many feet of sidewalk with the fund arising from the fines collected.

In this way Tom Bunley preserved his popularity when at the end of a three months' visit he reduced the population of the town by taking the villinge belle with him to Qrizona.

Two young men, who must have been medical students, boarded an Angora car late Sunday night with a fully articulated skeleton. Each had one arm liked with that of the skeleton, whose bones rattled gruesomely as they walked to the [illegible] mate companion between them. Between the grinning teeth of the skeleton was a cigarette, and a derby hat adorned its shining skull. The car was rather crowded, and the other passengers, most of whom were much gazed in open-mouthed astonishment at the strange spectacle. The two young fellows, however, pretended to be unconscious of their surroundings and held such converse with the skeleton: "Too bad you didn't wear your mackintosh, Bill. I'm afraid you'll catch cold." Or "Say, Bill, better throw away your cigarette or the conductor will throw you off." When the conductor came through for the fares one of the young men handed him 15 cents and he rang up three fares without a word of comment. At Sixteenth street a young girl entered the car and looked around for a seat. "Here, Bill," exclaimed one of the students, "where's your gallantry? Get up and give the lady a seat." Then he yanked the skeleton out of its place and set it on his knees. The girl gave one screech, fled to the back platform, and insisted that the conductor stop the car and put her off. "Gee! Bill!" remarked the student, gazing reproachfully into the skeleton's face, "you've deteriorated. You used to be quite a lady's man." Then everybody laughed.—Philadelphia Record.

A Night of Terror.

"Awful anxiety was felt for the widow of the brave General Burnham of Machias, Me., when the doctors said she would die from pneumonia before morning," writes Mrs. S. H. Knowles who attended her that fearful night, but she begged for Dr King's New Discovery, which had more than once saved her life and cured her of consumption. After taking, she slept straight. Has since used it in her practice. This marvelous medicine is guaranteed to cure all Throat, Chest and Lung Diseases. Only 50c and $1.

Tact and a Girl in the Car.

Party Nicknames—The Trimmer.

The subjoined article is from the pen of the Marquis of Halifax and was written in 1689. As we understand it a trimmer is commonly called a mugwump in these days.

Amongst all the engines of dissention there has been none more powerful in all these times than the fixing names upon one another of contumely and reproach. And the reason is plain in the respect of the people, who, though generally they are incapable of making a syllogism, or forming an argument, yet they can pronounce a word; and that serves their turn to throw it with dull malice at the head of those they do not like. Such things ever begin in jest, and end in blood; and the same word which at first makes the company merry, grows in time to a military signal to cut each other's throats.

This innocent word Trimmer signifies no more than this, that if men are together in a boat, and one part of the company would weigh it down on one side, another would make it lean as much to the contrary; it happens there is a third opinion of those who conceive it would do as well if the boat went even without endangering her passengers. Now, 'tis hard to imagine by what figure in language, or by what rule in sense this comes to be a fault, and it is much more a wonder it should be throught a heresy.

Our Trimmer, therefore, inspired by this divine virtue, thinks fit to conclude with these assertions: That our climate is a trimmer between that part of the world where men are roasted, and the other where men are frozen: that our church is a trimmer, between the frenzy of Platonic visions and the lethargic ignorance of popish dreams: that our laws are trimmers between the excess of unbounded power and the extravagance of liberty not enough restrained: that true virtue has even been thought a trimmer, and to have its dwelling between the two extremes: that even God Almighty himself is divided between His attributes, and unwilling to be engaged in any one, and willingly leaves to the bold champions of either extreme the honour of contending with no less adversaries than nature, religion, liberty, prudence, humanity and commonsense.

Wild Horses in Utah.

On the undulating sandy desert south of Milford, Beaver County, Utah, are situated the warm springs of the old wagon road which freighters used for reaching Pioche in her palmiest mining days; and south of these springs could be seen by these freighters twenty-five years ago, bands of wild horses scurrying away at the approach of man, and raising a cloud of dust as they rushed over the sand dunes and rabbit-brush hollows.

At that time the freighters were compelled to pay toll for water at these warm springs—and perhaps they do still—because the precious fluid was run into large shallow wooden tanks buried in the ground and allowed to cool. For the privilege of wetting their horses and themselves with the brackish water and filling the regulation barrel strapped to the side of the wagon, the teamsters paid the man in charge one dime (5 cents per man and team. The water that ran away from these springs in those days formed a wasty pool below the springs proper, and here was one of the watering places for the bands of wild horses that were even then plentiful upon the desert.

The western edge of the desert was fringed by very precipitous mountains, which were here and there deeply seamed with canons, which were simply a mighty cleft in the black, rugged volcanic rock. Usually these canons ended very abruptly, after their course had been followed for a distance say where from one to three miles.

Ingenious man at once saw a use for these canons, and, selecting those which best suited his purpose, he placed away up over the brush ending of each of these a strong gateway of pine poles. Fastidiously the cowboys of that country would go out to replenish their stock of saddle horses from among the bands of wild equines on the desert. On foot or fast even then, however, and so thoroughly familiar with the ground over which they sped when pursued, and enjoying the advantage of being riderless, that they eluded their pursuers and easily frustrated any attempt at their apprehension with a lasso. This was the incentive which impelled the cowboys to seek the aid of nature in securing for themselves that which they most coveted—"the goldarnest, ornriest, wildest cayuse on the hull darned range."

So it came about that the gateways were built in the precipitous canons. Knowing the location of a big band of the wild horses the cowboys would line out upon their wiry ponies and gradually swing the band around in the direction of one of the canons, up which the unsuspecting creatures would clatter among the loose volcanic rocks in the bottom of the big cravasse, bounding through the improvised gateway. Then the poles were put up, after the cowboys had ridden into the natural corral, and the rest was easy. Usually the horses thus caught were sufficiently tractable by the time they had been handled awhile by their captors—that is, tame enough for a cowboy.

Despite the large numbers thus caught in those days, these bands have so increased that they are now almost overrunning the country. Occasionally, of late, the rangers down in Washington, Sevier, Millard, Beaver, Wayne and Garfield have been compelled to organize raids of extermination upon them. These wild horses are so numerous that they destroy the range for cattle, sheep and other more valuable animals.—Denver News.

He Tried Them All.

J. F. Habermel, Bradford, Indiana, complains of constipation and liver trouble. I bought four boxes of Ramon's Liver Pills and Tonic Pellets of an agent of the Brown Mfg Co., at Greenville, Tenn. I used two boxes of the Pills and followed with the Pellets every night for thirty days, and today I am as healthy as I was twenty years ago. I will recommend Ramon's Liver Pills and Tonic Pellets to all who who suffer with such complaints. The Pills and Pellets are a sure cure; I would not be without the Pills in my family.

"Yes, I suppose I see as much of human vanity as anybody else," said a Philadelphia photographer, after an unsuccessful effort to convince a woman customer that some pictures which flattered her very much were really very good likenesses. She though they didn't do her justice, and didn't hesitate to say so. "I don't mind people like that. I get used to them. But it's the freaks that try one's soul—the people who want their hands photographed, and things like that. When the Trilby craze was at its height several years ago, lots of women used to come to me to have their feet photographed, and such of shape and covered with corns. Other woman, who thins they have pretty hands, have hands photographed holding a flower, and now they are having their eyes photographed. There's no telling where the thing is going to end."—Philadelphia Record.

Michael Scales—Life Sketch.

Sunday morning, Feb. 4, 1900, Michael Scales entered into rest. He was born in County Clare, Ireland, in 1827, and came to America when about twenty years old. He worked on the C. & O. R. R. and about 1852 came to this section. He served in the Confederate army under Capt Norman in Company D, 14th Regiment, Virginia Cavalry. In 1866 he married Mrs Caroline Ruckman, and to them were born four daughters and one son.

Michael Scales was reared a Catholic, but left that faith for a better one. He went to a Methodist church through curiosity, and remained for the class meeting. As one by one they testified their love for their Savior, he saw that he lacked experimental religion. He was converted at the old log church on Swago. "There was no room at the altar, so I just knelt in the corner next to the door, and God forgave this poor sinner. In 1858 Rev Jason P. Etchison received him into the Methodist church and he was faithful unto death.

The means of grace that the Methodist church supplies suited the intense nature of brother Scales. The prayer and class meetings and revival seasons were great events to him. He fed upon Christ in these feasts of love, and would go upon that meat many days. In prayer and testimony he sat at the feet of Jesus. In the experience meeting two weeks before he died he shouted the praise of his Redeemer. He helped to build Marvin Chapel, he helped to support his pastor, he loved his neighbors, but best of all he was a man of prayer and faith. This was the secret of his life.

During the war he daily sought a place for private prayer. He "carried his religion through the war." His faith was quick and thus he was often blessed. For forty-two years his life blessed the church. He always prayed for a "peaceful hour in which to die." "peaceful hour" came. Soldier, rest! Thy battle's fought, the race is won and thou art crowned at last. No longer can we hear his prayer to God, nor shout of victory; but Heaven has one more voice to swell the anthem of praise to the King of Kings and Lord of Lords. JNO. H. DILLS.

There have been poultry books printed costing fifteen dollars and more, but there never has been one at any price with more beautiful colored reproductions of poultry, than those found in the Biggle Poultry Book, an announcement of which appears in another column. The paintings were made direct from best birds of the different breeds, and the coloring and characteristic shape of each breed are perfect. As for the text, there never was a book printed containing more practical, level-headed information. Its chapters include, Eggs for Hatching, Hatching the Eggs, Care of Chicks With Hens and Brooders, The Successful Care of Incubators, The Farmer's Flock, The Village Hennery; chapters on Breeds, on Fattening and Marketing, and Diseases and Remedies, with the old and new school methods of treatment. Frank Stockton and His Cane.

In a hotel lobby in Washington, I chanced to meet Frank Stockton the novelist, who had just returned from West Virginia, where he has been resting out his imagination on paper to keep up with publishers' demands. Mr Stockton is a delightful little man with snapping black eyes and mustache touched with gray. He is somewhat lame and has a way of squinting one eye down his nose while talking that gives emphasis to his delightful morals in conversation. Few authors have a more loyal constituency and his "The Hundredth Man" is one of the best studies of American life for this generation that has been published.—National Magazine, Boston, Mass.

THE COUNTY COURT.

The election of one of the trustees of the county comes on this year and it can be definitely stated that C. E. Beard, the present member, will not offer for reelection. He has served the people ably and well for nearly twelve years.

This is one of the most important offices of the county and it is very necessary to secure a thoroughly reliable and trustworthy man for the place. They are the sole judges of what the county will spend each year. The choice must fall on some one in the Edray or Levels District. Among the acceptable men who have been discussed for the place are J. M. Mann, of Edray District, and M. J. McNeel, Matthews Ruckman, J. S. McNeel and Geo. R. Curry, of the Levels. Of this number the present indications are that M. J. McNeel, of Mill Point, will most likely be before the people. He is a substantial man of a conservative policy suited to the temper of the people. He has been sheriff of the county and has represented the county in the Legislature.

THE WAR GAME.

The news from Africa affords small comfort to the English sympathizer. General Buller has again "retired" across the Tugela, and the situation of his army and that of General White's at Ladysmith is admittedly unenviable.

It was a case of going to war without first counting the cost and taking an accurate census of the enemy's fighting men. Kruger was fully forearmed and forearmed, and prepared for a death struggle. His famous ultimatum should have been interpreted as a note of danger, and not as impertinence as it was regarded. The Boers had toughened his sinews in the war of 1880 against the same foe, and the veterans of that war are the strength of the army of to-day.

The Boer citizen soldier is a general fighter, and as such has embraced himself to American England's foreign policy has always been condemned in the United States, and our Government's general foreign policy is just as freely condemned by a large and intelligent part of our citizenship. That unacquaintable attitude does not necessarily mean that we love England best, but we love freedom more.

If the Boer chooses to be a slave in his own country and in his own home, why it is a very doubtful right to assume to make him accept his manacles, and when the best chances to be his and keep and a generation or two at most, it must grow a tall job all around for the present and, and cannot fail again to arouse sympathy and to appeal to the generous. SKIP THIS—MONEY QUESTION.

In the argument on the currency bill which was passed by the lower House early in the session, Mr Cushman of Washington made a hit with his first effort in Congress. The first sentence to catch the ear of the House was this:

"There would be no greater in consistency to me in hearing a man talk of bi-yardism, bi-quartism, or bibushelism, than to hear anyone discourse on the beauties of bimetalism in the sense of using both metals as a standard."

Now we did not notice this until the other day, and consequently until now it has been unanswered by us. Whenever the single standard man opens his mouth on the bushel or yard comparison he puts his foot in it.

The yard is governed by the inch and the inch by the three barleycorns. The yard can never be increased or diminished, for there are three barley corns, 108 to the yard. Experimental Station at Morgantown may by taking thought add a millimeter or two to the length of a grain of barley, but the old time barley-corn will be accepted as the 108th part of a yard. The barley-corn regulates the yard, and the yard the barley-corn. A change would be manifestly unjust and would effect every contract measured by this table.

Changing the weights of the two available precious metals has wrought untold harm to the country. It has set up money kings who will be hard to dethrone.

Suppose all the debts of this country were payable in yards of cloth, and after the contract and before payment the yard should be doubled in length. The people could understand this and such injustice would not be tolerated. Exactly the same thing was done with money. The legislators cast away the safeguard silver, overthrowing the work of the wisdom of ages, and the sliding scale dollar followed. All must admit that it was a mistake, and the only question is whether the debtor class can be allowed to recoup by bringing the dollar down as far as it has gone up by giving us the two metals again. Then call this republication. They called the other legislation.

We agree with Mr Cushman's closing words, which reminded his hearers that the money question was not so important to us as the question of money.

"When you pay a debt with a dollar that does up the debt; but the dollar is left like the old goose at the spring around which I played in childhood. Every one who came along took a drink out of it, but they did n't eat the goose. The American people have come to understand from actual experience that they are not so much interested in the amount of money in this country per capita as in the amount of money per pocket."

THE NEW MOTHER GOOSE.

The Singular Sang Froid Displayed by Baby Bunting.

Bartholomew Benjamin Bunting had only three passions in life,
And one of the trio was hunting, and two were his babe and his wife.
And therefore, so rigid his habits, he trotticked at home until two,
And then began hunting for rabbits, and hunted till fall of the dew.

Belinda Bellonia Bunting, thus widowed for half of the day,
Her duty maternal confronting, with young Baby Bunting would play.
When thus was his energy wasted, a patented food she'd dispense.
(She had bought it the day that they pasted the posters all over her fence

But Bonaparte Buckingham Buning,
(the infant thus blindly adored)
Replied to her worship by grunting, which showed he was brutally bored.
'Twas little he cared for the troubles of life. Like a crab on the sands
He blew a profusion of bubbles, and throatened the air with his hands.

Carthalomew Benjamin Bunting on night when his wife let him in,
Displayed as the fruit of his hunting
a cottontail's velvety skin,
Which, seeing young Bonaparte wriggle, he wave him without a demur,
And the babe with an aqueous giggle soon swallowed the whole of the fur.

Belinda Bellonia Bunting behaved like a consummate loon:
Her infant in frenzy confronting, she screamed herself moulted maroon:
She felt of his vertebrae spinal, expecting the babe to succumb,
And gave him one vigorous final hard prod in the pit of his tum.

But Bonaparte Buckingham Bunting, at first but a trifle perplexed,
By a change in his manner of grunting soon showed he was terribly vexed:
He displayed not a sign of repentance
but spoke in a dignified tone,
The only consecutive sentence he'd uttered. 'Twas, "Lemme alone!"

THE MORAL: The parent that uses precaution his folly regrets.
An infant gets all that he chooses, an infant chews all that he gets:
And collic? He constantly has 'em so long as his food is the best;
But he swallows with never a spasm what ostriches could n't digest.

Military philosophers are very busy forecasting the influences lyddite, magazine guns, and a new explosive named theorite will exert in the interests of peace. The outcome seems to be that it will simply make nations a little more penurious for war. Submarine navigation will open up a grand field for safe and profitable bloodletting among comparatively defenseless nations in Asia and Africa, whenever the enlightened christian nations find out it wont pay to fight their equals in courage and skill.

It Hangs On

If it was only health, we might let it cling.

But it is a cough. One cold no sooner passes off before another comes. But it's the same old cough all the time.

And it's the same old story, too. There is first the cold, then the cough, then pneumonia or consumption with the best medicine, and the trembling in the balance.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral

Loosens the cough of your cough. The congestion of the throat and lungs is relieved. Inflammation is subdued. The parts are put perfectly at rest and the cough drops away. It is one of the best lessons for which is long.

HALLUCINATIONS.

I was once the subject of a mental and visual hallucination that has often amused me. Indeed, it caused merriment to the friends around me at the time, but not so to me—what was mirth to the stone throwing boys was death to frogs.

It was summer in that hot, sultry, Southern climate; the nights were more oppressive than the days: but the strong fragrance of many rare and lovely flowers, the deep shadows of numerous fine trees and the midnight song of the mocking bird I shall never forget and formed sweet offsets to the great and long-continued heat. My daily work was arduous and one I delighted in. I was constantly surrounded by many scholars and no day was too long for me, there was so much to do, and there were so many young, active, willing minds. Where are all those dear girls now? Scattered: some the heads of families, yea grandmothers, and some have closed their eyes in the sweet sleep that knows no waking, at rest, I trust, with the Lord Jesus Christ.

The plantations in the country I speak of were large and possessed of many slaves, and they were such peaceable, happy, well behaved, gentle blacks. At odd times I moved about among them and taught them orally of the Bible and many tender recollections are mine of true friendship in this connection.

During the summer I refer to there had been a great deal of whispered rumor, (whence arisen I cannot tell but wholly groundless,) of a negro insurrection; with the dark population outnumbering the white such an attempt would have been awful. These rumors were very unpleasant to me and I tried to put them away, but ever and anon they arose and scared me. I had become almost sleepless and imprudently spent many night hours in writing that ought to have been spent in bed coaxing slumber. One night in particular I cannot forget what a beautiful still night it was and how the very green of the abundant foliage showed: thinking of the rumored trouble, I became nervous, cold and [illegible] eyesight.

In this state going, unfortunately, to my window, I saw, or thought I saw, a terrible thing; moving slowly, cautiously, in and out of the green bushes and shadows of the trees an armed black host, walking in file with all sorts of rude weapons. I left the window only to return and see the same fearful sight again. The cold sweat stood on my forehead and I could endure this no longer alone. I must awaken an aged friend across the hall, for how could I let her be murdered in her bed without knowing it! (?) She kindly came at my bidding and looked where I pointed, but of course saw nothing for there was nothing to be seen except the natural beauties of a warm South ern night. Her endeavors to reassure me however were fruitless for I still continued to see that dreadful approaching armed host to murder us, until a family investigation was made of the outside premises, and becoming somewhat calmed and wondering at my own waking dream or nightmare, or whatever one chooses to call it, I lay down, but not to sleep that night.

Such was my hallucination that never returned. I can smile over it now, but it was no smiling matter while it lasted. Some hallucinations we read of are pleasant, some trivial, mine that I here record was fearful to me in the extreme.

Local Events.

A Mr Andrews is clerking for P. Golden.

You can get an excellent smoke at H. R. Echols drug store.

C. A. Dameron, a timber buyer of Covington, was in Pocahontas last week.

Samuel B. Woods, attorney-at-law, of Charlottesville is in Pocahontas this week.

A postoffice has been established at Malcombe store two miles east of Edery called Malcomb.

I have wide, heavy galvanized iron for sugar pans; also will make pans any size. R. B. SLAVEN.

The landings were broken in on Knapps Creek Tuesday. The first logs reached Marlinton about 9 o'clock and for awhile they passed at rate of about fifty a minute.

A surprising amount of timber cut from the right of way has floated in. Nearly all the timber cut has fallen into the river bed, so near does the road run. This cost.

Do not forget to call on H. R. Echols when you want any patent medicine or fancy article. He can always be found at his stand at the Temperary Court House.

An affable Italian, for the present a citizen of Marlinton, who registers in the name of Tonie, was bestowing with a butcher for some fowls. He was asked what sort of chicken he wanted, and said for one he wanted a "rooster to jingle in the morning."

The collection put in at the railroad bridge at Knapp's Creek went out in the flood entailing a serious loss on the part of the contractors. The rise was so sudden that there was no time to move the derrick or pump and these were washed out and tangled up in the wreckage. This work is located at a very swift place in time of flood.

Wages have been advanced 10 per cent, some more than that, within a few weeks. Now who is going to pay for all this advance? The manufacturer, you say. Yes but who pays the manufacturer? You, you the consumer! You pay the advance for everything. But the dealer stores for a large stock of shoes on hand when the advance comes he makes a profit. Should he be willing to sell goods which are so valueless to manufacturers present prices. Stocks shoes with suitable comfort and appearance, and at the kind you paid $2.50 and $3.00 only $2.50 the kind that are most worn. Prices above quoted were at $3.00 per pair.
Yours for fifteen,
The Golden Store.

The Mailboy's Revenge.

A new mailboy appeared on one of the routes of this county the other day. At the first office he came to after leaving the terminal he was asked by the postmaster a very zealous official: "Did the postmaster at the end of the line swear you in this morning?" The mailboy's answer was "No," and the postmaster swore him in and decided that it being such a flagrant violation of law he would report it to the Department. When the letter was received in Washington the United States was shaken from stem to stern.

The Department wrote at once to the sub-contractor who was carrying the mail, demanding an explanation why he let unsworn mail boys carry the mail.

The sub-contractor replied that the question asked the boy was whether he had been sworn that morning. He had not. He had been sworn for the purpose the evening before.

It is said that the Department wrote the postmaster not to go so fast next time.

GREEN HILL.

Mrs Geiger is on the sick list.

N. S. Duffield is getting better

Tonie is getting to be quite a ladies man.

The Green Hill school is running with two scholors on account of measles.

Mr Jimmie Bartley met with a serious accident Sunday the 28th. As many as half dozen girls kicked him!

On the morning of January 30 Mr Elva Ruthff went out rabbit hunting and accidentally shot his best horse

T. F. Knapp of Millard, Roane County, is visiting in Pocahontas county, and says he is having a jolly good time and improving in health.

PUMPKIN HEAD.

DILLEY'S MILL.

Rain and mud.

W. H. Dilley made a flying trip to Marlinton last Saturday.

James Reid is wearing a bright smile. Its a boy.

Hevner Dilley is looking after wild game with shot-gun in hand.

Edward Malcomb of Greenbrier River spent several days with friends and relatives on Thorny Creek last week.

J. F. Surader on Top of Alleghany has measles.

The measls have Strickler Hoover cornered.

Big bargains will be offered by A. L. Dilley in the clothing line soon.

FOXY.

Important to Mothers.

The manufacturers of Castoria have been compelled to spend hundreds of thousands of dollars to familiarize the public with the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher. This has been necessitated by reason of pirates counterfeiting the Castoria trade-mark. This counterfeiting is a crime not only against the proprietors of Castoria, but against the growing generation. All persons should be careful to see that Castoria bears the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher, if they would guard the health of their children. Parents, and mothers in particular, ought to carefully examine the Castoria advertisements which have been appearing in this paper, and to remember that the wrapper of every bottle of genuine Castoria bears the facsimile signature of Chas. H. Fletcher, under whose supervision it has been manufactured continuously for over thirty years.—Phila. Bulletin.

Big Bargain Sale

At the Pocahontas Bargain House. See their advertisement.

Yancey Ligon of Clover Lick is quite ill at this time, the result of prolonged sickness.

The roads between Lewisburg and Hillsboro are almost impassible for teams. It is reported it requires six horses to pull a two-horse load in places.

It mitigates the discomforts of the passing cold, damp, and gloomy days to remember that were it not for such as these there would be no roses blooming in June.

The measles are very prevalent in Pocahontas. There are a few cases in Marlinton. It is said that the measles are not a bad kind of measles. They are of a rich pink variety, and do the system the minimum amount of harm.

A freeze of 6 cut in Seneca creek kept the mail at Arnett for two whole days. Monday and Tuesday. In the meantime persons were expecting or wanted. The mail carriers are a sadly discouraged lot. Better pay would put new life in them and bring the mail in on time. Money makes the mare go. When the mail arrives at Marlinton some times four hours over due the carrier gets not a penny a day this has happened quite frequently of late.

CASTORIA.

Chas. H. Fletcher.

INDIAN DRAFT.

Another wedding almost in sight.

J. W. McClure and family have about recovered from the measles.

Henry Posge still goes to the railroad.

Thomas Auldridge has taken a boarder to have the measles.

Billy Gay says he don't care who builds barns—It's a girl.

Rev Anderson preached an excellent sermon Sunday evening.

G. S. Taylor thinks of building a new house in early summer.

Robert Miller will build a dwelling on the land he recently purchased of the Barlow boys.

John Waugh has lately purchased a pair of Mammoth bronze turkeys.

R. L. Malcomb & Co seem to be doing a thriving business and selling lots of goods.

Our school closed Friday with honor to the teacher T. M. McCarty.

The measles seem to be the order of the day in this part of the county.

Blacksmith Taylor and P. H. Barlow, the wagon maker, to all appearances are kept quite busy.

Bill Gay is building a handsome barn which adds greatly to the appearance of his farm.

Q. W. Posge, of Posge's Lane, passed here Saturday on the hunt of stock cattle.

O. W. Ruckman is trying hard to get points for his Alliance plow as he wants to turn the soil.

Sam Gay is sawing a nice lot of lumber for John Waugh. Mr Gay & company know their gait when it comes to making good lumber.

Another enterprise I would mention in the way of machinery is a knitting machine operated by Mrs Mary A. Landes, which does its work to perfection; bringing out a pair of socks, heel and toe, large or small, in a few minutes.

S. P. Landes lately returned from visiting friends in Highland county and seems to think there is no place like old Highland. There must be some attended with considerable itching.

Last Wednesday Daniel Crouse and son Hugh and John Landes with four hounds went to Elk mountain for a fox chase. Soon after arriving a fox was jumped It ran too near Johnnie Landes and got a load of shot in his face which brought him down; no doubt saving a long chase. The hounds were then started in another direction and soon stared a large catamount. Mr Crouse getting a shot at it as it ran, breaking the right front leg. It was then treed and they took seven shots with a 32 Winchester at it. After hitting the ground it whipped four dogs; Mr Crouse being compelled to assist them.

J. H. Landes will soon give you a chance to have your picture taken.
TRAVELER.

GREEN BANK.

Bad weather.

Mrs W. R. Sheets is very low with pneumonia. Also Mrs Andrew Sheets.

Rev Hamill is on the sick list.

The wild geese were going south on last Sunday night. Look out for cold spell.

Attorney T. S. McNeel of Marlinton was among the people last week talking for votes, and he will get them I believe, as I heard a young lady say she would like to vote for him.

Joe will get there, as he has no opposition, I'll bet a cent. He ought to have it one more term anyway if he would cut down his whiskers.

Oh yes, give us Hon I. B. Moore for House of Delegates.

Stood Death Off.

E. B. Monday, a lawyer of Henrietta, Tex., once fooled a grave digger. He writes: "My brother was very low with malarial fever and jaundice. I persuaded him to try Electric Bitters, and he was soon much better and continued their use until he was wholly cured. I am sure Electric Bitters saved his life." This remedy expels malaria, kills disease germs and purifies the blood; aids digestion, regulates the liver, and bowels, cures constipation, dyspepsia, nervous diseases, female complaints; gives perfect health. Only 50c at Barry R. Echols, Marlinton; S. J. Brown, Mill Point; C. L. Beard & Co., Academy; H. S. Hannah, Knick's Valley; S. F. Hyles, Falling Springs, W. Va.

MEASLES.

Measles (known also as Rubeola and Morbilli) is one of the group of blood diseases termed Exanthemata, although, from the eruption which appears on the surface of the body, it is sometimes classed withe skin diseases. It is communicable from person to person, and seldom occurs more than once in the same individual. Its period of incubation—that is to say, the time that elapses between exposure to the contagion and the first appearance of the febrile symptoms which precede the eruption—is usually about a fortnight, then come lassitude and shivering, which are soon followed by heat of skin, increased rapidity of the pulse, loss of appetite and thirst. The respiratory mucous membrane is also affected, and the symptoms are very much the same as those of a severe cold in the head, accompanied with a dry cough, a slight sore throat and sometimes tightness of the chest.

The eruption which is character istic of the disease usually appears upon the fourth day from the commencement of the febrile symptoms and the catarrh—seldom earlier, but not unfrequently some days later. It is a rash, consisting at first of minute red papulae, which, as they multiply, coalesce into crescentic patches. It is two or three days in coming out, beginning on the face and neck and gradually travelling downwards. The rash fades in the same order as it occurs; and as it begins to decline three days after its appearance, its whole duration is about a week. The red color gives way to a somewhat yellowish tint, and the cuticle crumbles away in a fine bran-like powder; the process often being attended with considerable itching.

There are two important points in which it differs from small-pox, with which in its early stage it may be confounded: these are—1. That the fever does not cease or even abate when the eruption appears, but sometimes increases in intensity; and [2] that the disease is not more severe or more dangerous because the eruption is plentiful or early. The character of the eruption after the first day will serve to remove all doubt regarding these two diseases; and the comparative prevalence of either disease in the neighborhood will materially assist in forming the diagnosis. It is distinguished from scarlet fever or scarlatina, (1), by the presence at the outset of catarrhal symptoms which do not occur in the latter disease, at any rate, prior to the eruption; (2), by the absence of throat affection, which always accompanies well-marked cases of scarlet-fever; (3), by the character of the rash, which in measles is said to present somewhat the tint of the raspberry, and in scarlet fever that of a boiled lobster; which in measles appears in crescentric patches, and in scarlet fever is universally diffused; which in measles usually appears on the fourth day, and in scarlet fever on the second day of the disease.

In ordinary uncomplicated measles, the prognosis is almost always favorable. The chief danger is from inflammation of some of the textures that compose the lungs; and in scrofulous children it often leaves chronic pulmonary mischief behind it. No age is exempt from the disease, but it is much more common in childhood than subsequently. The reason probably is that most persons have it in early life and are thus protected from an attack at a later period.

In mild forms of the disease nothing more is requisite than to keep the patient on a low diet, attend to the state of the bowels and prevent exposure to cold which is best accomplished by keeping him in bed with the ordinary warmth to which he is accustomed to health. If the chest symptoms become urgent they must be treated according to their nature. Bronchitis sometimes extending into pneumonia is must be feared. If the eruption disappear prematurely it is my sometimes be brought back for placing the patient in a warm bath. In such cases stimulants are often required, but must, of course, only be given by the advice of the physician. The patient must be carefully protected from cold for a week or two after the disease has apparently disappeared as the lungs and mucous coat of the bowels are very susceptible to [illegible]

One of the most sensational funerals that has ever occurred in the history of any State was that of Governor Goebel in Kentucky last week. Senator Blackburn and Governor Beckham tried to speak words "smooth as butter," but war was in their hearts. So far as indications go Governor Taylor is nursing his wrath, and may keep it warm too. The hoised words of Mark Antony at the funeral of the murdered Cæsar were insipid in comparison to what was said by the "honorable men" of Kentucky.

SALT RHEUM CURED BY Johnston's Sarsaparilla

QUART BOTTLES.

JUST SEES IN TIME.

Slight Skin Eruptions are a Warning of Something More Serious to Come. The Only Safe Way is to Heed the Warning. Johnston's Sarsaparilla is the Most Powerful Blood Purifier Known.

Nature, in her efforts to correct mistakes, which mistakes have come from careless living, or it may be from ancestors, shoots out pimples, blotches and other imperfections on the skin, as a warning that more serious troubles (perhaps tumors, cancers, erysipelas or pulmonary diseases) are certain to follow if you neglect to heed the warning and correct the mistakes.

Many a lingering, painful disease and many an early death has been avoided simply because these aches of warning have been heeded and the blood kept pure by a right use of JOHNSTON'S SARSAPARILLA.

Miss Abbie J. Bande, of Marshall, Mich., writes:

"I was cured of a bad humor after suffering with it for five years. The doctors and my friends said it was salt rheum. It came out on my head, neck and ears, and then on my whole body. It was perfectly raw with it. What I suffered during those five years, is no one to tell. Nobody would believe me if I did. I tried every medicine that was advertised to cure it. I spent money enough to buy a house. I heard JOHNSTON'S SARSAPARILLA highly praised. I tried a bottle of it. I began to improve right away, and when I had finished the third bottle I was completely cured. I have never had a touch of it since. I never got any thing to do me the least good till I tried JOHNSTON'S SARSAPARILLA. I would heartily advise all who are suffering from humors or skin disease of any kind to try it at once. I had also a good deal of stomach trouble, and was run down and miserable, but JOHNSTON'S SARSAPARILLA made me all right."

The blood is your life and if you keep it pure and strong you can positively resist disease or face contagion fearlessly. JOHNSTON'S SARSAPARILLA never fails. It is for sale by all druggists, in full quart bottles, at only one dollar each.

"Sweet Bells Jangled Out of Tune and Harsh."

Shakespeare's description fits thousands of women. They are cross, despondent, sickly, nervous—a burden to themselves and their families. Their sweet dispositions are gone, and they, like the bells, seem sadly out of tune. But there is a remedy. They can use

McELREE'S Wine of Cardui

It brings health to the womanly organism, and health there means well poised nerves, calmness, strength. It restores womanly vigor and power. It tones up the nerves which suffering and disease have shattered. It is the most perfect remedy ever devised to restore weak women to perfect health, and to make them attractive and happy. $1.00 at all druggists.

Officers of the Boer Army.

That the strategy and tactics of the Boers have been admirable is acknowledged on all sides; that they are the result of foreign guidance is open to question. Sure it is better to admit that we were mistaken in our estimate of the Boer than to take from him one jot of the credit due to him as a soldier. In his own peculiar method of warfare he is unsurpassed, as it is these, not the rules of scientific manuals or the parade ground that baffled our generals.

Not so long ago the arm chair critic was describing the Boers as a poor, insignificant "rabble of farmers," a description which betrayed an ignorance as ridiculous as it was inexcusable. The Boer is a born soldier, the product of over a century's constant warfare against the natives. His theory may be a strong; but, as he is an apt pupil in the school of experience, he wrecks little of that. So admirably does he adapt his methods to circumstances that it amounts to perfect genius. Many of them have been learned from the Kaffirs; others are the result of the nature of the country, but as we have suffered from them in a previous war, might have been supposed that repetition were possible. To tribe Boer successes to the military ability of foreigners casts a reflection on our officers which they do not deserve.—Army and Navy Gazette.

A Strenuous Life.

Oh, what would Rudyard and Roosevelt say if they knew about my boy?
When he comes home at night there's no sign of a fight to fill my heart with joy.
His nose is not smashed, his cheek is not gashed, and his eyes are not black and blue;
And it fills me with dread when I think what I've read from those Strenuous Stalky Two!

O Kipling and Teddy! why don't he heed to the precepts laid down by you?
Why doesn't he glare, why doesn't he swear, as a youngster of pluck would do?
My heart is still when I ask for the kill and he hasn't a thing to show;
For I know that fame and an honored name can never be his below.

—Louis Brewsters King, in Central Presbyterian.

THE HUMAN FORM.

It may seem very strange to us to be assured by the teachings of science that the elementary facts of organic life is the same from the lowest creature living in the stagnant pool up to the glorious structure of the human form, made as the Psalmist remarks in a fearful and wonderful manner.

Can it be that the skilfully agile, symmetrical form of the athletic youth, or the sinuous enchanting figure of some radiant and rare village beauty are constructed of the same materials as the little pollywogs of a slimy pool. The crucible of the chemist and the teachings of the Bible agree in their testimony that such is the fact. With all their beauties and charms of form, marvels of structure and of function, physically speaking, there is nothing in these bodies except some few of the elementary substances common in the atmosphere around and the ground underneath our feet.

The foundation stones on which these structures stand and the material of which they are constructed are oxygen, hydrogen, and nitrogen, three of the most common and abundant gases, along with carbon and sulphur. The elements named, in slightly different proportions, make up the protoplastic or primordial combination of which is the abode of Life. When the human structure, however, appears as the athlete or the beauty in a finished condition there appear besides the elements mentioned lime, potash, a little iron, sodium, and phosphorus. Such are the materials of the human body, and so far as scientific researches go there is nothing else in the make up of the athletic or beautiful figure. The same general combination with here or there an ingredient more or less prevails throughout the whole animal, vegetable and mineral world and the elements named are the most common and therefore most abundant.

Such being the first explains to us why the animals and the plants around us are suitable to human support, why the common air is to us the very breath of life, and why herbs and aliments have healing virtue or poisonous properties. Hence it is there is no substance of the great members that is some way or other that affect our bodies, which does not so influence it for good or evil, but by virtue of some relation that animal, vegetable or mineral in its structure bears to the elements of which our bodies are composed, or the combinations into which those elements have been cast by the bodily mould. There is nothing of poetic fancy, or the use of dim and vague analogies that prompts such assertions about our bodies. It has for its authority the most definite facts that can be ascertained of the ultimate phenomena of organic life, and it expresses the clearest conceptions that can be formed of the essential properties of the human form divine.

Aphorism.

The subjoined brief, sententious statements of principals and truths are from the pen of Dr Thomas Fuller, a noted divine and writer of Cromwell's time.

It is dangerous to gather flowers that grow on the banks of the pit of hell, for fear of falling in: yes, they which play with the devil's rattles will be brought by degrees to wield his sword; and from making sport, they come to doing of mischief.

Heat gotten by degrees, with motion and exercise, is more natural, and stays longer by one, than what is gotten all at once by coming to the fire. Goods acquired by industry prove commonly more lasting than lands by descent.

The true church antiquary doth not so adore the ancients as to despise the moderns. Grant them but dwarfs, yet stand them on giants' shoulders, and may see farther.

Light, Heaven's eldest daughter, is a principal beauty in a building, yet it shines not alike from all parts of heaven. An east window welcomes the beams of the sun before they are of a strength to do any harm, and is inoffensive to none but a sluggard. In a west window, in summer time towards night, the sun grows low and overfamiliar, with more light than delight.

A public office is a guest which receives the best usage from them who never invite it.

Scoff not at natural defects of any, which are not in their power to amend. Oh! 'tis cruelty to beat a cripple with his own crutches.

Anger is one of the sinews of the soul: he that wants it hath a maimed mind.

Learning hath gained most by those books by which the printers have lost.

Generally, nature hangs out a sign of simplicity in the face of a fool, and there is enough in his countenance for a hue and cry to take him on suspicion; or else it is stamped in the figure of his body; their heads sometimes so little that there is no room for wit; sometimes so long, that there is no wit for so much room.

They that marry ancient people, merely in expectation to bury them hang themselves in hope that one may come and cut the halter.

Is there no way to bring home a wandering sheep but by worrying him to death?

Moderation is the silken string running through the pearl-chain of all virtues.

Let us be careful to provide rest for our souls, and our bodies will provide rest for themselves. And let us be herein like unto gentle women, who care not to keep the inside of an orange, but candy and preserve the outside.

NEW STAR ROUTE ORDER.

A Blow Struck at the Contractors Who are Known as Professional Bidders.

The Postmaster-General has long sought to obtain from Congress the right to refuse all bids for star route contracts except such as come from contractors living on or near the routes concerned. A large class of professional bidders has sprung up within the last thirty years. These men obtain contracts by the thousand and sublet them at about 50 a year less than their own proposals, a practice which makes it needlessly difficult for the Department to compel good service.

On looking into the subject recently, Second Assistant Postmaster-General Scallenberger has concluded that the Department has already the authority desired. All contracts provide that the bidder shall submit "sufficient guarantees for faithful performance," and General Schallenberger has decided that no one who lives away from the route involved can give such guarantees; accordingly a general notice was published to day announcing that no star route contracts will be awarded in the future except to contractors who live on or adjacent to the routes. This is not to apply, however, to contractors who intend to move near the route, or to the letting of a route made necessary by a failure under an existing contract. —New York Sun, Feb. 13.

New accomplishments of Shakespeare are discovered every day. Mr W. P. Atkinson, F. T. S., is lecturing upon "Theosophy According to Shakespeare." According to Mr Atkinson, Shakespeare "teaches the macrocosm of the microcosm, involution and evolution, the theosophical origin of the cosmos, the seven planes of conscious ness, and the law of karma."

J. F. Habermel, Bradford, Indiana, says: I have used almost every class of pills known to me, but never found any relief from habitual constipation and liver trouble. I bought four boxes of Ramon's Liver Pills and Tonic Pellets of an agent of the Brown Mfg Co., at Greenville Tenn. I used two boxes of the Pills and followed with the Pellets every night for thirty days, and today I am as healthy as I was twenty years ago. I will reccommend Ramon's Liver Pills and Tonic Pellets to all who who suffer with such complaints. The Pills and Pellets are a sure cure; I would not be without the Pills in my family.

Important to Mothers.

The manufacturers of Castoria have been compelled to spend hundreds of thousands of dollars to familiarize the public with the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher. This has been necessitated by reason of pirates counterfeiting the Castoria trade-mark. This counterfeiting is a crime not only against the proprietors of Castoria, but against the growing generations. All persons should be careful to see that Castoria bears the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher, if they would guard the health of their children. Parents and mothers in particular, ought to carefully examine the Castoria advertisements which have been appearing in this paper, and be remember that the wrapper of every bottle of genuine Castoria bears the facsimile signature of Chas. H. Fletcher, under whose supervision it has been manufactured continuously for over thirty years.—Public Bulletin.

Stood Death Off

E. H. Mendez, a lawyer of Hunsville, Tex., once feared a grave digger. He writes: "My brother was very low with malarial fever and jaundice. I persuaded him to try Electric Bitters, and he was much much better and continued their use until he was wholly cured. I am sure Electric Bitters saved his life. This remedy expels malaria, kills disease, gives good digestion, strength, solid flesh, and renders the body and kidneys strong and healthy. Only 50c. Guaranteed by Price & Catlett, druggists.

SMALLPOX.

Smallpox, or Variola, is one of the most formidable of the class of febrile diseases known as the Exanthemata. All cases of regular smallpox are divisible into three stages—viz. That of the initial or eruptive fever; that of the progress and maturation of the specific eruption; and that of the decline. Some writers make a primary stage of the period of incubation, or of the time intervening between the reception of the poison into the system, and the first appearance of febrile symptoms; but this is not entitled to be regarded as a stage of the disease, seeing that no symptoms of disorder have begun to show themselves. The first stage begins with rigors, followed by heat and dryness of the skin, a quickened pulse furred tongue, loss of appetite, pain in the pit of the stomach, with nausea, vomiting, headache, and often pains in the back and limbs. The violence of the pains in the back and the obstinacy of the vomiting, are frequently very well marked and characteristic symptoms. "In children the disease is often ushered in by convulsions: while delirium sometimes attends its outset in adults. On the third day minute red specs begin to come out first on the face then on the neck and wrists, and on the trunk and body, and lastly, on the lower extremities. The fever usually begins to subside as soon as the eruption appears, and by the beginning of the fifth day, when the eruption is generally completed, the fever has entirely disappeared. The second stage commences when the eruption is fully out. Upon the second or third day of the eruption a little clear lymph is seen in each pimple, which has increased considerably in size since its first appearance, and which is thus converted into a vesicle. The vesicles gradually increase in breadth and become converted into pustules which are at first depressed in the centre, but by the fifth day of the eruption become turgid and hemispherical; the suppuration on the face being complete by about the eighth day from the commencement of the fever, and the same process rapidly following in the other parts of the body in the same order of succession as that in which the eruption originally appeared. The pustules then break and scabs or crusts form over them, which usually fall off after four or five days' existence. The number of pustules in any special case and the severity of the disease stand in a direct ratio to one another; for the number of pustules indicates, in the first place, the quantity of the variolous poison which has been reproduced in the blood; and, in the second place, it is also a direct measure of the extent to which the skin suffers inflammation. Sometimes there are not more than half-a-dozen pustules; sometimes there are many thousands. If all these were collected into one, it would be an enormous phlegmon. For both these reasons, the system suffers commotion, distress, and peril in proportion to the quantity of the eruption."—Watson's Lectures.

The progress of the pustules is usually accompanied with swelling of the skin of the face, with a painful sensation of heat and tension; the scalp is often swollen; soreness of the mouth and salivation usually supervene; and the patient exhales a peculiar and disagreeable odor. About the eight or ninth day of the disease, a recurrence of the fever, known as the 'fever of maturation,' sets in with varying degrees of intensity according to the number and arrangement of the pustules. When the pustules are numerous, they run together; when they are few they keep separate. Hence the division of smallpox into the two great varieties of 'distinct' and 'confluent,' or more correctly 'discrete' and 'confluent' smallpox; and this division is of the highest importance, because the distinct form of the disease, in which the pustules are isolated, is scarcely ever dangerous, while the confluent form, in which they run together, is never free from danger. The third, or maturating stage, is the distinctive variola, little more than a period of convalescence. About the seventh or twelfth day, the pustules on the legs become brown and dry at the top, or some of them break, and the fluid which seems not unfrequently to have a yellowish cast, and from this time the process of desiccation goes on, the scabs consisting of the first pustules to ripen, or at least very early ripen, which gradually fall off about the fourteenth day. It is not till three or four days after the scabs have formed on the face that the same process is completed over the whole body. The scabs are usually completely gone by the twenty-first day, leaving behind them blotches of a reddish brown color which sometimes continue for some months before they quite disappear; and some of the pustules, in consequence of ulceration of the true skin, leave pits, especially on the the face, which remain permanently. The period of scabbing is accompanied by various symptoms of improvement: the tongue becomes clean, the appetite returns, and by the time that the scabs have fallen off the patient may be regarded as restored to health; so that the entire course of a case of distinct or discrete smallpox occupies about three weeks. In the confluent form of the disease the eruptive fever is more violent, the pain in the back is more severe, and the sickness more obstinate, and the eruption comes out earlier and less regularly than in the distinct variety which we selected for description as representing the more natural course of the disease. Moreover, the pustules do not fill so completely, nor are they of the normal yellow purulent hue, being whitish, brown, or even purple. But the most important difference between the two forms is in the secondary fever, which sets in when the pustules are maturating. This fever, which is slightly marked in distinct smallpox, is usually intense, and highly dangerous in the confluent form; and it is at this period of the disease that death most commonly occurs. Statistics show that the eight day of the eruption is the most perilous day, and the second week the most perilous week. The early occurrence of death—that is to say, during the first week—denotes a peculiar malignancy in the disease. 'The nervous system,' says Dr Watson, 'appears to be overwhelmed by the force of the poison. During the second week the disorder proves fatal chiefly in the way of apnœa, from some affection of the respiratory passages. After that period, the characters of asthenia commonly predominate, the patient sinks under some casual complication, or the powers of life are gradually worn out by so much irritation of the surface, and so large an amount of suppuration.'

The above are the essential symptoms of smallpox, both in the distinct and confluent form. This disease is, however, often accompanied by other symptoms, which merely space in notice; such as sore throat (which often depends on pustules situated there), salivation, and (in the confluent form, during the secondary fever) erysipelatous inflammation, leading to the formation of abscesses glandular swellings, sloughing sores on the sacrum, &c. In pregnant women the disease often causes abortion, which is most commonly followed by death. The dead child occasionally, but not often, is covered with pustules.

The cause of smallpox is universally allowed to be a specific contagion, of whose nature we are in the most profound ignorance. There is probably no disease so contagious as this. Dr Haygarth stated (in 1793) that during his long attention to this subject not a single instance has occurred to prove that persons liable to smallpox could associate in the same chamber with a patient in the distemper without receiving the infection; and he was informed by an American physician of an instance in which the poisonous effluvium crossed a river 1500 feet wide and effected ten out of twelve carpenters who were working on the other side. The contagion acts either through the air, or by contact with the skin, or by inoculation; and the disease may be caught by the dead body, even when it has not been touched. What products of the diseased body are contagious is not exactly known, but the contents of the pustules and the dried scabs certainly are so. Opinions are divided as to the period at which the disease begins and ceases to be contagious. It is safest to maintain that it is capable of self propagation as soon as the febrile symptoms have exhibited themselves. How soon the patient ceases to be dangerous can not be decided with accuracy, but the stability of the contagious principle may be inferred from the fact that it remains with variola in the scabs, and it is said for years when confined. Like all the contagious exanthemata, smallpox appears in an epidemic form at one time, and in our experience, it would appear more capricious in its invasion. After an extraordinary exemption, perhaps for years, it declares itself suddenly in a city, and in the course of a few months carries off numbers into the grave. Then it disappears for a time, and again returns, but in a milder form, and with a comparatively small mortality. Thus, in London, in the year 1825, 2,000 persons died of smallpox; in 1826, 1,000; in 1827, 2,000; in 1828, 1,000; in 1829, 2,000; in 1830, 1,000; in 1831, 2,000; in 1832, 1,000; in 1833, 2,000; in 1834, 1,000; in 1835, 2,000; in 1836, 1,000; in 1837, 2,000; in 1838, 1,000; in 1839, 2,000; in 1840, 1,000; in 1841, 2,000; in 1842, 1,000; in 1843, 2,000; in 1844, 1,000; in 1845, 2,000; in 1846, 1,000; in 1847, 2,000; in 1848, 1,000; in 1849, 2,000; in 1850, 1,000; in 1851, 2,000; in 1852, 1,000; in 1853, 2,000; in 1854, 1,000; in 1855, 2,000; in 1856, 1,000; in 1857, 2,000; in 1858, 1,000; in 1859, 2,000; in 1860, 1,000; in 1861, 2,000; in 1862, 1,000; in 1863, 2,000; in 1864, 1,000; in 1865, 2,000; in 1866, 1,000; in 1867, 2,000; in 1868, 1,000; in 1869, 2,000; in 1870, 1,000; in 1871, 2,000; in 1872, 1,000; in 1873, 2,000; in 1874, 1,000; in 1875, 2,000; in 1876, 1,000; in 1877, 2,000; in 1878, 1,000; in 1879, 2,000; in 1880, 1,000; in 1881, 2,000; in 1882, 1,000; in 1883, 2,000; in 1884, 1,000; in 1885, 2,000; in 1886, 1,000; in 1887, 2,000; in 1888, 1,000; in 1889, 2,000; in 1890, 1,000; in 1891, 2,000; in 1892, 1,000; in 1893, 2,000; in 1894, 1,000; in 1895, 2,000; in 1896, 1,000; in 1897, 2,000; in 1898, 1,000; in 1899, 2,000; in 1900, 1,000.

A Night of Terror.

"Awful anxiety was felt for the widow of the late Governor Buckham of Machias, Me., when three sons said she would die from pneumonia before morning," writes R. H. Lincoln who attended her fearful night, but she begged Dr King's New Discovery, which gave more than once saved her husband from consumption. After taking, she slept all night, their son entirely cured her." Marvelous medicine is guaranteed to cure all Throat, Chest and Lung Diseases. Only 50c and $1. Trial bottles free at Sharp & Mc. The demand for Missouri mules for British army in South Africa continues unabated according to the City Journal in the small way Indiana in the past two weeks has taken averaged nearly $1 per day and a similar supply in this market is expected from every part of the state.

The disease spontaneously d years dies out, as it were does not reappear perhaps for Different epidemics vary much in their severity, and i ed cases are usually milder those occurring when the di is epidemic. Race has much with the severity of the dis the constitution of the dark the Negro and the Red Indi ing singularly susceptible o contagion, and exhibiting ver tle power of resisting the tendency of the disease.

It is universally admitted Discovery of Vaccination which smallpox is deprived danger, is the greatest triumph modern medicine." Inocul protected the individual, be created rather than diminishe total number of deaths, while cination has the advantage of tecting both the individual the community. Altho in the majority of cases vaccinatio fords perfect protection ag smallpox, it not very unfreq happens that vaccinated per when exposed to the contagio smallpox, get the disease in a fied form, milder and shorter than after inoculation, and t fore incomparably milder tha the natural form. The disc occurring under these cir stances has received the va names of modified or post-vac smallpox, or the varioloid dis As Dr Wood observes: "It i possible to describe minutely the shapes which the varioloid case assumes. There is every s between the slightest sympt scarcely recognizable as ha any affinity with smallpox, the nearest possible approac the regular disease." In what form the variolod disease app it wants the peculiar odor of m pox, and secondary fever is rare. The constitutional dist ances which, for the first w may have been as severe as in true disease, usually subsides tirely when the eruption has re ed its height, and the patie convalescent at the period w if he had not been vaccinated would have been in the great danger.

The history of this remark disease is clothed in considera obscurity. There is no evid that it was known to the Gree Arabian writers of the fifth cen and the first accurate descrip of it is that of Rhazes, an Ara physician, who flourished earl the 10th century. It appears have reached England towards close of the 9th century. A the Crusades, it prevailed in w of the Temperate countries of rope, but did not reach the m ern countries of Norway, Lapl &c., for some time later. In I it was carried from Europe to Domingo, and three years lat reached Mexico, where it com ted fearful devastation, and wh it spread with immense virul throughout the New World. cording to Robertson, three lions and a half of people were stroyed in Mexico, alone.) In 07, it was introduced into Irel when more than a fourth par the whole population fell vict to it, and it reached Greenl still later, in 1733, when it sp so fatally as almost depopulate country. These cases are strik illustrations of the law that se universally true, that a contag disease is always most virulen its first introduction to a new s of action.—Chambers Encyclop dia.

Entered at the post-office at Marlinton, W. Va., as second class matter.

M. J. McNeel, of Mill Point, announces himself for Commissioner of the County Court this week. He is eminently a fit man for the position and was so regarded by the number of prominent men who have been instumental in bringing him out.

In regard to the county commissioner it is Edray district's turn, if rotation of districts is to be considered, but a canvass of the district in which most of the available men were approached has so far not discovered anyone who is willing to accept the position. As the county court meets in Edray district it can probably afford to let the commissioners be chosen from other districts better than any other.

In re of County politics we have often heard of certain men being able to control other votes than their own. This is too broad a statement. Such a man may have a wide political influence and be able to make or mar a candidate, (most generally to mar one however,) but no man can say that he controls any vote except his own. Suppose he were to name the voter he is most certain of. Then the searcher after truth would go to that man and say: "The Hon. A. B. says he controls your vote. Is that so?" Then the voter would swear that no man controlled his vote, and any power that politician might have had over that man is gone.

YOU CAN DO GOOD!

You can can help a good cause along and also be paid for it in the following way. Wrap neatly and securely any clo'h bound book of 125 pages or more (it may be an old school book if not torn) and mail it to the Fruitdale Seminary, at Fruitdale, Ala., as a contribution to the library. It will be thankfully received and they will, in return for your kindness, send you an excellent little paper a whole year and six curious shells from the Gulf Mexico, to us alike.

THE SOUTH-WESTERN.

I have lately taken a policy in the South Western with Mr Echols for Two Thousand Dollars, will state frankly that I consider it the best home-owned company of which I have any knowledge. I have Thirteen thousand in other companies that I would be glad to exchange for a similar amount of the South Western as I feel not excited these policies in the other companies too long to move such a considerable portion.

FROST.

Cold weather.

John Tacy died at the camp Friday night last, of pneumonia.

James Gragg's wife, near this place, has been dangerously ill for the past ten days. Dr Cunningham of your town was up in consultation with Dr Jordan. She is some better at this time.

Mrs Jennie Williams is still growing worse. Her friends have given up all hopes of her recovery.

Peyton Moore has changed his occupation from the measles to clerking, and is now in the store of Hannah & Harper, where he is kept busy. This firm deserves their patronage which their fair and honest dealing have won for them.

Clark Gum and family made another trip to Highland to visit his sick mother. We are happy to state that she is slowly recovering.

James A. Reed, who was a frequent visitor to our town, has discontinued coming. He has an 8-pound boy and is now taking his time up singing, "Bye oh, baby!"

Born to Mr and Mrs Harry Guinn a fine girl. Harry is seen no more at the stores. Mother and child doing well.

Ed Spitzer, our prominent merchant, is down with measles.

Rev Pullins preached a very interesting sermon here Sunday last. He will soon be off for Conference, and it is hoped that he may be returned back to us. He is a promising young man, and wherever he may be sent we wish him God's speed.

There are plenty of widows and bachelors in this section; but, Mr Editor, they always remind us of —hotel soap!

We have right here a lady who truthfully says that she is sweet sixteen and has never been kissed. We heard of a Rev gentleman who was accused of kissing two girls and was voted "angelic"; what would you vote this young lady?

John Jackson made our little village a social call Wednesday last.

A great many of our young gentlemen and ladies "tipped their light fantastic toes" at John Cleek's eight miles below here, Wednesday night last.

Upton and Clifton Sharp are said to have the mumps.

Mrs Hannah and daughter Icy have been right sick, but we are glad to report them much better.

Mrs S. P. Sheets and little daughter who have been visiting Highland spent a few days here among relatives on her return home near Hunterville.

Mrs Clark Gum and Mrs S. P. Sheets spent a pleasant day at the hospitable home of Mr Samuel Curry Thursday last.

TIP.

FROST.

People are preparing for sugar making.

Mrs James Gragg has been quite ill for some time, but is improving at present.

Rev Pullen delivered an able sermon at this place Sunday.

C. C. Sharp came home from Lee's camp Saturday.

There will be a game of football here Saturday.

The oranges and meadow are plentiful in this part.

Mrs T. J. Williams is no better.

We want John A. Moore for Sheriff if we can get him.

OLD SHOTS.

A very pleasant remedy for the relief of rheumatism, whether acute or not, is taken from the Lithuine will relieve it. The effect of this remedy is immediate and permanent. Any druggist will tell you of its merits.

Correspondence from Weston.

W. VA. HOSPITAL,
Weston, W. Va.
Feb. 14, 1900.

The Pocahontas Times,

Gentlemen—As a Valentine, I will send you a postal money order for two dollars, which pays my arrearages on subscription to date, and until October next, and I also want to include in my renewal the five year subscription to the Farm Journal, as per your offer in The Times. Send the Journal to A. M. Kee, Marlinton.

The Times is quite a source of pleasure each week to me, as it brings to my mind many persons that I am acquainted with, and brings me the doings of the people in general.

We are quarantined against smallpox here, and it is lonesome and disagreeable to be penned up without any access to the outside. There is only one case of smallpox so far in Weston, but of course the family of the patient will be afflicted, and it may be some time before the quarantine is raised.

There are several cases west of here about fifteen miles, also cases at Glenville, Gilmer County, and at Smithville, Ritchie County, at Mt Clare, Harrison County, at Buckhannon, but the local authorities at Buckhannon strenuously deny that there is any smallpox there. It seems to be scattered over nearly all of this part of the State, as there are pretty reliable reports of smallpox in all the following named counties: Monongalia, Harrison, Upshur, Lewis, Gilmer, Ritchie, Braxton, and Webster, and reports, but not absolutely reliable, from Marion, Doddridge, and Calhoun.

I have only heard of one fatality so far, that was a Mr Bennet at Glenville. He was a lawyer.

The latest report gives Buckhannon 30 to 35 cases of smallpox, and the local authorities there have acknowledged that it is smallpox that they have. Camden-on-Gauley has 12 to 15 cases.

Very respectfully,
O. HUNTER KEE.

[Mr Kee is employed as a guard at the Weston Hospital.—Editor.]

The following letter is from Mrs Bessie Shafer, a patient of the hospital, who will soon it is hoped be able to return to her home near Mill Point in this county.

Editor Pocahontas Times:

We are having plenty of rain and mud here this winter.

We are all having our health good this winter, except the bad colds, and some of the doctors and attendants are suffering with their vaccinated arms, but I do not think any of these cases are dangerous at present.

We certainly have fine doctors and attendants here. They are so good and kind to all.

I am so glad my health and mind is improving so nicely. I certainly do appreciate the kind and good doctors for saving my life, for I did think at one time I never would have the pleasure of reaching my dear old home and loved ones again. But I think if my health keeps so good, I will be at home once again and enjoy the pleasures of this life once more.

I am so anxious to see my dear friends and schoolmates again, that I have spent many happy hours with both at school and church, for I know they are as anxious to see me as I to see them; and I know and feel within my heart that they have been praying for me that I would get well and be able to come home once more, and I know their prayer, as well as mine, will be answered.

BESSIE SHAFFER.

DUNMORE.

Fou teen below zero Tuesday morning.

No small pocks but lots of measles. K. D. Sweeker and Miss Lucy Baxter are able to be up.

Miss Sallie Taylor has returned home.

Several of the camp men are at home.

SUNSTROKE in Battle.

J. L. SPENCER,

of Platteville, Wis., formerly of Co. G, 37th Wisconsin Infty., has suffered many years from the result of a sunstroke. He has found relief and desires to tell his story for the good of other veterans. He says:

"At Petersburg I was sunstruck and carried off the field for dead. Later rheumatism of my heart developed as a result and physicians failed to benefit me. In the spring of '95 I began using Dr. Miles' Heart Cure and Dr. Miles' Nervine and now my health is better than for 30 years before."

DR. MILES' Heart Cure

Local Events.

Good morning! Have you used vaccine virus this morning?

J. W. Malcomb of Greenbrier county made his annual visit to Pocahontas last week.

If you need a pair of genuine, A A Cutter shoes call on A. Harrison & Co. They keep them.

George W. Callison of Academy and Samuel Sheets of Dunmore were in Marlinton last Saturday.

A plague of measles is universal in this county. Happy is he who buried this sorrow with other ills of his childhood.

The Methodist church is being fitted up with furniture. A 500 pound bell is on the ground ready to be put in place.

A case of small-pox developed near Millboro Depot Monday and a strict quarantine has been established by the rest of Bath County against that point.

Public school in East Marlinton closed last Friday. Prof. Morris and Miss H. A. Yeager teachers. So far as we can hear the patrons have been much pleased with their teaching.

Several persons who traveled in Bath County last week with health certificates found no place in which they could eat and sleep in the county. A Millboro wagon was turned back at the top of the mountain. We feel sorry for Bath, for to be scared to death is worse than the plague.

The Marlinton Academy, though closed on the account of supposed smallpox in E. E. Camp No. 2, will resume work again as soon as this scourge has passed. A notice will appear later in the Times stating time of beginning, rates of tuition and board, &c.

The Golden store watches the market very closely all the time. A large part of the business you do is of selling people low priced things about as better goods, and have in that manner to sell the better class ordinarily priced. The advertisements take special notice with them because they are the people from which they take their profits. Special bargains of all kinds have just been received and will be sold at about one-fourth the price you would have to pay for the same quality in the rest of the town and to friend at the Golden Store.

The Launching of the Pocahontas.

Smith & Whiting sent a couple of their employees down the river to cut away some of the drift timber which would interfere with their driving logs. They came to Marlinton and made a very neat boat, pitching it within and without, and were preparing to slip away in an unostentatious way, when some of the boarders at the Marlinton House decided that the boat must be launched in style.

A crowd gathered at the bridge in spite of the storm. Senator McNeel made a speech and Miss Mary Yeager broke a large bottle of good red wine over the bow and said, "I christen thee the Pocahontas." The hitch occurred in the proceedings when it was found that the bottle would not break against the soft wood of the boat. One of the lumbermen held his cant-hook so that the bottle could be broken. When the bottle was broken a wail went up from some of the spectators, who cried that that was carrying the joke too far.

The local Society for the Support and Maintenance of Oppulent Liquor Dealers handed in the following set of resolutions:

Whereas, on Saturday, February 11, 1900, a small boat was launched at the Greenbrier Bridge, during very inclement weather, and whereas on that occasion a large bottle of wine was broken over the front end of the boat and the contents wasted, be it resolved:

That it is the sense of this society that such action was wasteful, extravagant, and uncalled for; that all such practices be condemned, and that hereafter we unite to change the practice of christening boats to the more sensible form of drinking the contents and breaking the bottle on the bow of the boat

Given under our hands and sealed with the great seals of our order Want, Wretchedness and Crime, this 18th day of February, at 3 o'clock a. m.

A Correction.

The following item appeared in our last issue from the Green Hill correspondent:

"Mr Jimmie Bartley met with a serious accident on 28th inst. As many as a half-dozen girls kicked him."

We received a call from Mr Jas. Barclay this week at which time he asked us to correct the above as it is wholly false.

HO! BILL!

Bill, if any of your folks wants to buy a small piece of land, say six hundred and seventy acres, well timbered, and lying within less than a mile of the railroad building up Greenbrier river, for $3.00 per acre, just call on J. R. Apperson, as below. But if you want to move to town and be a gentleman I will sell you a first-class lot for $250 in Block 18 lot 8. For further information you can call or write to J. R. APPERSON, Marlinton, W. Va.

February 15, 1900.

Cecil H. Gum is learning the printing trade in this office.

Frank King has been housed with the measles for a week or so.

Mrs Rachel Gibson and sister Mrs Lizzie Hall, near Marlinton, are sick with measles.

The British under Roberts took five Boer laagers and are now drunk success.

Died, last Thursday, James McClure, an aged citizen of Edray district. Obituary next week.

The mail from Bencevert for a week or so has been very irregular. Any delay in receiving this paper is due to this cause.

George W. McClintic, who spent a week in this county, went out to the Hot Springs Thursday.

Dr Lockridge's four children have all had the measles. The youngest took double pneumonia and was very ill.

Lucas Moore, from Hayes, Webster County, was at Marlinton last week as agent for a publishing house.

The O'Connor residence on Anthony's Creek was recently burned, nothing saved and no insurance. It was noted as one of the most elegant country residences in Greenbrier County.

Colonel R. S. Tuck of Staunton, accompanied by a real estate man from Roanoke, a Mr Smith, was in Marlinton last week and escaped into Bath county just as that county closed its doors against us.

Vaccination need not be severe. Under the mildest genuine a healthy state sets on many arms are considered abnormal. The patient may be well protected and feel but the effects of the virus.

A CASE OF SMALL-POX.

The Disease Makes Its Appearance but is Apparently under Control.

A case of small-pox developed in Camp No. 3, of John L. Pitts, five miles above Marlinton, last week, and as usual in sporadic cases, a number of persons were exposed to the disease before it was recognized as small-pox. Prompt and efficient action on the part of the Board of Health has so isolated the suspects that even through the disease develops in those who have been exposed, with the co-operation of the public, the disease may be kept from spreading.

The business interests of the county must necessarily suffer to some extent from the "scare" which has prevailed for a week or so, but the depression is more due to the inclemmency of the weather and the impassable condition of the roads. The only thing to do is to keep cool and go about our business as usual. If any person desires to be practically immune from the disease he should be vaccinated. The greatest element of danger to this section is in the small per cent of the people who have been vaccinated.

The camp where the case originated is situated at the old Harper place on Greenbrier River, the old buildings at that place being used. Captain Munday, a Virginian, is in charge of the camp. They were *working about 150 men. A fore*man by the name of Rousey, a white man, from Fluvanna County Virginia, returned from Lynchburg in January, and in about four weeks developed the disease. Dr Brown is the camp doctor and on Wednesday, the 14th inst. the seventh day of the course of the disease reported it to the County Board of Health. He is a very capable physician, but never having seen a case of small-pox he was late in reporting it. Within three hours from the time the Board of Health was apprised of the fact a most effectual quarantine was established around the infected spot and no pains were spared to keep the disease from spreading.

Unfortunately some of the men who were working in camp got information of the contagion before the authorities did, and they left for home on the sixth day of the disease. They live several hundred miles away and do not endanger the health of this section by leaving. Not having been in the building with the patient they cannot be considered specially dangerous. Anyway they are gone and the county at large cannot be blamed for their escape. On Tuesday ten or fifteen of them passed down Browns Creek. The writer was in a buggy and was driving up behind them very rapidly. When they saw the buggy coming they took to the thick woods on the upper side of the road and disappeared running. Their strange actions remained a mystery for twenty-four hours. On Wednesday night some of the men in Camp No 2, who had had no chance for the disease, crept between the guards and got away, being fired upon by the guards. They were returned from Bath the next day.

The two camps are about four miles apart. There is no communication between the two except that the Superintendent L. A. Hankins and the Walking Boss Butler ride from one camp to the other. Camp No 3 was quarantined and a second line of guards placed between Marlinton and Camp No 2, which is about a mile above Marlinton. No one in the camp except Messrs Hankins and Butler had been to Camp No 3 and their foremen intimated to the Board that their room was preferable to their company. The Board suggested to Mr Butler that he take up his abode in Camp No 3. Mr Butler said they would take him there dead. The Board then built the two gentlemen a comfortable house where they will remain until the danger is over.

The Board of Health is composed of the following gentlemen: Dr J. M. Cunningham, president, L. M. McClintic, Amos Barlow, E. N. Moore, and Levi Gay. A meeting was held on Thursday at which all the members were present. The three gentlemen who live at Marlinton gave their entire attention to the task of organizing and effective quarantine and succeeded admirably. Anthony B. Kincaid, of Marlinton, afforded very efficient help from the first and was appointed to look after the guards.

Ingress and egress is not permitted to any point within a mile of Camp No 2, or into or from Camp No 2. The guards have had instructions to afford them shelter and a strict watch is kept day and night. No railroad hands are allowed to enter or leave camp. The three physicians in Marlinton, Edray or Hillsboro, which would be a fine field for practice, are under strict quarantine and no exception was or will be given on account of a direct quarantine is maintained against all Bath County.

It should be generally understood that the small-pox epidemic at Hendricks had never reached beyond the railroad camps. It was not known to the people of Hendricks that there was small-pox in the camps. Small-pox is not so dangerous a disease. What causes the panic wherever a case appears is its loathsomeness and the fact that it is so terribly contagious. Vaccination is regarded as the greatest triumph of medical science. A new era dawned for the world when it was discovered. The small-pox is prevailing in the north-western counties of this State, where there has been one death, that of Hon. Nelson M. Bennett, a lawyer of Glenville and president of the Gilmer County Bank. He with a number of other lawyers took the deposition of a man named Bush, who afterwards broke out with the disease. There is a great discussion going on as to whether the disease is small pox or the "Phillipino itch." It seems more probable that the Phillipino itch is simply another name for small pox. Small-pox broke out in the heart of Lewisburg a few years go and nearly all the members of one family had it, but the disease did not spread, and no lasting injury resulted to the town on account of *the quarantine and panic. Staun*ton had 120 cases some years ago but the disease was confined to one section of the town and stamped out. In a thinly settled country like this with proper precautions, such as the Board of Health has taken, and with the watchfulness they are exercising there is no need for alarm.

Miss Annie Hannah's school at Slaty Fork closed Friday the 9th inst. She gave an entertainment which was attended by the largest crowd ever seen at a school entertainment in this part. Even some of the veterans of Manassas Junction and Gettysburg were present. There was abundant dinner on the ground and the spectators fared sumptuously. Everyone was highly pleased with the entertainment and the only complaint heard was that the hour of four came too soon.—Miss Hannah taught a good school; scholars six years old, unacquainted with the alphabet, can now read well in the first reader after three months attendance.

EDRAY.

The measles are still with us. Some have been quite sick, but all seem to be coming though all right

We are greatly excited about the small-pox in this vicinity. Some of our citizens think we ought to be quarantined as well as Marlinton.

Some people in this section are offering the "Life of Daught L. Moody." This is a book that will sell doubtless. The book written by Mr Moody's son W. R. Moody is preferable. The profits on this book will go towards the benefit of Mr Moody's Endowment Fund.

Miss May Moore passed through Edray Tuesday on her rounds selling books. She has the agency for several books and seems to be doing a fair business at least. We hope she will do well.

J. F. Dilley of Laurel Creek, has been very sick for nearly a month. Last accounts from him we learn that he is recovering slowly.

Business seems somewhat dull since the small-pox scare got among us. The people keep close at home and all is quiet except talk of alarming that awful disease. Only a few of our citizens seem to have courage enough to go to Marlinton.

SALT RHEUM CURED BY Johnston's Sarsaparilla

QUART BOTTLES.

JUST SEEN IN TIME.

Slight Skin Eruptions are a Warning of Something More Serious to Come. The Only Safe Way is to Heed the Warning—Johnston's Sarsaparilla Is the Most Powerful Blood Purifier Known.

Nature, in her efforts to correct mistakes, which mistakes have come from careless living, or it may be from ancestors, shoots out pimples, blotches and other imperfections on the skin, as a warning that more serious troubles (perhaps tumors, cancers, erysipelas or pulmonary diseases) are certain to follow if you neglect to heed the warning and correct the mistakes.

Many a lingering, painful disease and many an early death has been avoided simply because the first notice of warning have been heeded and the blood kept pure by a right use of JOHNSTON'S SARSAPARILLA.

Miss Abbie J. Randle, of Marshall, Mich., writes:—

"I was cured of a bad humor after suffering with it for five years. The doctors and my friends said it was salt rheum. It came out on my head, neck and ears, and then on my whole body. I was perfectly raw with it. What I suffered during those five years, is no use telling. Nobody would believe me if I did. I tried every medicine that was advertised to cure it. I spent money enough to buy a home. I heard JOHNSTON'S SARSAPARILLA highly praised. I tried a bottle of it. I began to improve right away, and when I had finished the third bottle I was completely cured. I have never had a touch of it since. I never got any thing to do me the least good till I tried JOHNSTON'S SARSAPARILLA. I would heartily advise all who are suffering from humors or skin disease of any kind to try it at once. I had also a good deal of stomach trouble, and was run down and miserable, but JOHNSTON'S SARSAPARILLA made me all right."

The blood is your life and if you keep it pure and strong you can positively resist disease or face contagion fearlessly. JOHNSTON'S SARSAPARILLA never fails. It is for sale by all druggists in full quart bottles at only one dollar each.

ONE STREET BEGGAR.

He Lives in a Handsome Residence and Owns a Block.

John Carr has been a beggar on the streets of this city for the past quarter of a century. Today he is a very wealthy man, the owner of beautiful East End property and a valuable block in another part of the city. All this was accumulated from the pennies, nickels and dimes daily dropped into his hat by the charitable people who were moved to pity by the sight that dangled from his breast, "I am Blind." Recently Carr, under the name of Terrance O'Mara, was a prisoner at police headquarters charged with violating a city ordinance. When arrested $61.85 was found upon him, not an uncomfortable roll for a "beggar."

There is no doubt according to the police, that Carr is one of the most successful beggars of the age. It seems almost incredible that a street beggar should live in a palatial East End residence, with all the luxuries that go with it, unobserved by others. But that is just what Carr does. The story of Carr and his life since he became a beggar is a most remarkable one. When under arrest some time ago he, in a burst of confidence, told it.

Some years ago, when he was in the best of health and enjoying the use of his eyes, he was made a beggar by accident. It was a real one. He was walking the streets out of work and thoroughly disgusted with his lot. Becoming tired he sat down upon a stoop to rest. He took off his hat and was mopping the perspiration from his brow. At this juncture a kindly disposed pedestrian passed by, seeing Carr he took compassion upon him. Carr at this time had no thought of becoming a beggar, but when he put his hat upon his head a ticket silver quarter rolled upon the ground. This started him to thinking.

From that time until to-day Carr has been a professional beggar.

He has been arrested numerous times, and was never taken into custody without a roll being found upon him. On one occasion $300 was taken from an inside pocket. Three times amounts aggregating a total of $75 were discovered. If Carr should ever be found at the police station without a large sum of money on him the officials would be greatly surprised.

Not long ago he was arrested by Officer Robert Smith at Seventh avenue and Smithfield street. His object ed vigorously to being taken into custody. Some of those who had witnessed the arrest declared it a shame that a poor blind man should not be allowed to make a living. They did not know what they were talking about. At the station house Carr refused having anything of value on him, but Sergeant Sterck discovered the money. Carr left a forfeit for his appearance this morning and has run an East End car for his home in order to get there in time for his 6 o'clock dinner. —Pittsburg Post.

CHRISTIANITY IN BUSINESS.

Its Principles Applied Would Work a Glorious Revolution.

"There is not the least question that as the commercial world is organized and run to-day it is run at a fearful loss along the side of money," writes Rev. Charles M. Sheldon, author of "In His Steps," in the Ladies' Home Journal. "Even the rules of success that business men lay down do not insure success. Perhaps they are not equaled this for disturbance and unrest and warring interests in the business world. But the principles of Christianity were applied to the whole business world it would cause a shock that for the time being would result in what might prove to be the greatest financial panic of the ages. But out of that result would emerge a new order of buying and selling that would result ultimately in more financial success on the part of more people than the world has ever witnessed. Ultimately love will pay in dollars and cents better than selfishness. On selfish principles the business world today does not succeed even in the matter of making money—that is, not for any length of time nor for the masses of the people. Love in business would lose less money, and actually distribute the real earnings of toil among a far greater number of human beings, than is possible now under the present system."

Cost Of a Church Carpet.

"The Chicago Advance" gives the following estimate of the direct and collateral cost of a church carpet. The price was $800 but as the women of the church raised the money by giving entertainments the pastor's estimate was that when all the items of cost was figured in the carpet had cost fifty $1,000. He reached this astonishing total by estimating the work, worry, nervous strain, bodily weariness and heartaches of the hard working women, the heroic efforts of men, women and children to eat the things which were to be eaten, and hear, see or buy things which had been provided to extract money from them; the colds, fevers and other ailments contracted while attending the entertainments, and the consequent doctors' bills; the money spent in other churches, for if they came to your entertainments you found it out, and, worst and most costly of all, the demoralization of the church and the entrenchment of the legitimate giving which follow the train of such methods of raising money. But they got their carpet.

Matrimony on the Move.

A unique wedding occurred in one of the suburbs of Columbus when Thomas Smith and Miss Libbie Satchet, young people of East Highlands, were married on a street car. The preacher was to wed them, the first of the season, and on the day of marrying to meet an appointment, and did not have time to leave the car. Accordingly the ceremony was performed on a car at Wildwood Park. The young people stood up in the car and the whole car participated in the ceremony by the presence of the passengers. The marriage was followed by congratulations all the way around as the passengers bowed their heads and the car rocked to and fro and the car whizzed through space. It was not a runaway match, for the couple had their parents' consent, and the car was chartered by the pastor at his home in Flint as it approached. Atlanta Constitution.

A Popular Reader.

Will Carleton tells a humorous story. Recently, out in Illinois, Bookseller Arnold sold all the copies of Carleton's poems he had in stock. Later Bookseller Clarke, also in Illinois, sold all the copies he had in stock. Then Carleton sold a few copies himself. Then Arnold sold all he had in stock. Then Clarke sold all

The growth of the University is quite as notable in its equipment, its faculty, and its new departments as in its attendance. For example, look at

established two years ago. It has a faculty of seven instructors, trained under the best teachers in this country and Europe. It occupies a separate building fitted up especially for its needs. Instruction on all stringed instruments, including violin, viola, mandolin, guitar, etc., is free. For voice and piano the fees are very low. A magnificent pipe organ for Commencement Hall is being constructed and it will be for the use of students of the School of Music. If you are interested in the study of music, write for full information.

Other departments of the University are developing with equal rapidity. The Premedical Department, with its four new instructors, deserves special mention. Write for a special pamphlet about it.

The University has a faculty of sixty-five instructors, graduates of the foremost schools in the world.

The Winter Quarter begins January 1, and the Spring Quarter April 1.

Said Files, on parade.
"You'll soon find out, you bloomin bloke,"
The color sergeant said.

For they've routed Tommy Atkins
And they've chased him off the kop.
For they've fanned his hair with bullets,
And they've fairly made him hop.
If you listen for a moment
You can hear their rifles pop,
For they're chasin' Tommy Atkins

Odds and Ends.

Thoughts on Edward Markham.

When Edward Markham wrote the "Man with the Hoe," a poem requiring a woodcut reproduction of a great painting, and thereby stumping the country papers, the great Disregarders of the laws concerning copyrights, we bowed down and published his poem as worthy to be printed in space not needed for some local observation

But now that Mr Markham is going down into his barrel for copy and is putting on the market any old rubbish, we have lost a great deal of our admiration for the villifier of the agriculturist. Most of newly unearthed poets have the decency to make their lines rhyme and regard with envy those who are able to market their blank verse for more than the finished product. Markham slings a few disjointed sentences together, collects cabligram rates and waits for the next invoice.

If a Philadelphia publisher had ordered a poem on "a Sorrel Mule," for instance, he would have been supplied by return mail with something like the following, for which we unhappily cannot find bidders at any price:

THE SORREL MULE.

The color of the sky at sunset—or of leaves
Just tinged with autumn's splendid hue;
A mane like grass which bows before the scythe,
And bristles on his tail like stubble fields;
His voice the deep hoarse bellow of the sea;
Tolerance and equity were seated in his stein,
And in his heels is where Jove's lightning sat.
He mused and meditated, paused awhile,
And flicked an insect from his deep — scared side.
And grazed upon the herbage round his feet.
Oh hybrid! twenty centuries are bond in thee;
Fleet Arabs spurning dew upon the plains;
Wild asses ramping on the Grampian Hills;
While you will plow the furrows of the field.
A speed unped until into oblivion
There sinks with you the fame of your race.
Oh mule! Oh mule! Oh ineffectual blend!
What deep significance we find in this.

He Who Hesitates.

The aphorism that who hesitates is lost is applicable to the candidate especially. We have known men who were nominated by a majority of the electors to be the proper men for certain places, but who could not make up their minds to run until the ticket was made up. The amateur politicians then found himself crowded out. The kind and considerate friends who urge him to make quite sure and take each day until he withdrew, and as a possibility. It does not do to cast a wistful eye as you stand shivering on the brink of a political Jordan, fearing to launch away.

The people of the couple at the post office pretty well. Once every four years the pool of politics is troubled. If by an angel it is one of the dark kind. And when that pool is troubled it means that one only can be elected. There have been a good many waiting for the pool to be troubled to step down, but while they were coming a more active man steps in before them, and they have to wait another four years or so, and it has often happened that men who fully intended to serve their country grow old and die without having fed from the public crib.

Mail Carriers.

The decisive action taken by the 2nd Assistant Postmaster General under which he will not accept bids from syndicates or anyone for a star route mail contract who does not live near the route will meet with decided approval all over the country.

Of late years when the mail routes of this section were to be let to contract the notices were posted in the postoffices here, but they attracted but little attention for it was a foregone conclusion that some foreigner would bid it in at a starvation price, and come on here to look for a subcontractor to take it at something less than the bid.

The agent was accustomed to search the country over for someone whose necessity was such that he would accept the contract in hope of eking out the pitiful sum he received with money made as a common carrier.

Very often a good service would be given but usually the mail-boys are poorly paid and the stock on the mail route are sorry specimens of horse-flesh.

This is called a rich and glorious country and it is too bad that the star routes which form a network all over the country should so badly represent a government in comfortable circumstance.

We can imagine a Continental tourist describing the great and glorious United States by giving a description of the equipage and appearance of William McKinley's mails as they are carried in the country. Then the foreign reader would image if the goverment employees were like this, that the common people must be very stretched indeed.

During the past winter the contractor on the route from Lewisburg to Marlinton struggled hard to get the mails through and succeeded for awhile by starting at Lewisburg about 11 a. m. and reaching Marlinton the next morning between midnight and day.

Judge Van Wick's Platform.

To make the Democracy triumphant we have only to convince the people that it will give:

First. Honesty and economy in the administration of the Government, National and State.

Second. Taxation for the payment of the legitimate expenses and liabilities of the Government, and not for gratuities.

Third. The repeal of laws lending the taxing power to monopolies, giving them special privileges to the exclusion of the many.

Fourth. Enactment of equitable tariff laws.

Fifth. That quasi-public corporations, like railroads, gas, and electric companies, in consideration of the rights acquired under the right of eminent domain, must be made to impartially subserve the interest of the public.

Sixth. The general business of the country must be protected against the dangerous influence of monopolies fostered by unjust laws.

Seventh. That such sure protection will be extended to the property rights of all as will invite and deserve the confidence of the general business interests of the country.

Eighth. The equitable restraint of such mammoth trusts which destroy competition, restraining the fields of employment and individual effort—making this a nation of servants.

Ninth. That American citizens shall be treated justly and fairly in every part of American territory.

Tenth. That our country shall keep clear of entangling alliances with all nations to the end that we may live in peace with all and shall not be involved in their controversies, in many cases the result of race prejudices of centuries.

PAN-AMERICAN EMBLEM.

The Beautiful Design Which So Tastefully Typifies the Exposition's Purpose.

The beautiful emblem which the Publicity Committee of the Pan-American Exposition, which will be held at Buffalo during the summer months of 1901, has adopted, was the work of Raphael Beck, a Lockport artist, whose design was by all conceded to be the most beautiful and comprehensive of the four handed and odd drawings which were submitted.

To judge of the merits of the various designs submitted for the emblem, the Publicity Committee of the Pan-American Exposition appointed a committee of three artists, whose duty it was to pass upon the merits of the various designs submitted for the purpose of the Pan-American Exposition. The committee was instructed to be guided by the progress that has been made by the people of the Western world during the fleeting century, and was to bring about closer trade and social relations between all the peoples of the Americas.

Nothing could more beautifully express the idea of a binding together of the people of the North, Central, and Southern divisions of the western hemisphere than Mr Beck's picture, which shows the sweet-faced nymph of North America smiling a welcome as she looks down and extends a snowy arm across the Isthmus of Yucatan in greeting to her sweet-faced sister of the South, who by the way, seems fully as eager to clasp the extended hand and do her share in the effort to bind together the North and South in the holy bonds of an All American sisterhood.

Buffalo, N. Y., February.

COPYRIGHT, 1899, BY PAN-AMERICAN EXPOSITION CO.

The Court of the Machinery and Transportation Building of the Pan American Exposition, which will be held at Buffalo, N. Y., on the Niagara Frontier, during the summer months of the year 1901, presents an interesting treatment of cloister work. The Machinery and Transportation Building itself forms a hollow square, with this Court in its centre. It is 200 feet long and 100 feet wide, the east and west ends opening respectively to the great entrances from the Grand Canal and the Court of the Fountains, while the great exhibiting rooms of the Mall side of the building, and the two exhibition rooms and great entrance court from the Court of the Fountains side of the building, lie on either side. Along each side of this court, and extending the entire length, are roof-covered arcades under which the visitor may find rest on the comfortable benches.

The pool itself is 175 feet long and 27 feet wide. It is placed in the centre of the Court. The bank is sodded and planted on all sides, forming a pleasing frame or border effect; the water is low so as to receive the reflection of the growth around the pool.

The fountain is an important [illegible] pool, and giving life to the scene and freshness to the atmosphere. Throughout the Court are pleasant walks and paths, bordered with low-growing shrubbery and plants, and at intervals at axis-points with the arcades, rare plants are placed in great vases, making a truly architectural landscape effect. The entire scheme gives the effect of an admirable enclosure of a mission cloister, and is planned as one of the many little oases for the refreshment of the weary sightseer.

WHAT WOULD JESUS DO?

One of the most pleasant things now in evidence is the interest that seems awakened as to what our Lord would do were he a citizen of Pocahontas and had to meet the duties and responsibilities that such citizenship implies, on the part of those who would like to know and do whatever is right.

A few weeks since while the writer was being entertained at a very pleasant home, some one passing the road called out. The proprietor responded by going to the door, and peering into the darkness inquired what was wanted. The party politely asked permission to sleep in the barn. This was readily granted, with the proviso there were no matches in his pockets. The wayfarer emphatically disclaimed having anything of the kind about him.

The proprietor came back to the fireside circle and assumed a solemn expression, as if he was feeling badly. Upon being asked the reason he said: "I was just thinking about what Christ would have done about that man, under the circumstances. I somehow feel he would have invited him in, and that I have not done right exactly.

Then he was asked the question, what could Christ have done, since he had no barn—not even a place where to lay his own head—that he could have entertained a person thankful for lodging in a barn?

This incident has led the writer to reflect his memory to the history of Christ's manifestation on earth. He finds that those nearest him never knew what he would do, and the reason is plain. He was more than man, and no more than a human ground. And as the human can not forecast what the divine is going to do the next hour, so cause the inquiry can anybody here be perfectly sure these times what Jesus would do were he here and in our circumstances.

At the outset the intelligent reader of the Gospels finds that there is a vast range of subjects which Jesus positively refused to consider when asked to, and what is so singular, these are the very subjects into which many seem more than willing to rush, all heedless of the familiar saying about what angels fear to try.

These subjects refer to relations of social life, involve the burning problems of capital and labor, wealth and poverty, men's rights and woman's rights. Now on all such matters our Lord was silent, except as he laid down permanent principles, that we may apply and rectify everything if we suffer ourselves to be taught in His doctrine and influenced by His teachings, and he left these principles to be worked out by those who would live as He would have them live.

Should our citizens lose sight of this fact, there is serious danger that well meaning speakers and writers may parade the country in the name of the religion of Christ, of the best brand, and try to array the rich and poor in hostile camps, and stimulate class enmity of a bitter character, while Christ himself never encouraged or fostered a class spirit. He never took the part of the poor, for simply being poor in property, altho a poor man himself. He spoke with pungent, solemn severity to the rich about the fearful danger they were in, long as they cared for their wealth and nothing else, and oppressed their fellow citizens, but he would go home with them and enjoy their hospitality. He called Matthew from the revenue service, and Zacheus from his extortions in the service of a tyrannical government, both persons representing the capitalists of his time.

It should be remembered too that Jesus came into the world with a special work to do—that being a Divine being could do—hence all that a human being could or can do is to imitate his spirit. "Lo! I come to do thy will O, God," should be our motto, but no two persons have the same tasks assigned them.

Then too there is another thing to be considered. The world has been so changed by Christ's being born in it, and ever since incarnating its greatest almighty power upon it, that all Christians are somewhat insensible who may take it on themselves to say with any approach to accuracy just precisely what Jesus would do were he now with men.

Now good people, somewhat rusty in their studies of the Gospels, may say, Are we then all left in the dark. Not by any means, for we may have the comforting assurance, day by day, that if we fear God and keep His commandments; love him with all the heart, soul, mind, and strength, and our neighbor as ourselves, we are doing the will of God; we are doing just what Christ has counseled us as to do, over and over, even tho we may not be sure that we are doing just precisely what the infinite Son of Man would be doing in the premises. Christ gave not a schedule or programme but a law of the Spirit of Life.

He inculcated principles but left but few rules he came to illustrate and fulfill the law and the prophets not to destroy the great principles underlying the Ten Commandments—supreme regard for God's will and a mutual regard to our fellow men, doing unto others as others would have others as we would have others do to us.

Christ bids follow him, learn of him, bear the cross after him, and be in the world as He was in the world. He was in the world for the purpose of making it better, but all His teaching was in the religion of motives, principles and the tone and spirit of the best way to spend our lives. A disciplined man asked Christ, "Speak to my brother that he may divide the inheritance with me." That man wanted a programme, but that was out of Christ's way of doing, and He talks to the man, warning him against covetousness, and gave him the principle to think of, and He would have nothing to do with the trouble on the lines of a program.

Now it matters not what we citizens are, bank presidents, mill owners, merchants, farmers, housekeepers, sick or well, in debt or out, we may all have mind of Christ, Christ may be formed in us the hope of glory, and so we all shall know what we ought to do whether or no we can say exactly to the world by speech or by writing what Jesus would do in times like these.

Christ guarantees to all that follow him in their motives, principles, tone and spirit of life, that they shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the Light of Life, and that in a good generation for heaven and earth (may pass away, but his word endures forever.

ASSESSMENT OF LANDS.

G. M. Kee, of Marlinton, has finished the work of assessing the lands of this county, and has filed this reassessment book in the clerk's office where it may be inspected by any person.

On the first sight it seems that the county has been growing as Assessor Kee reports 47,179 acres of land more than Assessor Yeager did in 1881. This discrepancy is explained by the fact that timber leases have grown so common, they being assessed as so many acres while the land remains assessed to the owner at the original number of acres.

Land in general is valued higher than in 1891, but grass land which has deteriorated by growing up in brush, or by blue grass being replaced by poverty grass was lowered. The assessment of 1900 is $461,656.25 higher than that of 1981, not including the Marlinton town lots.

The town of Marlinton is assessed at 144,395, land and buildings; the buildings being valued at $21,620. The town lots range in value from 85 to $300, with two lots at $400.

The following table shows a portion of the recapitulation:

District	Acres	Buildings	Land & Buildings
Green Bank	247,486	$83,900	$727,171 39

FROST.

Mrs. Jennie Williams, wife of T. J. Williams, died at her home in this place Saturday morning about 3 o'clock. She had been a long sufferer.

We have just learned over the wire that the Rev. Hamil, of Green Bank, died of pneumonia.

Mrs. John Warfield died at her home about 3½ miles from this place of pneumonia. She had been sick about 15 days before medical aid was called and then it was too late, as she was dying when the doctor arrived.

T. L. Williams left here Friday for Staunton on urgent business.

Mrs. J. A. Gregg who was dangerously sick, has almost recovered.

Mrs Ed Spitzer, wife of our merchant, is very low with pneumonia. We certainly hope that she may speedily recover.

Mrs William Bussard has been postmistress at this place for several days owing to the measles striking our postmistress. It is said that she will be down with it at this writing.

Johnny A. Moore and wife are down Knapps Creek visiting.

Our jolly clerk Peyton Moore made a flying trip to Highland on Friday to learn for a certainty if John Willihan had smallpox. He got but little information, but it is supposed to be a case of chills and fever. There are two cases of small pox in Crabbottom.

The reported case of mumps at Gilmore Sharp's has proven to be a gumboil on the back of the neck.

The people at Monterey are so badly frightened that you hardly ever see a professional man on the streets. It is reported that they are preparing dugouts for them on Lawyer Square. They have quarantined against Pocahontas before ascertaining whether or not Pocahontas has the small pox, while at the same time there are two cases in Crabbottom. We hardly believe there is a case of small-pox in Pocahontas, but a genuine case of Cuban chicken pox. They should ascertain to a certainty whether or not Pocahontas has the dreaded disease before tearing their shirts, and not let one man worth his millions frighten the whole town—Why they say they could beat that gentleman holler from Monterey to Vandyrood when the news was circulated that 37 negroes were on their way to Staunton. Of course death is to be dreaded by some—It is truthfully said that they have lived off of this county in a great measure for the past 20 years and now they get frightened over a hospital case of chills and fever, and fine a Pocahontas man $25 if he enters their town.

We send the following but for the teachers to crack: A mother gave to each of her sons 30 apples to sell. Johnny sold his at two for a cent and brought home 15 cents. Clark disposed of his lot at three for a cent, returning 10 cents; their combined sales amounting to 25 cents. On the following day the mother sent them 60 apples and sold them at the rate of five for two cents, receiving 24 cents for the lot. Where is the missing one cent. Tip.

HOT BILL!

Bill, if any of your folks wants to buy a small piece of land, we are a hundred and seventy acres, well timbered, for sale cheap. Less than a mile of the Virginal building on Greenbrier river, for $2.50 per acre. Will sell on J. H. Arbogast, as he has. But if you want to move to town and be a gentleman I will sell you a four-room house and lot on Fifth Street for $1,000 cash. Will take $500 in trade. Will sell you a good Edward Meyercord piano, or a good Estey organ for $100 cash. Will take two works in payment. Yours, Feb. 15, 1900.

COUNTY POLITICS.

The County Executive Committee of the Democratic party is called to meet next Tuesday at which time in all probability a primary will be arranged for and rules adopted governing it. One of the questions to be decided is as to who will be entitled to vote in the primary.

As far as the writer is individually concerned as a Democrat he is in favor of allowing any Republican to vote for any one or more candidates in the county primary if he will support those nominees of the offices for the filling of which he votes in the general election. On the other hand there are many good party men who believe that before a Republican should vote in a Democratic primary he should renounce his allegiance to his party from President down.

In discussing this question with several members of the committee the other day it was decided to call attention to it in this public way so that if a candidate or any one in interest has aught to say concerning this point he will make known his wishes or forever afterwards hold his peace.

In the death of Rev A. C. Hamill the country loses a man whose influence has been only for good. The highest compliment that can be paid a man is that the world is better for his having lived in it, and this can be truthfully said of him.

England is still hopeful of being ultimately successful in the Transvaal war. So far she has lost 14,000 men killed, wounded and missing.

The Democratic Convention to nominate a candidate for Congress from this district will be held at Montgomery, Fayette County, July 17.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh that Contain Mercury as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally, and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free.

THE NATIONAL CONVENTION.

The National Democratic Committee met at Raleigh Hotel in Washington February 22, and fixed upon Kansas City as the place and July 4 as the time of holding the convention to nominate a candidate for President and Vice-President. The meeting showed great harmony in the Democrats of different sections and while the sentiment was that "we shall never desert the Chicago Platform," after the pathetic way of Mrs Micawber, very little was said about "free silver."

If anyone issue becomes paramount it will be against imperialism—for the republic as against the empire.

[illegible] for four years from the seat of Government has told upon the party and the Democrats are drawing closer together. This was clearly in evidence at the late meeting.

Senator Gorman who is a power in politics, and who has been slightly off color for a few years, took a leading part in the meeting. Milwaukee was the only rival of Kansas City. The latter made an offer of a certified check of $50,000 and expenses and was almost unanimously chosen.

The question of the time of holding the convention was debated long and earnestly. Thompson, of Nebraska, the home of Bryan, advocated May 9, the date of the Populist's convention. Senator Tillman, of South Carolina, named June 14, and Col. McGraw, of our own State, July 4.

Col Bryan has been in favor of the earliest possible date, but the proposition of May 9 did not receive any support in the committee beyond that of the gentleman who proposed it. After a lengthy debate July 4 was adopted by a vote of 27 for that date, 24 for June 14 and 1 for May 9. To hold the convention after that of the party in power is a conservative rule in politics which has all the precedents to support it.

All Democrats, of whatever rank and politically, are invited to unite in sending delegates to the convention. The past is a sealed book. The basis of representation is two delegates for each Representative and Senator in Congress.

Have You Heard Of It?

You may have heard about SCOTT'S EMULSION and have a vague notion that it is cod-liver oil with its bad taste and smell and all its other repulsive features. It is cod-liver oil, the purest and the best in the world, but made so palatable that almost everybody can take it. Nearly all children like it and ask for more.

SCOTT'S EMULSION

looks like cream; it nourishes the wasted body of the baby, child or adult better than cream or any other food in existence. It bears about the same relation to other emulsions that cream does to milk. If you have had any experience with other so-called "just as good" preparations, you will find that this is a fact.

The hypophosphites that are combined with the cod-liver oil give additional value to it because they tone up the nervous system and impart strength to the whole body.

Mrs Mary Rockman, an aged lady living near Edray, met with a serious accident last Thursday. She was feeding some hogs and they crowded around her so closely that she was knocked down and so severely injured that she could not get up. She lay upon the ground for an hour or so before she was found. She has been dangerously ill from the effects of the hurt and exposure.

The Pocahontas correspondent of the West Virginia News says that the leased iron mine there is something over 300 feet in length. The work is about half done and will be completed on the same level. Riley Cockran, working in the tunnel dropped a shell in one of his holes which had been unloaded. An explosion followed shortly and he was carried out. It is supposed he used in the same hole one and lighting the other, not discovering that a hot shell of dynamite had dropped in the hole. The fuse had caused the shell to explode.

The town was startled Monday by the report that five men had been instantly killed at Clark & White's camp below town by a blast. This proved to be a false report. Nothing had happened out of the usual.

Col. James Hebden, a prominent citizen of Mingo District, was a caller in the city this week. Tho a resident of this country for a number of years, the Colonel's loyalty to her majesty the Queen of England has not abated. He recently received a personal letter from the Queen, commending his loyalty and expressing thanks for the tender of his services and that of the Englishmen of his neighborhood to go to South Africa.—Elkins Inter-Mountain.

Marlinton is to have a new telephone service this month, each machine being put on a separate wire. This will be a blow struck at the general dissemination of news, but otherwise it will be a consummation greatly to be desired. Strange to say, the stringing of the phones on a wire in multiple has one feature in its favor. For instance, a man is wanted and his office is rung for, the signal being four short rings for instance. If he had a separate wire, if he was in his office he would answer, otherwise he would not be found. But when the signal is rung on 15 or 20 'phones throughout the town he may hear it as he walks along the street, or in a store, and rushing up to the phone answers the ring.

The Small-Pox Scare Over.

No new case of small-pox have developed and it is thought the disease will not spread as 20 days have gone by without any new cases. A number of our citizens whose hindsight has always been appreciably better than their foresight are doubtful as to whether it was a case of small-pox at all.

A small-pox epidemic will not take as unprepared again soon for the whole county has been vaccinated, thanks to the scare. Some have been inclined to think that because the vaccination did not make them sick or cause great ulcers on their arms, or wherever they were vaccinated, that the vaccine did not take. They may be relieved of uneasiness for with the modern aseptic methods of vaccination high fevers and suppurating ulcers are prevented by keeping out of the virus germs and impurities. It takes a medical man to tell certainly whether the vaccine takes or not.

A Quarantine Incident.

The guards of the shotgun quarantine which is enforced against the infected spot up the river from Marlinton, tell the following on Boyd B. Bartlett, one of their number.

About midnight they heard Boyd's gun go off with terrible roar. The guards rushed up and found Mr Bartlett calm but determined. He said: "I saw a darkey standing out there, and I told him to halt and he would n't move, and said halt again and he would n't move, and I let him have it."

An investigation showed a load of buckshot in a tall black stump.

DIED.

Died, at Irvine's camp, on Knapps Creek, February 10, 1900, John Randolph Tacy, aged 24. His ailment was pneumonia, preceded by measles. His parents were George and Caroline Tacy of Back Alleghany.

He was a young man highly esteemed for his good character, and his death is sincerely lamented. One of his physicians prayed with him at his request and he prayed earnestly for himself, and became reconciled to die, believing that he was accepted and saved by faith in Jesus. He had a word for his comrades and with tears promises were made to try to meet him in heaven. It was his wish to be buried near his home where his grave could be often seen and thus his *parents and all others would be re*minded of his being in heaven and would be waiting for them there.

M. E. L.

February 12, 1900, at Ronceverte W. Va., Mrs Rebecca Auldridge aged 90 years, relict of the late John Auldridge of Laurel Run, Pocahontas County. Mrs Nancy Newcomer of Ronceverte, and Mrs Susan Carter, near Hunterseville, Mrs Mary Childers, Buckhannon, W. Va., Andrew Auldridge, Kansas, and George Auldridge, Iowa, are her surviving children.

Mrs Auldridge was a daughter of John Smith a pioneer settler of the head of Stony Creek. In all the relations of life she was a very estimable person, and her children "rise up and call her blessed," and she was blessed in them. For more than seventy years she was a devout Christian in the pale of the M. E. Church.

INDIAN DRAFT.

The measles are still a legal tender in this part.

Billy Gay is just recovering from a dose of measles and all of family to have it. Several others in this neighborhood have been exposed.

The smallpox scare in this part was huge, but seems to be subsiding a little now. I see reported in the Buckeannon Delta that there is a wonderful smallpox scare in Buckhannon, and well it may be, as there are several cases in that town. It reports only one death in the State, Lawyer Bennett of Glennville, he being an aged gentleman and in poor health.

Dave McClure passed here today enroute for Driftwood.

Robert Simmons met with an accident caused by his horse falling and hurting him, not seriously.

Henry Johnson, a near by relative of uncle Ewing Sharp's to have the measles and to keep them from his father's family, thinking he was able to go and went out too soon we suppose, has pneumonia in both lungs and quite low.

Gay & Co. are still shooting in the logs and rolling out the lumber.

Why not John Waugh, Sr., for Assessor.

Sure enough Beverly Waugh is not forgetful to visit measle patients. We are glad to see our friend at any time.

John E. Barlow is getting him up a team; says he will do his own plowing. That's right!

John Davy Liggett has moved to Walker Ervine's.

John Waugh has moved into the Sandridge house lately vacated by Josish Dilley.

Robert L. Malcomb's have all recovered from the measles.

Hanson Auldridge says he don't take as much stock in smallpox as some others do.

John Bright lately purchased a handmill for grinding grain. A man could eat as fast as it grinds and continue to do so until he starved to death.

TRAVELLER.

To Whom it May Concern.

It is being circulated in certain sections of Pocahontas County, in ordey to injure my credit, that I am broke up and can't pay for the lands I have been buying in said County and will have to give up the lands, and lose what I have paid on them, &c.

Now in order to to quiet the minds of creditors and expose the falseness of these reports, I will say that am now closing up my all business in Highland County, Va., and will move my family to Pocahontas County in March, where I will continue in the Real Estate business. I am not only prepared to meet all my debts, but want to buy some more good timber and grazing land in Pocahontas. Any one wanting to sell me lands, or handle lands for them on a commission will please call on or address me at Marlinton after the 5th of March next, and oblige,

E. M. ARBOGAST.

BROWN'S CREEK.

The sick are all improving.

We had a regular snow blizzard here Saturday, and the thermometer registered 9 below on Sunday morning.

James Hiner, of Pinckney, Va., is visiting his son Asbury Hiner, on Knapps Creek.

Capt. Smith moved his camp outfit to Huntersville Saturday.

Pole cat hunting is the order of the day up here. A good many have been caught.

If all the people of the county would get vaccinated small pox would not do much harm if it did get a start in our county. It is not that the disease is so very dangerous to life that it is so dreaded but if it gets started it spreads so rapidly. It is very important to see that it is kept in bounds before it gets a start in the county. Every body should get vaccinated without delay.

The doctors ought not to charge a family more than a dollar and a half to vaccinate them. A dollar is all right for one person but to pay a dollar for each person in a family of six or more is too much for any poor man to pay.

I enclose you a clipping from the Weekly World, Chatham, N. B., and hope you will publish it, as it might be of great benefit if the small-pox should get a hold in our county.

It is reported that there is a case of small-pox at Frost.

SCROFULA AND ITS AWFUL HORRORS

—CURED BY—

Johnston's Sarsaparilla

QUART BOTTLES.

A MOST WONDERFUL CURE.

A Grand Old Lady Gives Her Experience.

Mrs. Thankful Orilla Hurd lives in the beautiful village of Brighton, Livingston Co., Mich. This venerable and highly respected lady was born in the year 1812, the year of the great war, in Hebron, Washington Co., New York. She came to Michigan in 1840, the year of "Tippecanoe and Tyler too." All her faculties are excellently preserved, and possessing a very retentive memory, her mind is full of interesting reminiscences of her early life, of the early days of the State of Michigan and the interesting and remarkable people she has met, and the stirring events of which she was a witness. But nothing in her varied and manifold recollections are more marvelous and worthy of attention than are her experiences in the use of JOHNSTON'S SARSAPARILLA. Mrs. Hurd inherited a tendency and predisposition to scrofula, that terribly destructive blood taint which has cursed and is cursing the lives of thousands and marking thousands more as victims of the death angel. Transmitted from generation to generation, it is found in nearly every family in one form or another. It may make its appearance in dreadful running sores, in unsightly swellings in the neck or goitre, or in eruptions of varied forms. Attacking the mucous membrane, it may be known as catarrh in the head or developing in the lungs it may be, and often is, the prime cause of consumption.

Speaking of her case, Mrs. Hurd says: "I was troubled for many years with a bad skin disease. My arms and limbs would break out in a mass of sores, discharging yellow matter. My neck began to swell and became very unsightly in appearance. My body was covered with scrofulous eruptions. My eyes were also greatly inflamed and weakened, and they pained me very much. My blood was in a very bad condition and my head ached severely at frequent intervals, and I had no appetite. I had sores also in my ears. I was in a miserable condition. I had tried every remedy that had been recommended, and doctor after doctor had failed. One of the best physicians in the state told me I must die of scrofulous consumption, as internal abscesses were beginning to form. I at length was told of Dr. Johnston, of Detroit, and his famous Sarsaparilla. I tried a bottle, more as an experiment than anything else, as I had no faith in it, and greatly to my agreeable surprise, I began to grow better. You can be sure I went on taking it. I took a great many bottles. But I steadily improved until I became entirely well. All the sores healed up, all the bad symptoms disappeared. I gained perfect health, and I have never been troubled with scrofula since. Of course an old lady of 83 years is not a young woman, but I have had remarkably good health since then, and I firmly believe that JOHNSTON'S SARSAPARILLA is the greatest blood purifier and the best medicine in the wide world, both for scrofula and as a spring medicine." This remarkably interesting old lady did not lok to be more than sixty, and she repeated several times, "I believe my life was saved by JOHNSTON'S SARSAPARILLA."

TO A WATERFOWL.

Whither, 'midst falling dew,
While glow the heavens with the last steps of day,
Far, through their rosy depths, dost thou pursue
Thy solitary way?

Vainly the fowler's eye
Might mark thy distant flight to do thee wrong,
As, darkly pencil'd on the crimson sky
Thy figure floats along.

Seekest thou the plashy brink
Of lake, or pool, or river wide,
Where the rocking billows rise and sink
On the chafed ocean side?

There is a Power whose care
Teaches thy way along that pathless coast,
The desert and illimitable air,
Lone wandering, but not lost.

All day thy wings have fanned,
At that far height, the cold thin atmosphere,
Yet stoop not, weary, to the welcome land,
Though the dark night is near.

And soon thy toil shall end;
Soon shalt thou find a summer home, and rest,
And scream among thy fellows; reeds shall bend,
Soon, o'er thy sheltered nest.

Thou'rt gone, the abyss of heaven
Hath swallowed up the form; yet, on my heart
Deeply has sunk the lesson thou hast given,
And shall not soon depart.

He who, from zone to zone,
Guides through the boundless sky thy certain flight,
In the lone way that I must tread alone
Will lead my steps aright.

—WILLIAM CULLEN BRYANT.

IN THE COURTS OF COWEN.

Withrow McClintic has a feud with the town of Cowen. Cowen is a little village in the Independent State of Webster which has recently incorporated itself and has a mayor and council and sergeant and other lowdow thugs, and believes that order is Heaven's first law. To begin with it seems to have thrown down the glove to Withrow McClintic, of Pocahontas, who runs a big logging camp back in the woods from Cowen. It is rumored that Cowen is afraid that some medium sized woodsman will come down some day and shoulder the town and walk off with it. The fair city of Perth never dreaded the Highlanders of Scotland as much as Cowen dreads a visit from the lumber camps.

A short time ago the town was incorporated and it was feeling like a fighting cock, while it was about as dangerous as a boy with his first breeches on. Mr McClintic came to town and was attending to some duties before leaving town.

While he was busy about some matters he was tapped on the arm by a man who seemed to be making a vain effort to conceal his importance. This was a policeman who told him he was under arrest. He very naturally asked what he was charged with. The police looked shocked and said that he had "sworn an oath." Not stopping to ask what else a man could swear, the prisoner tried to remember whether he had lately used any words of a cruel potency and fatting, he denied the charge. The policeman insisted on hauling him before the Mayor, and his victim becoming enraged did utter a few words of deep disgust and the affray was complete.

When the prisoner was in the presence of the Mayor there was an awkward pause, the town authorities apparently not knowing how to jump into the middle of the thing. The prisoner boarded the floor in their den and wound up his remarks by accusing one of the city officials of stealing a stack of hay from him. He then demanded of the right to go out and get some witnesses to clear him of the charge. The officials, looking through a fourth reader and a Webb's Almanack which constituted the statutory authorities, decided the prisoner was within his rights and allowed him to go out to get his witnesses.

Mr McClintic got his horse and rode off to camp, his witnesses having left town while he was getting the town council. How long the said fellows waited in ambush for him to return can only be conjectured.

It soon became known to the escaped prisoner that the town resented this informal leave taking, so the fugitive arranged with a mutual friend a fair compromise on a money basis, and going into town with the obliging friend he handed the Mayor two dollars, who said in a grandiloquent way: "You are a free man!" and the contractor thought the incident was closed.

A week or so since the smallpox scare was on and Mr McClintic to get his mail, especially the monthly check due him for his extensive lumber operations. The check was not there. The town was quarantined against Camden, but the Company's offices are this side the town and he got on his horse, at the suggestion of a hotel keeper, to ride down there.

The guard challenged him, but on the explanation that he was going to the Company's store allowed him to go on. He was returning later in the day and when he got near Cowen, but still far outside the corporate limits, two men sprang out and caught his horse by the bride and unsnapped both reins. The rider used the reins with the heavy iron snaps to belabor the heads of the men, but they finally captured him and took him into Cowen and brought him before the city courts.

They had a very stormy trial during which the prisoner talked so plainly to a village doctor that the latter gentleman wanted to fight him. The upshot of it all was that the prisoner was fined and mulcted in costs to the amount of $20. We asked the gentleman when he was here last week what the charge was, but they did not seem to have made that part of the performance very clear to him. He will appeal to the higher courts.

Now we Pocahontas people do not mind paying tribute to Webster every year at the springs, and we could even stand a little pleasantry on the part of the magistrandjury and sheriff, but when it comes to having Cowen make us walk the chalk mark, we very naturally draw the line.

WHAT DOES THE TELEPHONE MEAN!

Nearby there is a pole to which an insulated wire is attached and when the ear is placed on it an aeolian sound is heard. It is reported a bear listened to it and thought it meant honey and undertook to get it out. A country boy heard it and wished to know if that was the way the news sounded while passing over the line.

So it seems all parties were of the impression that the murmuring of the wire meant something and so far they were correct, the error was simply as to what it does mean. To the writer the meaning is so significant as to its possibilities on society that it matters but little how one may reason about the possibilities, so he reasons sensibly about what eye has not yet seen nor ear heard until very recently.

Socially the telephone annihilates distance, and now families ten, twenty and thirty mile apart can converse as readily as neighbors used to do over the back yard fence, and be virtually as neighborly as adjoining lots. As to affairs of trade the tendency is to make farmers and stock raisers the masters of their respective situations, and be able to realize at their homes returns as favorable as if they were in the city markets, and that too without the trouble and expense of moving their products farther than the nearest station, if indeed that far.

Department stores must soon be prepared to do as well by the farmer the mechanic and the professor as the city store, or its house overshadow will be left. The mere mention of the telephone means the disenfranchisement of the producers and laborers from the middlemen and revenue their relative significance. And upon up direct dealing with the manufacturer and consumer.

An urgent house-to-house call was made in one of the Western States that illustrates the point made. A broom-corn district was suddenly overrun by huckling agents offering to buy up all the material in sight for $60 a ton, which was the price the previous season. A person went to the telegraph office and interviewed his commission merchant and learned that the commodity was rated at $240 a ton in the city market. The telephone was used and he notified all in reach what was up, and they refused to sell, while others too remote from the telephone had sold out for $60, before the news could be circulated in their vicinity by the newspapers with their elaborate market reports two or three days old.

Now if precautions are used hustling dealers will not be able to take advantage of a sudden rise or sudden collapse in what the consumers have to buy or sell.

A Fable—Perhaps

A Fat Salary once invited a number of friends to a swell dinner in order talk over plans for Social Progress. As the subject was a delicate one, only such guests were invited as would inspire awe by reason of their great names. The guest of honor was the Hon. S. I. Policy who comes from a very respectable family, which was further represented by Business Policy, Social Policy, Government Policy and others. Among the other guests present were Popular Sermon, Editorial Wisdom, Good Investment, Gilt Edge Security, Watered Stock, Political Pull, Handsome Income, Legal Advice and Eminent Respectability. The guest who were noticeable for their absence were Simple Justice, who has to work overtime as a blindfolded statue on the Court House, and can not get away for social functions; Equal Opportunity, who is not on good terms with the host, and Sound Principle who has said things that offended several of the guests, and has not a decent suit of clothes to wear anyhow. The result of the company's deliberations was to appoint a committee consisting of Blow yer Horne, Richly N. Dowd, and Miss Sweet Charity who were empowered to hire a secretary and stenographer to take charge of Social Progress and raise the necessary funds for its support. The committee, after consultation, selected as secretary a gentleman of great tact and discretion, Prof. Tinsfar N. Nofarther, who has been duly empowered to attend to all business connected with Social Progress, and to relieve the benevolent patrons of all responsibility.—The Straight Edge

The Dogwood Must Go.

Dogwood is good for bobbins and spools for cotton mills. Therefore we suppose the dogwood will have to go. We printed a few days ago the announcement that carloads of it were being shipped from a nearby station on the Southern railway.

The dogwood timber is needed for the practical work of men, but we can not help wishing it had been otherwise. It is such a gabled and beautiful son of the forest. Its broad white blossoms are displayed by the time the poplar is putting out its first timid leaves. The dogwood is not afraid. We have seen it blooming while the snow fell against its spotless petals.

"In the month of May, when the dogwoods are blooming," is supposed, according to an old Scottish song, to be the most propitious time for making love. It is true that all of us have learned by old habit to take the blooming of the dogwood as the real beginning of the year, that when the white blossom sparkles the forests and so can see it from afar shining against the darkness of the evergreen or the bare limbs of the later trees we know that spring is near. Some thing will be gone from our lives when the dogwood is taken away. Because it is useful, because its wood is hard and the fiber of which it is built is close, it is doomed.—Mon. Co. Ind. News.

Rules Governing Primary Commissioners of Election. Call for Convention.

At a meeting of the Democratic Executive Committee of Pocahontas County, West Virginia, held at the office of the undersigned chairman on the 6th day of March, 1900, pursuant to call, there were present: L. M. McClintic, and as proxy for Dr C. L. Austin and C. A. Lightner; C. E. Beard, G. W. Mann, G. R. Curry, John Waugh, Andrew Price, M. F. Herold, Levi Gay, proxy for J. C. Price; W. H. Grose, proxy for J. C. Lowry.

It was ordered that a county convention be held at the court house of this county on to select delegates to the State convention, the Congressional convention, and State Senatorial convention, the convention to select delegates to the National convention, and to select a new Democratic Executive Committee for the two ensuing years.

Tuesday, April 3, 1900,

Every Democratic voter in the county is considered a delegate to said county convention, and the delegates of each district of the county shall be chosen from and by the voters present from said district.

It was further ordered that the county nominees be selected by a primary to be held on to nominate a Democratic candidate for Sheriff, House of Delegates, County Commissioner, Prosecuting Attorney, Assessor, and Surveyor, and the district offices of Justice of the Peace, Constable, and members of the Board of Education, the following rules governing such primary being adopted:

Saturday, May 12, 1900,

All Democrats and all others who wish to affiliate with the Democratic party in the nomination and election of county officers, are invited to vote in this primary, and their voting will be construed to be a promise and a pledge to support the nominees of this primary at the general election; but every one voting must be a legal voter of this county, entitled to cast a vote at the general election.

II—The voting shall be by ballot, and the names of all candidates for offices to be voted for shall be on a single ballot, the candidates for each office to be grouped together under a heading specifying for what office they offer. The voter shall erase all the names on the ballot except those for whom he casts his vote, but no voter shall vote for more than one candidate for each office, and in such case the voter shall be considered as having erased all the names of the candidates for said office.

III—The places of holding said election shall be at the voting places established and used in the general election of 1898 and at the same buildings.

IV—The polls shall be kept open from Sunrise to sunset, but the commissioners are empowered to provide a second ballot box and open the ballot box previously used and commence to count the vote at 4 p. m., receiving votes that may be cast before sunset by depositing them in the ballot box provided for this purpose.

V—The primary shall be conducted at each voting place by three commissioners hereinafter appointed. Said commissioners shall be sworn by some one legally authorized to administer an oath, to conduct the primary election in fairness and impartiality and in accordance with these instructions. Said commissioners are entitled to employ two clerks. The commissioners and clerks will each receive $1.00 from the funds in the hands of the district committeeman for each day they shall serve in conducting said voting. The cost of the ballots and for w[illegible] shall be paid out of the funds in the hands of the district committeeman for each day they shall serve in conducting said voting. The cost of the ballots and for w[illegible] shall be paid out of the funds in the hands of the district committeeman for each day they shall serve in conducting said voting.

five Committee of this county and lay the same before the committee which is hereby called to meet to canvass the returns of said primary election, on the 14th day of May at 1 o'clock, at which time they shall ascertain and declare the nominees selected by this primary. A quorum of said meeting shall consist of four or more members. The said sealed returns may be mailed to the chairman or secretary to be presented to the committee at this meeting.

VI—The candidate receiving the largest number of votes in the county cast for the office for which he offers shall be declared nominated. This committee, in event of a contest, shall decide said contest by a careful canvass and count of the ballots, and in case of a tie, then the executive committee in full session shall decide between the two candidates as to which shall be the nominee.

VII—Levi Gay, J. W. Yeager and Andrew Price are appointed ballot commissioners to arrange for the printing and framing of said ballot. Every person desiring to be voted for in said primary shall forward to said ballot commission his announcement in writing, accompanied by the sum of $10 to help defray the expenses of printing the ballots and holding said election if he be a candidate for Sheriff, House of Delegates, County Commissioner, or Prosecuting Attorney, and $5 if he offers for Assessor or County Surveyor; and $2.50 if for any district office.

The said ballot commissioners shall cause to be printed a sufficient number of ballots to supply each candidate with all that he requires, and shall forward to each voting place in care of one of the commissioners of election a sufficient number to supply the voters of said precinct. Said candidates must forward their names to the ballot commissioners on or before the 28th day of April, 1900.

VIII—Any voter of the county may vote for county officers outside of the precinct in which he resides, on his making oath in the presence of the commissioners, before some one legally qualified to administer an oath, that he is a bona fida voter of this county, and has not previously voted in this primary.

The following persons are hereby appointed to serve as commissioners to conduct the election at the precincts named:

Green Bank—John R. Warwick, J. F. Patterson, C. F. Lightner.

Dunmore—W. K. Jackson, Jacob Taylor, C. E. Pritchard.

Traveller's Repose—P. D. Yeager, Van Buren Arbogast, P. M. Yeager.

Letter from Odessa, Mo.

Editor Pocahontas Times:

I am visiting my uncle (W. H. McLaughlin) who lives in the famous old county of Lafayette, sixteen miles from Lexington in a beautiful farming district just south of the knolls and ridges that border on the banks of the Missouri River.

From your last issue it seems that you are undergoing the usual scare that follows smallpox. I am sorry that the disease has appeared in my old home. The people here have had some [illegible] stage of excitement. They had several cases in Lexington a short time ago, and Kansas City is still finding two or three new cases each day. This prohibits our attending the Grand Band Concert given by Prof. Soust, March 4, in Convention Hall.

I would like to visit Convention Hall again before I return to West Virginia. I was there during the protracted meeting held by Dr D. L. Moody, Nov. 12, 1899, and with a crowd of about 10,000 people heard him deliver a most fitting sermon on, "Be not deceived; God is not mocked; for whatsoever a man soweth that shall he also reap."—Gal. 6, 7.

We are almost entirely [illegible] bound now. The snow fell Tuesday covering the ground to an average depth of about two feet. Most of the roads and lanes have drifted until they are impassable. The snow caused a wreck on the Missouri Pacific Railway last Tuesday night in which three persons were killed and six injured.

I have been attending school two miles from home and going with my teacher, Miss Amelia Moore. We have a delightful road, and our rides to and from school have been a great pleasure to me this winter, but we have not been able to get to school since the snow fell.

Some of our most esteemed friends, Mr Donald McNeel and sisters, left here February 22, for their future home in the State of Washington. Most of your readers will recognize them as old residents of Pocahontas county.

I have been the recipient of several copies of your paper, and wish to thank Rev W. T. Price for his thoughtfulness in so kindly remembering me.

Wishing my friends in Pocahontas the best of health and happiness, I remain yours truly,

EVA McLAUGHLIN.

Mess. Wooten & Co., Prong, North Carolina, say: One of our customers a prominent man in this community suffered with liver complaint. He consulted several physicians, but they failed to benefit him. We prevailed upon him to try Ramon Pills and Pellets. He soon bought more and is now a well and hearty man, and has gained in flesh. He says the pills saved his life and the six boxes cost him only $1.50, while his trip to New York to consult the doctors, cost him $150.00.

MARLINTON, THURS. MAR. 15, 1900

TROUBLE BREWING

A petition of 79 voters of the Huntersville district was filed with the county court last week asking that the Greenbrier River be made the boundary line between the Huntersville and Edray districts. This takes from Edray district the town of Marlinton, loveliest village of the plain, and nearly all the Greenbrier Railway. Hence these tears. Marlinton is indifferent, knowing that wherever her lot falls she will take the railway with her. The people of the district generally though are preparing to beseech the county court to leave matters in statu quo.

There is no special reason to make the change other than to give Huntersville a portion of the railroad, and make her more equal in size. The school taxes in Huntersville district have always been the highest of any district in the county.

One effect the change would have would be to make Edray district Republican, and Huntersville Democratic.

An objection to the change would be that Marlinton, to remain a voting precinct, would be cut off entirely from the country voters, who, without exception, live on the west side of the river. We look to see a very pretty fight over it.

The county court will give 30 days notice of the contemplated change, and we look to see the matter settled at next court.

This section once belonged to Huntersville and they say it was changed to enable the pioneer settlers of Marlin's Bottom to send their children across the river to school.

INCORPORATION ELECTION.

The election held at the court-house last Saturday upon the incorporation of the town of Marlinton resulted in favor of incorporation by a vote of 61 to 6. This is a majority of voters residing in the boundary, as is required by law to vote in favor of the act.

Those staying away from the election have the effect of voting against the measure. There never seemed any doubt about the result but it was feared that all would not come out and vote, as some contesting was done during the day to cause the voters to call up before the court house.

The people of Marlinton are to electrically inclined, with one or two glaring exceptions, as any people in the world. They can see a neighbor get decently drunk and still be comfortable at home, for they know that he will not hurt himself. But the law does hurt—spoils us of by not being recognized it is what the opposition does during the last six months. Here is an approximate calculation: 800 plain drunks at $2 50 per drunk, $2000; 20 general-like fights, at $50, $1000; 75 cases of turning up a bottle and drinking on the street in daylight, at $10, $750; 50 cases of using profane or obscene language in the presence of women or children, at $10, $500; other misdemeanors $1000; total $5,250.

The intention of the people here is to make one of the most orderly places in the country. Heretofore a man was allowed to get helplessly drunk if he did not commit an overt act, such as burning a house or shooting a prominent citizen. But by making the drunkeness itself an offense it will nip the trouble in the bud and keep a man from getting dunk, or if drunk cause him to act as though he were sober, which amounts to about the same thing.

The procedure to organize a municipal government briefly stated is as follows:

Upon proof that the law has been complied with, Judge McWhorter will direct the Clerk of the Circuit Court to issue a certificate of incorporation, and at the same time appoint three commissioners to hold the first election for officers. This election shall be held within sixty days of their appointment. It requires four weeks notice, so this election will probably be held about the 1st of May. The voters shall elect a mayor, recorder and five councilmen, who shall be owners of land in said boundary. They shall appoint a sergeant, who is ex officio treasurer, an assessor and a street commissioner. After the first election the elections are held every January.

The powers of mayor and council includes nearly everything of a minor nature pertaining to the conducting of the affairs of the village and maintaining order. The police force can arrest and detain anyone for offense committed, with out a warrant, and a warrant issued by the mayor can be served any where in the county.

There seems to be a belief that if an offender gets out of the corporate limits he is safe. In Hillsboro, they say, the sergeant used to chase members of tough element over the corporation line and they would turn around and "lick" him. But they were in no place of sanctuary for they were liable to be arrested upon a warrant.

The policy of the first administration will probably be low taxation, heavy fines, and live stock to be kept up with the exception of horse flies with cows which are to be accorded the liberty of the town.

Hillsboro has passed a curfew ordinance, making it unlawful for boys under 16 years of age to be upon the streets after 9 p. m., unless they have good excuse. The bell is rung at seven when all boys under age must get under cover.

A BILLION AND A HALF.

Our assertion last week that there was a billion and a half of uncut timber in Pocahontas county of all kinds has been disputed. We have a letter from Mr Henry Gilmer, who intimates that he does not like to see "a good man fooled about his assets and resources." He puts the acreage of the county at 500,000 acres in round numbers on the basis that Pocahontas has 765 square miles. We gave the Assessor's return, 730,691 acres. You can choose between the assessor and the arithmetic. Mr Gilmer puts the timber at 300,000 acres of 1000 of merchantable timber per acre, 20 per cent of our estimate. That is not much of a come down from a professional statistician's figures.

Now we have not had anything to do with billions since we were at school. Billions and trillions do not figure in real life, still they might be useful in counting the trees of Pocahontas. There is a thing however which makes us believe that there is a billion and a half feet of timber in Pocahontas. About twenty million feet (measured) of pine is being floated in this year. This cutting does not diminish the timber of the county perceptibly. If there is seventy-five times as much timber left as go adown the Green river each year there is a billion and a half. There is not that much pine but cunning everything—it may be here.

As Mr Gilmer is a native of Greenbrier he is not guilty of treason.

The victims of the Red Ash mine explosion is now estimated at 52. The mines in the neighborhood have suspended work and all are aiding in rescuing the bodies. The mine is leased and operated by a company of which J. Effinger, of Staunton, is president. The cause of the explosion has not been definitely determined. The Superintendent of the mine is John Lang, who is well known to a number of Pocahontas people. R. H. Catlett of Marlinton, has an interest in the land on which the mine was located.

This year's election means everything to the two parties in this state. If the Republicans secure the legislature they will redistrict the state and then goodby to hopes of Democratic supremacy. That the Democratic party will elect a majority of the members of the House of Delegates, there seems no doubt, and even if the State's electoral vote is secured by the Republicans, the chances of electing a Democratic United States Senator are more than good.

For calling another man a liar through the telephone a citizen of Boone county, Iowa had to pay a fine of $2.

Creeping Consumption

Do not think for a single moment that consumption will ever strike you a sudden blow. It does not come that way. It creeps its way along.

First, you think it is a little cold; nothing but a little hacking cough; then a little loss in weight; then a harder cough; then the fever and the night sweats.

The suddenness comes when you have a hemorrhage.

Better stop the disease while it is yet creeping.

You can do it with

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral

The first notice that you cough was. The presence of the cherry is dead. That hacking of consumption is removed sure is hastened by placing one of

Help... Nature

Babies and children need proper food, rarely ever medicine. If they do not thrive on their food something is wrong. They need a little help to get their digestive machinery working properly.

SCOTT'S EMULSION OF COD LIVER OIL WITH HYPOPHOSPHITES OF LIME & SODA will generally correct this difficulty.

If you will put from one-fourth to half a teaspoonful in baby's bottle three or four times a day you will soon see a marked improvement. For larger children, from half to a teaspoonful, according to age, dissolved in their milk, if you so desire, will very soon show its great nourishing power. If the mother's milk does not nourish the baby, she needs the emulsion. It will show an effect at once both upon mother and child.

A guide who has done more or less piloting fishing on Moosehead-negantic lake says he can get a drink of nice, cold water when he is anchored on a lake, provided the water is deep enough. For deep fishing it is necessary to anchor for a clay bottom before casting anchor, and one fisherman claims that he can sound to secure a good drink. He ties a weight to the bottom of his coffee bottle, and with the string tied also to the cork he lets down it to the bottom; then by a quick jerk pulls the cork, the bottle fills with cold lake water, and he has only to pull it in.—Phillips Photograph.

Troubles in Colored Circles.

Mart McDowell, Marlinton's barber, got into a scrape last Thursday evening. It was due to over whiskey, which you know has such deleterious effects on the system. He borrowed a Winchester rifle and went squirrel hunting and called at the McLaughlin Hotel and paid a board bill he was owing, on his way back. All was serene until he fell out with Mrs Ben Truss, a colored woman who was cooking at the hotel. They got into a scuffle in which Mart inflicted a scalp wound on the head of Mrs. Truss with the barrel of his gun. This is not permissible in society, either white or colored, and, aside from the legal complications, Mart has regretted it since the moment it was done.

He went home and was presently visited by some friends of the woman he had insulted, who proceeded to wreck the honorial parlors, breaking five panes of glass and doing other damage. They broke the windows and shot into the building. Fortunately none of the large plate-glass mirrors were in range of the stones. He had low and they presently took their selves off.

The next day Ben Truss went to Huntersville and swore out a warrant for assault with intent to kill. Mart gave bail to appear at court and waived an examination. No warrants have been issued for the parties who damaged the barber shop.

Johnny McGraw.

Johnny McGraw is in town. He is a fine-lass lumberman and in no way connected with Hon John T. McGraw. He says he has two middle letters to his name. M and C. While at Elkins he saw "the other McGraw," and "by jokes" he went narrose the street and introduced himself. "By jokes," he told him he did every thing he could for Marlinton; that when ever he got a dollar ahead he came to Marlinton and spent it. He said he found the other McGraw to be a nice little Irishman "likehimself."

He tells of meeting a lady who told him that he could have his own time to pay her for that land he bought. He told her that he was much obliged to her for since the railroad was cutting up his land so much he was not worth so much as he used to be, "by jokes."

He is a veteran of two wars, the civil and the Cuban war. During the latter war he served at Lexington, Ky. He expects a pension and back pay for his services in the Rebellion, which he will invest in Marlinton.

Church Notes.

Big Mill Starts.

The St Lawrence mill started on Wednesday morning, with a full force of hands. Last week about two million feet of logs came in on the flush water enough to run the mill until the regular drive gets in. The first day's sawing, at slow feed to accustom the men to their work measured up about 74,000 feet.—West Virginia News.

Editor Pocahontas Times:

Dr John M Hanger, one of the oldest and most prominent physicians and christian gentlemen of Staunton, was found dead in his stable Sunday, February 28. The immediate cause was apoplexy. He leaves a family of 9 children and many friends to mourn his death. He was a good man.

On Thursday night of last week Mr George W. Bippert died at his home in Waynesboro, Va., age 78 years. The cause of his death was paralysis and the infirmities of old age. He was much respected and had lived a useful christian.

Miss Annie Felix died at her home near Mt. Crawford last Tuesday night. She was near sixteen and was much loved by all who knew her.

On last Friday evening William Nulty attempted to cross Middle River between New Hope and Mt Meridian, the streams being greatly swollen by the nights rain, and was drowned, and to-day (Sunday) at noon his body had not been *found. His family are sadly be*reaved and have the sympathy of the entire community.

There is a great deal of sickness and many deaths, and so many prominent people have passed over to enjoy a blessed and eternal rest.

The ladies are beginning to chat over their garden seeds and tomato and cabbage plants are flourishing in the sunny windows and we hail with delight the easter plant putting forth her buds, and enjoy the happy thought that Spring has come again.

But did n't the wild goose have a cool breeze in which to flap his wing Feb. 24!

We hail with delight each week *the coming of the Staunton Spec*tator and Vindicator, edited by Colonel B. S. Turk, who is a well-knewn and highly respected gentleman, both to the people of Virginia and West Virginia. We often find items of interest from West Virginia in the Spectator. Jacob S. Wooddell is poorly at this time.

Clarence McClintic of Beverly was in town last Saturday.

Will some reader of the Times tell where the middle verse is in the Bible.

Captain Sweeker was in town Saturday.

Mr Uriah Bird was in town last Saturday shaking hands and we suppose kissing the babies. He is a good man, and we suppose would make a good sheriff.

A farmer going to market with a lot of geese was asked if he had a hundred; he answered, if I had as many more, half as many, and two geese and a half, I would have a hundred. How many geese had the farmer?

It has been said that the bridges between Green Bank and Dunmore were not safe to drive a cow over, at least some of them. We wonder who is overseer.

There will be prayer meeting service at Liberty church every 1st and 3d Sunday at 10:30, and at Green Bank every 2d and 4th Sunday at 10:30 until we get a preacher.

Jacob S. Wooddell died last Sunday night aged about 70 years. He told the writer a short time ago that he was only waiting to come over to his mansion in glory.

J. H. Mellegan was in town Sunday.

Died at the home of her son near Oak Grove on Feb 6th of old age, Mrs Fitzgerald, mother of E. Sharpe Fitzgerald, in the 83d year of her age, after having been a member of the church for 54 years. She said she was ready, waiting the summons to enter her eternal rest.

Mrs Lura Landes is very ill at this writing.

John S. Moore is teaching school at Huntersville. This is his second school this winter.

N. S. Duffield met with a painful accident while hauling sugar-water last week. He was standing on the wagon when the horses started, throwing him off hurting him severely. He has about recovered from the injuries received.

Harlow Waugh is quite a frequent visitor at the preachers.

Mrs Mary Ruckman is mending slowly.

Miss J. Ann Smith is visiting her sister Mrs Samuel Moore of Back Alleghany.

Last Sunday morning Miss Florence Moore ran a splinter under her finger nail. She had to have the doctor to cut it out, which was very painful indeed.

Miss Allie Smith is very low with fever. Her many friends hope she will soon recover.

Rev Atkinson will preach his farewell sermon next Sunday at *Edray. He will start to confer*ence the 19th of this month.

We see but little glowing done as yet.

REV. A. C. HAMIL.

Died, at the parsonage at Green Bank, W. Va., Feb. 24, 1900, Rev A. C. Hamill. He was born Nov 2, 1836, and was at the time of his death [illegible] years, [illegible] months and [illegible] days old. On September 17, 1857, he was married to Miss Ruth Wilson, who died February 21, 1879, leaving eight children, six of whom are alive: John S., Anna, Emma, Louisa, Nannie, of Wilson, W. Va. and Mrs Lucinda Harvey, of Rayno Glade, Md.

On June 26, 1889, he was married to Miss Hattie E. Oats, who survives him and with untiring devotion and anxiety that was pathetic, watched at his bedside and ministered to him in every possible way, scarcely allowing herself to take any rest or refreshments, and when the end came she was prostrated with grief, but said the Lord would fully sustained her when the trying hour came.

Rev Hamill was ordained a minister of the M. E. Church South in 1876, taking regular work in 1889, since which time he has ever been at his post of duty, subject to the call of his church and the Master, and he fell in the front ranks of the Army of the Lord. He preached 3 times on February 11, and after going home was taken with a chill, which resulted in that dread disease, pneumonia. He was so patient, was never heard to complain, through all his sufferings, and shortly before his death he offered a prayer such as only he could offer, and thus he entered heaven.

The giving of facts is an easy matter, but when it comes to speaking of the character of the man it is quite different. One of his friends remarked since death that "he was a man in every sense of the word." To show the character of the man more fully, we quote from a letter written by him January 15, 1900, upon receipt of a letter containing the news of the death of his mother:

"I cannot express the sorrow this news brought to me, but amid it all I feel thankful that we do not sorrow as those who are without hope. Mother is not dead but sleepeth, or we might more truly say in the light of Divine revelation: She has passed from death unto life. As a ripe sheaf of corn cometh to the farmer, so after a long life in the Master's service, full of days, rich in Christian Experience, she has entered the rest that remaineth for the people of God. Sudden and unexpected as was the summons, doubtless it found her ready. Our kindred are passing away, who of us will be next none can tell. To me it is an admonition to be ready, to have my loins girded, and my lamp burning; that whether it may come to me as the unexpected midnight cry; or the gradual wasting of the lamp of life, I may finish my course with joy and the ministry of the Lord Jesus Christ."

His son was with him at the time of his death, and with much difficulty took his remains to Garrett county, Maryland, to the home of his boyhood, where he had expressed a wish to be buried. Memorial services were held at the M. E. Church at Elkins, W. Va., and addresses were made by Revs Rothen and Nevitt, of the M. E. Church. Eulogies on the life and character of the deceased were delivered by Robert C. Wilson and J. H. Rafter, after which the remains were interred in the family grave yard on the Hamill homestead. Those following among his kindred and friends.

Soldier of Christ, well done;
Praises thy Up ward crowning,
And while eternal ages run,
Rest in thy Savior's Joy.

Three Years in the Penitentiary.

The trial of Thos J. Williams on the charge of attempting to rape Mrs. Amanda Gates, of near Middlebrook, which has been in progress in the county court the better part of this week came to a close yesterday morning when the jury brought in a verdict of guilty and fixed the punishment at three years in the penitentiary. The prisoner never flinched when the verdict was rendered and appeared to be the most unconcerned man in the courtroom. A motion for new trial was made. Staunton Spectator.

SCROFULA AND ITS AWFUL HORRORS

—CURED BY—

Johnston's Sarsaparilla

QUART BOTTLES.

A MOST WONDERFUL CURE.

A Grand old Lady Gives Her Experience.

Mrs. Thankful Orelia Hurd lives in the beautiful village of Brighton, Livingston Co., Mich. This venerable and highly respected lady was born in the year 1812, the year of the great war, in Hebron, Washington Co., New York. She came to Michigan in 1836, the year of "Tippecanoe and Tyler too." All her faculties are exceedingly preserved, and possessing a very retentive memory, her mind is full of interesting reminiscences of her early life, of the early days of the State of Michigan and the interesting and remarkable people who has met, and the stirring events of which she was a witness. But nothing in her varied and manyfold recollections are more marvelous and worthy of attention than are her experiences in the use of JOHNSTON'S SARSAPARILLA. Mrs. Hurd inherited a tendency and predisposition to scrofula, that terribly destructive blood taint which has cursed and is cursing the lives of thousands and marking thousands more as victims of the death angel. Transmitted from generation to generation, it is found in nearly every family in one form or another. It may make its appearance in the dreadful running sores, in vindictive swellings in the neck or groins, or the eruptions of varied forms. Attacking the mucous membrane, it may be known as catarrh in the head, or developing in the lungs it may be, and often is, the prime cause of consumption.

Speaking of her case Mrs. Hurd said: "I was troubled for many years with a bad skin disease. My arms and limbs would break out in a mass of sores, discharging yellow matter. My neck began to swell and become very unsightly in appearance. My body was covered with scrofulous eruptions. My eyes were also greatly inflamed and weakened, and they pained me very much. My blood was in a very bad condition and my head ached severely at frequent intervals, and I had no appetite. I had sores on my ears. As was in a miserable condition. I had tried every remedy that had been recommended, and doctor after doctor had failed. One of the best physicians in the state told me I must die of scrofulous consumption, as internal abscesses were beginning to form. I at length was told of Dr. [illegible] of Detroit, and he became my physician. He, as well as my friends, were watching me, as I had no faith in it, and greatly to my agreeable surprise, I began to grow better. I went on for some time on reading it. I took a great many bottles, but I strongly improved until I became entirely well. All the sores healed up, all the bad symptoms disappeared. I gained perfect health, and I have never been troubled with scrofula since. Of course an old lady of 83 years is not a young woman, but I have had remarkably good health since then, and I firmly believe that JOHNSTON'S SARSAPARILLA is the greatest blood purifier and the best medicine in the wide world, both for scrofula and as a spring medicine." This remarkably interesting old lady did not ask to be more than sixty, and she reported several times, "I believe my life was saved by JOHNSTON'S SARSAPARILLA."

HE CAUGHT SENATOR PLATT.

A Reminiscence of the 1896 Campaign That Is Interesting.

If Senator Thomas C. Platt has one peculiarity more pronounced than another it is his discretion. While no political leader in New York is more affable to reporters than Mr. Platt, none gives out less information that he has not carefully prepared. In the campaign of 1896 Mr. Platt was a central figure. Anything from him was worth space. It was before the St. Louis convention, and he was supposed to carry in his pocket the 72 votes of the Empire State. It was about this time that a very young newspaper reporter seated himself among the veteran political reporters in the green corner of the Fifth Avenue Hotel, where Mr. Platt makes his city home.

Every one was expecting an important declaration, but none came. Mr. Platt appeared, as was his custom. He smiled in his own peculiarly dry and somewhat mysterious way and said there was nothing to give out. There was no going behind these returns, apparently, and the young reporter had wisdom beyond his years. Probably that is the reason that he is one of the most successful writers in the country to-day. He followed Mr. Platt out to the street. As they mingled with the evening throng he linked his arm in his.

"Mr. Platt," said he, "you're the biggest politician in New York and I'm the youngest reporter. I've got to get a story from you or lose my job. Now, I don't care a cent what you talk about to me, but I'm dead I would advise you to talk politics."

Mr. Platt, who is tall, slender and gray-bearded, with a style of humor that can only be characterized as grim, disengaged his arm from that of his young friend and looked at him. He was astonished for the first time in years.

"Well, I haven't got anything to say," he replied, "but if you are so dead set on a political story I'll talk to you. I suppose it doesn't make any difference whether I discuss national or local politics. You seem to insist upon politics." And he did discuss politics to the extent of a column and a half.—Phil. Saturday Post.

ENCIRCLED BY A "LIVE" WIRE.

Cleverness With Which the Victim Walked Out of the Loop.

"I witnessed a really astonishing exhibition of coolness and presence of mind this afternoon," said a New Orleans insurance man a few days ago. "Some workmen were removing an overhead wire on upper Prytania street, when one of the poles broke off and dropped down to the pavement. It doubled into a sort of loop as it fell, and, by a singular chance, it completely encircled a young man who was passing, without, however, touching him anywhere.

"Some people were standing in a nearby doorway, and immediately yelled "Live wire!" Nine men out of ten would have lost their heads completely under such circumstances, but this young man was as calm as a summer's morning. The wire was wriggling all around him like an immense snake, and threatened every moment to strike him on the legs, but he made no effort to jump. On the contrary, he stood perfectly still, puffing away at a cigar he had been smoking as he came along. Presently, when he saw an opportunity, he sauntered quietly out of the open end of the loop, as unconcerned, to all appearances, as a man walking out of a drawing room.

"I was on the opposite side of the street at the time the thing occurred, and I confess that it made my hair bristle on my head. I ran across and could not help remarking to the young man that I admired his pluck. He laughed. 'Oh, that's all on the surface' he said. 'I'm dripping with sweat and am really scared half to death. I would like to round off this story by saying that the wire was carrying enough current to kill an elephant, but the truth is that it was not connected at the time and was as harmless as a piece of clothes line. Still, that was something nobody knew for half an hour, and I insist that it has no bearing on the real merits of the case."—N. O. Times-Democrat.

Stage Heroes Are Scarce.

"The making of actresses is easier than the making of actors. Mrs. Franklin Fyles of "The Theatre and its People" in the December Ladies' Home Journal, "a young woman endure by nature more apt and pliable. Their faces are most mobile, their manners more graceful, their habits of speech more flexible. Consequently when the round-up of talent comes and the the grandiloes are turned out for the growing season, there are only half a dozen prudent actresses to every actor of equal ability. This is shown at the matinee and night performances, in which the female roles are generally well played, while the male ones are not. If promising actresses are three numerous, six to one than actors, the same ratio operates in favor of young men in getting work. A good looking fellow finds himself in such glutted market as dramatic stage his sister aspirant. If he is clever he will readily get a showing with enough to [illegible]. The masculine roles in plays predominate largely. Of namely intelligent and tolerable facile actors there is always a great excess of the demand. Heroes are scarce. Heroines are plenty.

The Spider's Appetite.

Commenting on an account which a spider actually consumed during 24 hours Mr. J. Lubbock says: At a single fair fed spider will devour a fly every two hours. Such a spider requires a week of food for two days, at a sitting. Such a spider has devoured in a week 84 full grown blowflies, eight wasps and four bees, and just before eating these it had killed twenty-four bees.

An Excellent Prescription.

Original Sin.

"What is original sin?" inquired the Sunday school teacher. "Inventing excuses for our conduct," replied the boy who is always in trouble.

He Found the Symptoms.

A well known physician of Boston, Dr. A. J. Bolton, of 1020 Tremont Row, Room 2, after suffering for years from Kidney Trouble, tried several doctors and a number of remedies without relief, until he used Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, which cured him entirely. He has given permission to have his name published as a reference. Swamp-Root is the great discovery of Dr. Kilmer, the eminent kidney, liver and bladder specialist, and is the most successful remedy known. It is not recommended for everything, but if you have kidney, liver or bladder trouble you will find it just the remedy you need. In taking Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root you will also receive a book telling all about it, including many testimonials from people who have found it to be just what they needed. If you have already decided that you want Swamp-Root, you can purchase the regular fifty-cent or one-dollar size bottle at the drug stores everywhere. Don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Swamp-Root, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y., on every bottle.

WHITTIER AT HOME.

Gail Hamilton's Picture of the Poet by His Own Fireside.

The first installment of a series of letters that passed between Whittier and Gail Hamilton are published for the first time in the December Ladies' Home Journal. In one letter (written, however, to a friend) Gail Hamilton gives this interesting glimpse of Whittier at home:

"Imagine Whitter and me sitting together one whole day and two evening all the time and then repeating it. * * * One of the brass knobs on the Franklin stove was loose and came off in my hand. I turned it over and remarked upon its brightness. He said, 'Now, doesn't thee know that thee is making work?' 'How?' I asked. 'Why destroying the brightness by handling it.' I rubbed it with my handkerchief and asked the housekeeper if I had made her any work. 'Oh she said, 'you make me no work. Mr. Whittier always takes care of these brasses himself. Thata counted. I did, for his affection, and dismissed mine—for I did not think a man generally had any more work to do than was good for him.' * * * The little balls of the trimming of my dress kept coming off and were lying around on the floor. I picked one up just as I was coming away and said. 'There, I will give you that a keepsake.' He laughed and said he had two in his pocket already. * * * He told some company in the evening that I had talked so much it had made him hoarse."

Surely an Artistic Screen.

An impecunious maiden with artistic tendencies recently found herself in need of a screen to hide the baldness of the necessary washstand, the one disturbing element in an otherwise dainty room. A friend gave her a Japanese screen of dilapidated antiquity, adding that she could recover it and it would be as good as new.

After pricing the pretty things in tapestry and Oriental drapery our impecunious maiden decided she must manufacture something herself. She invested in a heavy cartridge paper of a dull gray tone which she carefully pasted on one side of the screen, across the bottom she made an artistic scroll design in sepia, and then sat herself down to wait for visitors in the artistic and decorative line, of which she had many.

Her first caller was a youth whose drawings have enlivened the pages of many a daily journal. To him she confided her predicament, and in good-naturedly penciled the ubiquitous bit of crayon and sketched to one of his popular cartoons. Other friends soon came to her assistance, and at the end of a week the screen was said to be completely covered with artistic graphed sketches, all of considerable artistic merit and many of no little intrinsic value as well.—N. Y. Herald.

Liptop Must Wed.

London society is very busy finding out Thomas Lipton's wife. Ladies social this constantly with the question, "Why are you not married?"

The reply of the sugar of the Shamrock is characteristic. He says: The truth is, I have led such a busy life and have been so much occupied that I have never had time to marry."

Society in the meantime watches his name to that of Miss Shakley, a beautiful young lady, the daughter and member of whom he has been a great friend and who was at his dinner party last night. She is the daughter of Lady Jersey by her first marriage.

West Virginia University.

MORGANTOWN, W. VA.

The growth of the University is quite as notable in its equipment, its faculty, and its new departments as in its attendance. For example, look at established two years ago. It has a faculty of seven instructors, trained under the best teachers in this country and Europe. It occupies a separate building fitted up especially for its needs. Instruction on all stringed instruments, including violin, viola, mandolin, guitar, etc., is free. For voice and piano the fees are very low. A magnificent pipe organ for Commencement Hall is being constructed and it will be for the use of students of the School of Music. If you are interested in the study of music, write for full information.

Other departments of the University are developing with equal rapidity. The Preparatory Department, with its four new instructors, deserves special mention. Write for a special pamphlet about it.

The University has a faculty of sixty-five instructors, graduates of the foremost schools in the world.

The Winter Quarter begins January 1, and the Spring Quarter April 1.

THE STINGY MAN.

Once there was a stingy man with money by the pack,
And all he lacked to be a hog was bristles on his back;
He occupied a mansion with no one but his wife,
And never gave a nickel to an orphan in his life.

He lived so high on luxuries he had rheumatic ghoul,
And the devil surely got him when his life went out.

At breakfast, noon, and supper-time he never thought of grace,
And went to church on Sunday with a sanctimonious face;
He couldn't bear the sermon for thinking of his cooks,
And he never put a penny in the missionary box.

Without a bit of joking, I think beyond a doubt,
The devil must have got him when his big — went out.

County Sketches

A Scattering Vote.

Thomas J. Bloomfield was torn by conflicting opinions. He was what is known variously as a prominent citizen, a wealthy farmer, an influential man, a pillar in the church, and a big man generally in the neighborhood in which he lived. He had been intimately associated with the affairs of the county for forty or fifty years. He had held office for sufficient number of years to show that he could be elected if he wanted to, and when other people were elected he generally had a finger in the pie. But now he was on the horns of a dilemma.

It was all on account of this new fangled way of running for the sheriffalty. The Sheriff not only has the management of the police affairs of the county, but he is treasurer besides. And when you combine in one man the management of the social relations and finances of the county, you entrust to one man two very important departments. This is the reason that West Virginia high sheriffs are head and shoulders above the ordinary sheriffs of other States.

Over in Virginia one prominent citizen is sheriff and another prominent citizen is treasurer. The sheriff and the treasurer in West Virginia are both to be found under one hat. And this is what makes the West Virginia sheriff such a big man. Figuratively speaking, he would not sleep in the same bed with a Virginia sheriff.

Next to the high sheriff is to be found the deputy-sheriff, and it had become the custom in the county of Wauchope, where T. J. Bloomfield lived, for the candidate for sheriff to name, before the primary, the men to whom the "deputyships would be offered," so worded to save the sheriff from harm for making a contract against public policy. This "naming of deputies" was done under the erroneous idea that the average man has more friends than enemies and that the names of the men who were to be exalted to the position of deputy sheriff would add strength to the head of the ticket.

This did not cause any very serious trouble to those who voted lightly, or to those who would be voted by their friends on election day, but if a voter meant to scratch deeply and well the composite ticket was apt to be a stumbling block to him.

A Wertheimer headed one ticket. He belonged to a numerous clan, and he had associated with himself a Waddam from Tumblebug District and a Roden from the Redbrush District.

A McCormick headed the ticket on the other side, and distracted public attention from himself to a certain extent by naming a Gowan and an Upton as his running mates.

They had all been pursuing Bloomfield for his vote and his influence, for each had whispered to confidential friends that Bloomfield of Jerome Creek would be for him, when the time came, and each was doing what he could to make his words come true.

He was friendly with Wertheimer, for the Wertheimers had always supported him enthusiastically when he had run for County Court, but, on the other hand, one of Wyndham's uncles had stolen a steer from him some thirty years ago and he had never liked any of the tribe since. As for Roden, he was wholly impossible. He had come by on a sleek, well-fed sorrel and had traded it to Bloomfield for a mule colt. The colt was rough and untrimmed, but it was of standard value and sound, as are all mule colts. The sorrel proved to be without any wind to speak of, and would make uncomfortable noises in his throat when forced to go faster than a walk. Bloomfield had allowed that she'd catch come a day when he would have a chance at Roden, and his somewhat unexpected entrance into politics had afforded one. But like the hunter when his favorite hound had a deer by the head, he could not shoot at Roden without injuring his friend Wertheimer.

On the other hand he had a feud with McCormick of long standing. He had promised McCormick publicly and fervently to vote against him and his posterity as long as they all should live, for some dirty work he had accused McCormick of doing him in one of his own campaigns. Now the representative citizen of Wauchope County stated systematically and well, and Bloomfield was not in a position to "tech McCormick with a forty-foot pole." In regard to deputy Gowan, he was in a measure indifferent to him. His position on the question of the relocation of the county seat had not been sound, but it had been a consistent one from his point of view, and he did not hold that against him. The third man, Upton was his nephew and one he liked almost as well as his own children.

It became a matter of conjecture with the politicians as to which candidate would have the benefit of his support, but he remained undecided up to the day of election. He would scratch his old gray head and wonder if he was not aging too fast. One day he would feel that he was going over to Wertheimer, but by the next morning he would be inclined to swallow McCormick for his nephew's sake. His neighbors were anxious to know how he stood, and if he had said he was for one or the other, a good many of them would have immediately remembered that they intended to vote that ticket too.

The evening before the date of the primary he spoke of it at the supper table and said that he wished he could tell how to vote and the eldest son suggested that pap had better toss up a dollar. The old man seemed to be pleased at the idea and he produced a dollar and tossed it up to the ceiling. A shepherd pup had been watching the proceedings and captured the dollar before it got fairly settled and rushed out in the night and lost it, and it has not been found to this day. The whole family turned and hunted for that dollar with a lantern and tallow candles, and the pup wondered why every body kicked at him when he came near. The old man went to bed in a very bad humor. He rode off to the election the next day mourning over his loss. He explained to his friends that he had spent a dollar trying to find out who to vote for, and had to give it up. The voters generally wondered how they made up their minds to vote the way they did, but all succeeded in voting for one or the other, except our friend. He cast his vote for one Phillip Robinson, a very good man for the place, but who had not run because he had failed to make satisfactory arrangements with the deputies he wanted.

This was the reason the vote stood Wertheimer 814, McCormick 811, Robinson 1, and caused the great racket in county politics that year. To decide the tie they caused the nomination of a Sheriff to be made by a convention and Wertheimer threw his strength to Robinson, who came up on a No-deputy ticket. Robinson got the nomination and was duly elected, and appointed Wertheimer, Wyndham and Roden his deputies, and then a trouble in Wauchope county in this day over the matter

SIR WILFRID LAWSON'S VIEWS.

To the Editor of Cumberland Times:

Sir,—I have noticed in your issue of the 21st inst. some remarks on my attitude in relation to the war.

Will you allow me to make some comments thereon?

I should like to do so, because the writer deals with the matter very courteously and does not assume that every one who objects to the war must be either a knave or a fool, and also because your paper circulates largely among my constituents, through its medium I may possibly bring before some of them aspects of the war question with which they are not familiar.

The article in question demurs to my calling the war 'a crime and a cruelty.'

About the cruelty there can however really be no difference of opinion, for what can be more cruel than blowing men to pieces, piercing them through with deadly weapons, and leaving those who have not met their death promptly to langwish in torture on the 'stricken field'? And yet all this is the very essence of war.

The dispute then is whether the war is a 'crime.'

Here again I suppose that we shall all agree that unnecessary war is a great crime.

The question is, was this war unnecessary, or 'inevitable' as its supporters say.

In the article several reasons are given to prove that the war was necessary.

The case of Edgar is alluded to. The policeman who killed Edgar was tried for murder and acquitted (some say improperly, but almost all those who have carefully studied the facts say properly), and it seems that such an incident is a strange justification for going to war with the country where it occurred.

Next the petition of the inhabitants of Johannesburg against the "iniquities and corruption" of the Boer oligarchy is alluded to.

I happened to be reading to-day a statement by a leading man of the South African League who took the greatest credit to the League for having got up that petition—That by the way. But, assuming that every word in the petition was absolute truth, surely we are not to go to war with every corrupt government which we can find.

In that case we shall never be at peace.

The Franchise is then alluded to, but the real point in dispute was 'Naturalization.'

Here again I can not see that we were justified in going to war with the Transvaal Government because it refused to give such facilities as we thought right for English citizens throwing off their nationality and becoming politically Boers.

The famous despatch of September 8th is mentioned in the article, but it was the despatch of August 28th which was what I may call the heart-breaking one.

The Boers understood it in the sense in which every one else understood it, but which Mr Chamberlain has since explained was a misunderstanding. That misunderstanding was never removed before the war.

The very thought of thousands of brave men having died on account of a misunderstanding is to me a horror and a nightmare.

Then the ultimatum and invasion are mentioned, which no one will expect me for one moment to justify.

But I hold strongly with Captain Bethell, a Yorkshire Conservative member, that while "the Boers technically commenced the war, we did so morally."

We had no actual as literally to drive the Boers to believe that we were determined to fight with them, and they, after the manner of those who believe in fighting, unfortunately do determined to strike the first blow.

But the writer says that the testimony of the Christian Churches in South Africa, and particularly of the Nonconformists, is practically unanimous in favor of the war.

But, after all, Christian Churches have not always been the soundest guides on political matters Byron wrote:

'Christians have burned each other quite persuaded
That all the apostles would have done as they did.'

And a careful study of the facts is better than relying on the opinions of other people, however excellent they may be.

And surely it behooves each one of us to be sure of his ground before sanctioning war with all its sins and sufferings.

When in a criminal court the life of a single man is in debate, the utmost care is taken to make sure of the facts, and and one failing in that duty is visited with the heaviest reprobation of all honest men.

What then is to be said of those who 'lightly and unadviedly' send thousands of brave men to their doom? I remember hearing John Bright quote in the House of Commons, the lines:

'For when the life of man is in debate,
No time can be too long, no pains too great.'

Yet at this moment we see two so called Christians nations engaged in the most awful mutual slaughter on account of no trouble having been taken to explain a misunderstood despatch!

I conceive that the great bulk of my fellow countrymen at this moment firmly believe that justice is on our side.

Yet no one is quite clear sighted in his own case, and is well to try and see matters from the point of view of our opponents.

Sir, I have tried in these few words to show that the continued slaughter going on in South Africa, without any visible effort to cause its cessation, is a crime.

If I be right in this view, all those who do not try to stop the war are, so far, criminally responsible for it.

Those who are called public men can hardly do anything better than try to explain as fully as possible the nature, objects, and circumstances of the war.

Thousands and thousands on this matter are in absolute ignorance.

Words in favor of peace are boycotted by the bulk of the Press; public meetings are broken up by organized violence, while from our pulpits proceed the most extraordinarily bellicose doctrines, to which no reply is possible.

Under these circumstances one welcomes the refuge which is afforded in the columns of an independent newspaper, and if you grant me that favor, perhaps I may lead some of your readers to consider whether or not this war can or can not be justly called a crime.

Yours,
WILFRID LAWSON.

Froze the Dog and the Quail.

Marlinton, W. Va., March 4.—Down here among the highest mountains of the Alleghanies, the weather man has but little to do with the temperature in winter or summer. When he gives a reckoning of ten degrees below for the State of West Virginia, it is liable to be from twenty to thirty below; and in summer when he gives the other parts of the State 100 in the shade, it often stays as low as 80 among the valleys between the high ranges, and there are places where the sun does not get entirely rid of the snow before June.

During the first week in February in this section fully a foot of hard, fine snow fell. On Saturday the 3d, Squire William Green decided that it would be a good day to take out a young bird dog he had raised and give him a few lessons, even though it was so cold that quail were not likely to be out. The squire and the dog went up the valley between Rocky Knob and Peterson's Mountain, perhaps two miles from home. After half an hour the squire found that he was too cold for comfort, even in his homespun coat, and the dog showed signs of distress. The squire determined to turn back, but when he attempted for the first time the faithful hound did not respond. He called him, but to no avail. After fifteen minutes he tried to find the dog and finally gave it up, deciding that he had started home on his own account. At home the dog was not in his kennel, nor had any one seen him. The dog was considered as lost until today, when the squire decided to make another search for him, it being one of the few comfortable days since the cold set in. The squire went back to the point in the valley where he had last seen the brute, and after an hour's search looked behind a clump of pine scrub, where a dark side sight met his eyes. There stood the dog on all four feet, legs braced, nose pointing squarely in front of him. Perhaps ten feet away, and directly in the direction his nose was pointing, was a bunch of quail, also frozen as hard as adamant.

The dog had scented the game on that fatal Saturday, and, while his master called and whistled, stood riveted by his instinct, waiting to be released from his work. In that position he had frozen to death, while the game he was covering died the same death. There had been no weather since to thaw his body, and he and the quail had remained as they were over four weeks ago.

The squire gathered up his frozen dog and the icy quail and brought them to town, where they are now on exhibition in the show window of Doddridge's general store, arranged about as they were in the woods. They present a novel appearance, being as lifelike as though they had not been in cold storage for a month.—Richmond Dispatch.

OBITUARY.

Mrs G. A. Boblett, daughter of Mr and Mrs Allen Grimes, was born Feb. 9th, 1856, departed this life January 19th, 1900. She was married to Mr Harvey Boblett June 25th, 1872.

Was converted in early childhood at the Old Bethel Church, on Swago, and joined that church on probation. She lived a consistent christian life, but was never permanently connected with any church until she joined the Presbyterian church in 1895. She had been afflicted for several months, but was only confined to her bed a week. She bore her sufferings with christian fortitude. On Wednesday night she called her family to her bedside and embracing them in her arms, said she felt she was sinking and wanted to talk to them, probably for the last time. She wanted those who had not given their hearts to God to promise to meet her in Heaven.

On Thursday she talked to all and had a good word for all who came in. When she had bid them all goodbye, she wanted some one to join her in singing. Her husband joined her and sang, "There are angels hovering round"; she also joined with her daughter in singing, "On Jordan's stormy banks I stand."

She requested all to care for her little ones she was leaving behind, and for her husband to gather the little flock and take them to Sunday-school. She told them not to wish for her back, but to be faithful and come to her.

On Friday evening she remarked to a friend, "The crossing is very near and I am ready for the call."

She leaves a husband and ten children, seven daughters and three sons; two daughters married, Mrs E. S. McClure and Mrs Seymour Gladwell. She was a true and faithful wife, kind and patient mother.

"Farewell dear mother, sweet thy rest,
Weary with years and cured with pain,
Farewell, till in some happy place
We shall behold thy face again.
'Tis ours to miss thee all our years
And tender memories of thee keep,
Thine in the Lord to rest, for so,
He giveth His beloved sleep."

In your last issue you wished t know the opinion of the people o the primary vote. My thought Mr Editor, are conveyed in the words: "In every county office w want a MAN:"

Let us drop our politics,
When it comes to county tricks,
And vote for him.

If he is a Democrat—
What care you or I for that?—
But vote for him.

Or be he a no-ble man,
And is a Republican;
Then vote for him.

I care not for his name,
Or the home from whence he came
I'll vote for him.

If his life is dark as night,
And he does his business right:
I'll vote for him.

Sober then must be his throat
When he seeks to find my vote—
But vote for him.

But I care not; at the polls
Time will tell the guilty souls;
Just vote for him.

Look around just all you can,
But be sure you find a man:
And vote for him.

A Fiendish Attack.

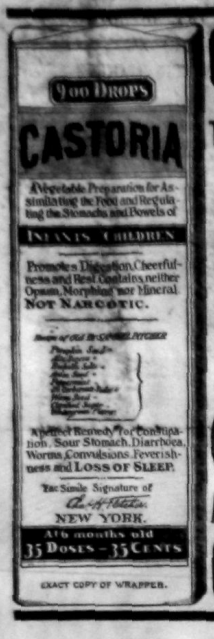

An attack was lately made on C. J. Collier of Cherokee, Iowa, that nearly proved fatal. It came through his kidneys. His back got so lame he could not sleep without great pain nor sit in a chair except propped up with cushions. No remedy helped him until he tried Electric Bitters which effected such a wonderful change that he writes he feels like a new man. This marvelous medicine cures backache and kidney trouble in a few days. Only 50c at Harry R. Edmiston's drug store; N. J. Brown, Mill Point, W. Va.; Beard & Cox, Academy; R. H. Hannah, Dunlevy; Geo. A WONDERFUL YARN.

We failed to perform the perfunctory duty of denying the truth of the article on the front page, concerning the frozen dog and bevy of quail. The article has been printed in a number of daily papers lately and the Forest and Stream. The postmaster here has received numerous inquiries from apparently rational men as to the truth of the article. They may repent for their comfort:

"The world of fools hath such a store,
That he who would not see an ass,
Must stay at home and bolt his door.
And break his looking glass."

This tale is very nearly as old as the hills and every few years it is localized and made to do duty again. There is no Squire Green, no Doddridge's store, no Petersons mountain, no Bald Knob, no setter dog, and precious few quail. All together it reminds us of a verse from James Whitcomb Riley:

"They sung, this ain't no board fence,
This ain't nine little goblins with green glass eyes:
This is a vision the mind invents
After a supper of cold mince pies."

We print on the first page our Wilfred Lawson's views of the war as written by him for a local newspaper published near his home. He is one of the most famous opponents of the war in the House of Commons. He is the many of the most humane leaders of our country who are striving in our front of enlightenment and civilization if we have to submit the settlement of terms. In the manner of people of a richer age. England and the United States are each engaged in wars of conquest such as many economists had hoped to have relegated to a bygone age.

Rev. Chas Sheldon took a stroll at Topeka, Kansas, and turned it into a religious daily and run it ten days for week without getting any money for her. The question it started under it a wonderful success while the many thousand religious papers of the country which have been toiling for years to better the world, were not honored to an earth dollar or a word of notice. Rev Sheldon belongs to a class which should be grouped in our church known as Brotherhood.

The executive committee of the Pocahontas County Medical Association will please meet at Marlinton on the first day of the April term of the Circuit Court at 11 o'clock a. m. for the purpose of fixing the place of holding the next annual meeting of the Association.

Publishers' Notes.

Do you know that about one hundred real estate men all over the United States have subscribed for the Times lately. You might place a land advertisement advantageously in the Times.

Armour & Company of Chicago have issued a 13 sheet $1000 prize Calendar. It is a beautiful work of art, and is given free to purchasers of their meat extracts and soups. Write them if your grocer does not keep their goods.

Remember our combination subscription offer, this paper one year and the Farm Journal nearly five years for $1.00. The offer applies to to all subscribers who pay up arrearages (at $1.01 per year) and one year in advance.

The most of our subscribers have received a sample copy of the Farm Journal, and can judge of its merits for themselves. It is the best farmers paper published, and is chock full of sense besides. It also puts you in touch with reliable firms dealing in every sort of farm implement and equipment. The publishers guarantee the reliability of every advertiser.

We have sent in the names of 210 Farm Journal subscribers to date. These are receiving the paper regularly, duly credited on the label to 1901. The number ought to be increased to 1000 before the offer is withdrawn.

A MOST WONDERFUL CURE.

A Grand Old Lady Gives Her Experience.

Mrs. Thankful Orilla Hurd lives in the beautiful village of Brighton, Livingston Co., Mich. This venerable and highly respected lady was born in the year 1812, the year of the great war, in Hebron, Washington Co., New York. She came to Michigan in 1836, the year of "Superance and Tyler too." All her faculties are excellently preserved, and possessing a very retentive memory, her mind is full of interesting reminiscences of her early life, of the early days of the State of Michigan and the interesting and remarkable people she has met, and the stirring events of which she was a witness. Her nonagenarian experience, including the mucous membrane, it gotre, or in eruptions of various kinds, may be known as catarrh in the head, or developing in the lungs it may be, and often is, the prime cause of consumption.

Speaking of her case, Mrs. Hurd says: "I was troubled for many years with a bad scaly disease. My arms and limbs would break out in a mass of sores, discharging yellow matter. My neck began to swell and became very unsightly in appearance. My body was covered with scrofulous eruptions. My eyes were also greatly inflamed and weakened, and they pained me very much. My blood was in a very bad condition and my head ached severely at frequent intervals, and I had no appetite. I had sores also in my ears. I was in a miserable condition. I had tried every remedy that had been recommended, and doctor after doctor had failed. One of the best physicians in the state told me I must die of scrofulous consumption, as internal abscesses were beginning to form. In the length was told of Dr. Johnston of Detroit, and his famous Sarsaparilla. I tried a bottle, more as an experiment than anything else, as I had no faith in it, and greatly to my agreeable surprise, I began to grow better. You can be sure I kept on taking it. I took a good many bottles. But I steadily improved until I became entirely well. All the sores healed up, all the bad symptoms disappeared. I gained perfect health, and I have never been troubled with scrofula since. Of course an old lady of 85 years is not a young woman, but I have had remarkably good health since then, and I firmly believe that JOHNSTON'S SARSAPARILLA is the greatest blood purifier and the best medicine in the wide world, both for scrofula and as a spring medicine." This remarkably interesting old lady did not lek to be more than sixty, and she repeated several times, "I believe my life was saved by JOHNSTON'S SARSAPARILLA."

LAND WITHOUT STRIKES.

A Law Which Has Been Remarkably Successful in New Zealand.

New Zealand has anticipated the rest of the world by enacting a law which deals so rationally with all trade disputes that it has actully prevented strikes for the last five years. It is impossible to present more than an outline of the plan.

Both associations of employers and the trade unions may be incorporated. Those which are chartered or registered, choose the members of their own board and also the members of the court to which disputes are referred. Whether organized or not, the associations and trade unions are subject to the law.

The colony of New Zealand is divided into industrial districts, for each of which there is a conciliation board elected for three years. It consists of two persons chosen by registered employers; two by registered trade unions, and one chairman or person elected by the four, who is chairman. When a dispute arises between employers and the men in their employ, either party may refer the matter in dispute to the district board, which has full authority to investigate the facts and to command a settlement.

In case either party will not accept the decision the matter is referred to the State court. This consists of one person representing the trade unions, one the employers, and a third, a chosen Judge of the supreme court, appointed by the Governor. The court has a three years' term and is wisely independent of politics.

A decision by the court is final and must be accepted under a penalty for violation of not more than £500 or $2,500. Moreover, when a dispute has been referred to the conciliation board, and until it is finally settled, a strike or lockout is illegal.

That there have been about fifty cases referred to district boards or to the court in the past five years, that during that time there has not been a strike nor lockout in New Zealand and that in every case the decision has been accepted by both parties, seems to prove either that the law is excellent, or that it is excellently administered. Perhaps it demonstrates both propositions. The necessity for the passage of a similar law in this country is to apparent to require argument. Aside from the interests of the employers and the employed, the greater interests of the general public demand it.—Youth's Companion.

IN SOUTH AFRICA.

How the British Care for the Wounded Soldiers.

Modern artillery's effectiveness has put a very different complexion upon the uses and necessities of field hospitals. A field hospital used to be very near the fighting line—it was often actually under fire. But nowadays, when artillery fire is commonly effective at four thousand yards, no field hospital could be allowed sufficiently near the fighting line to permit of the wounded being taken directly to it, and the organization of aid has been altogether altered.

In South Africa it has been arranged that all the effective aid in the field will be that of the Army Medical Corps. Voluntary aid will confine itself to the lines of communication between the field and the base hospital and between the base and general hospitals. The working organization is as follows:—

Accompanying the fighting line are the bearer companies of the Army Medical Corps—three or four men to each regular regimental company. When a man drops out wounded, the Army Medical Corps men pick him up and take him to the nearest dressing station, where he is attended to as quickly as possible. From the dressing station the wounded are taken to collecting stations, these being placed at points where more shelter is obtainable.

In the case of collecting stations, if it is possible, of course, to select more effective shelter than at the dressing stations, where shelter is more a matter of impossibility. From the collecting stations the wounded are carried as quickly as possible to the field hospital. Here, generally speaking, they remain a day, and are then removed to the base hospital.

There will be twelve field hospitals in South Africa, four stationary or base hospitals and four general hospitals, each with its complete staff. The distribution of these hospitals will be determined by the officers commanding in South Africa, and must depend on the manner in which the military situation develops.

Tyrolese Courting.

When a young Tyrolese goes a-courting in earnest he carries with him a bottle of wine, of which he pours out a portion and presents it to the object of his affection.

If she accepts it the whole affair is settled. Very often the girl has not made up her mind when she will take refuge in excuses, so as not to drink the wine, and yet not refuse it point blank, for that is considered a gross insult, proving that she has been merely trifling with the affections of her lover. She will, for instance, maintain that the wine "looks sour," or that wine "disagrees with her." In fact she makes use of any subterfuge that presents itself at the moment.

She lovers loth to make sure of their case beforehand, but it is very rarely disappointed. Not a word need be spoken, and the pain is spared the painful "No" of civilization.

A Lost River.

One of the most remarkable freaks of nature occurs in Mexico. It is a river that is not a river. The bed of it lies in a valley between the Rio Grande and Pecos Rivers. It is not a flood or drainage stream. It is simply bed. Numerous big tributaries flow into it from the neighboring mountains immediately on the west, but they reach the bed of the main stream they disappear from sight. Then for some reason or another a river, which should be 300 miles in length, has no existence which could be proved.

Advice of Americans.

Americans, which had no manner of doubt, are in the habit of giving presidents in the United States but year to the extent of 1,500,000 pounds, valued at $7,500,000, which is one-tenth of all the trade done.

Nicely Caught.

A few evenings ago a gentleman stepped from a train at one of the London stations, when a young lady skipped up to him, threw her arms rapturously about his neck and kissed him many times, saying "Oh, papa, I'm so glad you have come!" The old gentleman threw both arms around her, and held her firmly to his breast.

Soon she looked up into his face and horror stood in her eye.

'Oh, my! you are not my papa!" she said' trying to free herself from his embrace.

"Yes I am," insisted the old man, holding her tightly; "you are my long-lost daughter, and I am going to keep you in my arms till I get a policeman."

When the officer came he found the old gentleman's diamond pin in the girl's hand.—Selected.

Baby's Wireless Telephone Plan.

The Rev. Case Davis, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal Church at Warren, Ill., has a daughter nearly 5 years of age who is very particular about saving her prayers before retiring each night. One evening last week her mother was detained from hearing her prayers at the usual hour, and the little lassie waited patiently some time. Finally patience ceased to be a virtue with her, and she climbed upon a chair, and, taking down the receiver of the telephone, shouted into it:

"Hello, central; dive me heaven. I want to say my prayers."—Chicago Inter Ocean.

VOL. 18, NO. 37 — MARLINTON, WEST VIRGINIA, APRIL 5, 1900. — $1.00 PER YEAR

West Virginia University.

MORGANTOWN, W. VA.

The growth of the University is quite as notable in its equipment, its faculty, and its new departments as in its attendance. For example, look at established two years ago. It has a faculty of seven instructors, trained under the best teachers in this country and Europe. It occupies a separate building fitted up especially for its needs. Instruction on all stringed instruments, including violin, viola, mandolin, guitar, etc., is free. For voice and piano the fees are very low. A magnificent pipe organ for Commencement Hall is being constructed and it will be for the use of students of the school of Music. If you are interested in the study of music, write for full information.

Other departments of the University are developing with equal rapidity. The Preparatory Department, with its four new instructors, deserves special mention. Write for a special pamphlet about it.

The University has a faculty of sixty-five instructors, graduates of the foremost schools in the world.

The Winter Quarter begins January 1, and the Spring Quarter April 1.

A POSTER'S JOKE.

When Pullman cars were first invented did this joke happen and it has been kept alive by antiquarians. The ancient narrators tell it and people can not choose but hear. The young grow up and enjoy it and pass it on to the next generation

There was a passenger who was hard to wake, and on going to bed called the porter and said: "Here I want to get off at Earlyville at 5 o'clock. I will be sleepy but I want you to put me off at all hazards. Don't mind my fighting or resisting, I must be put off. Here are two dollars."

The passenger woke next morning fifty miles beyond Earlyville. He looked out to find the porter who had failed to wake him, and saw him bleeding and sorely wounded. One ear was half torn off, an eye blacked, and his clothes were torn. The passenger shouted to him: "Here, porter, why did n't you put me off at Earlyville?"

The porter saw him and gasped: "Fore de Lawd, boss, who did I put off at Earlyville anyhow?"

TIMBER.

It is hard to make people believe what wonderful forests we have in Pocahontas. We have known many a man to pass thro the county, following a road along the top of the river ridges or thro a farming section, and go away thinking he has some idea of the county. He will say that the timber of Pocahontas is highly overrated. It takes time to know this county, and it is so large that probably no man can say he knows it thoroughly.

There are many thousand acres of oak in this county in the burnt woods sections that do not amount to much, but on the other hand there are vast sections where the forests are so dense and dank that a forest fire has never been known.

Last year Colonel Dan O'Connel cutting on the headwaters of the Greenbrier River for the West Virginia Pulp and Paper Company, took four and one half million feet of spruce off of one hundred acres, an average of 45,000 feet to the acre, and three and one half millions off of 200 acres, an average of 22,500 feet to the acre.

On the head of Williams River some Pennsylvanian lumber dealers measured average acres of timber on the stand and found an average yield of 60,000 feet to the acre. They measured a tree which was not unusual for its size, which was 19 inches at the butt and at the height of 84 feet was still over seven inches in diameter. The timber of Pocahontas represents many millions of dollars.

A DOCTOR'S JOKE.

We asked a doctor the other day what he thought of the old adage, "At forty every man's a physician or a fool." He said he did not know about that but he did know of some who were both.

A DARTMAN'S DEATH.

The delicate and refiner's scales showed the weight to be two pounds. A frog hair would have brought the bar down. The purchaser turned over a certified check for $2,000 and the title papers to two Marlinton lots making the price paid for the golden treasure not that of a king's ransom. He now owned the precious package locked his check and stepped out in the night. But the lonely eyes of Stone Clock Bill, the desperado, had been fixed upon the Standard, through the plate glass window and when the unsuspecting citizen turned his steps homeward, the outlaw followed with stealthy tread. At the darkest turning the fatal knife was lifted and it descended and was driven home and Percival Timberly, a Marlinton millionaire was no more. Clutching the two-pound roll of butter, for which he had shed blood, the villain fled to the fastnesses of the mountains.

Mrs Percival Timberly had been a Biltsinger and with that haughty house it was considered a disgrace not to have butter on the table. To a Biltsinger disgrace was worse than death. For his high resolve to have butter on the table at all hazards, Percival Timberly sacrificed his life and property in the spring of 1900.

Mrs Percival being left butterless did not long survive her husband.

A POUND OF COAL.

To the student of natural science one of the most interesting and suggestive topics is what is termed "correlation of growth." This interest is owing to the fact that it implies a mental purpose, not to be regarded as a physical cause. In the sense of external adaptations, correlation of growth may be regarded as one of the most common or, in a sense, universal of all the Laws of Nature. As an illustration of correlation of growth, let us consider the origin, nature, and capacities of a pound of coal. This article is a substance correlated in a truly wonderful manner with the needs, the powers, and the industrial energies of humanity; for it contains within itself, in a condensed and portable form, a store of physical force that seems well-nigh incredible for one to believe as to amount.

The particles of one pound weight of coal are held together by a Force that being liberated and applied in the form of heat, that force is capable of lifting one million times its own weight to the height of one foot. No other substance yet known to man is comparable to coal as a furnisher of Force. This seems to be its special use or function, a fusnisher of force in relation to man's mechanical and inventive powers. Now the strange thing about all this that this pound of coal should have been rendered capable of exerting its power or discharging its special use by processes of preparation that began millions of years before there was a man to need it and use it. Now such an external correlation of growth is nevertheless a result arising by way of a natural consequence out of certain physical courses working according to natural laws, owing to internal correlations of growth between solar heat and vegetable structure, and again between solar heat and vegetable structure, and the causes that occasion such interchanges between sea and land as to put the sea where the land was and the land where the sea was.

As a working theory, correlation of growth comes nearer than most others to illustrate the method in which vital forces are made to evolve a new Form of Life, but it does not explain the reason how vital forces originate a new form of life in the creative sense. And even if the How could be explained, that explanation could give no reliable information at all of the fittings of that new Form of Life into the outward requirements of its own life. Here the scientist goes, but he can go no further by sight. If he has eyes to see and a pure truth-loving mind to reason with, he decently recognizes the correlation of growth, and all other external correlations as in their very nature belong to Mind are the workings of Mind, and are intelligible only in the light of Mind.

As long as a pound of coal remains on the earth, and one human being capable of correct reasoning about its origin and history as an illustration of "correlation of growth," it will be evidence of the result of a Mental Purpose, and of the physical means by which this pound of coal have been worked to order, subject to direction, and had that order and direction determined by foresight, forethought and contrivance. The pound of coal and pure human reason are in a beautiful sense witnesses to the fact that the Creator's works of Providence are His most holy, wise, and powerful in preserving and governing all his creatures and all their actions.

A Hot Time in Old Vermont.

The New York Sun thinks there is a "hot time" ahead in the old town of Northfield, Vt., and it explains the situation there as follows:

Though the Green Mountain State is now blessed with a prohibition law, any town that wishes it may have, under the law, a public liquor agency, the liquor, of course to the drunk for medicinal purposes and there were invalids enough in Northfield to secure such an agency for their town by casting a majority of voters at town meeting. The sound and well Northfieldians, however having no use for liquor themselves, frosh upon its use by others and they held another town meeting at which they passed an ordinance that the names of the persons buying liquor at the agency, and likewise the names of those unsuccessfully trying to buy it, should be printed each month in the local newspaper.

Thus, at little cost, Northfield provides itself with a continuous program of social and domestic entertainment that will drive dullness from the town for many a long day and which promises to enliven the intellectual life of the whole State. Already the Vermont journals are discussing the many ethical sides of the matter, and with some warmth. Resolved, It is no disgrace to be on the town's liquor list," is a question that will engage the best debating talent in many a Vermont lyceum. Sociologists are hastening to the spot to write books on The Northfield Plan We look with hopeful anticipation also to the improvement in the science of apologetics promised by the publication of the Northfield lists."

The Elkins Extension.

The engineers in charge of the branch of the West Virginia Central and Pittsburg railway, to be built from Elkins to the Greenbrier division of the Chesapeake and Ohio, now under construction, announce that bids will be received until April 15 next for the grading and mason work of this line. As already stated in the Manufacturers Record, it is to be forty-three miles in length. The contracts for two tunnels have already been let. John W. moore at Elkins is engineer.

A Substantial Fact.

W. R. Clark, Pickaway, Virginia says: I have for several years been using Ramons Pills in my family with most satisfactory result, and do not hesitate to recommend them to my customers as superior to any of the various kinds kept in stock. Not only are your pills reliable but Ramons Relief and Nerve and Bone Oil are the most satisfactory remedies I ever handled, and if they were more generally used, they would often make the Doctors bill only 25c instead of $25. These goods need no dusting in my stock because they are constantly coming in and going out are Trade-Winners and Trade Keepers. These good qualities are not a theory but a substantial fact.

All Newspaper Ideas Will Tell You.

So.

The editor may read the proofs of a newspaper but times out goes to protestly over the same error with out seeing it, says an exchange. All newspaper men will tell you so But just as soon as the paper is printed in its complet shape, there stands that error not in front of you so big that you cannot see anything else. It is a strange fact. And this is the reason that it is so easy to add a paper after it is printed.

ADIRONDACK TOWN'S RISE.

TUPPER LAKE VILLAGE A COW PASTURE TEN YEARS AGO.

Uncle John Hurd Built a Railroad from Nowhere to the Place, then Put Up a Lumber Mill and the People Came.

From the New York Sun.

Tupper Lake Village, N. Y., is the town that Uncle John Hurd built over night in McLaughlin's cow-pasture, and that shortly grew to such proportions as to admit only one rival in the Adirondacks, in point of population, and none in point of trade. It has risen since Phœnix-like from the ruins of a disastrous fire that swept away the entire business part last summer, and proved by its marvellous recuperative power, the town of mushroom growth in the beginning, it has a substantial reason for existence.

The pioneer and patriarch of Tupper Lake is old William McLaughlin, who was born at Calais, Me., in 1812, and came into the Adirondacks with a lumber company forty seven years ago. Previous to McLaughlin a trapper named Cole had built a little shanty on the river bank and cleared an acre of ground for a garden patch, and supported his family on venison and fish as the mainstay, and a few vegetables by way of a relish. McLaughlin cleared forty or fifty acres of land and started the typical backwoods lumber farm, which is designed primarily for raising hay for the horses employed in dsawing logs.

The first year McLaughlin was at Tupper Lake hay for the requirements of the lumber companies was hauled from Lake Champlain through the centre of the Adirondacks, over frozen lakes and roughly constructed roads across the portages. The distance as the trail ran was about sixty miles, and a considerable part of the hay was eaten by the horses on the way. At times when storms delayed progress some of the teams ate up all the hay and turned back without ever seeing Tupper Lake. It was customary for three or four teams to travel in company, and all were fed from the load of one of the sleds.

At that time nothing but pine was cut, and spruce was regarded as of little consequence. The logs were driven down the Raquette River to Hewitville, three miles from Pottsdam, and there sawed into lumber. The river was then in much better condition for floating the logs than it is to-day, and only thirty-five days were required for the first drive, whereas logs which go by this route at present are from seventy-five to one hundred days on the way. Continuous driving has scooped out the banks and widened the stream, and with less water it is a vastly more difficult and tedious matter to get the logs through than it was in the early days of lumbering.

In 1871 the State built the reservour down below Raquette Pond that backed up the water of the river for miles and killed hundreds of thousands of growing trees, many of which still stretch their gaunt limbs heavenward. Ten years ago there were only half a dozen families living in the neighborhood of Tupper Lake. Mc Laughlin, Sim and Mart Moody, Sim Ratty, George McBride, and Ernest Johnson were the permanent residents, living at intervals of a mile or more from each other.

Four years before John Hurd had gone to Moira at the northwest corner of the woods and started a railroad south into the wilderness without any very apparent objective point unless it was his purpose to bisect the Adirondacks and connect with the existing Delaware and Hudson branch at North Creek at the diametrically opposite corner. From the road was built to St. Regis Falls, a distance of twelve miles from Moira. Then after a time it was extended about six miles further to Saint Clair, three teachers miles to Brandon, and finally to the lowest point of all to the shores of the Raquette. It was a spasmodic piece of railroad progression, characteristic of the eccentricity of the man who planned it. If John Hurd intended to piece out his road at the ends and make it a connecting link in a trunk line between New York and Ottawa he was doomed to disappointment, for the road came to a standstill so far as work on its southern terminus is concerned. Hurd named his terminus Tupper Lake, altho it is as a matter of fact two miles from Tupper Lake and on the shores of an entirely distinct sheet of water known as Raquette pond. It was his way to anticipate events.

The road ran through unbroken forests and ended nowhere. As there was no traffic that could be counted upon to pay operating expenses Hurd set to work to create this necessary adjunct. Other men construct railroads to supply a real or prospective demand, but John Hurd was not built on the ordinary plan, and reversed the process. Having finished his road he decided that he must have lumber as the most available freight to carry over it, and to supply this he built what was then said to be the largest sawmill in the world. In this enterprise his usual plan of putting the cart before the horse was adhered to. First he built the mill and afterward he began looking around for the logs on which to set it working. Here he encountered a snag of more than ordinary proportions. On all sides were hundreds of square miles of timber land, but not one acre was his, and the companies owning the land all had use for their logs and could not profitably be persuaded to part with them. There were three mills in Pottsdam and three just above that got a considerable part of their logs at Tupper Lake, by way of the Raquette River, and no one of them was anxious to share with Uncle John. Nevertheless he finished the mill with a capacity of turning out a million feet in four days, and then it was that the hunter, returning from his winter trapping, rubbed his eyes to see a town of 2000 inhabitants and the busy stir of industry where before had been the stump-dotted field and the cows belled so that they could the more easily be found in the thickets when milking time came.

It was a heterogenous assemblage of bustling Yankees and valuable French Canadians that awoke mornings in the little, unpainted frme dwellings and fell to their task of converting forest trees into daily bread. Money circulated freely, and there was good fortune for every one with the single exception of the man who made the town. He had met and conquered successive barriers, but at last there was one that he could not surmount, and if report is to be credited it was the lack of logs to convert into lumber to carry over his railroad. The big mill ran a year. Hurd tried making wire reels and baskets and similar articles, but if there was a profit on these the volume of business was not large enough and the crisis could not be averted. To-day John Hurd walks the streets of Tupper Lake and sees prosperity on every side, but the control of his various enterprises has passed into other hands and he does not share the prosperity.

Tupper Lake village at present has a population of 3,000. Two years ago a Raines law census was taken to regulate the license fee and the returns then gave something in excess of 2500 inhabitants. It has three churches, but the Roman Catholic far out-numbers the others in point of adherents, never ministering to the spiritual needs of 800 families.

The fire which swept the business part of the town started in the pioneer store of King & Page, and was probably of incendiary origin. It was at its height at midnight and carried everything before it, fanned by a strong southwesterly wind. There was then no city water and no mains in the streets of the village and the fire department had trouble with their hose and could do nothing to combat the flames. Famous on the streets of Utica, a hundred miles away, was the reflection of the fire in the sky that the residents of the little town of Alden, fifteen miles north of Tupper, were unaware of the holocaust till the following morning, when they awoke to find the ground strewn with cinders from the burned town.

Many men lost their all in the fire, but the visitors had kindly rushed when the work of rebuilding the town commenced. A water system was installed, supplied with high pressure from a mountain lake three miles away, while larger and more substantial buildings were erected, and despite the crushing loss only a few months ago, the town at the present time appears to the casual visitor at least to be bettr and more prosperous than ever before. . . .

It was said recently that the Pan-American Exposition in Buffalo in 1901 would require 10,000,000 feet of lumber for building purposes, and that the placing of this great order would affect the lumber market of the contry. Tupper Lake could in an emergency fill the contract in thirty days without unduly affecting the local market or or straining the facilities of production. Hurd's great mill, which is now owned by the New York Export Lumber Company, would have to be put in operation, it is true, but this could be easily accomplished if the proper inducement was forthcoming.

At present, however, only a part of the spruce logs cut around Tupper Lake are converted into lumber. The Santa Clara Lumber Co the International Paper Company, and the Norwood Manufacturing Company convert their logs into pulp stock for the manufacture of paper. Exclusive of the Hurd mill, and including both pulp and lumber, Tupper Lake will probably manufacture the equivalent of 60,000,000 board measure of spruce and pine logs during the open season of 1900.

Spreads Like Wildfire.

When things are "the best" they become "the best selling." Abraham Hare, a leading druggist, of Belleville, O., writes: "Electric Bitters are the best selling bitters I have handled in 20 years. You know why? Most diseases begin in disorders of stomach, liver, kidneys, bowels' blood and nerves. Electris Bitters tone up the stomach, regulates liver kidneys and bowels, purifies the blood, strengthens the nerves, hence cures multitudes of maladies. It builds up the entire system. YOU CAN DO GOOD!

You can help a good cause along and also be paid for it in the following way. Wrap neatly and securely any cloth bound book of 125 pages or more (it may be an old school book if not torn) and mail it to the Fruitdale Seminary, at Fruitdale, Ala., as a contribution to the library. It will be thankfully received and they will, in return for your kindness send you an excellent little paper a whole year and six curious shells from the Gulf Mexico, no two alike.

Next week we will begin running this paper as Capt. Kidd would have run it. Delinquent subscribers may expect a call from us with their accounts stuck in the muzzle of a six-shooter. Otherwise this paper will be running as the Sheriff would run it."

How To Gain Flesh

Persons have been known to gain a pound a day by taking an ounce of SCOTT'S EMULSION. It is strange, but it often happens.

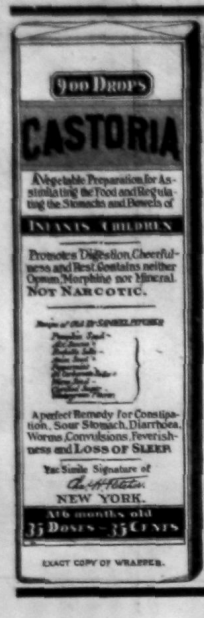

Somehow the ounce produces the pound; it seems to start the digestive machinery going properly, so that the patient is able to digest and absorb his ordinary food, which he could not do before, and that is the way the gain is made.

A certain amount of flesh is necessary for health; if you have not got it you can get it by taking

MARLINTON, THURS. APR. 5, 1900

Entered at the post-office at Marlinton, W. Va., as second class matter.

HUNTERSVILLE and EXPANSION.

What is destined to be the most absorbing topic in connection with the next meeting of the County Court is the question of changing the boundary line between Huntersville and Edray Districts. The petition has been filed, and we consider it all but certain that the result will be that Huntersville will get her share of the railroad mileage. As far as we have been informed, the people of Edray are willing to give up half the mileage of the railroad to Huntersville, but are practically united in opposing the desire of the petitioners that the river should be the line, for then they would lose nearly all the railroad, as well as the town of Marlinton.

It seems that the County Court has absolute power in fixing the boundaries of the district. There does not seem to be any way to appeal from its decision on this point. The law requires the county to be divided in not less than three nor more than ten districts. The olive branch held out by the correspondent from the Huntersville district in last week's paper can hardly be accepted, for Edray district is already larger than many counties, and it is hard to get two justices and two constables located, as it is. It will not be many years until the county will have to have several new districts created, and to decrease the number from four to three would be a move in the wrong direction.

As far as the town of Marlinton is concerned, it is more than likely that the next legislature will make it an independent school district, and so it will not be affected by the question of district taxes. The trouble will come in about the voting precincts. Either two voting precincts will have to be established, or the voters in West Marlinton and surrounding country, the living in sight of the polls, will have to ride to Edray to vote. The Buckeye neighborhood also would come in and cast fearful eyes at their last voting precinct and go on to Edray and cast their votes, a proceeding which would bring out action that caused such inconvenience periodically to light and cause plenty of grumbling.

The logical solution of the problem seems to be to give Huntersville district the railroad line above Marlinton, making the river the line, leaving the town of Marlinton and the railroad below it to Edray district.

The question from Huntersville will certainly be regarded as the big one to be for Huntersville's the matter. The matter to the Edray people, and if the question comes up at the [illegible] will be well to [illegible] in the welfare of Edray district. The third member, who is from Green Bank, is in a position to view the matter from a wholly disinterested standpoint.

The most pronounced grievance the Edray people have is the fact that a few years ago the Board of Education built a large two-story school-house on the east side of the river, which Huntersville seems willing to assimilate.

SANCTIFICATION.

We hear a great deal about sanctification, and our ideas on the subject, it may well be believed, were very murky and uncertain. Lately we have been looking the matter up and have come to the conclusion that a sanctified man is merely a christian who is "set in his ways." If a man is really sanctified you can trade horses with him without looking in his horses mouth. As there is no way of knowing whether he is sanctified or not, it is better to look in the mouth anyway as an ordinary business precaution. If the man claims to be sanctified it is best not to trade horses with him at all, for when an individual gets so puffed up in his own conceit that he believes he has lost the art of sinning, he is a dangerous man in the community. He will skin you alive, and give God the glory. He will set himself up as a standard, measure everything by his narrowness, and be dead to faith, hope, and charity.

We received a copy of a paper devoted to special view of sanctification, or holiness,—the kind that comes in an instant and lasts forever,—and in it was a letter from an evangelist who believed in instantaneous sanctification. He seems a trifle narrow and fairly eaten up with egotism. Here is an excerpt from his letter reporting a series of meetings:

"One man told his wife he would not live with her if she professed sanctification; but, all praise to God's matchless name, he sanctified her. I found much opposition from the whiskey element, and one old man, a wandering shot, left our meeting in a fit of passion. But God helped me to lay judgment to the line, and his precious truth swept away false creeds faster than false traditions false standards if morals and false conceptions of God."

His must be a comfortable conception of religion. In our humble opinion, one of the best signs it can be that of a want of sanctification under pretense on the part of an individual that he is sanctified. We firmly believe that in many christians the power to do any material evil is dead, but in such case everyone has more or less of the fact thus the more sanctified. Let sins that shouldn't so stand do take head but to fall."

Patton's Summary of Christian Doctrine:

"Regeneration is related to sanctification as birth is to growth. The soul's new life begins at regeneration. Its development is spiritual, strength and stature is its sanctification."

NEW HOPE, VA.

Since our last writing we read in the Vindicator of a great many deaths that have occurred during last week, many of wham left bright evidence of hope of a happy home beyond.

We are glad to rectify the mistake about the death of Dr J. W. Watson reported last week. He is much better.

The death of Rev W. T. Yarbrough took place at New Hope on the 19th. He had been a consistent Baptist worker for many years.

On Saturday Mrs Harnsbarger was buried at the Brethren church near New Hope, and on Sunday Mrs Garber. They were both advanced in years.

The Rev J. W. Martin was a pleasant caller at the home of the writer yesterday, and expressed his regret at the loss the good people of Green Bank had to sustain thro the death of Rev A. C. Hamil.

The writer is very much in hope the smallpox scare is over in old Pocahontas, and that it may never set up its scarecrow again.

We would be glad to be out in the old Sugar country and enjoy a taste of the sweets that are being made in that part by many friends and relatives.

Spring seems to have gone back on us during the past two weeks. Wheat is not looking well at this writing, and after all we fear a late spring.

We earnestly wish the good people of Pocahontas would all subscribe for the Staunton Spectator and Vindicator, for through its columns we get sound doctrine. The editor bimself is such a good old Democrat.

We wish our many friends in Pocahontas the best of health and great success in all their undertakings.

We feel quite sure that the worthy Rev W. T. Price, who is well acquainted in the Valley, will be pleased to learn, if he has not already heard, that Rev J. N. Vandeventer and his faithful band of workers are making quite extensive arrangements to build a Presbyterian church in the quiet little town of New Hope. They have the lumber sawed and other arrangements made. While the writer is not a Presbyterian, it is my earnest wish to see the good work go on, and hope that the good Presbyterians in old Pocahontas will add a kind word of prayer and that Rev W. T. Price may add a letter of encouragement and send a copy of the Times to Rev J. N. Vandeventer at Ft. Defiance. He is a gentleman of good report, a noble christian and an able speaker, and deserves a great deal of encouragement for the good work he is carrying on. The writer earnestly desires to see both he and his faithful band of workers in the near future permitted to worship God unmolested, under their own vine and fig tree. A FRIEND.

BUCKEYE.

We are glad to say the good people of our town and neighborhood who have been wrestling with grip are improving nicely.

J. J. Strang has moved a part of his force to camp No. 2. We can see from the active movements of Mr McCormick he is a man of experience in railroad affairs. Let the good work go on.

D. P. B. says the hairs of his head may be all numbered, but that does not prevent Sunday earl on his mustache.

We notice some people are often forced to realize the truth of the old saying. A mule is dangerous at both ends.

About the behavior of outsiders at church, a close observer says that some of our town boys have work out a great deal of hoot and shoe leather kicking the church house. Say go must pull the beam out of her own eye before she can justly condemn the morals of other people. Don't throw stones while living in glass houses.

To be plain, we have had some very bad behavior at church—but who is to blame? The "Mountain Rover" would say other boys, but I would say the members of the church, who have the rights and powers of protection. It is their own fault that the House of God and its occupants are maltreated by the degraded part of humanity. Were we honored a decent respect for the sacred places and religious worship? The rigid and only way to christianity and to populate the church is to shoot all evil-doers within its pale. The Bible tends shorter to this. Keep fire in our hearts.

BILLY BOB.

MILL POINT.

Gentle spring time is here. Soon the silvery snow flakes will cease to fall. Plowing seems to be in order.

O. E. Wilson and Sandis Auldridge have been ill from effects of grippe but are recovering.

We learn that George Dilley has taken a job of hauling for Rev T. W. Hogsett.

Rev T. W. Hogsett has gotten his blacksmith tools and will go to work soon.

T. C. Ware and sons have been turning out a lot of new hives.

O. E. Wilson has received a first class set of emery wheels. Any one having worn out saws will be more than pleased if they give him a trial.

The Marvin Chapel Sunday School was reorganized March 25. May great success attend their labors.

Marlin Ware went duck hunting a few days since, but did not get any.

The Marvin Chapel Epworth League met Saturday night, conducted by the President, Lee Ruckman. Speeches were delivered by Rev Hogsett and F. E. Moore. Meetings every Sunday. All are kindly invited to attend. If it does you no good, it can surely do you no harm.

Lee Ruckman is attending school at Marlinton. We truly wish him success.

Put Your Finger on Your Pulse

You feel the blood rushing along.

But what kind of blood? That is the question.

Is it pure blood or impure blood?

If the blood is impure then you are weak and languid; your appetite is poor and your digestion is weak. You cannot sleep well and the morning finds you unprepared for the work of the day. Your cheeks are pale and your complexion is sallow. You are troubled with pimples, boils, or some eruption of the skin. Why not purify your blood?

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

will do it. Take it a few days and then put your finger on your pulse again. You can feel the difference. It is stronger and your circulation better. Send for our book on Impure Blood.

If you are bilious, take Ayer's Pills. They greatly aid the Sarsaparilla. They cure constipation also.

Write to our Doctors.

Write them fully all the particulars in your case. You will receive a prompt reply, without cost.

Pianos that Stand

Three are a number of pianos that look well and sound fairly well—AT THE START. You can buy cheap Pianos that do that, but a Piano should be made to last a life time. If it only stays good a few months it is dear at any price.

EMERSON PIANOS

are the kind that STAND. They are safe instruments to buy. They stand the wear and tear of every day usage, and with ordinary care three generations of children can practice on one. Besides their known goodness you have our guarantee—exchange if not satisfactory.

Mineral Water & ag.

It is customary good thing to do public in favor of our country when we are not afraid to be generous. The experience of Mr. Ralph Kee Hannah's Sal-Carbonated Hydrate and Lithia water has done more to cure malaria, kidney troubles and have the satisfaction of knowing it has relieved thousands of invalids than Artesian Mineralwater, for Kidney and all Stomach, Liver and Blood diseases are readily cured by it.

A Leaf from my Note-Book.

Mr Hicks says: "April opens fair and mild." Yesterday, the first day of April, was fair but not very mild in this section. Today however the prospect for mild weather seems more favorable, so we start from Slaty Fork to go to Edray. Let us say right here that Slaty Fork's enterprising merchant L. D. Sharp is doing a good business. He is just now arranging to enlarge his store house and improve his stock of goods.

Let us hurry on across the Creek and exchange a few pleasant words with Charles Curtis, the black smith, whose shop stands on the margin of the Creek. Mr Curtis is a friendly man and a good black smith. He is doing well where he is, but expects to move away from that stand soon. We hope he will do well where he goes.

Standing just idside the door of the shop is Burton Hoover, son of George Hoover. Burton is also a blacksmith, and we understand he will occupy this shop as soon as Mr Curtis moves away. Burton is a good boy and will no doubt fill the place well and make a mark in the world.

Our faithful horse carries us up the hillside and down the next slope. We meet William Hannah, son of Andy Hannah, who lives to the right at the mouth of Slaty Fork. The usual friendly greetings through with, we inquire of him, though he seems to be in a hurry, if his folks are well of the measles. He says they are about well.

Looking down a ravine here we seem to almost get a glimse of a neat little school house nestled down in a quiet little spot among some sugar trees, just above the mouth of Slaty Fork. Here the Slaty Fork school is kept and here in the favorable seasons of the year there is kept a thriving Sunday school. Here the good people of this section meet to sing and pray and worship their Creator on His glad day.

Imagine you see also beyond this. Look down the Creek a little from the school house and round a point to the right and look upon the Big Spring Fork of Elk, as it comes bubbling along like Tennyson's Brook to "go on forever." Here on this noted spot we find we can go to mill, and find also that nice man Mr Griffin ready and willing to grind a grist for us.

A little farther up the stream lives Hugh Sharp a great man for bee hives. Captain Munday, of Buchannon, spends much of his time with Mr Sharp, and were it not for a family that occupies a part of Mr Sharp's house we can hardly say what those gentlemen would do, as one is a widower and the other a batchelor. If you want to have a good sociable time, however, and get well and intelligently entertained, just call over to see Captain Munday and Hugh Sharp.

While we are here in contemplation of these things we must not neglect to notice the "King of the Gaulies"—H B Sharp, who lives a little below, at the mouth of Big Spring and Laurel Creek. Here is one of the foremost hunters of all this country. We are not sure but Harmon would rather hunt than eat when he is hungry. This place used to be thronged with sportsmen when the game law was favorable for them. Don't you forget it, this man will use you well if you get to see him.

We glance still down stream and "see or seem to see" S. B. Moore's and John Poage's grazing farm occupied at present by Messrs Cook and Grimes. Mr Grimes moved with his family down in here during that very cold weather in February, 1899. He is about to leave and go back to his old place near Dunmore.

We cannot delay here longer, but hurry on by Sheldon Hannah's place. We have a sympathetic thought here, unexpressed as hasteforbids us to call. Mr Hannah's son, Clark Hannah is in Randolph County very low with typhoid fever. His mother and eldest sister are at his bedside. We do sincerely hope he will soon recover.

We started out to go to Edray and mean to go there, but bear with us as we make our bow here for the present, and promise more later. With good will to all men,

A. M.

Oscar Bell returned from Virginia with a bunch of cattle.

S. B. Hannah was down the other day. He has a fine lot of cattle at his farm here.

Died, near Driftwood, on the night of March 20th, Mrs Nancy McCloud, wife of James McCloud, a good Christian lady; and on the 23d her second daughter Emma was called away to be with her we trust in that better land. We learn that another member of the family is in a dangerous condition.

Hon Sheriff Hill was in this section the other day getting ready for court. He is the best sheriff we have had for years.

Born to Mr and Mrs John Shinaberry a big boy.

Look here, what is the matter with the people of Pocahontas county? Some one all the time going with papers getting signers for roads and other changes. If there is any part of this county needs money appropriated on roads it is Clover Creek. The road is almost impassable, railroad wagons cutting it all to pieces. You want a railroad, and you want what few county roads there are kept up with the hands and spend the money on paths where it aint safe for a rocky mountain goat to travel, let alone a man on horseback or in a wagon. Now we only have 6 or 7 standing hands, and we have 6 or 7 miles of public right of way to try to make a road on this spring, though this is the first time we have said a word, something will have to be done or the railroaders will have to haul their goods by way of Green Bank or Edray from Huttonsville.

I see a number of announcements in the Times for county officers but have n't seen a candidate this winter. If the honorable people are not worth the seeing of the candidates, the candidates are not worth the voting for.

To the Voters of Huntersville District: What do you mean, what do you want with that little old town of Marlinton? It is under water; it is not a suitable place to build a court house; there would not be any business or railroad there. Are you all you all not able to pay your taxes, poor fellows. We pity you all but we can not sympathize with you. We trust the honorable County Court, or whoever has this to settle, will give it plenty of thought, for this is matter should have careful attention.

Why not run Edward Showalter for Constable. We believe he would make a good one and we need one in this part.

VEN RUNNING SORES CURED
—BY—
nston's Sarsaparilla
QUART BOTTLES.
GREAT SPRING MEDICINE.
SARSAPARILLA as a Blood Food and Nerve Energizer, is the MEDICINE ever discovered. It comes as a rich blessing from "run out," the run down, the overworked and debilitated. That "tired feeling spells," the languor and despondency which arise from badly nourished, vitiated blood and an underfed body, vanish as if by a magic, the lassitude and nervous prostration which accompany the spring, all summer, are conquered and banished at once. For every form of all ailments of the brain and nerve, insomnia hysteria and nervousness ost a specific. It furnishes the very elements to rebuild worn-out nerve cells, nerve centers and nerves, calming and equalizing their action. It ures blood. Newness of life, new hope, new strength follow its faithful use. The weak strong, and the old young again.

quence (but now happily exploded) method in the good old times, to e, Scrofula, Cancer and other troublesome disorders arising from with powerful alteratives, such as mercury, arsenic and other mineral spected by this reason that the poison could be killed while the blood through its channels holding in its circulation the specific germs of the his way, every part of the body became more or less diseased. Nothterrible than a horribly destructive blood taint. It not only attacks vital structures of the body, but many times the bones are honey-combed often seeks out the nerves and spinal cord, and again it will bring dreome vital organ, as the kidneys, liver or stomach. There is only one for the cure of blood taint. That is, PURIFICATION! Every particle be removed through the excretory channels, the lungs, kidneys, bowels, Pure pure, then peaceable." The great restorative, reconstructive and ood, JOHNSTON'S SARSAPARILLA, not only radically and ex- the taint, but also removes all mercury, calomel and other minerals, and arsenic with the ruby, glowing current of vitality. "The blood is health means pure blood. The old and reliable remedy. JOHNSTON'S LA, is universally regarded as the greatest Blood Purifier ever discov- a now established beyond question or cavil.

TRADE WITHOUT MONEY.

A Society in London Aims to Abolish Poverty.

That money is the root of all evil is a view which has recently found favor among political economists. Most people think it is the want of it that matters. Now some social reformers here have started an experiment to discover what amount of truth there is in these two views. The scheme in question is the work of the Anti-Sporadic Brotherhood Trust, Limited, and they have hit upon a very ingenious plan for trading without money. Before explaining what this is, however, it would be well to state their reasons for adopting it, which are something more than merely sentimental objections to current coin.

One result of our present systems of currency is that money has a value far beyond any of the commodities it represents. The demand for it has increased more of late years than has the supply, and the result is that a man who has no money at all stands to-day but a poor chance of getting any, and a fairly good one of "going under," though he may have been able to do useful work that his fellows need. To-day there are some thousands of men all able to render something of benefit to the community, and yet all of them idle, merely because they lack money.

Take in the case of one of these. For the time being all the vacant jobs are full and he is unable to get employment.

Now, unless he has money enough to set himself up in a small business, or money enough to extensively advertise his goods, it is useless for him to produce any. He does not know how to get any one to buy them if he does. Accordingly he drifts and drifts, and finally becomes a member of what is apparently the surplus class.

Only apparently, however, for really while he is unable to find people who want his goods there are plenty who are only too willing to consume them. Only, like himself, they cannot purchase, because for the time being, at any rate, they are without money.

The result is that both the potential consumer and the potential producer have to stand idle, though both have labor force and both are capable of producing something of use to one another. Without money, however, they cannot do this, and what happens is that an artificial poverty setses both of them and their energies are paralyzed.

It is this artificial poverty that the Co-operative Brotherhood Trust, Limited, have set themselves to abolish, and they do this by bringing the idle consumer and the idle producer together and exchanging the labor of one for the labor of the other.

They manage to effect this in a very clever way. In connection with the trust an exchange circle has been started, and this is the medium through which all the labor products are exchanged, and in the following manner. We will say a carpenter has become one of the unemployed. He is out of work and has not enough money to set up in business for himself, but he joins the exchange circle and puts his name down on the directory.

He offers to supply tables, chairs or whatever it is that he can most easily make, and offers at the same time to do odd jobs.

When some other member of the circle who is in need of the thing he offers buys it, and pays him, not in money, but in barter notes and to which he has become entitled by the work he himself has executed for a third member of the exchange circle.

These barter notes are only entitle the bearer to as much as their face value of the goods in the circle, but also to such goods as are in the store, and these include groceries and provisions, clothes, hosieries, furniture, athletic requisites, and nearly everything except alcoholic liquors.

If the holder of any particular barter note desires to realise it in cash the committee endeavors to oblige him. But it is, of course, preferable that he should take it out in food made by other members, as only in this way can the circle be self-supporting.

Of course, the success of the circle largely depends on the number of people joining it. Obviously the goods cannot be exchanged without at least a fair number of exchanges. But, though yet in its infancy, it is vigorously developing, and the fact that tradesmen are accepting barter notes instead of cash augues well for it.—Pearson's Weekly.

THE GRAND ARMY.

It Will Soon Be a Memory of Good Deeds and Brave Men.

One of the bravest "standing armies" in the world is dying out. The Grand Army of the Republic, the band of gray-haired warriors whose pride and dearest recollection it is that they once served their country, is shrinking with appalling swiftness to the point where it will be only a memory of good deeds and brave men who have done them.

Statistics as to the membership and death-rate of the organization tell a story as touching as the tenderest funeral sermon. They show that in a few years more the Grand Army will be an empty ceremony—the summons to the national encampment a vain appeal to the heroes of '61.

Within twelve months—the year of 1898—according to a report just issued, more than 17,000 members of the Grand Army died. This death-rate was more than double that of the previous year. If the past year (1898) has shown a corresponding decline in membership, the friends of the organization have ample ground for the concern they express as to its future.

The high water mark of the Grand Army's prosperity was not reached until some time after the death of its founder, Dr. Benjamin F. Stephenson.

It is set down to the eternal credit of the Army that it originated one of the most beautiful and unique institutions—Memorial Day. This is the most interesting act in the history of the Army, and it will remain the most popular act of Gen. Logan's administration.

This holiday, which has been celebrated with such fervor for thirty years, is probably the suggestion of a citizen of German birth whose every sense has been forgotten. It was established by Logan and the soldiers of the Army and a few years later made by congress a legal holiday.

Years do not necessarily indicate a leader head. Acts of years are used for the purpose of softening a hard heart.

He Found the Surgeons

All doctors told Rosa Hamilton of Wise Jefferson, O., after suffering 18 months from Bright's Disease, to use Electric Bitters. She did so and was entirely cured. Now she says all the doctors in Rosa Hamilton's town are hunting for Electric Bitters. Best kidney and liver medicine in the World. Absolutely guaranteed by Sharkey Drug Store, the only druggist in the World. Prices Fifty cents and $1.00. Call at his store and get a bottle. Or a book.

TIPPING.

It Seems to Be Legal as Well as General in Germany.

The question of giving gratuities to waiters and servants is as much a vexed one in this country as it is on your side of the Channel. Even your man servant or maid expects in Germany a "tip" from your guests after they have dined or lunched with you and it constantly happens that on engaging a servant you are asked:

"How about tips? Can I expect much from this source, and may I keep all I get, or have I to share the tips with other servants?" I have even known mistresses to hold out as an inducement to servants the fact that they enter into a good deal, whereby the wages are considerably supplemented by gratuities from guests.

One very curious feature about German everyday life is the readiness of people to give a "trinkgeld" the equivalent of the French "pourboire," under any and every circumstance. It is more familiar to English ears. The feature is curious, because the Teuton is by nature thrifty, and many of them are more than thrifty. And yet the same person who will expect a hard-working teacher of languages to give lessons at the expense of one shilling an hour will often be seen to bestow a groschen on the shop servant who has brought a parcel to his house or handed him on the tramway conductor for handing him his penny ticket. The postal officials who pay the money orders and bring the money to your house are entitled to charge a halfpenny for doing so, but look very sour if you do not add another halfpenny for your pocket, small "tips" all around are de rigueur in German daily life.

It is also understood that the porter and the boots at a hotel may expect a gratuity from the guests. Now the porter does little more for you than hand you your key and take off his hat to you as you enter and leave your hostelry, and in small towns he summons the boots at your departure by vigorously ringing his bell, and for these functions he is rewarded in a sort of geometrical progression. The boots really does render services. He blacks your boots and brushes your clothes and is ready to assist you to pack, and sits on your portmanteau for you if need be when you want to lock it. Notwithstanding this it often happens that he comes off second or third best in the way of rewards.

It has, however, always been supposed that the largesse assigned to him was a voluntary one. This idea has now, according to the decision of a court at Chemnitz, in Saxony, been shown, at the expense of a certain commercial traveler who recently visited that town, to have been an illusion. The man in question remained at Cremnitz for four weeks at a local hostelry, performing his mercantile duties, and on leaving handed to the boots for the usual service rendered by that functionary the sum of four shillings as a gratuity. The boots demanded twelve shillings, that is to say, at the rate of three shillings a week. As the higher sum was not paid he brought an action against the traveler, and the court declared that the latter was to pay ten shillings. The reasons given for the judgment were that although the boots received board and lodging from the landlord, he was paid nothing in cash; on the other hand, he had to give remuneration in money out of his own pocket to two assistants who helped him to do the work.—London Post.

Sat Next to Grant.

Visitors to Washington will probably remember an old second-hand book dealer, who on nice days sits in front of his shop, on the north side of Pennsylvania avenue, just opposite Peace Monument. He relates one story in which he and Gen. Grant figure rather prominently.

The old bookseller had received a ticket for a theatrical performance. He went early and took his seat in the parquet. Soon a family, consisting of a husband and wife and several grown up daughters took the seats to his right. A little later a man came and sat on the left next the aisle. The old bookseller is blind in the left eye, and did not pay any attention to the man on his left. At the end of the first act the lady on his right leaned over and asked if the stranger were not General Grant. Sure enough, it was, and the lady was so informed.

"I reckon you can see a bit better from this chair where I am sittin'," the old gentleman remarked, "and if you think you'd rather change with me I'm willing."

A second invitation was not required. "And I didn't have to change only with the woman but with the hul family, and I thought they'd push me out in the aisle. But I'll bet that to this day the woman tells of the time when she sat next to the President," the old bookseller adds.—Exchange.

The Confidence of Youth.

"And now that you are through college, what are you going to do?" asked a friend of a youthful graduate.

"I shall study medicine," was the grave reply of the ambitious young man.

"But isn't that profession already overcrowded?" asked the friend.

"Possibly it is," remarked the knowing youth, "but I propose to study medicine just the same, and those who are already in the profession will have to take their chances."—Chicago News.

Battles and Rain.

It is a curious fact, well known, however, to weather experts—that heavy firing will generally cause rain, even though the sky was clear before hand. At Waterloo rain came down in torrents. So it did in several of the big battles of the civil war—Gettysburg for example. The tremendous concussion shakes the little globules which are always present in visible in the atmosphere together and so brings them down.

Worse Than War.

France loses every year by infanticide and consumption of opium 1,500,000 souls, or nearly double the number of lives lost in the Franco-Prussian war of 1870.

In China an inferior on horseback meeting a superior dismounts and waits until the other has passed.

PROCRASTINATION.

Be wise to-day; 'tis madness to defer;
Next day the fatal precedent will plead;
Thus on till wisdom is pushed out of life.
Procrastination is the thief of time;
Year after year it steals, till all are fled,
And to the mercies of a moment leaves
The vast concerns of an eternal scene.
If not so frequent, would not this be strange?
That 'tis so frequent, this is stranger still.
Of man's miraculous mistakes this bears the palm.
That all men are about to live,
Forever on the brink of being born.
All pay themselves the compliment to think
They one day shall not drivel, and their pride
On this reversion takes up ready praise;
At least their own their future selves applaud:
How excellent that life they ne'er will lead!
Time lodged in their own hands is Folly's vails;
That lodged in Fate's to wisdom they consign;
The thing they can't but purpose they postpone.
'Tis not in folly not to scorn a fool,
And scarce in human wisdom to do more
All promise is poor dilatory man,
And that through every stage
When young, indeed,
In full content we sometimes nobly rest,
Unanxious for ourselves, and only wish
As duteous sons, our fathers were more wise.
At thirty, man suspects himself a fool;
Knows it at forty, and reforms his plan;
At fifty, chides his infamous delay,
Pushes his prudent purpose to resolve;
In all the magnanimity of thought
Resolves, and re-resolves; then dies the same.
And why? because he thinks himself immortal.
All men think all men mortal but themselves;
Themselves, when some alarming shock of fate
Strikes through their wounded hearts the sudden dread;
But their hearts wounded, like the wounded air,
Soon close; where passed the shaft no trace is found,
As from the wing no scar the sky retains,
The parted wave no furrow from the keel,
So dies in human hearts the tho't of death.
Even with the tender tear which nature sheds
O'er those we love, we drop it in their grave.

—YOUNG.

INFLUENZA.

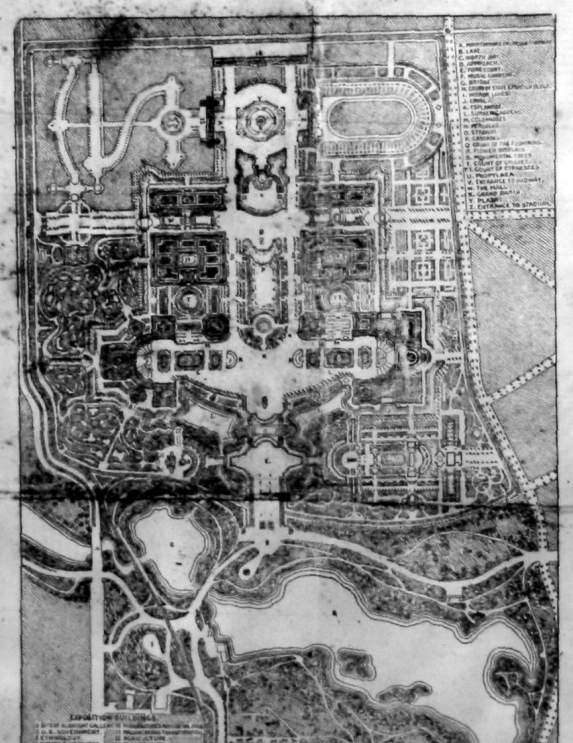

Influenza, one of the class of diseases to which the term Zymotic is now applied, has long been recognized by medidal writers, altho its name, borrowed from the Italian is somewhat modern in this country. Called it catarrhus e contagio, but altho, in most cases, it closely resembles ordinary catarrh, it presents certain points of difference from that disease. In addition to the ordinary symptoms of catarrh, there is a sudden, early and very striking debility and depression of spirits. This early debility is one of the most marked and characteristic signs of influenza. The mucous membranes (especially the pulmonary membrane) are much affected. The tongue is white and creamy, the sense of taste is lost, there is no appetite, the pulse is soft and weak, the skin, altho at first hot and dry, soon becomes moist and, and the patient complains of pains and soreness in various parts of the body.

In simple, uncomplicated cases convalescence supervenes in the course of a week or ternight, but influenza is very frequently complicated with bronchitis or pneumonia, in which case it is much more persistent and dangerous.

Influenza affords an excellent example of an epidemic disease, a class remarkably being often attributed to the course of a few hours. From this it may be inferred that the sovereign of this disease is connected with some general condition of the atmosphere, but what that condition is is not known. Not infrequently influenza follows close upon a sudden thaw; sometimes it is preceded by thick, ill smelling fogs. One hypothesis refers the complaint to some change in the electrical state of the air, and one of the latest and most probable conjectures regarding its exciting cause is that of Schonbein, who refers it to the presence of an excess of Ozone in the atmosphere. Like cholera, influenza generally follows a westerly direction, or one from the south-east towards the north west, and its course seems to be altogether independent of currents of air, as it frequently travels against the prevailing wind.

Few diseases increase the death-rate to such an extent as influenza more, however, in consequence of the great number of persons who are attacked in a severe epidemic than in consequence of its danger in individual cases.—Chamber's Encyclopaedia.

—"Ma, may I go out to play?" "No; you must sit still where you are." Pause. "Ma, may I go down into the kitchen?" "No; I want you to sit perfectly quiet." Pause. "Ma, may I sit on the floor and play marbles?" "I have told you twice that I want you to sit just where you are, and be quiet, and you have asked me that I say. Pause. "MR, may I die?"—Collier's Weekly.

The hand of the artist has labored without restraint in arranging the grounds and grouping the buildings for the great Pan American Exposition, to be held at Buffalo in 1901. The plan has been completed after protracted and painstaking study of the grounds and their surroundings, and with a keen appreciation of all the requirements of an Exposition upon the scale of magnificence here contemplated. The completed work will be a masterpiece, in which the designer of buildings and the landscape architect will alike share the honors. American architectural genius has indeed here produced glorious results. If one were to see only the exterior of this splendid Exposition he will find himself abundantly repaid for his visit to Buffalo in the Pan-American year.

The Exposition grounds include 350 acres, of which 133 acres are improved park lands, a part of Delaware Park. The grounds are about one mile from north to south and a half mile from east to west. Their situation is in the northern part of the city, accessible from every direction. The park lands form the southern part of the extensive grounds, and are pronounced by expert landscape architects to be among the most beautiful in the world. The trees and shrubbery in wonderful variety, the romantic footpaths leading in all directions among the thick foliage, the loveliest of lakes, on whose surface numberless swans and other water fowl of immaculate plumage are constantly at sport, the wide reaches of lawn and the rich embroidery of flowers, every where to be seen, all combine to refresh and restore the mind of him who carries within these delectable precincts.—(From Press Report of the Pan-American Exposition.)

The most important point in the treatment of influenza is not to bleed the patient, or in any way to depress his vital powers. He should be kept in bed; his bowels should be gently opened; his skin slightly acted upon, if dry; and, if the cough be troublesome, a mustard poultice should be applied to the chest and an expectorant mixture prescribed. In persons of weak or broken-down constitutions, ammonia, beef-tea, and wine and ale will be found to relieve from the outset. The debility that often remains for a considerable period after the subsidence of convalescence is best met by the preparations of iron and quinine.

Robber Band of Four.

Holds Up Young Willie Rhodes a Block from Home—The Robber Chief, Aged 8, Gets the Spoil. One Dime—Bike Cop Runs Down the Gang and Two Land in the Gerry Jail.

From the New York Sun.

Eleven-year-old Willie Rhodes, who lives with his stepfather Mace Laugly, at 160 West Seventy-ninth Street, was sent out yesterday morning to do an errand at the house of a friend of the family in Central Park West. Willie presents an appearance suggesting the possession of what boys regard as riches. He had reached Central Park West and had walked down to Seventy-eighth street when he he was accosted by four boys, all about 10 years old, whose apparent chief was a thickset, black-haired boy.

"Say, young feller," began the thickset boy, addressing young Rhodes, who was three years his senior, "have yer got money about yer? If yer have we want it. We need it in our business. Ever hear of gentlemen robbers? Them 's us. Loosen up now, or you 'll get a jolt in the jaw."

Willie not being inclined to "loosen up" answeree by trying to press on to finish his errand. The thickset boy seized him by the collar. Another of the boys tripped him up, and while Willie lay on the sidewalk one of the boys went through his pockets. The amount of 10 cents was extracted, and the four youthful robbers, after threatening dire vengeance on Willie if he attempted to follow them, made a rapid movement down Central Park West. Willie rose from the sidewalk and started to pursue, but realizing that their number was too great to give any hope of recovering his money, abandoned the idea.

A moment later Bicycle Policeman Schofield came down the avenue on his wheel. As listened to Willie's story and rode after the departed boys. He chased them eight blocks and finally corraled all four, taking them to the Bicycle Squad headquarters. The sergeant discharged two of the band on the ground that there was not sufficient evidence that they were bad boys, but the other two, Edward Weiters, 8 years old, and Harry Mellin, 11, were sent to the West Fifty-fourth street police court. Magistrate Zeller, subduing an almost uncontrollable grin, presented a stern face to the young bandits. Gerry Agent Kuhn flanked them, a terrifying snarl on his face, and the bicycle policeman behind them explained the case in tones of ominous thunder. Willie Rhode's face wore a grin of triumph. The hitherto bold chief Edmund Weiters looked around as Spartacus may have looked when he declared that he was chief.

"Never done it," he blurted out.

"Shut up," said the policeman on the Bridge.

Edmund covered his face with his grimy hands. The sound of sobs came from behind the hands and Edmund pulled out a handkerchief which he held over his eyes. The other prisoner gave an audible sniff betokening disgust.

"He," said Mellin, pointing to his chief, "was awful brave when dey was four of us agin one. An' to think he got de dime too!"

The scorned chief kept his face hidden and still sobbed. The magistrate asked the policeman if the fathers of the prisoners were in court. The policeman said they were not. The magistrate pounded.

"Say, your Honor," put in the Gerry agent, "just look at this young fellow [pointing to young Weiters.] He 's only bluffing. I just saw him spitting in his handkerchief to make it wet so you'd think they were tears he was weeping."

It was true, as the compassionate dry condition of his eyes testified when they were uncovered.

"I'll hold you kept for examination on Friday," said Magistrate Zeller to his prisoner here. "You are bad boys. You 'll have to stay with the Gerry Society until Friday."

Then, as the extent of their fate dawned on them, the two prisoners did break down and they wept copiously as they were led away.

A Modern Magazine's Enterprise

On March 3, 1900 Mr. Peter Mac Queen M. A. of The National Magazine editorial staff, will sail direct for Delagoa bay, Lorenzo Marquez, and report the prevailing situation of affairs in the Transvaal directly to "The National Magazine." Mr. MacQueen,s splendid record in the Philippines last year, his work during the Turko-Grecian war, and in Cuba and Porto Rico during the Spanish-American war easily places him in the front rank of war correspondents.

A keen and accurate observer; an intrepid and fearless investigator, and a facile and strong writer he is employed to furnish the readers of "The National Magazine with exclusive and intensely interesting information, which will constitute a leading feature of the coming issues of this magazine. The American people at this time want something more than the monotonous, trite, censored news filtered through London. The future of South Africa is a question of vital interest to Americans and while maintaining a strict neutrality they want relisble information from the armies on both sides. Very little or nothing has thus far come direct from the Transvaal and that is what "The National Magazine" promises to have if possible.

Marie Correli's New Story.

Marie Corelli, for the first time in five years, has written a short story for an American magazine. The Laurels of the Brave is the title of a bitter, brilliant, timely story which she has just finished for The Saturday Evening Post, of Philadelphia. It deals with the South African War Charities, and handles without gloves the Society Department for the English War Office and the women who, for advertising purposes, are donning khaki.

The Laurels of the Brave, superbly illustrated by Harrison Fisher, will appear in The Saturday Evening Post of April 14.

Tillman as an "Exhorter"

Senator Tillman has made his speech protesting against the administration,s policy in the Philippines. He has all the fervor of old-time oratory, and read from manuscript in a staccato way, with a decided South Carolina accent. He shrieks like an exhorter, but has a power and strength of eloquence which hold the closest attention of his hearers. Thoroughly original in his manner and methods he remains one of the most picturesque individualities in the Senate.—"The National Magazine, for March.

Millions Given Away.

It is certainly gratifying to the public to know of one concern which is not afraid to be generous. The proprietors of Dr. King,s New Discovery for Consumption Coughs and Colds, have given away over ten million trial bottles and have the satisfaction of knowing it has cured thousands of hopeless cases Asthma, Bronchitis, La Grippe and all Throat, Chest and Lung diseases are surely cured by it.

Trial bottles free at Harry E. Eshelt Marlinton, W. V.; Brown, Mill Point, W. V.; L. Beard & Co., Academy; H. S. Hannah, Beard's Valley; S. F. Myles, Falling Springs, W. Va.

"This medicine is a fake," declared the irate invalid; "you guaranteed it to cure after all others failed, but it hasn't done me a bit of good." "Maybe," returned the cautiously, "you didn't try all others.—Exchange.

COUNTY DISTRICTS.

The expansion movement of the Huntersville district is still a very interesting matter. To grant the prayer of the petition would probably be as unjust to Edray district as it now seems unjust to leave Huntersville without any railroad. It seems to a great many that the interests of the county demand that the county court at its next session take the matter in hand and redistrict the whole county, forming at least two more magisterial districts. The county is one of the largest in the State. Greenbrier about the same size has nine districts, and with smaller districts the school boards and justices would have a better chance to cover the territory. When the present lines are changed it should be done with a view to the changed conditions of the county caused by the railroad.

Dewey is doomed to the bitterest chagrin and disappointment in his Presidental aspirations. His published utterances are of such childlike simplicity that the public refuses to take him into serious consideration as a candidate for the Presidency. The Admiral's hosts of friends regret most his unfortunate action. He seems to have a fatal habit of doing the right thing at the wrong time. The announcement of his candidacy should have come months ago when the country was at his feet, or later just before the conventions meet (whichever one he decided to select) when if his case had been in the hands of astute politicians, enough delegates might have been stampeded to him to give him the nomination. However, we think the Admiral is suffering from swell head.

Colonel A. C. L. Gilchrist has yielded to the solicitation of many friends, and his announcement for County Commissioner appears this week. There could not be a more suitable man for the position. He will not canvass the county, but leaves the matter entirely in the hands of his friends.

Carnegie Finds Trouble Settled

Many persons will be interested to learn that the Carnegie Steel controversy has finally been settled. Not only all the workers in different mills were settled, but the respective labor unions which each party is to receive from the other employed capital were agreed to by the contending parties.

The contingency usage and a number of complaints arising out with Edgar Thomson of such subscription for the association amount to perhaps of much more. Of this we can have Carnegie has sold a 10% of each engine and one. Many Pittsburgh millionaires have also sold out their holdings to the trust.

THE ENGAGEMENT OF ANTIQUE.

FOUGHT JAN. 14, 1900.

[Sung to the tune of "My Old New Hampshire Home."]

I.

When the sun lit up the hills of old Antique,
O'er the waters rolled a terrible cannonade;
And our boys in blue were lined to face the music,
And prepared to charge the hills and make a raid.
Around our ears the shot and shell was screaming,
From every hill-top shot a streak of streak of flame,
In the trenches we could see their bolos gleaming.
But we drove them from their strongbold just the same.

CHORUS:

We have faced the storm before,
To the charge we go once more,
Side by side we fought at Passai and San Blas;
The we go to death and the grave,
The stars and stripes shall proudly wave
O'er the islands in the tropics far away

II.

On the open plain the gallant scouts were waiting,
On their line we made a halt and faced the foe,
And the "Kaclacs" ne'er shall forget the greeting
That was sent them by the gallant boys in blue.
The day before they sent an invitation
They were ready to receive us, so they said,
But they did not linger for the presentation
To the mountains every creeping rebel fled.

III.

And we stormed the hills with only one battalion:
It was the Second of our Nineteenth Infantry;
On that day we struck a blow to the rebellion:
And our rifles sang a fearful melody.
The Concord sent a broadside in concision,
So we give a cheer for all her gallant crew.
The Mosquito Fleet did noble execution.
Every man stood by his gun, his colors true.

CHORUS.

We have faced the storm before,
To the charge we go once more,
Side by side we fought at Passai and San Blas:
The we go to death and the grave,
The stars and stripes shall proudly wave
O'er the islands of the tropis farawav.

Respectfully dedicated to the men of the 2nd Battalion of the 19th U. S. Infantry, who fought at San Blas, Pasai, Antique and various other engagements on Island de Panay, by

CHARLES A. BUSSARD,
Co. A. 19th Infantry.

BEER CREEK.

All quiet along the Creek, except the croaking of the frogs and wild geese.

We have about nine months of winter here and the other three late in the fall.

The measles had about died down, but it has broken out anew in the section at Pine Grove.

George Beverage, whose hip was unjointed by falling off a load of hay, has been lying in one position for four weeks, and may have to lie that way a week or two longer before the bandages can be removed though he seems to be resting easy.

Mrs S. B. Hannah is getting along very well this winter.

S. B. Hannah's little boy has been very sick with tonsilitis, but is much better.

Last January while some men were blasting below Sam Cassell's some of them ran under a cliff of rocks for shelter. When the blast went off it shook the rocks and set a den of rattlesnake to whizzing. The men did not see any snakes, but from the sound it must have been a large den.

What do you think about the road leading from the main road below Liberty Church across Little Mountain. There is but one hand on the road besides the overseer. If there is no money appropriated for this road it will soon be impassable.

To the voters of Pocahontas Co: We should look well to our interests and should support our county men. If we don't watch our interests it will be like the Italians coming in here and running out the American people. As far as we can learn Deer Creek is solid for T. S. McNeel for Prosecuting Attorney, L. M. McClintic for House of Delegates, and M. J. McNeel for County Commissioner. Come along Mr Buzzard with your mule, we'll vote for you too. As for the Sheriffalty they have got it so mixed that it would take a Philadelphia lawyer to unravel it.—As Sol Phares will not serve the people of Green Bank another term as magistrate, suppose we elect S. B. Hannah. VOTER.

SCOTT'S EMULSION

OF COD-LIVER OIL WITH HYPOPHOSPHITES

should always be kept in the house for the following reasons:

FIRST—Because, if any member of the family has a hard cold, it will cure it.

SECOND—Because, if the children are delicate and sickly, it will make them strong and healthy.

THIRD—Because, if the father or mother is losing flesh and becoming thin and emaciated, it will build them up and give them flesh and strength.

FOURTH—Because it is the standard remedy in all throat and lung affections.

No household should be without it. It can be taken in summer as well as in winter.

Catch Cold Easily?

Are you frequently hoarse? Do you have that annoying tickling in your throat? Would you feel relieved if you could raise something? Does your cough annoy you at night, and do you raise more mucus in the morning?

Then you should always keep on hand a bottle of

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral

If you have a weak throat you cannot be too careful. You cannot begin treatment too early. Each cold makes you more liable to another, and the last one is always harder to cure than the one before it.

J. C. Ayer's Cherry Pectoral promotes free, easy expectoration.

Help at Hand.

If you have any complaint whatever and want the best medical advice you can get, you have only to write a letter to the doctor, and tell him all about your case. Address, Dr. J. C. AYER, Lowell, Mass.

The Veteran in Politics.

When it suits, the war record of our candidates can be recalled to make or mar a man in politics. The beardless boy who pointed the rifle barrel in the sixties is ripe for office now, but we could never see that a grateful county went out of its way to any great extent to elect them to office.

We hear a tale from a West Virginia county where an appeal failed. A wealthy gold Democrat, a Confederate veteran, approached a man whose father had been a gallant Confederate soldier. He said:
"Vote for Major B. He was a Confederate hero. Why are you for C. His war record will not bear looking into. If your father knew you were supporting C, he would turn over in his grave."
"He turned over four years ago."
"What caused him?" asked the gold Democrat.
"Your voting for McKinley."

ELECTION NOTICE.

Whereas on the 30 day of April,
1900, the town of Marlinton, in Pocahontas county, West Virginia, in the district of Edray, was duly incorporated by the circuit Court of the said Pocahontas county, and a certificate of incorporation issued of said date, and whereas the undersigned legal voters of said town have petitioned the said court to appoint commissioners to hold an election to submit to the voters of said town the question of issuing bonds of said incorporated town to the Huntersville district to build a good road to said town.

SATURDAY MAY 5 1900

is appointed the district of election and one and, at the public school house in the said town of Marlinton that day, for the purpose of submitting to the said qualified voters of said town the question of issuing bonds of said town to the amount of $[illegible] to build a good road to the Huntersville district, and that the said election shall be held in accordance with the laws of West Virginia governing elections, and that the following persons are appointed to act as commissioners of said election, to-wit:

[illegible]

Given under our hands this the 5th day of April, 1900.

[illegible]

A Leaf From My Note-Book.

We proceed on our way from Slaty Fork to Edray. We left our readers at Sheldon Hannah's place.
We notice Mr Hannah killed a dog of his that went mad a few days ago. Several dogs have gone mad in this vicinity this spring and had to be killed. Some two or three head of cattle are reported to have been bitten by mad dogs and had to be killed also.

We wish to give a passing glance at all the settlers along this road, and yet there are some families that we know nothing about, and must now pass along with this mere mention of them.

We pass a house to the left on a little eminence. We know but little of an aged couple who used to live here and yet we have heard of them, and know something at least of their family. Passing here we feel like alighting from our horse and looking for the sacred spot on the floor of this old house where the "husband and the father prayed." You will ask us why we think they were followers of the meek and lowly Jesus. We answer we think they were, for "by their fruits ye shall know them."
Rev Geo. P. Hannah, of the M. E.
Church, Henry Hannah, merchant in Renicks Valley; Mrs Silas
Sharp, of Slaty Fork, and the late Mrs Samuel Gibson were born and raised here.

Just beyond this place we find Grant Higgins sitting on the fence by the roadside. To all appearances he has just returned from selling some stock. He is seated here for a few moments chatting with Levi Gibson who is seated on his horse, wading down stream.
we learn from these young men that the morning air is a little too cold for comfort, and yet they wish to be sociable and exchange a few words, as is the custom with people in crossing roads through life.
"We go this way [that is, through life] but once." Let us help each other all we can as we meet and cross roads.

Yonder is Samuel Gibson's residence to the right of the road and near the bank of the Creek. This man and his little family seem comfortable and happy. He, however, with the rest of us, has seen trouble in this life. He has his second wife and a bright little boy to cheer him up and make him happy. His first wife was referred to above in speaking of the last mentioned family.

We are nearing Samuel Hannah's place. Here is very comfortably situated one of the nicest men on this Creek.

The Creek bottom widens out here and the grand old mountains lift their heads higher and present an attractive scene to the onlooker.
These lofty peaks attract and gather the fruitful showers in summer which greatly helps to make these fields productive.

Still this bottom widens out more and more as we proceed on our journey. On one side of the road here are the ruins of a burned-down house, which belonged to Boad Hannah. This house was burned early last fall. A little later in the season William Gibson had a barn burned on the opposite side of the road. These gentlemen lost greatly by the burning of these buildings. To tell how these fires originated is out of the question.
So far as we know the whole matter is wrapped in mystery. There will, however, be a by and by, whether it be a sweet or bitter by and by, be an uncovering of all mysteries. Let us all transact our affairs so that whatever leaps to light we never shall be ashamed.
We need to stand securely when we shall be disrobed of all our surroundings in a condition of things when every man's work shall be thoroughly tried.

Time flies, but we do not fly up this Creek very fast on this trip, but don't hurry us and we will work cheaper. A. M.

BROWNSBURG.

(In Colonial Review.)

There has been a good deal of sickness in our part, but nearly all are able to be out again.

We are having beautiful weather now. Wheat and grass are beginning to grow. Look out for Good Friday for it is a good time to plant potatoes.

There will be preaching here
Easter Sunday at 11 a. m.

Our school is in session, taught by Professor J. W. Renick.

Miss Juliana McDowell, who has been visiting her relations and friends at Hot Springs has returned home.

Willie Wilson is off to Virginia to buy grain.

We hear that William Miller died at his home near Durbord of consumption. He was a highly respected citizen.

Mrs Annie Walker departed this life on April 4th. She was the wife of William Walker and the daughter of Samuel Yokum and Louisa Tobin, and the mother of three children, who with her husband survive her. Her remains were placed in the Brownsburg cemetery, attended by a good number of people. The funeral services were conducted by Rev. G. F.
Keene of Edray.

one regiment of English cavalry.
Hurrah for the Boers!

We notice in your last paper the Frost correspondent says that the northern part of Frost has been incorporated. The town must be on a boom—it didn't use to be so big.

We hear that the post office at Green Bank will be taken away from J. H. Curry and put in the store. We hope this is not correct, as there could not be a better postmaster than Mr Curry is.

IT IS LIKE BUILDING A HOUSE WITH BLOCKS.

To try to establish a business by selling poor goods at low prices.

I am not going to build my business that way, but will sell you good goods at half prices, as I want to start my spring business with new goods at right prices.

I will offer you for the next ten days, or until I come back from market, High Arm Singer Sewing Machines—they are perfect, light running—just as good as the machine you neighbor has paid 65 dollars; you can have your choice—the drop head or regular kind

$22.00,

Every machine is warranted for ten years. All attachments free. The regular price is $30 00. The regular shape machine has 7 drawers nicely finished.

WANTED—50 Boys, between 3 and 18 years of age, to fill good positions in my wear-proof boys suits. Will make you following low prices:

Boys Suits, gray Cassimer, blue flannel, black cheviot, &c, worth from $1.50 to $3.00, you can have them from 68c to one dollar and 68c,

All my last season's Men's fancy negligee shirts that were 50c, 75c, and one dollar each, will close out from 30c to 47c each.

These good are just as good styles as I will have later, but I wish to start the spring season with a clean stock.

One dollar will have the purchasing power of two dollars to buy my wrappers. The prices run from 75c to $1.25. You can have them from

37 1-2c to 73c,

Thanking you for past favors, I hope you will continue your patronage in the future. Yours for bargains now and a nice clean spring stock soon,

PAUL GOLDEN.

Stop the Clock:

IF YOU HAVE NO MORE USE FOR TIME.

Stop Buying of Us:

IF YOU ARE TIRED OF SAVING MONEY.

We thank our many customers for their patronage during the past year, and we are glad to say that we have made a success of selling for cash. We are going to enlarge our building, increase our stock and diminish prices. Everybody claims to sell cheap, but we convince by actual demonstration. Its Values that create new business, and its Values like ours that bring to our store trade that we would not otherwise get. Unless you are proof against bargains our prices must command your attention. Spot cash gets more bargains and better bargains in a week than credit gets in a year. We buy for cash. SEVEN RUNNING SORES CURED
—BY—
Johnston's Sarsaparilla
QUART BOTTLES.
THE GREAT SPRING MEDICINE.

JOHNSTON'S SARSAPARILLA as a Blood Food and Nerve Energizer, is the greatest SPRING MEDICINE ever discovered. It comes as a rich blessing from heaven to the "worn out," the run down, the overworked and debilitated. That "tired feeling," those "sinking spells," the languor and despondency which arise from badly nourished nerves, from thin, vitiated blood and an underfed body, vanish as if by a magic spell. The weariness, lassitude and nervous prostration which accompany the spring, time and the heat of summer, are conquered and banished at once. For every form of neurasthenia, and all ailments of the brain and nerve, insomnia, hysteria and nervousness generally, it is almost a specific. It furnishes the very elements to rebuild worn-out nerve tissues. It feeds brain, nerve centers and nerves, calming and equalizing their action; it makes rich, red, honest blood. Newness of life, new hope, new strength follow its faithful use. It makes the weak strong, and the old young again.

It was the antiquated (but now happily exploded) method in the good old times, to treat Salt Rheum, Scrofula, Cancer, and other troublesome disorders arising from BLOOD TAINT with powerful alteratives, such as mercury, arsenic and other mineral agents. It was expected by this treatment that the poison could be killed while the blood was left to course through its channels holding in its circulation the specific germs of the disease. But in this way, every part of the body became more or less diseased. Nothing can be more terrible than a horribly destructive blood taint. It not only attacks virulently the different structures of the body, but many times the bones are honey-combed and destroyed. It often seeks out the nerves and spinal cord, and again it will bring decay and death to some vital organ, as the kidneys, liver or stomach. There is only one scientific method for the cure of blood taint. That is, PURIFICATION! Every particle of the blood must be removed through the excretory channels, the lungs, kidneys, bowels, liver and skin. "First pure, then peaceable." The great restorative, reconstructive and vitalizer of the blood, JOHNSTON'S SARSAPARILLA, not only radically and exhaustively removes the taint, but also removes all mercury, calomel and other minerals, and fills the veins and arteries with the ruby, glowing current of vitality. "The blood is the life." Good health means pure blood. The old and reliable remedy, JOHNSTON'S SARSAPARILLA, is universally regarded as the greatest Blood Purifier ever discovered. This fact is now established beyond question or cavil.

BLOOD POISON CURED BY JOHNSTON'S SARSAPARILLA.

Byron, Mich., October 31, 1894.

Williams, Davis, Brooks & Co., Detroit:
Gentlemen—In April last I began using JOHNSTON'S SARSAPARILLA for Blood Poison, caused by an amputation of one of my arms. I had SEVEN RUNNING SORES on my legs. I used two bottles and was entirely cured. I know it is what saved me. Very truly, C. W. LUTHER.

Small-Pox and Vaccination.

If the reports of the recent senseless scares concerning the prevalence of small-pox in different sections of the country can be made to carry with them a becomingly useful object lesson to the public at large they will serve a most excellent purpose.

It is well conceded in this day and generation, with health boards almost everywhere, that there is no possible danger of the spread of the disease if the well attested preventive measure of timely vaccination be rigidly enforced. In fact, there is no good reason why the malady should exist at all when almost absolute protection against possible attacks is freely guaranteed. Thus it is fair to assume when an epidemic appears in any given locality that the victims have either been neglectful of their opportunities to gain immunity or have been culpably ignorant of the advantages of being on the safe side.

It has been so abundantly proved that no one is absolutely secure against the disease unless he is properly vaccinated that no one should be willing to run the risk of being an exception to the rule. If the public refuses to be convinced of this fact the boards of health very justly take the matter in their own hands and act accordingly.

So far as New York is concerned the system of protection is so perfect that there is never any cause for alarm regarding the possibility of the occurrence of an epidemic. The manner in which the Columbia student was taken in hand and the prompt vaccination of his comrades were almost foregone conclusions. It is such actions as these that tend to assure citizens of their safety at all times and under all circumstances.

In order to offset any possible alarm regarding the spread of the disease in this city it is well to know that only four cases have been reported to the Health Board during the last week, and these are now safely housed in the hospital on North Brother Island. Further than this, all the persons who have been in direct contact with the sick ones have been carefully isolated, even after being vaccinated, and, as usual in such cases, will be in charge of the health officials until all danger of communicating the disease has passed.

All this, however, should not lull the public mind into any sense of false security. Whenever small-pox is present in a community it is always best, in case of any reasonable doubt of absolute protection, to be revaccinated. Especially should this be the case when there has been accidental exposure to infection, as it is apparently not yet definitely settled how long immunity lasts in any given individual.

Regarding vaccination there is no real danger to the patient so long as pure virus is used and proper precautions are taken in introducing it. It is claimed by all medical authorities that it is impossible to transmit by simple vaccine any other than its own specific property. The accidents which are occasionally noted are always due either to spurious virus, to the admixture of infected blood or inflammatory products from another person, or to unclean instruments in the hands of the vaccinator. It is well also to bear in mind that no one can be absolutely safe during an epidemic unless revaccination fails to "take." If he needs the protection at all he needs it fully. In any event, the vaccine is one of the few things which if it does no good never works any harm. There is certainly, then, no argument against being sure on all sides.—New York Herald.

A Substantial Fact.

W. B. Clark, Pickaway, Virginia says: I have for several years been using Ramons Pills in my family with most satisfactory result, and do not hesitate to recommend them to my customers as superior to any of the various kinds kept in stock. Not only are they quite reliable but Ramons Relief and Nerve and Bone Oil are the most satisfactory remedies I ever handled, and if they were more generally used, they would often make the Doctors bill only the listened of $20. These goods need no limiting in my stock because they are constantly coming in and going out and Trade Keepers. These good qualities do not always belong to a substantial fact.

Your Cold Cured for 5c.

Trapping a Villian.

A writer on Klondike customs and dangers says, in the Independent, that there is here, as every where, a class of ex-criminals whom the lone voyager must guard against.

Last year, he says, the man who went out with the first mail after the closing of the river fell in with a traveller, hungry and cold, stumbling along the unbroken trail. The messenger took pity on him, shared his food with him, made a fire and warmed his half frozen body.

All day they traved over the ice, and at night the messenger made the man lie down to sleep, while he watched to scare the wolves away and keep the fire burning. It was long past midnight when he awoke the sleeper and asked him to watch, so that he himself might snatch a nap before setting out again on the long journey.

The messenger was sleeping soundly when he was startled by a blow on the head. He leaped up and was terrified to find that his companion was standing over him, striking at him with an axe.

The messenger dropped to one side and threw off his sleeping-robe and the fur cap that had saved his life. Then the would-be murderer was plainly embarrassed. To be sure he had the axe, but it is not easy to kill a man when he is looking. He hesitated, and it that second the messenger conceived a brilliant thought.

"Ah, pour chap!" said he pathetically, as one conciliates a snarling dog. "Cold and hunger have driven him crazy!"

The man let the axe fall. He almost smiled. It was so well to be out of a nasty joint. Yes, he would be crazy. Appearing to forget the matter, he left the ax where it had fallen, and began to rummage in the grub sack. The dogs awoke, and the two men breakfasted and started long before dawn. That day the messenger carried the axe and insisted that the madman should walk in front.

At the next mounted police station, the man, much to his surprise, was handed over to the officer in charge. Now his efforts to play crazy were a sad failure. He was taken to Dawson, tried and sentenced to fourteen years imprisonment.

Historic Potomac.

The Baltimore and Ohio Railroad follows the Potomac for a distance of 150 miles. It is a curious fact that every mile of territory from New York to Pittsburg travelled over by the Baltimore road was traversed over and over again by George Washington from the time he surveyed a wagon road over the mountains to the end of the Revolution. His connection with the French and Indian war recalls the many names which the Potomac has borne. It is said that the first white settlers at Jamestown gave it the name of "Pawtomax," in consequence of a tribe of Indians of that name living near Harper's Ferry. West of that point it was called by the Indians "Cohongoron" or "Cohongoluta." It was also called "Quitrough" in the grant of the Northern Neck by Charles II of England to the Fairfaxes, but it has not been suggested where he or his petitioners obtained that queer title for it.

Through the evolution of names it became "Potomac." Every school boy knows the important part this famous river plays in history. "First in War and First in Peace," like the illustrious Washington, who lived his life, fought his battles, won his honor, died, and now sleeps on the banks of this famous river, which flows quietly on to the sea past Mt Vernon.

Spreads Like Wildfire.

When things are "the best" they become "the best selling." Absolutely so here, a leading druggist, of Bellefville, O., writes "Electric Bitters are the best selling bitters I have handled in 20 years. You know why? Most diseases begin in disorders of stomach, liver, kidneys, bowels, blood and nerves. Electric Bitters tone up the stomach, regulates liver, kidneys and bowels, purifies the blood, strengthens the nerves, brings rosy cheeks and roses of confidence. It builds up the entire system. TALES OF A TRAVELER.

Hot Millionaires.

The average citizen goes thro' Hot Springs as quietly as possible, and does not try to match dollars with the guests at the Homestead. We have heard of several of our Pocahontas County citizens who tried to maintain the dignity of the county at the Homestead and after a few agonizing meals pay the price of a steer at the office. There is a tale related to me as a fact that a countryman was charged $5 for a bottle of Glycerine at the hotel drugstore, and came away a sadder and a wiser man. The management evidently believes in pleasing the guests and takes this sure means of discouraging the visits of the hoi polloi. A man must have the god essence, money, to be at home there.

Every door opens but to golden keys there, and to the man who reflects that we all will be dead some day—dead and dissolved into the elements—it seems strange that there should be this difference. It is not so strange that the arts should elevate man, but for wealth with which the most common may be endowed should so soon show in every line and feature of the man, passeth understanding

The golf links were dotted with people clubbing balls about. I remember seeing a bad boy hit at a toad with a stick and miss it. That is golf pure and simple. Put on a red coat and get a young darkey to carry your clubs. Hit at the ball with a haughty air and miss it, and the excitement is glorious. I have known of a noted man to skip in his buggy opposite the links and curse the insanity of the whole proceeding. We saw a subserviency in some of the denizens of the Hot Springs occasioned by the proximity of the tin gods that might have belonged to France before the Revolution.

The man in the play said to the girl: "Don't marry the millionaire. He may loose his money and then you will have a decayed remnant on your hands." But we slunk through Hot Springs like a whipped cur for all this philosophy.

We were reminded while there of a tale. There were three wise men of Gotham who went to the Hot Springs to meet a capital st on important business. Two decided to stop at the Homestead even though it cost them half of their kingdom. The third decided to go to the Hoover House. They transacted their business and came home. The two at the Homestead had their bill settled by the capitalist while the one at the humble hotel paid his own bill. Then the two put this proposition to him: "Is it cheaper to stop at the cheap hotel and pay, or stop at the Homestead and have somebody pay for you."

Signs of "Thou Shalt Not."

The city signs worry me beyond measure. I will be contentedly walking along on an asphalt pavement thinking how delightful it is to have such pavements when I come beside an ordinary grass plot and see the sign, "Keep off the grass." There immediately comes to me a desire to cut across the grass plot and am only restrained by fear of the consequences.

I go into a gallery and have to leave my umbrella so that I will not point to the pictures. Immediately I have the insane desire to use an umbrella in pointing to a picture.

The street car says, "No Smoking." Immediately my eye catches it I feel like smoking. Another sign, "Don't expectorate in this car," and I feel like spitting.

I saw some particularly aggravating signs at the Zoological Gardens in Washington. The first sign said: "Do not break or carry away any branch of a tree or disturb any plant whatever." I had seen I could have walked through all the timber land in Pocahontas without wanting to injure or destroy a single tree, but now I felt as if I were allowed I would go to destroying all the park timber.

Near the Bengal tiger cage is a dogwood or rock of some kind on the back platform. Then the bars of inch iron, is a sign: "Do not annoy the animals." I immediately think that the annoying of animals is a privilege denied me.

Another sign is over the tapir, so called by the way he is finished up. "Do not throw anything in this enclosure, this applies especially to peanuts." I felt like throwing all manner of things to the tapir, but every thing I thought of would have afforded me tame pleasure compared to the great joy of throwing a peanut to the beast.

The Dewey Candidacy.

The coming out of Dewey for President caused a rush of men in Washington and there is no end of conjecture as to what effect it will have. The least thing that it can do for the party is to bring into the convention a very important element of the party, and if the friends of Bryan are not entirely mad they will not be treated contumely.

There is no one responsible for the assertion I am about to make except myself. It is that Bryan himself is at the bottom of Dewey's candidacy, and that they will both be on the ticket. Nearly every successful presidential ticket represented the two elements of the party. The element prevailing nominated their leader for President. It is a safe, sensible thing to do and eminently just and fair. If Bryan's friends are more numerous let him accept the first place to which he is entitled when viewed from a personal standpoint, or the second place if it is more expedient to nominate the man who by his masterly action caused his country to thrill with the knowledge that Americans were more than a match for the European power against which we had declared war. Whose flawless victory made the heart throb and the eyes grow dim as we read.

It is growing more evident every day that as usual the swing of pendulum will bring the Democrats into power this fall.

Street Meetings.

Last Sunday I attended some of the open air meetings on Pennsylvania Avenue. The Salvation Army was as beautiful a little service of its kind as you even saw. The two pure demure little Salvation Army lasses with good sweet faces stood up with a guitar each and sang and played with two men one of whom kept time during the chorus with a big brass drum. One of the girls made a neat address showing that the truly happy earthly life is the life of a Christian. She said, among other things, that wordly people gave up so much for wordly pleasure that it would be a pity for them to have no happiness in life. The girls had sweet refined voices, and I found the Salvation Army people to be very different from what I had imagined them.

Then came a lot of people who belonged to some mission work, and took turns in talking for religion. There was a colored man who was good at expressing himself. He prayed that his words would be "backed up by the Holy Ghost." He reminded his hearers that some time they would "shake hands with time." He said he was the graduate of the High School. Of the lower schooling he had not a day, but he was a "graduate of heaven." An old man eighty years old told an artless tale. He said a young lady was then staying at his house. The work before she had been in West Virginia. There she had seen the farmers plowing corn (April 1, remember.) Why had those farmers not taken a sickle and cleared the weeds. Because they wished to spread and destroy the weeds. This moved or appealed to me who had left the fields the week before and not a blade of grass had started, and where the corn will not be worked until June.

Another meeting gathered together when a preacher, his wife, two boys and a friend drove up in a dilapidated vehicle which had well earned the title of rattle trap. They took out an organ about the size of a sizable trunk and put it on the back platform. Then the preacher uttered a few platitudes and the wife played the organ and they all sang. The crowd listened to the preacher respectfully, but were anxious to hear the singing and kept the choir at it until they got tired of singing and hitched up the old 75 cent gray flea-bitten horse and drove away. During the services an old tin can remained on the corner of the platform and men in the crowd stepped up and filled it up with small coin. The appearance of the whole family indicated that recent poverty we so often see in country preacher's families.

The people listened respectfully at all these meetings, and they must do good. People who will not take the trouble to go to church and hear the choir sing over their heads and the preacher preach over their heads will stop long enough opposite these street preachers to hear the news that they are going to die.

In Congress.

Congressmen have not afforded a very convenient way for their friends to see them in session when they come to Washington. There is no doubt that in any case a Congressman would oblige one of his constituents who penetrates the country as far as Washington with a seat in reserved gallery. All that the constituent would have to do being to send in his card to his Representative. But this is too much red tape for the average constituent, so he makes a break for the galleries. Before the desirable ones is stationed a watchdog who waves you on. The public be damned, is evidently a favorite Congressional maxim. Finally you find a gallery into which you may enter and sit uncomfortably crowded, and see the other galleries empty. The Washington people organize the Congressmen even into shutting the people from the country at large out of the galleries.

Having gained a view of the hall the gallery god is before a sea of upturned desks. We have heard that Congress is a disorderly body. It may be whenever they can muster enough men for a fight, but we have never seen either ball when it did not look like a Marlinton church during meeting. A Congressman only speaks that his words may be read.

The first day they were eulogizing Bland to about a hundred in the gallaries and two or three on the floor. We never saw anything equal these memorial services, for apathy. Champ Clark was the speaker

The next time I ventured into the kennel where our Representatives wish you to sit, a member from Tennessee was giving President McKinley hail columbia for not giving the Porto Rico people free trade. The Representatives are not a distinguished looking lot. They are about as common in Washington as railroad hands in Marlinton.

On the other hand the United States Senators look like they had sense enough to teach school. Senator Elkins is one of the brightest looking men in the Senate. Senator Scott is a good looking man, but there is an indescribable difference in his appearance to the other members of that august body. Senator Jones of Arkansas is a sensible looking man, and Senator Daniel, of Virginia, looks the rare genius that he is.

The Senate has been discussing for several days the advisability of giving the Roman Catholic schools for the education of Indian children an appropriation. The church does this as missionary work, and will continue to do so whether they receive the government money or not. Senators Lodge of Massachusetts and Gallinger of New Hampshire and others object that money should not be appropriated to sectarian schools. Senators Vest of Missouri, and Jones of Arkansas, and others vote in favor of paying the church schools, because the church did it before and for less than the government schools themselves.

I intend to Congress in both houses for many hours, but heard nothing startling or new. You can hear just as good speaking any day at our circuit court when it is in session.

The public does not seem very welcome about the Capitol. The people about the nation's court-house seem to object to people putting country questions to them such as, "Where is the elevator?" or, "Where is the stairway?"

Those are things they should know, even as a college education should teach the graduate where the axe lies hid when he comes home.

The war with the Boers is stirring up the British poets to praiseworthy efforts. Swinburne, fired by Robert's victory on the anniversary of Majuba Hill, hails, in the London Times,

> . . . the turning tide
> That sets once more our trust in freedom free,
> That leaves a ruthless and a truthless foe,
> And all base hopes that hailed his cause, laid low,
> And England's name a light on land and sea.

"Our trust in freedom!" That England tends nowadays to set up a freedom trust is what her critics complain of. His own words seem to smile at Mr Swinburne.

On the other side two little verses by William Watson published it does not appear where, are said to have provoked torrents of indignation. Relating how the winds of Heaven fought for England "when lofty Spain came towering up the seas," he says:

> Ah! not to-day is nature on our side;
> The mountains and the rivers are our foe;
> And nature with the heart of man allied
> Is hard to overthrow.

He is not very violent, and yet, judging from the reported indignation, he bites. Meanwhile Alfred Austin seems to be under restraint and the cable as yet brings nothing from Kipling, who, after all, does not pride himself on timeliness.—Harper's Weekly.

What is the American sentiment about the recent British successes in South Africa? We read that Continental Europe groans and gnashes its teeth over every Boer set-back. It is by no means so here. Our sympathy with the Boers has grown stronger if any thing as their best qualities have come more into view, but it has not reached the length of inspiring any general grief at British victories. The most it has accomplished has been to make the majority of us rather grimly and sarcastically neutral in a war which interests us profoundly, but for which we feel a powerful dislike. British victories are popular, rather than otherwise, because they hasten a conclusion which all along has seemed inevitable. We want the only end that can come as soon as possible, and then we want to see what next—whether England has laid the foundations of another Ireland in South Africa; what will happen to the South African colonials who joined the Boers; whether we shall see a Boer emigration—possibly to this country; whether the redoubtable Kruger family will turn its assets into cash and build a house in Fifth Avenue next to Mr Carnegie's! We shall also follow closely the political consequences of the war England. Something will happen of course. They will hang more gaudy chains on the neck of the gallant 'Bobs,' and doubtless make him a duke; all the other head soldier men will be duly advanced and decorated; but the government that gave them their opportunity—how will that fare? We shall see, and see the quicker the sooner Pretoria falls. The crop bids fair to be got in, but the quality and extent of it will still be matters that will concern and receive our highly intelligent attention.—Harper's Weekly.

A new executive committee was elected as follows:

Green Bank: Dr C. L. Austin, B. F. McElwee, C. A. Lightner.

Huntersville: J. A. Moore, H. L White, E. A. Frisl.

Edray: H. A. Yeager, John Waugh, Andrew Price.

Levels: E. I. Holt, Dr F. T. McClintic, G. R. Curry.

On motion of L. M. McClintic, E I Holt was elected county chairman. On motion of Dr F. T. McClintic, Andrew Price was elected secretary of the committee.

Dr C. L. Austin introduced the following resolution, which was unanimously adopted:

Whereas, the Democrats of Pocahontas County recognize in our Representative in Congress, Honorable David E. Johnston, an able and efficient Representative, and endorse him for a second term and renomination, provided he stands for the same.

And whereas, we with equal confidence endorse Honorable Jno. A. Preston of Greenbrier County, as a man of high integrity and ability, a sterling Democrat, and eminently fitted to represent this District in Congress.

Therefore be it resolved that in the event the Honorable David E. Johnstone is not a candidate for renomination, we hereby instruct our delegates, this day appointed to the Congressional Convention which meets at Montgomery on the 11th day of July, 1900, to cast the solid vote of this county in said Convention for Honorable John A. Preston, and use all honorable means to secure his nomination.

E. I. Holt introduced the following resolution which was unanimously adopted.

Whereas, the Democrats of this county recognize in the Honorable J. H. Miller to able and aggressive Democrat, it is hereby resolved that the delegates from this county to the State Convention be and are hereby instructed to cast the vote of said county solidly for, and use all honorable means to secure the nomination of the said J. H. Miller for Auditor at the next State Convention.

On motion of Dr J. P. Moomaw, the convention adjourned.

The report death of Mr. D. A. A. Keyser, of Covington, Va; who left two years ago with two others for the Klondike gold-fields, has been corroborated by a letter recently received by J. D. Leighton, Secretary of the Covington Masonic Lodge, from F. G. Kimball, of St. Michaels, Alaska, evidently himself a Mason. The letter is dated Dec. 30, 1899, and is as follows:

Dear Sir and Bro.:—I am informed the body of a man supposed from papers on his person to be D. A. A Keyser, of Covington, Va. was found by some prospectors about 60 miles up the Iglootulik river which flows into the head of Norton Bay, about 75 milet from head.

The body was found in a cabin wrapped in a robe. A very small amount of provisions were found in the cabin,

I learned these facts from one of the party who had found the body and buried it. The papers among which was a diary were in the hands of another of the party whom I did not see My informant states that Keyser had written in his diary that his partner (named Scott had quarrelled with him and was leaving him while he was sick.

My informant also said that Keyser was a Mason and was from Covington, Va.

this man also stated that a man nomee Wm. W. Wright was laying dead on a sled farther down the river and he is supposed to have been murdered.

There is a deputy U. S. Marshal up there now investigating the matter and he will procure Keyser paper and take care of them.

Fraternally yours,
F. G. Kimball.

MARLINTON, THURS. APR. 12, 1900

A CARD FROM H. A. YEAGER.

Seeing that my name would be used at the coming primary election, and yielding to the solicitation of friends throughout the county. I have decided to become a candidate to represent Pocahontas County in the next House of Delegates of West Virginia.

In the limited time between this and the day of the primary election, I will not be able to make a personal canvass to see the voters of the county.

My position on the issues of the day is too well known to need discussion.

If the people honor me by election to this responsible position, I will try to discharge my duty faithfully.

I am not now, nor will I be, pledged to the support of any man or measure; but if elected will try to carry out the wishes of my constituents in all questions coming before the Legislature.

I have been interrogated as to my position on the settlement of the so called antebellum public debt of West Virginia.

I have always been and am now opposed to any agitation or opening up of that question by the Legislature, believing that this State now occupies a safe and honorable position on that question.

Respectfully, your obedient servant. H. A. YEAGER.

We are pleased to announce in this issue Honorable H. A. Yeager as a candidate for the House of Delegates. Mr Yeager has served the county before in this capacity, and is an energetic man for another term with many; as is well proven by the pressure exerted at this date to bring him before the people so short a time before the primary election.

The "average" voter takes little interest in an election "contest" where a single candidate does the running, and wins out. he is over so rude. It looks to much like a "set" to please some people. The more candidates the merrier the election!

NOTICE—This may be your last chance to secure fine photographs at home; we can not remain always. An opportunity is extended for three weeks—a later date may be too late.
Respectfully,
PEERLESS ART GALLARY.

The postal Department was certainly inviting under a misapprehension when it discontinued the mail route leading up Knapp's Creek from Durbin to Frost and thence to Highland, as was done last week, after disconnecting the offices at Frost and Durbin. The patrons of these offices are made dependent on Edray, 15 miles away, for mail facilities, and unless they go there personally or send some one for their mail they will not get it before the next day.

Mrs Flora Bester, a sister of S. L. Brown of this place, and son Odin B. Bester, are in Marlinton.

The first warm rains of the season fell on Tuesday, putting out great forest fires which had broken out, and giving the grass a start.

Tyree's was the first store in town to stock up with new goods this spring. He makes a specialty of fruits, vegetables, meats, and produce, and his present stock is choice and complete.

The last snow visible from Marlinton disappeared this week. A snow bank forms at the 'low place' on Buck's Mountain every winter, where the constant winds sweep over the divide. A large drift has been visible there for weeks.

E. I. Renick, an eminent New York lawyer and nephew of B. F. Renick of this county, died in Paris last week, whither he had gone to look after the complicated affairs of Bonny Castelaine, a titled son-in-law of the late Jay Gould.

Died, in Chicago April 10th, of an operation for appendicitis, T. C. Hannah, of the grain brokerage firm of Carrington, Hannah & Co. Mr Hannah was a brother of S. B. Hannah of Green Bank, and of Mrs Dr Barringer of Charlottesville, Va.

The farmers are busy in plowing, fence repairing, and burning rubbish. The late Dr Wallace said that he generally observed that whenever such spring work began the epidemics seemed to vanish like magic and it soon became distressingly healthy,—or words to that effect.

Teachers and pupils of the Lewisburg Female Institute making a party of thirty persons, went on an excursion last week. Misses Willie, Marjorie, ann Wawa Rucker, Mary McLaughlin, and Anna Price were among the excursionists. Rev Telford had the party in charge. They started Wednesday and returned Saturday.

Notice to the Greenbrier Alumnae Association:

The committee on arrangements for the annual meeting and banquet of the Greenbrier Alumnae Association, on May 25th, would like to know how many expect to attend from Pocahontas. Please send names to Miss Janie Stuart Price, Lewisburg, W. Va., before May 18th, so arrangements may be made for their entertainment.

Smallpox Again.

A slight smallpox sensation was raised in this place Sunday. That morning a pilgrim arrived direct from Clifton Forge, Va., and engaged board with E. F. McLaughlin. He complained of feeling ill and that evening an eruption broke out over his body. He cheerfully confessed to having been exposed to smallpox and said that he undoubtedly had the disease. Dr Cunningham was summoned and he had the man, who was a foreign looking individual, removed to the pest house on the outskirts of the town, on suspicion.

Sunday night he disappeared from the pest house and has not been seen since.

GLADE HILL.

Fine weather, but the grass is not growing much.

C. W. Dilley made a flying trip to Highland last week.

Feed is getting very scarce.

Crazy Bill passed here one day last week.

E. N. Moore has had a bad case of grippe. He was unable to be out among the people for some time, but we think he is still in the ring.

H. F. Arbogast took a trip to Woodlee recently. He says it is a very fascinating place.

Several men passed here enroute for the railroad, last week.

Some candidate for Sheriff should have George Hunter for Deputy. They would be elected sure of election, as George's white hairs are very taking.

John A. Warwick of Bath, was in this part last week.

Planting is the order of the day. Most of the people here finished sowing oats and are getting ready for corn planting.

Most of the people in this community have the grub.

The election of county officers is causing more excitement than the Spanish American war.

Uncle Sam has been selling an axe to people in this county lately. He surely wants to teach them a lesson.

The savages are as thick as grass hoppers in a hay field.

SAY LAZY.

Breaks the Record.

Mr Isaac Hoover, of Lilly, Rockingham County, Va., writes us as follows, in regard to his season's product of maple sugar. The late season in this county was rather unfavorable for sugar making, and no single camp has been reported producing as much as a thousand pounds. If we remember correctly, a Mr McMillion of Lobelia, this county, produced sugar and syrup considerably in excess of this amount, during the season of 1898. However in the total amount of sugar produced, we think Pocahontas is entitled to the name of the "sugar county" of the State.

Following is the letter:

I saw in your last issue that sugar making is the order of the day. I returned home from my sugar camp in Skidmore's Fork, April 7th, with 1014 pounds of maple sugar and 50 gallons of syrup. You will please ask the question if any one camp in Pocahontas County has made more than that. There were only four of us engaged in making it, two men and two women. I broke the record on the sugar business in this locality.
Yours, ISAAC HOOVER.

A War Incident.

Mrs Anthony Kincaid, of Marlinton, received a clock from the estate of her father, George Brown of Brownstown, Greenbrier County, which has been running forty years, and is still in excellent order. A pistol bullet embedded in the base of the clock recalls the following incident of guerilla warfare in this section.

One night in May, 1862, a detachment of Federal troops, belonging to Averill's command stationed at Beverly, were quartered in the house and barn. That night a company of the Greenbrier Cavalry rode up to the house and demanded their surrender. Upon a refusal being given firing commenced through the windows and doors which were soon completely demolished.

When the Yankees retreated three dead and eight severely wounded were found in the one room, and it was then that the clock was struck by a pistol ball. Later the Yankees returned and taking nearly all the bedding in the house, loaded their dead and wounded on wagons and transported them to Beverly, passing this place enroute. Mrs Kincaid was then a young girl and remembers very well the terrible affair.

GREEN BANK.

And still it snows.

W. A. Bratton, of Marlinton, was in this vicinity last week, laying up his fences.

T. S. McNeel was around last Friday looking up his interests in this part of the county.

Earle Arbogast has rented and moved into the Patterson property.

The Arborvale correspondent will note that the word Lord is mentioned 31 times in the Bible and perhaps oftener.

Dr J. P. Modman is on the sick-list.

Sandy Sutton is dangerously ill with typhoid fever at Horton.

R. L. Brown is doing some repairing on J. H. Curry's house.

John White passed through town last Saturday.

A. M. Oliver has moved to the Oliver farm. We are glad to see him back.

J. W. Yeager was in town Saturday.

Dr L. L. Little has moved to the H. A. Yeager property. His office is opposite the post office and the Curry shoe shop.

Cards are out for the marriage of G. L. Clark and Miss Bertie Beard and 1rb Beard and Miss Cordie Wooddell, April 18, 1900, at 11 a. m.

You are married you miss obey,
You must be true in all you say,
You must be kind, you must be good,
And help your wife to chop the wood.

Died, April 15, 1900, at her home two miles from town, Mrs Louisa Sheets, wife of W. H. Sheets, of heart trouble and pneumonia. A husband and eight children are left to mourn her loss. Peace to her ashes.

Give us J. W. Gillespie for Justice in this District, and Lanty Wooddell for Constable, and Ellis Curry Commissioner or the Board of Education, and Honorable H. A. Yeager for House of Delegates and J. McNeel Commissioner County Court, and, and, and—

There is a great deal of sickness in this part of the county, and more deaths than I ever knew in the same length of time. The suffering has been very severe among our people with mumps, measles, and pneumonia.

There will be ID Y preaching at this place on April 22 at 11 a. m. If no preaching, there will be prayer service. Everybody is cordially invited to attend. Sunday school every Sunday morning at 9 o. m. We hope to see every body out.

MAY FLOWER.

To Cure Lagrippe in Two Days.

Take Laxative Bromo Quinine Tablets. All druggists refund the money if it fails to cure. E. W. Grove's signature on every box. 25c.

BUCKEYE.

The railroad is still being pushed. The blasting has for a few days been unusually heavy. T. M. A. and Lewis F. have flew to the thickets and will not return until the blasting is over. Their nerve was shattered during the Civil War.

The Sabbath school has been organized at Bethel and the prospect is the school will be interesting. We hope it will result in much good being accomplished. Prof Auldridge is Superintendant and Theology Expounder.

Mr Dorman has sold his farm to N. C. Rodgers, of Jacox. Mr Dorman will move soon and in him we loose an honest, useful citizen, and my! but the boys look sorrowful! We welcome Mr Rodgers and hope he will be pleased with his new home.

Mr Gleek, Jr., of Mill Point, was in this part Sunday. The story is going that he went home Monday or late Sunday.

Mrs J. G. McNeill is very sick. We hope she may soon be blessed with good health.

Among the glad faces infesting the town, there is none more full and fair than that of Buckeye's "Sally Sam." He is a genial, light-hearted youngster and takes his turn with the best of them.

Quite a congregation came out to hear Brother Price Sunday evening but he did not appear. We have come to regard a sermon from him as being a literary luxury, and are always glad to have him preach for us.

Wats the matter wif Doctor Dave? Oh, he's all right, and so is REDDY.

WANLESS.

A little colder and some snow. Every body out of hay.

Lots of grip, but no measles.

Dr Hunter Moomau passed our town enroute for John Cassel's. Mr and Mrs Cassel are both sick.

W. A. Bratton passed by here going to the sale on the 14th. Mr Bratton will get there this time, and E. N. Moore will be our Sheriff.

We want Hon. H. A. Yeager for Representative.

There is no doubt about Joe Buzzard and his mule getting there.

Give us men—sound men, who will not allow whiskey shops along the public road—to till our county offices. Mr Prosecuting Attorney, send the Sheriff and arrest and send them to jail if they can't give bail. We want this violation broken up.

Singing at Wanless by A. M. Oliver was largely attended Sunday, but some rowdies came from the saloon and set the thing afire.

J. H. Madagan & Co., contractors, are making good headway with the grade. They will finish their section soon.

J. B. Galford, who has recently recovered from his sixth attack of pneumonia, rolled three acres of new ground Tuesday.

W. L. Kesler is farming C. U. Wanless's land.

A. S. Gillespie and wife are visiting Mrs Margaret Cassell, who is sick. NOAH.

BUCKEYE.

Farmers are busy plowing and preparing to put out big crops.

The sick of this vicinity are getting well.

Aaron Kellison and family have moved to Elkins.

N. Rodgers, of Jacox, has bought the Dorman farm. We are sorry to see Mr Dorman's leave this part as they were good neighbors.

James I. Beverage, who has been dangerously sick at Allan Kennison's, was able to come home last week.

Rev Callison will preach at the upper Church on the 5th Sunday in this month.

Owen Kellison went to camp this week.

Walter Clark was in part last Sunday.

Mrs William B. Hannah.

Died, on the morning of April 7 Mrs William B. Hannah, after an illness of a few weeks, aged about 80 years. Her remains were buried in the Clooman graveyard; funeral services conducted by Rev Atkinson.

Her maiden name was Rhinehart. She leaves a husband and four children: James, near Marlinton; Lewis, near Clover Lick; Burley, at Locust; Mrs Kenny Kennison, of Buckeye. She has been a member of the M. E. Church for a number of years and was ready for the summons.

How calm is the sleep of the dead,
How deep, in the slumber they sleep
Where the eye hath no tear to shed,
The heart no sorrow to weep.

A FRIEND.

NOTICE AUCTION SALE

A. L. Dilley will have a big sale on at Frost April 21st, and one at Boyd Hannah's on 4th April sale 10 a. m. I will offer for sale a fine line of men's ready made clothing, dress goods, boots, suggestions, notions, and many other articles, too numerous to mention.

Respectfully,
A. L. DILLEY

DUNMORE.

A fine shower on grass, grain and and candidates.

Sunday school will be organized at Baxter church Sunday April 22. Let all come out.

The sick are not improving much. Jacob K. Taylor is quite ill at this time. His sons, George, Dan, Ed. and Jacob and his daughter Mrs Zin, are all with him.

Mrs William R. Sheets died at her home Sunday morning. Mrs Sheets was a good woman and will be missed.

Bratton and McNeel are in the Green Bank district.

Prof J. B. White went to the upper end of the county Saturday to fish.

Dr Jordan was called Saturday night to see Mrs Kelley at the head of the county, 34 miles from Frost.

Fifty Italians came in Sunday.

The people of the Green Bank district do not want any redistricting in our district. It is as good as Edray, and will be better when we get a railroad.

Still they move. William Siple, William Gragg, Charles Bush all moved last week.

Mrs Andrew Cleek is out on a visit.

A Mr Lowe of the State of Virginia and County of Bath, and Miss Lou Carpenter of the State of West Virginia and County of Pocahontas, were married on the 11th inst.

Mr Lanty Herold and lady were in town Monday.

Attorney Yeager was in town Sunday.

If in need of monuments, tombstones, coffins, large or small, plain or covered, call on Swecker, Dunmore. All furnished on short notice.

There will be a big Auction at Arborvale Saturday, April 21; also some big law suits. If you are looking for bargains, come in.

Maj. Mason is back from the drive.

The McClure sale went off in good shape.

R. L. Nottingham and C. D. Bozzard made a flying trip to Marlinton Tuesday.

Post office matters have gotten badly mixed about Frost. Mark Hannah will have to be sent for.

Boys, if you all want an early spring, just sit down on the business end of a tack and you'll have it. MR POOH.

BROWNSBURG.

(In Colored Circles.)

The weather is fine at this writing and grass is growing fine.

The sick are improving. Mrs Amy Wheeler is quite unwell at this writing.

G. W. Wheeler is on the sick-list.

The people of this place spent a happy Easter. Rev J. M. Hogge delivered a good and interesting sermon on Sunday last.

There will be preaching here on the 22d by Rev William Williamson. Let everybody attend.

Conaway Wilson has returned from a visit among his friends in Bath County.

Miss Kimbrough Hill spent Easter at home.

Miss Susie Truss of Virginia is visiting her friends and relatives in this part.

Moffet Wheeler of the Hot Springs is here looking after a job.

Uncle Harry McDowell is off to Ronceverte.

Frank Jackson of Academy was at home Easter.

GOOD LUCK.

The latest advices from the South African war represent the English armies much embarrassed for want of horses for cavalry and mounted infantry, and the lack of suitable clothing for the troops. It is to be remembered it is now winter in that country, its climate just the reverse of ours. Baden Powell is reported dead and Mafeking in serious straits.

SCOTT'S EMULSION

is a food medicine for the baby that is thin and not well nourished and for the mother whose milk does not nourish the baby.

It is equally good for the boy or girl who is thin and pale and not well nourished by their food, also for the anæmic or consumptive adult that is losing flesh and strength.

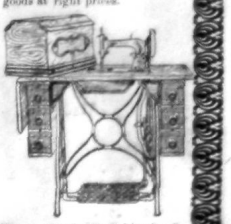

In fact, for all conditions of wasting, it is the best medicine that will nourish and build up the body and give new life and energy when all other means fail.

SEVEN RUNNING SORES CURED
—BY—

Johnston's Sarsaparilla

QUART BOTTLES.

THE GREAT SPRING MEDICINE.

JOHNSTON'S SARSAPARILLA as a Blood Food and Nerve Energizer, is the greatest SPRING MEDICINE ever discovered. It comes as a rich blessing from heaven to the "worn out," the run down, the overworked and debilitated. That "tired feeling," those "sinking spells," the languor and despondency which arise from badly nourished nerves, from thin, vitiated blood and an underfed body, vanish as if by a magic spell. The weariness, lassitude and nervous prostration which accompany the spring, time and the heat of summer, are conquered and banished at once. For every form of neurasthenia, and all ailments of the brain and nerve, insomnia, hysteria and nervousness generally, it is almost a specific. It furnishes the very elements to rebuild worn-out nerve tissues. It feeds brain, nerve centers and nerves, calming and equalizing their action; it makes rich, red, honest blood. Newness of life, new hope, new strength follow its faithful use. It makes the weak strong, and the old young again.

It was the antiquated (but now happily exploded) method in the good old times, to treat Salt Rheum, Scrofula, Cancer and other troublesome disorders arising from BLOOD TAINT with powerful alteratives, such as mercury, arsenic and other mineral agents. It was expected by this treatment that the poison could be killed while the blood was left to course through its channels holding in its circulation the specific germs of the disease. But in this way every part of the body became more or less diseased. Nothing can be more terrible than a horribly destructive blood taint. It not only attacks virulently the different structures of the body, but many times the bones are honey-combed and destroyed. It often seeks out the nerves and spinal cord, and again it will bring decay and death to some vital organ, as the kidneys, liver or stomach. There is only one scientific method for the cure of blood taint. That is, PURIFICATION! Every particle of the blood must be removed through the excretory channels, the lungs, kidneys, bowels, liver and skin. "First pure, then peaceable." The great restorative, reconstructive and vitalizer of the blood, JOHNSTON'S SARSAPARILLA, not only radically and exhaustively removes the taint, but also removes all mercury, calomel and other minerals, and fills the veins and arteries with the ruby, glowing current of vitality. "The blood is the life." Good health means pure blood. The old and reliable remedy, JOHNSTON'S SARSAPARILLA, is universally regarded as the greatest Blood Purifier ever discovered. This fact is now established beyond question or cavil.

BLOOD POISON CURED BY JOHNSTON'S SARSAPARILLA.

Union, Mich., October 31, 1894.

Williams, Davis, Brooks & Co., Detroit:

Gentlemen—In April last I began using JOHNSTON'S SARSAPARILLA for Blood Poison, caused by an amputation of two of my arms. I had SEVEN RUNNING SORES on my legs. I used two bottles and was entirely cured. I know it is what cured me. Yours truly, C. W. LUTHER.

THROUGH A WOMAN'S EYES

Mrs. Jewell's Opinion of the South African Situation.

NURSED JAMESON'S MEN

She Was for Several Years a Resident of the Transvaal, Although an American—Personality of the Boers—The Jameson Expedition.

In considering the present South African War, says Mrs. Fletcher Webster Jewell, in the New York Herald, I involuntarily look at the situation through a woman's eyes, and, passing the causes, think first of the consequences. The first picture that comes to me, therefore, instead of being one of glory and fame is the result of the different battles, is of carnage and death, of widows and of orphans. This comes home all the more keenly because I happened to be a spectator of some of the exciting scenes in and about Johannesburg during the latter part of 1895 and the early part of 1896.

(Mrs. Fletcher Webster Jewell).

when Dr. Jameson made his celebrated raid, and also, to a slight degree, an actor in the epilogue of that drama, while assisting in nursing the wounded in that memorable fight, after they had been taken to the little hospital at Krugersdorp.

Without presuming to account myself either a civic politician or a military tactician, I have always felt that that wild ride of Jameson and his men was simply a sort of a preliminary skirmish of a greater battle.

Had he succeeded in reaching Johannesburg, instead of being captured within eighteen miles of that place, I believe that the history which is being written now would have been recorded then. With Jameson as the leader, and his little band of troopers as the nucleus around which the Outlanders might rally, I cannot help thinking that, in the then comparatively unprepared state of the Boers, the contest would have been short and decisive, and that long before this time the South African Republic would have been added to the dominions of Great Britain. But he failed, as all the world now knows, on the very threshold of success, and in the intervening years the Boers, evidently feeling that a great contest was inevitable, have been steadily preparing themselves.

Knowing the country in which the war is being waged, and knowing personally many engaged on either side, I have followed the reports of the fight with an intense interest. I need not expatiate on the discipline and courage of the English soldiers. These are matters of common knowledge. But knowing also the obstinate determination of the Boers and their undying hatred of the English, I do not regard the proclamations of Kruger and Joubert as mere idle words. I know that these are shrewd men, obstinate men and brave men, and to me every word they have uttered rings with a literal meaning.

Knowing the Boer character and the British character, I do not think that any one country is large enough to hold these two types in amicable relationship, especially with the English as the dominant governing race. The ancestors of these Boers, as well as some of those at present engaged on the Boer side, deliberately "trekked" to the north in order to establish a government of their own.

They are fighting now in the last ditch, so to speak. There is no possibility of further retreat. The English surround them on the north, west and south. To the eastward of the Transvaal the Portuguese hold all the territory.

I have always resented the extreme criticism, particularly in this country, of Jameson and his men. Whatever may have been the political purpose of that expedition, the fact that they were responding to an urgent appeal of the committee in Johannesburg, asking their assistance in behalf of the women and children of that place, places them in my eyes as gallant men who were willing to risk their lives in a desperate effort in what must have seemed to them a great cause.

It is impossible for me to regard the 49 or more wounded Englishmen as murderers, "land pirates" and "robbers." Such epithets do not befit men who so bravely faced death in the fight and in the hospital, and the possibilities of death as filibusters even after passing through their other ordeals.

And, in the same breath, speaking as an American woman, and, therefore, to a certain extent, as a neutral, I feel that in common justice I should in say a word for the bravery of the four brave men in that same hospital, and for the generous care by those gentlemen of their wounded opponents.

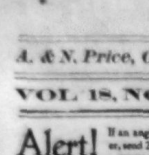

As I recall some of my experiences during my brief stay in that hospital I feel myself wondering how the Boer wounded are being treated during the present fight. The bare hatred of the Boers for the Englishmen who they would not let an English doctor treat any of their sufferers. And as I recollect my dislike of Kruger, a flood of memories is surging in, flooding my soul, who had been shot through the lungs, with a quick, heavy step and head held high, as he unconsciously accentuated the noble qualities of one in being contrasted in their hospitals now. Each one of those wounded men was either the sole support of some aged parent or the sole support of some aged parent or the sole support of some aged parent or

WARREN'S ADDRESS.

Joseph Warren was born at Roxbury, Mass., June 11, 1741, graduated at Harvard College in 1759, and began the practice of medicine in 1764. He was one of the patriots who stood out against the first British aggressions. In 1774 he was President of the Massachusetts Provincial Congress, and the following year was made a major-general. At the battle of Bunker Hill he served as a volunteer, musket in hand, altho the chief command was offered to him. He was killed in this action. Before the battle he said to a friend, "I know that I may fall, but where's the man who does not think it glorious and delightful to die for his country?"

Stand! the ground's your own, my braves.
Will ye give it up to slaves?
Will ye look for greener graves?
Hope ye mercy still?
What's the mercy despots feel?
Hear it in that battle peal,
Read it on yon bristling steel,
Ask it, ye who will!

Fear ye foes who kill for hire?
Will ye to your homes retire?
Look behind you! they're afire!
And before you, see
Who have done it! From the vale
On they come! and will ye quail?—
Leaden rain and iron hail
Let their welcome be!

In the God of battles trust,
Die we may—and die we must;
But, oh, where can dust to dust
Be consigned so well,
As where heaven its dews shall shed
On the martyred patriot's bed,
And the rocks shall raise their head,
Of his deeds to tell!

—Rev John Pierpont.

BRIDES AND GROOMS.

One of the amusements at Washington is spotting the brides and grooms. This is the time-honored place for two loving hearts to begin their married life, and all Washington loves the lovers. They may be told by the haughty distant air of the bride who looks as if she was walking with a gentleman who she knows slightly and who she wishes to keep at a distance. This is accomplished by walking about three feet away, and the groom looks as if he was keeping away under compulsion. They are to be found around the public places and they go up the monument, something wise people never, never do. Getting married and going to Washington is cheaper than divorce but the ill-conditioned bachelor says it is worth it.

Why should the bride be so particular about people knowing that she has landed her fish. There are some brides who, when they raise an umbrella which had been filled with rice in a crowded station, confess to almost dying of mortification. It always seemed to me that by getting married is the only way a woman can show her good faith.

When my unwilling feet were dragged to the foot of the monument last week by two student girls, in the hey-day of youth and beauty, who were bent on going to the top of the monument. I shuddered at the trip in the grave-like dampness of that marble shaft. My feet dragged so that the chamber of horrors was closed before we arrived. There was also a bride and groom left disconsolate. It was a clear case of the bride keeping so far away from the man.

For no reason on earth we began to tell the school girls what a beautiful place to spend a honeymoon Washington was and how they should have a trip to Washington in the contract. That when the fateful moment came that the fates are propitious instead of two passages there should be four. The groom should say: "He mine?" The bride should say: "Will you take me to Washington?" The groom should say: "I will." The bride should say: "I will."

The bride's face flushed and the couple looked guilty and left.

While I was in Washing a bride and groom stood over a memorial tablet of some great man who was sincerely mourned while living and for whom the people mourned when dead, because they had lost good running material. The new tablet was consecrated by some beautifully sculptured heads of bronze. One of these the groom broke off and tenderly presented to his bride. He was arrested and hauled before the police justice who fined him one dollar and let the lady keep the souvenir. The judge had been young himself once and would not listen to the superintendent of public buildings who wanted him to serve a term. Here's a health to the brides and grooms who have drawn the prize of prizes of life.

Not a Sacred Song.

The following true story relates to an old minister who believed every word there was in the Bible and everything that appeared in print with the church. Especially did he tie to "Gospel Hymn, Selected, No. 2." The choir would have liked to get something a bit more up to date, but the aged minister would n't have it. He said that those songs had been good enough for the brothers and the sisters of the church before that day, and he guessed they were good enough for the present generation.

So he continued to sing "Gospel Songs, No. 2."

One day some young scapegrace in the church pasted into that copy of the hymns devoted to the pulpit desk a printed slip of a very secular song But so deftly was the pasting done that it would have taken a keener eye than the dim vision of the old parson to have detected the fraud.

On Sunday he opened the singing book to read the first hymn. He always opened by chance and took the first one to come to hand. He set his specs on his nose and began to read in a sonorous voice:

"I'm a double-jointed huckleberry aching for a fight."

But there was snickering from the back pews—and he stopped! He looked at the line more closely. He shut the book on his finger and scrutinized the cover. 'Twas all right. The cover bore the words, "Gospel Songs, No. 2." It was surely his book. There were marks of his usage. He opened again, and, setting his glasses more firmly, read the second line:

"I can eat a pound of liver, raw or fried."

The old parson stopped again. Judging from the laughter, muffled but none the less distinct, there was something wrong with the hymn. He looked at the line again

"Brethern," said he, in a puzzled way, "that does not read just right for the sacred songs of a holy day. I don't seem ever to have seen that hymn in this book before, though I thought I knew every word of it. It is strange—very strange. But" and here his voice grew firmer and his tone louder—"there is no doubt about this being Gospel Songs, No. 2"—this book that I hold in my hand. This book has been tried and tested in the church. I will therefore read the other two lines of this first stanza:

"'I can lick a brace of catamounts and eat 'em when I'm tight.
I'm a ripper-snorter-tearer, blast my hide!'

"Now, brethren and sisters, all sing. Hymn number thirty-five, page twenty-three.—Lewiston (Me.) Journal.

What Napoleon thought of English Soldiers and American Seamen.

The Napoleonic craze, that was such a feature but a few years past has not entirely closed. The presentation of two Napoleonic plays in a single week in New York to dictate rather a revival of interest in Napoleon.

Dr Barry O'Meara was Bonaparte's physician at St. Helena, and they became intimate confidential friends. The Doctor kept a diary, and from it can be derived the man's own estimate of himself and his opinions of others.

About English soldiers and American sailors, Napoleon expressed himself in this manner: English soldiers are not equal in stubborn courage, activity, or intelligence to the French. When they get from under the fear of the lash they obey tamely. In a retreat they can not be managed, and if they meet with what they are so many cowards, and adore to subordination. I saw the retreat of Moscow, and never witnessed anything like it. It was impossible to collect them or to make them do anything. Nearly all were drunk. Your officers depend for promotion upon interest or money.

Your soldiers are brave—nobody can deny that,—but it was bad policy to encourage the military mania, instead of sticking to your marine, which, is the real force of your country, and one which, while you preserve it, will always render you powerful. In order to have good soldiers a nation must always be at war.

When questioned about seamen, Napoleon said, "The English seamen were as much superior to the French as the latter were to the Spaniards."

Dr O'Meara observed that he thought the French would never make good seamen on account of their impatience and volatility of temper. 'I do not agree with you there my dear doctor; but I do not think the French will ever make as good seamen as the English. The sea is yours—your seamen are as much superior to the French, as the the Dutch were to the English, I think, however, the Americans are better seamen than the English, because they are less numerous."

Dr O'Meara then remarked that the Americans had a great many English sailors that passed for Americans, and that the discipline in the American navy was more severe than the English. At this Napoleon smiled and observed, "That is not easy to believe."

Dr O'Meara then told Napoleon of a report having just come to St. Helena that war had been declared between Spain and American and Russia and America. "Russia and America," said he, "impossible! If this takes place I shall never be astonished again at any circumstance that happens. The Spaniards [illegible]

But when Dr O'Meara said that an American frigate could take a Spanish seventy-four, Napoleon said he could not believe that, but nevertheless the Spaniards would be drubbed should there be war.

Fishing and Literature.

Surprise has been expressed that Mr Choate, the American ambassador to the Court of St. James, should have mentioned Walton's "Complete Angler" as one of the best books to be read. Probably one American in every hundred thousand has read the "Complete Angler." Probably one American in every hundred thousand has experienced to a greater or less extent the feelings which inspired the author of that wonderful bit of philosophy and humor without knowing that anybody else had ever given expression to them. Readers after Walton who belong to the brotherhood of which he was pioneer will endorse Mr Choate's estimate of the "Complete Angler." They have good reason.

At first thought fishing does not betray the slightest kinship to literature. If, however, the full meaning of fishing is considered in connection with the qualities which make for enduring literature, their close relation is demonstrated. Literature, to live, must be the result of observation, contemplation or imagination, or a combination of two or all of them. The genuine fisherman cannot fail to develop the three qualities. Indeed he would not be a fisherman at all if he did not already possess them. Angling is attractive to him largely because it enables him to exercise them.

No man has power of observation more strongly developed than his. He comes under the charms of the varying moods of nature in all seasons, in many weathers and at all hours. He notes more minutely than anybody else the habits of the fowls of the air, the beasts of the field and the fishes of the streams. No barometer is as sensitive to fluctuations of the atmosphere as he. He knows intimately the movements [illegible] the clements of good fishing water, and can predict almost to a minute the changes in the weather. He sees more in the graceful drooping of fronds of ferns, the motion of ripples, the tossing of tree tops and the waving of field crops than any other human being. He is trained to observe closely, without losing the sense of appreciation of breadth and distance.

Alone on the shady bank of a river, dangling his legs over the edge of a dam, basking in his boat in the broad sunlight, he is removed for the time from the many petty details of human action which interfere with the proper exercise of the mind, conducive to reason and judgment. Most of us talk too much and think too little. Even when we read the impressions of the type before us extend hardly beyond the retina. They find no permanent lodgment in the brain, for which, perhaps, the majority of brains ought to be thankful. The man on the river bank, by the dam or in the boat is free from human intercourse, gossip and other like ills. He is intent only upon landing now and then a fish, and in the meantime has opportunity and inspiration to weigh carefully the problems of world and to reach conclusions which, if permitted to become effective, would add to the happiness of the whole creation.

If he happens not to catch a fish during his whole day's sport he is still profited. He has reached the point where imagination comes in to his play. On this point, perhaps, the less said the better. There is not a fisherman in the world does not realize the value of the gift of imagination, however derisive his friends may be.

Of course, there are fishermen and fishermen. These observations do not apply to the man who feels obliged to play at fishing because it is the thing to do at the seaside or summer resort, the man who will cast his line listlessly for an hour or so and then will withdraw in disgust and with a string of fish caught with the familiar silver bait or even the man who fishes because he wants a fish for food. The real fisherman eats to fish. The bogus variety, who fishes to eat, would, if he were an author, write a book for the purpose of selling it. He would have no right to enjoy the "Complete Angler." He would never gain fame as a writer or as a fisherman.—Southern Farm Magazine.

A Substantial Fact.

W. R. Clark, Pickaway, Virginia says: I have for several years been using Ramons Pills in my family with most satisfactory result, and do not hesitate to recommend them to my customers as superior to any of the various kinds kept in stock. Not only are your pills reliible but Ramons Relief and Nerve and Bone Oil are the most satisfactory remedies I ever handled, and if they were more generally used, they would often make the Doctors bill only 25c. instead of $20. These goods need no dusting in my stock because they are constantly coming in and a going out-are Trade Winners and Trade Keepers. These good qualities are not a theory but a substantial fact.

—This story is told of a precocious little girl of ten. She is the daughter of an attractive lady of society whom the family doctor was visiting for influenza. He felt her pulse gravely and tenderly, holding her wrist after the orthodox manner of a ladies' drawing-room. As he did so he became aware that the child had her great grave eyes, full of inquiry, fixed upon him. "You do n't know what I am doing," said the medical man lightly to the young lady. "Yes—I do," was the prompt reply. "You are making love to mama."—Collier's Weekly.

Edwin O. Wood, of Michigan, Secretary of the Tamworth Swine Breeders' Association, knows a good thing when he sees it. Writing the other day of the Biggle Swine Book, the latest addition to the Biggle Books, he says: "Without exaggeration or fulsome praise it is the best book which has come to my notice. I have carried it in my pocket two weeks reading it in leisure moments and following the advice has already saved me, as I believe, fifty dollars." This is big returns on an investment of 50 cents, which the publishers, Wood, Miner & Co., Philadelphia, ask for the book.

"When is a pun not a pun?" "Usually," Richard Lampton.

The New England small boy generally shows business capabilities at a tender age, if he is ever going to have them. I have heard of a certain small Boston boy who got into the habit of teasing his mother for pennies, until at last she said to him: "Now, Willie, I don't like to give you pennies; if you want money you should go to work and earn it." The boy remained thoughtful for some time. Then within a few days his mother perceived that Willie had plenty of pennies. She wondered what where he got them, but did not question him. But one morning she saw that some sort of bubbling was going on in the back yard. Looking out she saw Willie surrounded by a mob of boys who were yelling with delight. She went down into the yard to see what was going on, and, as she passed out, she saw stuck up on the back wall of the house, this notice, quite neatly "printed" out with a pencil:

WILLIE JONES WILL SAY

1 small green worm, for	1 cent.
1 large green worm, for	2 cents.
1 small fuzzy worm, for	3 cents.
1 large fuzzy worm, for	5 cents.
1 small green toad, for	10 cents.

Willie was apparently doing a thriving business. His mother interrupted it—at any rate in her own back yard. I don't suppose she had any assurance that he was not still carrying it on somewhere else.—Boston Transcript.

NEW HOPE, VA.

A beautiful Easter, but the health of the dear people of Augusta County is no better.

There are sixteen hundred patients under the care of physicians in Staunton, and so many deaths in one week that it is perfectly appalling. Eleven reported one day.

In our quiet neighborhood and near us there has been a burial every day this week.

We are glad to read in the Times that the health of the people of Pocahontas is better. Hope it may continue to get better till all are well.

TO THE VOTERS OF POCAHONTAS COUNTY.

I understand that in certain parts of the county the report is being circulated that I am in favor of paying what is known as the Virginia Debt. This matter has long since been settled, so far as any legislative action is concerned, and if there is anything more to be done in reference thereto it will be through the medium of the courts; and I do not believe there is a man, woman, or child in the county gullible enough to believe that I would be in favor of paying any part of said so-called debt. But in the event there should be a doubting "Thomas," I hereby pledge myself, if elected to do everything in my power to prevent not only the payment of any part of said debt, but even the consideration of the subject by the Legislature.

I am also accused of being attorney for the Greenbrier Railway Company. I have never been employed by said Company, and do not represent said company or any other railroad company, in any capacity; and, if elected, will represent the interests of the people of Pocahontas against railroads and all other outside interests.

Owing to the intense of the announcement of Mr H. A. Yeager for the House of Delegates against me, it will be impossible for me, between this time and the 12th of May, to make a personal canvas of the county; and here I would like to explain to the people attending Court that I would have consulted them on the subject of my candidacy had not my present opponent, Mr H. A. Yeager on the first day of court assured me that he was not a candidate for the place.

Pledging myself if elected to the best of my ability to represent the interests of the people of this county, and soliciting your support, I remain yours truly,

J. M. McLAUGHLIN.

What is the cause of all this? Impure blood.

And the remedy?

Marlinton, W. Va., April 24, 1900.

Wm H. Cleek's Amm'r, Plaintiff
vs.
Maggie F. Cleek and others, Defts.

Pursuant to a decree rendered in the above cause at the April Term, 1900, of the Circuit Court of Pocahontas County, West Virginia, the undersigned commissioner will proceed at his office in the town of Marlinton, W. Va., on the 6th day of June, 1900, to take, state, and report to the Court the following matters of account, to wit:

First—A settlement of the administration accounts of R. W. Hill, Administrator of Wm. H. Cleek, deceased.

Second—A statement of the just and subsisting debts and liens against the estate of the said William H. Cleek, deceased, with their date, dignities, and priorities.

Third—A statement of the lands of which the said Wm H. Cleek died seized, and which may be subjected to the payment of his debts, with the location of the same.

Fourth—Any other matter is to be stated by the commissioner, deemed pertinent by himself or required by any party in interest to be so stated.

At which time and place all parties who desire may attend.

T. S. McNEEL,
Commissioner.

NOTICE TO CREDITORS.

To the creditors of Wm. H. Cleek, deceased:

In pursuance of a decree of the Circuit Court of the County of Pocahontas made in a cause therein pending to subject the real estate of the said Wm. H. Cleek to the payment of his debts, you are required to present your claims against the estate of the said Wm. H. Cleek for adjustment to T. S. McNeel, commissioner of his office in the said county, on or before the first day of June 1900.

Witness T. S. McNeel, Clerk of said Court, and the seal thereof, this 24th day of April, 1900.

J. M. Fertigson, Clerk.

Local Events.

Mrs Hubert Echols has returned from her visit to Roanoke.

A number of realestate men have been in the county recently.

D. W. Sharp has lime to sell in large or small quantities.

There is quite a lot of painting to be done in town this spring.

Wanted: 12 head of yearling cattle to graze on good blue grass sod. Apply to R. E. L. DOYLE, Edray, W. Va.

R. C. McCandlish, cashier of the Pocahontas Bank, started to the Johns Hopkins Hospital last Sunday to undergo a surgical operation.

The past spring has been a most remarkable one and the backwardness has been felt everywhere. The vegetation in the Valley of Virginia is two weeks more advanced than in Pocahontas County.

It is high time the district tickets were being brought out. In the event that the lines of some of the districts are changed it may be necessary to change the time of nominating district tickets.

The timber standing along the line of the railroad development between Marlinton and Elkins is to be estimated by experts this spring. One party will go up the east side of the Greenbrier and another will take the west side.

Wm. Moore has broken ground for a dwelling house in Woodrow Avenue. W. A. Brattan has purchased four lots and will build a handsome residence. J. H. Patterson's house is raised. F. H. Kennard is building a large storehouse with dwelling rooms overhead.

Stanley & Co. had 200 feet of boarding to drive in the branch at the Marlinton and Slaty Fork R. R. to send their people in their work. Boats and cars received about the 1st inst. and of these begin to get their 2 mill cutting to pushing fast a mile to the ground.

Knapp's Creek Bridge.

Col. Turk, with the caustic humor for which he is noted, has the following to say concerning the bridge at this point, in the Staunton Spectator and Vindicator:

"As stated in our last letter this railroad undertaking is assuming shape with considerable rapidity. At this point the railway crosses Knapp's Creek, the largest tributary of Greenbrier river. The bridge spanning this stream will be 250 long and a fill of considerable size and length is necessary at the northern end of the bridge. This has already been completed with the exception of a little dressing up before the rails are laid. Work on this bridge may prove one of the causes of delay in the opening of this road. The northern abutment is finished and work is being pushed on the southern, but a pier is to be built in the centre which has not yet been begun. Last fall the water in this quarter were lower than had ever been known before, and ellittle common sense would have dictated the building of the pier first but with studied indifference to the fact, or with inexplicable stupidity, nothing was done on the pier until winter set in, then they went at it, and as might have been expected the cofferdam went out with the Feb pen office. The last reports from Marlinton to Mingo dinner here. Not long since George's parents "shuffled off this mortal coil," and left behind them good evidence, we are told, that they went to the Father's house on high.

Their family is scattered some; like the most of families, especially those so advanced in life. We hope, however, when the general roll call takes place they will answer all right and meet their parents in Heaven.

This family is scattered we say, and so it is, and yet we have already noted something of Andrew and Sheldon down this creek, and here lives William just above George, but a little to the right of him. We take in William's situation and surroundings. We are pleased with the re-tired and quiet spot where William lives. The scenery here in summer-is grand. Mr H. has a nice family and a pleasant place to live. As time will not permit us to delay here we will, delay our talk till some more favorable time.

Here we go "winding up the bill," where we see the first butterfly of the season "go glancing to and fro in the sunlight. Gazing upon the fertile vale below, but glancing occasionally at the rugged and abrupt front the edge of Gibson's Knob presents to view to the left until we reach Uncle Billy and Aunt Polly Gibson's very comfortable home. This aged couple are well known in this section of country and uncle and aunt to nearly everybody. They are very hospitable and kind and have many visitors. One daughter of theirs Mrs Varner lives with them. Mr and Mrs Varner have some very interesting children, and especially interesting to this aged couple. It will be well if these grandparents are not children spoilers, as most of grand parents are. These little folks, however, are a great comfort and pleasure to them.

One of their sons, George, sleeps the sleep of death in Locust Level Guy's graveyard. Uncle Billy and Aunt Polly have [illegible] Bigger [illegible] themselves.

[illegible] will be ready for the boatmen when he comes to take us to Father's House, where we all hope to meet—reach home sweet home in heaven at last.

Another Railroad.

There are rumors to the effect that about the time the C. & O. passed under new management in February last the question of the railroad development of this section came up, and that among other questions considered was the advisability of abandoning the lower route of the Greenbrier Railway. It is said that the work had advanced to [illegible] that it was decided to [illegible] and build a railroad from the Alleghany by way of the Whilder Gap, shortening the distance from Pittsburg to Newport News by about fifty miles and giving a minimum grade going south over which freight could be hauled.

It is said that this line will be built immediately upon the completion of the Greenbrier Railway. In that case there will be two practical routes converging at Driscol. One would be to leave the line of the Greenbrier Railway at the mouth of Stillington's creek, and cross over the divide between Dunmore and Frost and reach Driscol in about 20 miles. The other would be to branch off at Marlinton and build the road up Knapp's creek reaching Driscol in 9 miles. The first would shorten the haul 10 miles, but would be over a divide and consequently make the haul heavier. The other would require eleven miles less track, but would be farther around.

For the sake of the county we would rather see the former route taken, for the sake of Marlinton the latter. The natural line for a railroad to cross the county east and west is down Knapps Creek to Marlinton and up Stony Creek. To the west and southwest of Marlinton the richest coal and timber lands of the county are situated, and this speaks in favor of the latter route.

Death of Wm. A. Brannock.

Wm A. Brannock, of Frost, died at the Pocahontas House in Marlinton last Saturday night after a protracted illness of bronchitis. He had been operating a sawmill near the head. When he got sick Dr. Hull was summoned to his bedside where he was nursed by his wife. He was not confined to a bed before he died. He came to this county from Rockbridge a few years ago and engaged in the lumber business and was engaged in it when he died. He married Miss Sarah Ann Bird of Frost, who with three children survives him.

Notice to the Ladies.

I have just returned from the city with a nice, new and up-to-date line of millinery goods. I will also have a first class milliner from the city by May 1. Call and examine my stock before buying elsewhere. Will be pleased to show you goods and prices whether you buy or not.

A Leaf from My Note Book.

I pick up my Note-Book again to tell you more about my trip from Slaty Fork to Edray.

Here we are with what seems the garden spot of the Old Field Fork of Elk in full view. Just to the right of us on a little elevation is John B. Hannah's residence. He is, in a large sense, alone in this world, as his faithful companion left him last summer and went on to Heaven before him. He, doubtless, is ready for an exchange of worlds whenever the message comes for him to go. I suppose none will dispute it when I say that this is, probably, the best Christian in this section of country. J. B. Hannah with his interesting little family lives with his father.

But yonder is George L. Hannah's home. Though this man also has seen something of the troubles of life, yet he is contented and happy. He is opening up afresh a dry goods and grocery store. The prospect is fair for a good business here. Nearer the public road however would be better, if it could be made convenient. Mr Hannah's post office Veh pen office. The mail carriers from Marlinton to Mingo dinner here. Not long since George's parents "shuffled off this mortal coil," and left behind them good evidence, we are told, that they went to the Father's house on high.

Their family is scattered some; like the most of families, especially those so advanced in life. We hope, however, when the general roll call takes place they will answer all right and meet their parents in Heaven.

TOP OF ALLEGHANY.

Bad Weather.

The mumps have died out.

Plowing is in order.

The boys are back from O'Connell's drive.

Mr McTeany was in this part last week selling the life of D. L. Moody.

We are glad to see Charlie Rexroad back on the mail route.

I wonder what attracts Charles Spencer attention down on Buffalo.

The snow will not be gone on top of the Alleghany before August.

Jess Shears was up Sunday.

The Top of Alleghany school, taught by G. W. Sharp, will soon close.

Andy Hughes has decided not to run for President, but will likely run for constable.

W. B. Freeman is thinking of getting up a livery stable at Durbin.

Give us T. S. McNeel for Prosecuting Attorney.

We can hear a blast on the railroad once in a while.

Ed Wade, the supposed lunatic, broke of going to war.

WANDA.

ARBOVALE.

And the sun came out again.

News are scarce, but candidates are thick enough.

W. B. Wooddell has fenced in his fine farm and is as happy as a coon in a corn field.

Pearl Arbogast is no better.

The prayer meeting at Arbovale has started again. Let every one turn out and make it a success.

Dr Taylor, of Huttonsville, was in town Thursday healing the sick and the afflicted.

The people of this neighborhood are anxious to have the Frost correspondent give particulars in reference to P. D. Moore's going to mill every Sunday. We fear he is not out of bread every time he goes to mill.

Died, April 19, Mrs Virginia Kerr, age about 80 years. She has gone to rest in the arms of Jesus.

French Sutin's little child, who has been very sick, is no better.

John Gum is on the sicklist, threatened with pneumonia.

Feed is scarce in this community and old cows are looking very poor.

Most of our people have just commenced sowing oats. The spring has been so backward that little corn ground has been plowed but if it stays pretty and warm they will soon be done plowing.

On Sunday, April 15, when the family of Benjamin Arbogast were sitting in the house enjoying themselves, a strange noise was heard. On investigation a fire was found on the roof near the flue. It it had not been found out when it was, the house would have been burned up, but a few bucketfulls of water soon quenched the flames.

The candidates have been around asking the people for their votes. We hope W. A. Bratton will be elected as there could not be a better man for the place.

Reese Pritchard seems to have a Beard in his eye.

Oh Yes. Give us J. W. Gillespie for Justice, Lanty Wooddell for Constable, and George Hoover for Commissioner of the County Court. His whiskers would get there all right.

We agree with your Wanless correspondent as to the whiskey shops. Will this county allow such things to be here. Are not we a law abiding citizens and ought not we break such things up? We might as well not have any law at all, for we will not execute them.

Brown M. Arbogast is not very well at this writing.

Morgan Bader is contemplating building a new house this coming summer.

Rev McNeill, who came here from Crabbottom to preach at Green Bank, moved in last week.

H. J. Cowger has got in his spring and summer goods. You should make him a call for he has the best goods in the county for the least money.

My Sweetheart.

Lovely weather at present; the grass can't help but grow.

Jess Shears is in from Huttonsville.

The sick are improving.

The measles, which were as bad as could be, are getting worse.

[illegible] is improving [illegible]

[illegible] very poorly at present.

Miss Grace Riley is very low with pneumonia.

E. M. Brown is suffering with a blood boil on his wrist.

Joseph Sutton is working for J. D. Wilmoth.

E. M. Conrad is working for Sol W. Phares.

And still they move: C. B. Sweeker moved from Arbovale Saturday evening.

Okey Day, of Pendleton, is canvassing this part for a New York nursery company. He has sold $300 worth in the Upper End. The farmers are getting their eyes open and are planting more fruit trees.

Jake Rider has sold out all except his grindstone and bath rock.

Benjamin Arbogast is building a fine road into his dwelling.

Rev Pullin preached an interesting sermon at Arbovale church Sunday evening. He will preach at Travelers Repose the 5th Sunday of April at 11 a. m.; on Brush Run at 3 p. m. and will lecture on Temperance at Arbovale at 7 p. m.

Rev R. G. Cadmus will preach at Arbovale church May 6 at 7 p. m.

Alas May 7th the entire host! Let everybody come out.

E. B. Boone, alias Francis Train, famous as the "Dixie Hero," was out and in Boston. The papers say Boone has been making a net profit of $10,000 a week. His confessions to the sick taking his several treatments was to go back to Grand Rock, look after their land and "quietly as a sucking chick, with head, hands and claws all eyes, and ears to the mouse of the divine power of healing now [illegible] through their souls. We are glad to hear of such success for our esteemed and well beloved friends. Boone's treatment is to be given by [illegible] to be given by [illegible] Boone don't [illegible] a stock of wood with a [illegible] one to [illegible]

GREEN BANK.

And it rained again.

Attorney McNeel was in town Saturday. Also Attorney J. W. Yeager.

Married, April 18, 1900, at 11 o'clock, G. Lynn Clark and Miss Bertie Beard, Rev J. M. Eavy officiating. Also Irb Beard and Miss C. M. Wooddell, on the same day, Rev. Barnes, of Virginia, officiating.

Mrs Caroline Nottingham is the guest of her daughter, Mrs J. B. Curry.

Lawrence Nottingham says just let it rain. He don't care a fig—it's a boy!

Rev J. W. McNeel preached a good sermon at this place Sunday night. His next appointment here will be May 13, at 11 a. m. (D. V.)

Mrs J. H. Curry is on the sick list at this time.

Died, April 18, 1900, infant child of James Moomau and wife, of pneumonia.

J. H. Bozzard has been in this neighborhood assessing the personalty of the people and shaking hands.

Mrs Poor.

LOBELIA.

Very fine weather.

Mr Woods is still on the sicklist.

Miss Malinda Griffin will spend the summer with her sister, Mrs Eliza Pritt.

Mr Woods has a cow three years old that has had three calves.

J. B. Dean has the measles.

J. M. Snedagar has the Oak Grove school for the next term.

We know of one boy who hasn't eat much sugar this year for he is sour.

Simon Hill is the prize scholar.

Peter Hill caught three foxes in one trap.

Mr Young has gotten his henhouse completed.

Dick Sidedgar has set his sawmill on end. Its a girl.

William Pritt says he don't care if it never rains. Its a boy.

Dock Cutlip says its a boy toy!

Burdock.

Greenbrier Presbytery meets at Salem Church, a few miles south of Caldwell, on Tuesday, May 2d. Delegates from Hunterville church, Elders J. H. Doyle or P. L. Cleek; Dr S. P. Patterson delegate for Synod at New Port News, in the fall. Marlinton church, delegates G. M. Lee or Allan Levisay; delegate to Synod, George Baxter. Frost, L. W. Herold.

Ed Prior was taken to the penetentiary last week by Sheriff Hill and Deputy-Sheriff Sharp. Trout Slusc, who was serving a life sentence in the penetentiary, died two weeks ago.

and I am afraid I have inherited it. I do not feel well; I have a cough; my lungs are sore; am losing flesh. What shall I do?

Your doctor says take care of yourself and take plain cod-liver oil, but you can't take it. Only the strong, healthy person can take it, and they can't take it long. It is so rich it upsets the stomach. But you can take

SCOTT'S EMULSION

It is very palatable and easily digested. If you will take plenty of fresh air, and exercise, and SCOTT'S EMULSION steadily, there is very little doubt about your recovery.

There are hypophosphites in it; they give strength and tone up the nervous system while the cod-liver oil feeds and nourishes.

Very Respectfully,

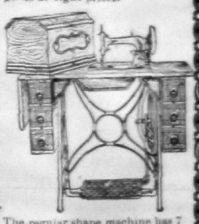

W. W. TYREE,

IT IS LIKE BUILDING A HOUSE WITH BLOCKS.

To try to establish a business by selling poor goods at low prices.

I am not going to build my business that way, but will sell you good goods at half prices, as I want to start my spring business with new goods at right prices.

I will offer you for the next ten days, or until I come back from market, High Arm Singer Sewing Machines—they are perfect, light running—just as good as the machine your neighbor has paid 65 dollars; you can have your choice—the drop head or regular kind $22.80.

Every machine is warranted for ten years. All attachments free. The regular price is $30.00. The regular shape machine has 7 drawers nicely finished.

WANTED—50 Boys, between 3 and 18 years of age, to fill good positions in my wear-proof boys suits. Will make you following low prices :

Boys Suits, gray Cassimer, blue flannel, blach cheviot, &c, worth from $1.50 to $3.00, you can have them from 68c to one dollar and 68c.

All my last season's Men's fancy negligee shirts that were 50c, 75c, and one dollar each, will close out from 30c to 47c each.

These good are just as good styles as I will have later, but I wish to start the spring season with a clean stock.

One dollar will have the purchasing power of two dollars to buy my wrappers. The prices run from 75c to $1.25. You can have them from 37 1-2c to 73c.

Thanking you for past favors, I hope you will continue your patronage in the future. Yours for bargains now and a nice clean spring stock soon,

THE GREAT SPRING MEDICINE.

JOHNSTON'S SARSAPARILLA as a Blood Food and Nerve Energizer, is the greatest SPRING MEDICINE ever discovered. It comes as a rich blessing from heaven to the "worn out," the run down, the overworked and debilitated. That "tired feeling," those "sinking spells," the languor and despondency which arise from badly nourished nerves, from thin, vitiated blood and an underfed body, vanish as if by a magic spell. The weariness, lassitude and nervous prostration which accompany the spring time and the heat of summer, are conquered and banished at once. For every form of neurasthenia, and all ailments of the Brain and nerve, Insomnia, hysteria and nervousness generally, it is almost a specific. It furnishes the very elements to rebuild worn-out nerve tissues. It feeds brain, nerve centers and nerves, calming and equalizing their action; it makes rich, red, honest blood. Newness of life, new hope, new strength follow its faithful use. It makes the weak strong, and the old young again.

It was the antiquated (but now happily exploded) method in the good old times, to treat Salt Rheum, Scrofula, Cancer and other troublesome disorders arising from BLOOD TAINT with powerful alteratives, such as mercury, arsenic and other mineral agents. It was expected by this treatment that the poison could be killed while the blood was left to course through its channels holding in its circulation the specific germs of the disease. But in this way, every part of the body became more or less diseased. Nothing can be more terrible than a horribly destructive blood taint. It not only attacks virulently the different structures of the body, but many times the bones are honey-combed and destroyed. It often seeks out the nerves and spinal cord, and again it will bring decay and death to some vital organ, as the kidneys, liver or stomach. There is only one scientific method for the cure of blood taint. That is, PURIFICATION! Every particle of the blood must be removed through the excretory channels, the lungs, kidneys, bowels, liver and skin. "First pure, then peaceable." The great restorative, reconstructive and vitalizer of the blood, JOHNSTON'S SARSAPARILLA, not only radically and exhaustively removes the taint, but also removes all mercury, calomel and other minerals, and fills the veins and arteries with the ruby, glowing current of vitality. "The blood is the life." Good health means pure blood. The old and reliable remedy, JOHNSTON'S SARSAPARILLA, is universally regarded as the greatest Blood Purifier ever discovered. This fact is now established beyond question or cavil.

BLOOD POISON CURED BY JOHNSTON'S SARSAPARILLA.

Eaton, Mich., October 31, 1894.

Williams, Davis, Brooks & Co., Detroit

Gentlemen:—In April last I began using JOHNSTON'S SARSAPARILLA for Blood Poison, caused by an amputation of one of my arms. I had SEVEN RUNNING SORES on my legs. I used two bottles and was entirely cured. I know it is what cured me. Yours truly, C. W. LUTHER.

HARL MARVIN ARBOGAST.

This excellent young man, son of Mr and Mrs B. M. Arbogast, died at his home near Arbovale, March 15, 1900, aged 19 years, 9 months, 2 days. His friends had great hopes of his recovery, until the day before his death. He remarked to his father, "I will not be with you long; the Lord is calling for me."

All was done for him that skillful physicians and loving friends could do, and in the darkness of night came the messenger with the summons: Well done, enter thou into the joy of thy Lord!

He departed this life, shouting Glory to the Lamb that was slain! I'm going home to die no more! He then lay back in his father's arms, as peaceful as a babe,—the angels had wafted his spirit to him who gave it. "Asleep in Jesus!"—blessed thought; in that sleep so calm and peaceful, he will never know sorrow again.

"One less at home,
The charmed circle broken, a dear face,
Missed day by day from its usual place,
But cleansed, saved, perfected, by grace,
One more in Heaven!"

"One less on earth:
Its pain, its sorrow, and its toil to share;
One less the pilgrim's daily cross to bear,
One more the crown of the blessed to wear,
At home in Heaven!"

TALES OF A TRAVELLER.

THE POLICE COURT.

One day I went down to the wharfs at Washington to see the Potomac and the ships and was there when a big ferry boat came in from Alexandria. It is not one of the show places, by any means, but then some people "hanker after things which others idle by."

After a miscellaneous shiving freight, ranging from pretty girls to two-horse teams, had been discharged, a policeman standing by me said, "There's my prisoner," and a evil looking youth walked down the gangway in company with a big, heavy-fisted man, who was the detective who had arrested him in Alexandria for stealing a bicycle. If he had been in Pocahontas he would probably have stolen a horse. The detective was leading a cheap ten dollar machine which was the mount the youth had appropriated.

The three stepped at a street corner and about twenty small boys and myself gathered around to see what would happen. The prisoner was on the point of crying. The policeman talked to me very kindly and condescendingly and said that bicycles were being stolen right and left in the city and that it was a shame that they had been able to arrest one of the thieves. He advised me to go to the police court of a morning if I wanted to hear something interesting and to see city court. While we talked the patrol wagon arrived. The horse thief was assisted to mount and the door slammed to, which caught with a spring lock, and he was in a curtained cage in solitary confinement to be hauled to the station house. The detective rode away on the wheel and the policeman told the boys to go home. That was the last I saw of the trio, with the exception of the big detective, who came into a pawnbroker's shop where I was looking at the collection of articles to be sold. He brought a list of jewelry which had been stolen the night before, in case they turned up to be pawned.

The police court was in session when I arrived next morning. About twenty white and two colored jurymen were in one corner. In the jury box sat about a dozen policemen. In the cage were a dozen or so negroes and one very respectable looking white farmer. The police justice was a very quiet intelligent looking man. There were four colored lawyers, a white attorney, and the city attorney in the bar. A case occupied something like five minutes.

Two negro men and two negro women were charged with having a big fight and swearing in a locked room. Two policemen went in through the window and some one blew the lamp out. One of the women said that she was visiting there and they were singing gospel hymns. She had a dollar and she sent out for five cents' worth of beer, and the man never brought back her change. She had the door locked and there might have been some loud talk about the change, but there was no fight or disturbance.

The judge said: "I have n't the least doubt that you all were in a fight, but you are all so friendly this morning and seemed to have made it up, that I want to encourage this sort of thing. We hold you each in the sum of one hundred dollars to keep the peace for one year. Get out. Don't come back here."

This was a great victory for a young colored lawyer, who secured his clients out of court. One peculiarity we noticed was that the policemen were sworn, but the prisoners were not before they gave in their testimony.

"John Tenson." A young negro walked to the end of the cage and stopped before a ticket window. "You are charged with disorderly conduct; guilty or not guilty? Not guilty, your Judge or jury? Judge: Call a witness to take the stand."

Policeman: "I answered this man on a charge of assault. He was drunk and using bad language. I warned him and he assaved me and I arrested him. I had to have help before I conquered him."

City Attorney (to prisoner): "Want to say anything?"

Prisoner: "I wasn't doin' nothin', boss. Dis policemen come erlong and hit me wif his club. Dat 's de Gawd's truf."

Judge: "Ten days."

This is a fair sample of the ordinary cases. Finally the white man's turn came. He shambled forward and said he guessed he was guilty. The policeman testified that he was very drunk and [illegible] about hitting the police. Thought he was from the country. The judge asked the officer if he was a soldier. The reply was that he seemed to be a farmer. "Five dollars or fifteen days." The prisoner had the money and shuffled back into the prison to pay it.

Then came a case against an old colored woman who owned a house for keeping the water closet in an unsanitary condition. A health officer appeared against her and said that he had had her summoned before on the same charge. The old lady was very indignant. The judge asked her if she had had it cleaned out since she had received the last summons. She saw a thoroughfare and said she had. The judge turned to the officer and said: "Go and look! If she has its all right. If not bring her here tomorrow." The old woman began to cry at this and followed the health officer out. It was not hard to see the outcome of this.

There was one jury case. A young white man was charged with doing plumbing work without being a licensed plumber. A very young lawyer handled his case. It was shown that he took the contract and had a licensed plumber do everything except the excavating work. The young lawyer made a long speech, and the city attorney followed it with a very able and convincing one. The jury returned a verdict of not guilty, and the young lawyer was glad all over. Court was adjourned until tomorrow morning.

THE CAPTAIN OF VOLUNTEERS.

We sometimes have premonitions that evil is impending. We feel sure that some things are inimical to us. They say that you shiver if you walk over the spot you will be buried. At the hotel where I stopped there was a captain of volunteers, in all his glory. He was known by the uniform he wore. If he had been an officer of the regular army he would not have worn his uniform except when he was on duty, but of an officer of volunteers anything may be expected. He was in evidence in the lobby of the hotel at all times and we felt sure that we felt sure that we would mistake him for a porter of the hotel on account of the similarity of the uniforms, and ask him to do some menial task for a consideration, and that then we would die the death.

We went around treading on this kind of a mine for days and we had begun to feel comparatively safe, when one day we rushed on to destruction. Walking horridly thro' a corridor and wishing to get rid of an overcoat as the day was warm we turned to the first uniform we saw and said: "Would you please check this overcoat?" It is impossible to describe that crushing look. Suffice it to say that we saw it and survived.

He turned on his heel and left instead of annihilating us as the honor of the Army demanded. We received no message from him, and he is still captain of volunteers and the senior the colonel of a regiment. If he had wanted to fight we would have been like the sons in the play, leaving the choice of arms, so would have chosen epithets at a hundred yards.

KENTUCKY.

A very interesting scene occurred at a Breckenridge hotel lately. A crowd of men were in the office when one of their number, a native of sturdy looking individual, pulled a patent medicine almanac and said: "Now I'm going to read you the latest on Kentucky."

He read a joke reflecting in some way on the State which might be called the mother of precedents. The audience was not especially interested for jokes on Kentucky are too plentiful to be noticed, until a man arose from the corner of the room, and, taking off his coat, announced he could lick the man who read that, whom he called every vile name conceivable.

The clerk ejected them both from the hotel [illegible] ored order.

A BLACK EYE.

The colored people of Staunton have a black list of ladies who can not be pleased by their help which is read out in church Sunday night. Every now and then a Stanton matroonis horrified to hear that her name has been entered on this roll, for it means that she will have to do her own house work.

Two colored ladies were at a window in the city when a very beautiful girl in yellow passed along. One of them said, "Oh, ain't that a lovely dress?" The other said, "Yes, but yellah doan' suit mah complexion."

A Very Remarkable Remedy.

It is with a good deal of pleasure and satisfaction that I recommend Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, says Druggist A. W. Sawtelle, of Hurliford, Conn. "A lady customer, seeing the remedy exposed for sale on my show case said to me: 'I really believe that medicine saved my life the past summer while at the shore,' and she became so enthusiastic over its merits that I at once made up my mind to recommend it in the future. Recently a gentleman came into my store so overcome with colic pains that he stuck at once to the floor. I gave him a dose of this remedy which helped him. I repeated the dose and in fifteen minutes he left my store smilingly informing me that he felt as well as ever.

No Twin Microbes for Him.

A clergyman walking on the outskirts of his parish one day found one of his parishioners whitewashing his cottage. Pleased at this novel manifestation of the virtue that is next to godliness he complimented the man on his desire for neatness. With a mysterious air the worker descended the ladder and approaching the fence, said: "That's not exactly the reason why I'm doing this ere job, your Worship. The last two couples as lived here had twins, so I says to my missus, 'I'll take and whitewash the place so's there mayn't be no infection.' You see, sir, as how we've got ten of 'em already."—Phonographic Record.

We were sorry to see that our old friend William H. Sawyers of Hinton was defeated for Justice of the Peace in a primary the other day. He ought to have come out for some less important office. Something like Congress. We do not elect a genius a justice of the peace.

Deaf ess Cannot be Cured

by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure d adness and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by the inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing and when it is entirely closed d afness is the result, and unless the inda mmation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars.

THE MURDERED TRAVELER.

When spring, to woods and wastes around,
Brought bloom and joy again,
The murdered traveler's bones were found,
Far down a narrow glen.

The fragrant birch, above him, hung
Her tassels in the sky,
And many a vernal blossom sprung,
And nodded careless by.

The red bird warbled as he wrought
His hanging nest o'erhead,
And fearless, near the fatal spot,
Her young the partridge led.

But there was weeping far away,
And gentle eyes, for him,
With watching many an anxious day,
Were sorrowful and dim.

They little knew, who loved him so,
The fearful death he met,
When shouting o'er the desert snow,
Unarmed, and hard beset:—

Nor how, when round the frosty pole
The northern dawn was red,
The mountain wolf and wild cat stole
To banquet on the dead:—

Or how, when strangers found his bones,
They dressed the hasty bier,
And marked his grave with nameless stones,
Unmoistened by a tear.

But long they looked, and feared and wept,
Within his distant home:
And dreamed and startled as they slept
For joy that he was come.

So long they looked—but never spied
That welcome step again,
Nor knew the fearful death he died
Far down that narrow glen.

WILLIAM CULLEN BRYANT.

Life in Kentucky.

Algernon Dangerfield, of Lexington, Ky., now in Washington, submits the following summing up of life in Kentucky without comment:

"Man born in the mountains of Kentucky is of feud days and full of virus. He fisheth, fiddleth, cusseth, fighteth all the days of his life.

"He shunneth water as a mad dog and drinkth much mean whiskey.

"When he desireth to raise h—planteth a neighbor, and lo! he respeth twenty fold. He riseth even from the cradle to seek the scalp of his grandsire's enemy, and bringeth home in his carcass the ammunition of his neighbor's wife's cousin's uncle's father-in-law, avenged the deed.

"Yea, verily, his life is uncertain and he knows not the hour he may be jerked hence.

"He goeth forth on a journey half shot, and cometh back on a shutter, shot.

"He riseth in the night to let the cat out, and it takes nine doctors three days to pick the buckshot out of him.

"He goeth forth in joy and gladness and cometh back in scraps and fragments.

"A cyclone bloweth him into the bosom of his neighbors wife, and his neighbor's wife's husband bloweth him into Abraham's bosom before he hath time to explain.

"He emptieth a dentojohn into himself and a shot gun into his enemy, and his enemy's son lieth in wait for him on election day, and, lo! the coroner ploweth up a forty acre field to bury that man.

"Woe, woe, is Kentucky, for her eyes are red with bad whiskey and her soil is stained with the blood of innocent moonshiners."—Ex.

A Sprained Ankle Quickly Cured

"At one time I suffered from a severe sprain of the ankle," says George F. Gary, editor of the Guide, Washington, Ia. "After using several well recommended medicines without success, I tried Chamberlain's Pain Balm, and am pleased to say that relief came as soon as I began its use and a complete cure speedily followed. This remedy has since been used in my family for four years with the best results. I cheerfully recommend its use to all who may need a first-class liniment. Sold by Albert Sidney Johnston of Mason County, would go to the Kansas City convention as a delegate from this district. He has been managing the Republican party for years, and it is time he was receiving due recognition.

Pendleton County instructed its next delegate to the Legislature to vote for Colonel John T. McGraw for Congress.

The Republican party seems to be making a special onslaught on Greenbrier, whose normal Democratic majority it has reason to fear. Last Tuesday J. H. Gaines and Judge Smith, candidates for Congress, and Thomas G. Mann candidate for Attorney General, addressed the people in the court house during the noon recess of the court. Their speeches were well received, but the orators showed plainly that they were not sure what to say in regard to public questions. Judge Smith made a safe hit at John R. McLean's sister's husband. They were all vaguely opposed to trusts. The extraordinary high prices have forced this issue on every politician. Mr Gaines said that while he held an office (district attorneyship) which was a better office in many respects than that of a Representative, he wanted to go to Congress, and if he did he would leave the present office for some other good Republican.

A Woman's Awful Peril.

"There is only one chance to save your life and that is through an operation" were the startling words heard by Mrs I. B. Hunt of Lime Ridge, Wis., from her doctor after he had vainly tried to cure her of a frightful case of stomach trouble and yellow jaundice. Gall stones had already formed and she constantly grew worse. Then she began to use Electric Bitters which wholly cured her. It is a wonderful Stomach, Liver and Kidney remedy. Cures dispepsia, loss of appetite. Try it. Only 50c. Guaranteed.

Sold by Harry R. Echols, Marlinton; N. J. Brown, Mill Point; E. L. Beard & Co., Academy; S. F. Myles, Falling Springs, W. Va

The indications are that a number of Republicans are going to vote in our May primary. We welcome everyone who will keep his pledge to support the ticket nominated at the fall elections. In the past there have been some who did not do this, but on the other hand many Democrats who vote in the primary scratch the ticket at the general election. We like to see our Republican friends, of whom we have many, rubbing shoulders with their Democratic brothers in a party convention. It makes us think that some day they may come over entirely to the party.

Tortured a Witness.

Intense suffering was endured by witness T. L. Martin, of Dixie, Ky., before he gave this evidence: "I coughed every night until my throat was nearly raw; then tried Dr Kings New Discovery which gave instant relief. I have used it in my family four years and recommend it as the greatest remedy for coughs, colds and all throat, chest and lung troubles. It will stop the worst cough and not only prevents but absolutely cures consumption. Price 50c and $1. Every bottle guaranteed.

If a Rip Van Winkle had waked from a sleep of about four years and walked into the court house at Lewisburg the strangest thing he would have seen would have been the sight of Alex McVeigh Miller and L. J. Williams presiding at a Republican mass meeting. The Democrats regard these gentlemen as political apostates, but there is a fine chance of these gentlemen reaping their reward, one being slated for State Senator and the other for Judge of the Supreme Court of Appeals.

A Fast Bicycle Rider

Judge A. S. Campbell of Monroe can be considered a candidate for the Supreme Court. While Circuit Judge he made an excellent record.

Dewey has denied that he ever said that a Democrat was a fool in time of peace and a traitor in time of war.

Average for 1893, 7683; 1894, 10,158; 1895, 12,916; 1896, 13,444; 1897, 16,175; 1898, 19,100; 1899, 29,166.

Subscriptions for the Veteran will be received at this office. It and the Times will be sent for one year at the club rate of $1.50. By application to the Pocahontas Times copies of the Veteran will be sent to our veteran friends who are unable to subscribe.

The New York Herald thinks that the Republican chances for success have grown much less in the past six months. The ticket, it says, may be Bryan and Dewey, and McKinley and Roosevelt.

Beware of a Cough.

A cough is not a disease, but a symptom. Consumption and bronchitis, which are the most dangerous and fatal diseases, have for their first indication a persistent cough, and if properly treated as soon as this cough appears are easily cured. Chamberlain's cough remedy has proven wonderfully successful, and gained its wide reputation and extensive sale by its success in curing diseases which cause coughing It is not beneficial it will not cost you a cent. To the Voting Public:

I have decided to withdraw from the race for Prosecuting Attorney of Pocahontas County, my reasons for taking this step are manifold, among the most prominent of which is the fact of my inability to push my campaign as vigorously as I would have wished in the beginning.

To my many friends who have expressed their good wishes for my success in the fight from which I am retiring, I extend my heartfelt thanks.

Had I continued in the race and been elected, it would have been the one pleasure of my life to enforce the law against its violators in this county but I willingly leave that duty in the hands of my opponents, of which there are two, and I feel safe in assuring the public that the successful one will make a capable attorney for the people. Respectfully,

S. B. SCOTT, JR.

Pettus Discusses the Scott Case.

In the Senate on Thursday Mr Pettus (Dem., Ala.) moved that the resolution declaring Senator Scott of West Virginia entitled to retain his seat, be recommitted to the Committee on Privileges and Elections with instructions to investigate it fully. Mr. Pettus asserted that the case had never been fully or fairly investigated by the committee.

While analyzing the doings of the West Virginia Legislature, Mr Pettus exclaimed, in tones of horror. "Oh, Mr President, the debauchery of such infernal proceedings cannot be too strongly characterized. It is a horrible state of affairs. Here are the vouchers, about as dirty a set as you ever saw in your life; and we are told that the Senate of the United States cannot examine into a fraud like that. That may be so. It may be that Mr Scott is not either a Gold Republican nor a Silver Republican, and, therefore, you have no ground to vote against him, on the standard set up by the Senator from New Hampshire (Mr Chandler). I do not know whether that is so or not. Oh, I do not believe that Senators can do such things as the Senator from New Hampshire charges them with."

Coming to the connection of the Governor of West Virginia with the question, he read a letter from the Governor, with these words: "Party interest demands contest in your case. Will pay all expenses."

"Oh," Mr Pettus exclaimed, "it makes no sick to see that Governor of a great State should get down in the mud and dirt politics."

Mr Elkins (Rep. W. Va.), who was listening good humoredly to the Senator from Alabama, made a pleasant speech, to which Mr Pettus replied.

"The Senator's gesture is on this thing but I don't get impatient. I will get to you after a while." (Laughter.)

After further discussion the Scott resolution went over till to-morrow.—New York Sun.

LOBELIA.

Warm and dry.

Everything on the move.

Some sickness, but not serious.

Thomas McClintic and A. Hanna of Greenbrier were callers at W. B Hill's Saturday and Sunday

Brown Tharp started to railroad for W. B. Hill's spring goods today. He will have a nice line and all up to date goods and prices just right.

A. W. Hill and Meta Eagle were married a few days ago. We wish them happiness and prosperity.

Give us McClintic and Bratton and McKinley, and it don't make any difference about sheriff,—we will pay our taxes anyway.

NOW AND THEN.

W. C. Mann's livery will be moved in a few days to the Marlinton Hotel. Fresh stock and new buggies and surry had in a few days to run a first class livery.

To the Citizens of Marlinton:

The town election will be held next Saturday, and we think that it would be well enough to discuss in a public way who would make good officials:

For Mayor, Andrew Price.

For Recorder, F. H. Kincaid.

For Councilmen, any five of the following would make good officers: L. M. McClintic, Uriah Bird H. A Yeager, John Pullin, Dr. J. M. Cunningham, T. S. McNeel, W. A. Bratton, E. D. King, W. J. Kellingsworth, S. L. Brown, E. F. McLaughlin. VOTERS.

NO USE TRYING

I can't take plain cod-liver oil. Doctor says, try it. He might as well tell me to melt lard or butter and try to take them. It is too rich and will upset the stomach. But you can take milk or cream, so you can take

Scott's Emulsion

It is like cream; but will feed and nourish when cream will not. Babies and children will thrive and grow a lot on it when their ordinary food does not nourish them.

Persons have been known to gain a pound a day when taking some of Scott's Emulsion. It gets the digestive machinery in working order so that the ordinary food is properly digested and assimilated.

DIED.

W. A. BUSSARD.

Died, at the Pocahontas House, April 22, 1900, William A. Bussard of Frost, aged 30 years, 2 months, 12 days. His ailment was brain trouble, superinduced, it is believed, by the severe injuries he received several months since, when his traction engine was wrecked in crossing the Alleghany at Rider's Notch.

He was a native of Highland County, son of A. W Bussard, near Bolar Springs, and was born February 10, 1870. He was a person of remarkable energy, and did with all his might whatever he undertook. For some years he merchandised at Frost, had charge of the post office, reared a beautiful house doing most of the work with his own hands.

He was a good singer, useful in Sunday school work and a lively adherent of the Southern Methodist Church and has been a member since 1895.

His wife was Susan, daughter of Wilson Rider, at Mt. Vernon who survives with three little children.

His remains were taken to the Moore graveyard on Knapps Creek. The pall bearers were Wm. Gibson, Price Moore, Letcher Herold, John Jackson, Peyton Moore, and John Andrew Moore; his attached friends or business associates.

J. A. M.

REV GEORGE P. HANNAH.

Rev Geo. P. Hannah, a zealous minister of the M. E. Church, died of a virulent attack of pneumonia April 25, at his home in Virginia, aged about forty years. He was a native of this county, a son of the late David Hannah, on Elk. He had attended to his usual duties on Sunday, April 22, and was sent on Sunday night with the illness that terminated in his death on the 26th.

MRS BROWN MOORE.

Mrs Brown Moore died at her home on Knapps Creek Thursday, April 26, 1900 after a brief illness, aged about 34 years. She was Miss Ada Belle Watts, of Greenbrier. Mrs R. W. Hill, of Hillsboro, is her sister. An infant daughter survives that will be cared for by Miss Lena Watts. Mrs Moore was an exemplary member of the M. E. Church and her death will be mourned by her family and society in bereavement of one of the most useful of friends and neighbors. She was the third child of the late Wm. Watts, who died in the prime of life. The M. E. Church South

Concert by Jim Young.

Jim Young, the colored restaurant keeper, gave a concert Saturday for the benefit of himself, and we went and mixed with the elements. There was a magic lantern good music, clog dancing, singing and speeches. The fact was impressed on our minds that social conditions here were changing. We stayed to the speaking and left early.

Jim Young announced that he was president of the house, had the floor and would speak thirty minutes on the subject: "What shall we do? What are we doing? What are the nation doing? Rule and ruin." He regretted that this yere railroad was being built on the transportation plan. Contractors went way down in North Carolina for fool niggers who come up here and work about four months and den ask how do dey stan'. De cawntractor say, "you owe me 'bout five dollars yet." Den dey would git discouraged and leave.

He had no education and he was baldheaded, and baldheaded men never did have no luck. But he tried to do right. His mother had left tracks he said saying, "Jim do right!" De matter with de country was that dere was too many white tramps and too many black people airing off deir pistols and looking around to commit some misdemeanors.

He did not think much of politicians. Dey come round fore de election and say, "Howdy do, Mr. Young?" After election they say "Hi, you, old Jim!" He din not take much stock in politics bettering the condition of poor people, it looked to him that there were as many poor people now as there was when Cleveland was president.

After concluding his remarks which were somewhat disconnected by the speaker rebuking members of his audience for wearing their hats and smoking, he concluded by introducing the next speaker.

"Ladies and gentlemen lemme interdiuce yer the nex speaker, Mr ——(Wha' you say yoah name was?") "George Stepp Bryan," said the speaker, and the introduction was complete. George Stepp Bryan favored the audience with a very neat address on the advancement of the negro race since their emancipation, which has been indeed wonderful. There was a ripple of laughter when after enumerating in a general way that the negro race had members who had accumulated wealth and had representatives in every profession, he added, "and we have dry goods clerks, grocery clerks and traveling salesmen."

The next performer was a colored man in the United States Cavalry uniform, who had been at San Juan Hill, who promised the audience to break a 27lb rock with a 6501b blow of the naked fist, and then to catch a 38 cal. pistol ball fired at his hand. We did not wait to see these miracles performed. The entertainment broke up about midnight with a yell that startled the peaceful burghers in their beds.

Rev William T. Price Resigns.

Rev William T. Price, who has been pastor of the Marlin's Bottom and Huntersville Presbyterian churches for fifteen years, has resigned his charge and the congregations of the two churches unite in a request to Presbytery to dissolve the pastoral relationship.

For more than forty years he has been in active service, but early in the winter his health was such that he was unable to preach during the cold weather. His health seems to be fully restored now, but owing to the natural infirmities of age he thought it best to resign the charge. He will continue to preach as occasion demands, but will not have a regular charge. We hope to have more than ever the benefit of his assistance in the editing of this paper.

Patrick Henry Hurt.

Pat Henry, who runs a lumber camp on Williams River, was struck in the face by a log and seriously injured. He was standing near a timber slide early one morning, and he warned two of his men not to stand too near for fear the logs would jump the slide and hit them. He had hardly spoken when a log coming swiftly down the slide jumped and grazed his head, knocking him senseless. He was severely bruised but will recover.

Paul Golden has returned from Baltimore.

S. B. Scott Jr., is out for Justice of the Peace of Edray District.

Mr Critcher, a Washington attorney, is in Pocahontas county.

Dock sent Falling Springs, W. Va., April 27. Annie, beloved child of F. F. and Mary F. Vandervort, aged four years, eleven months and eleven days.

Some of the candidates in this county thought their assessments for the expenses of the primary election right high, but they are not as high as in Webster County. There the sheriff's fee is $25 and prosecuting attorney $15 and all candidates in proportion. Sure it is great to be such pleasure to run for office in this county as in Webster.

Railroad Notes.

The tunnel at Bird's mill is completed.

There is still a good deal of work to be done on the Cat Hole cliffs, but this is not enough to delay the completion of the work.

Track laying has been going on steadily. Last week the twelfth mile was reached. At present about half a mile of track is being laid per day. Every other tie is put down and the rail spiked on. The construction train then brings up the other ties and ballasts the ties with pounded in stones. Laying track requires skilled labor. On a curve the outside rail is the higher. On a reverse curve it is very hard to get the rails just right.

A great many men are at work getting out ties. Thirty cents is paid for first class and twenty-five for second class ties delivered. From five to eight cents is paid for the timber in the tree. The men work in pairs. They saw the tree down and how it and then cut the ties off. Two good tie men can complete fifty ties in a day. The ties are delivered at the right of way and the inspector daubs paint on them when he accepts them, one dot for first and two for second class.

The greatest curve on the whole line is said to be at the big bend in the river at the upper end of the Kinnison place. It is a 11.30 curve, whatever that may mean. We have heard it was 11 30 feet to the hundred feet. This work is pretty well completed. The cliff was blown away and many tons of stone dumped in the river.

Now that the time of completion is nearing, the C. & O. are said to be sending their own men to help on certain contracts. The contractor is charged with the labor, but the laborers themselves are on the pay roll of the railroad company. After a vast amount of money has been expended on a new road, it is to the interest of the company to have the road making money as soon as possible, otherwise the amount invested lies dead.

When the road will be completed is still an absorbing topic. It seems certain that it will be completed along its whole length before another winter. The road is expected to reach Marlinton by about September 1. This in the judgment of men who know the condition the work is in.

The question of depot sites is raging in some sections. Opposite the Levels there are two sites either of which may be chosen. One is at the Kinnison farm and the other at the mouth of Stamping Creek. Ground has been condemned at the mouth of Locust Creek. There has been more siding by far provided at Marlinton than at any other place on the line. Every indication points to Marlinton as the most important town of this whole section.

ACADEMY.

Spring has come at last. This has been a hard winter but grass is about as early as usual.

Farmers have finished sowing oats, and a great deal of corn will be planted this week. Some was planted last week.

Rev W. J. Whitesell, the new Methodist minister, arrived last week with his family. He has made a very favorable impression.

Patrick Henry was hurt at his camp on Williams River last week by a log jumping from a slide and hitting him. He was getting along very well at last report.

Sheriff Hill has been indisposed for several days, and was no better Sunday.

Measles are plentiful in this part.

People of Pocahontas, let us support our county men in the coming Primary. Give us T. S. McNeel for Prosecuting Attorney. He was born and reared in the county, and is well qualified for the position. If we do not support our boys now, it certainly will be discouraging to the rising generation.

DUNMORE.

The hot weather is bringing out the toads and snakes.

Judge Moore is here with a new lot of railroad men and engineers.

Drummers are coming in thick.

Some of the road overseers have picked out some rocks and filled up some mud holes. A good thing; let the work go on.

Jacob K. Taylor, Mrs C. B. Sweeney, Reece Pritchard, J. B. White, Mrs Belle Kerr, Mrs Dave Smith, are still on the sick list.

Rev J. W. McNeel preached at Dunmore and Green Bank Sunday.

John A. Taylor the Evangelist was at home a few days.

The first case in court that we know of tried before a jury of ladies was tried at Asbury's Saturday. It was before the jury, instead of gentlemen of the jury.

Some seem to think that Yeager Beulah and Underwood will run ahead of the ticket.

We believe we will soon have telephone communication with Highland county.

We understand that E. L. Nottingham has bought the Cackley property at Dunmore.

The Kind You Have Always Bought

HAVE YOU HEARD OF

The New Insurance and Annuity Policy of The Northwestern Mutual?

What is it? Look here:—

Say age 35 at issue. Amount say $10.000. Annual premium $340.70, less the large, unequaled DIVIDENDS of The Northwestern Mutual.

SOME GUARANTEES AND PRIVILEGES:

1. Beneficiary to receive $400 annually (upon anniversary of insured's death) during a period of 30 years, a total of $12,000.

2. To receive, at end of 30th year, in addition to above 30 payments of $400 each, $10,000 in cash in one sum, a grand total of $22,000.

3. Should the Beneficiary die during said 30 years, the Contingent Beneficiary, whom the insured has the right to name at any time, will receive both the unpaid Annuities and said single sum of $10,000 in cash.

4. Should both Beneficiaries die, or should insured not have named a Beneficiary, such $10,000 will be paid to his estate at death.

5. Such policy may provide for 20 annuities instead of 30. So also insured may empower the Beneficiary to surrender the policy, at any date when an annuity is due, and receive said $10,000 in cash.

6. Insured is guaranteed Loan and Cash Values, paid-up or extended Insurance, also privilege to change Beneficiary and name a Contingent Beneficiary to succeed the Beneficiary, should death occur.

The above are half a dozen leading Guarantees in the contract of a great Corporation providing your widow the sum of $10,000, agreeing to pay thereon 4 per cent., free of taxes, for a term of 30 years, to guarantee, collect and pay over the interest, to become security for the principal, to return in addition, all the profits accruing in the transaction, and "back its bonds" for performance of contract by pledge of Assets avowedly invested, exceeding ONE HUNDRED AND TWENTY-FIVE MILLIONS OF DOLLARS.

Above statement may be paid for by one, five, ten, fifteen or twenty per annum, as insured may elect, or by annual premiums for life.

YOUNG ROCKEFELLER.

Personal Sketch of the Son of the Standard Oil Magnet.

While many in Wall street were chuckling over the accepted report that John D. Rockefeller, jr., had lost heavily in his initiative investments on the "Street" through the medium of Leather common, the reported "lamb" was jotting down on his own private books the results of a calculation which showed that he had gained a cool million.

Whichever way the Leather dealing went, the fact that he has entered the "Street" marks the beginning in the career of a man whom the veterans from now on will watch, with due regard for his millions and the way they will influence the market.

Mr. Rockefeller was elected a director of the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western Railroad Feb. 21, 1899. The fact was chronicled as his launching into business.

Rockefeller was prepared for college by private tutors. He entered Brown University when seventeen years old, and graduated with honors and without a single escapade during his course. His habits are extremely simple, and he uses neither tobacco nor alcoholic liquors.

At college he joined Alpha Delta Phi, one of the most exclusive of Greek letter fraternities. In athletic sports he was a mild enthusiast, playing with the "scrub" at football and acting as treasurer of the Varsity team.

He entered his father's office immediately after his graduation two years ago. Here he served the apprenticeship for the work before him. He applied himself assiduously and gained the confidence of his father. With his election as a railroad director came a secretary and a clerk. He now has a private office with his father on the fourteenth floor of the Standard Oil Company building, on lower Broadway.

Punctually at 10 o'clock he appears at the office. Shortly before 1 o'clock he lunches at a Broadway cafe and returns to his desk and works until 3 or 4 o'clock. He is easily accessible to any one with legitimate reason for taking up his time. But he dislikes to be annoyed for trivial reasons, as he is a hard worker.

He has never been on the floor of the "Change," because he is not a member, although his father and Uncle William are the possessors of seats. He confines his business to the private transaction of his father and himself and is not personally interested in Standard Oil, if is said.

Few are the hours that he spends away from business or his home, No. 4 West Fifty-fourth street. He plays moderately well on the violin. Society has never claimed him simply because he refuses to be drawn into social life. He is somewhat of an equestrian, preferring morning rides in the Park.

His religious training was most careful, and, as his father did formerly, he he now teaches a class of boys in the Sunday-school of the Fifth Avenue Baptist Church, of which the Rev. William H. P. Faunce is pastor. His circle of friends is large, but intimates are few. He is of medium height, rather stockily built, with auburn hair, eyes and brown hair. His face is long, with compressed lips and a firm chin, denoting tenacity.

He inherits to a degree the energy, foresight and sagacity that have brought his father millions.

A WONDERFUL TOP.

It Is Capable of Spinning More Than Forty-three Minutes.

A marvelous top, capable of spinning forty-three and one-half minutes and then remaining erect and still, has been constructed by Prof. Charles Jacobus, for many years superintendent of the New Brunswick, N. J., public schools, but now of Springfield, Mass. The inventor of this top guards it carefully and never allows it to remain out of his hands. He has spun it scores of times before scientists in New York, Philadelphia and many other cities. His top spun it a short time ago before the Boston Society of Civil Engineers, who devoted one hour to watching it. The top weighs nails to the pound, and when it is not in use he locks it up in a case and carries the key with him.

The handle of the top is made of bronze and looks like the small sized humming top the boys buy in the stores for five cents. It was constructed under the direction of Prof. Jacobus, who had the pieces made by several different mechanics. The top is spun by a string, and the inventor always spins it on a plate. He has a small piece of bronze, which he places over the upper end of the rod while he winds the cord around the same as is done in a humming top; then he places it on the plate, holds it firmly by the thin bronze attachment at the top and pulls the string. As the string leaves the top he removes the attachment and lets the top spin.

The point of the top, upon which it spins, is about as large as the head of a small needle, and it is so perfectly adjusted that the resistance is kept at a minimum. The inside of the top is so balanced that when the top ceases to revolve it will remain erect and will not be jarred. The rod that runs through the center is about an eighth of an inch in diameter, and the bottom part of the sharp point on the bottom to the small cap on the head. The top body is of bronze and is about three inches in diameter.

The whole secret of the top is believed to be in the perfect balance and the weight inside of the bronze body. The cap is made of steel, and is very convex, and is round with about the center of string.

Prof. Jacobus lectures before schools or educational institutions he has a habit of spinning the top and explaining to the children the beauty of a scientifically developed toy.

For a gift book there is nothing to beat a four-page history of Chanticleer's Pan-Pan Belle. It tells it where the children can get one offering a complete copy.

CATARRH CAN BE CURED BY

Johnston's Sarsaparilla

QUART BOTTLES.

"DANGER IN THE EARTH AND AIR; DANGER EVERYWHERE."

A Wise and Venerable Doctor Talks about Advanced Science.

In a leading hotel, in a great city, a famous and aged physician was conversing. Listening to his wise and sententious discourse, were a group of well dressed men, evidently lawyers, business men and commercial travelers.

My belief is," said the medical sage, "that no one is certain yet to know that all diseases without exception are caused by invisible germs which are living organisms. Here is the germ of that terrible disease diphtheria. Here is the bacillus of typhoid fever; and here is the still more dreadful bacillus of tubercle which causes that most destructive of all diseases, consumption. This of that very common and supposed incurable disease, catarrh."

"I wish, Doctor," said the traveling man, "that you would tell us about catarrh. I have had it for years, and I am thoroughly discouraged."

The Doctor answered: "Catarrh, like diphtheria, consumption, typhoid fever, and a host of other diseases, is the result of a microbe invading the blood and attacking specially the mucous membrane. This foul and most disgusting disease is especially prevalent in the United States and it is rare to meet one who is not, or has not been troubled more or less with it. How often is he or she obliged to remain at home from pleasant entertainments, deprive themselves of many intellectual treats, from fear of the disagreeable odor arising from catarrhal affections. In its worst phase, the patient becomes loathsome both to himself and his friends.

"I believe," continued this great physician, "that the true way to heal catarrh is to eradicate the blood. This can be done only by powerful alteratives which act as blood purifiers."

Betsy A. Marcott, of Manistee, Manistee Co., Mich., writes:

Dear Sirs:—For ten years I was a sufferer from general debility and chronic catarrh. My face was pale as chalk. I was weak and short of breath. I could hardly walk. I was so dizzy and had a ringing in my head all the time. My hands and feet were always cold. My appetite was very poor. On getting up in the morning, my head was so full I was often obliged to lie down again. I had awful pains in the small of my back. I had a continual feeling of tiredness. My muscular power was almost entirely gone, and I couldn't go half a dozen steps without stopping to rest, and often that much exercise caused me to have a pain in my side. It seemed as though the blood had left my veins. The doctors said my blood had all turned to water. I had given up all hope of ever getting well. I tried the best physicians in the state, but failed to get any relief. My husband got me a bottle of Johnston's Sarsaparilla. I took it, and then I bought another. When these had been used, I was somewhat improved in health. I continued its use, and felt I was growing stronger; my sleep was refreshing, and it seemed as if I could feel new blood moving through my veins. I kept on taking it, and now consider myself a well and rugged woman. I work all the time, and am happy. I am positive that the Sarsaparilla saved my life. The sick headaches I have had since childhood, have disappeared, and my catarrh has almost entirely left me. I cannot be too thankful for what Johnston's Sarsaparilla has done for me. I recommend all women who have sick headaches to use your Sarsaparilla.

YOUNG ROCKEFELLER.

Personal Sketch of the Son of the Standard Oil Magnet.

While many in Wall street were chuckling over the accepted report that John D. Rockefeller, jr., had lost heavily in his initiative investments on the "Street" through the medium of Leather common, the reported "lamb" was jotting down on his own private books the results of a calculation which showed that he had gained a cool million.

Whichever way the Leather dealing went, the fact that he has entered the "Street" marks the beginning in the career of a man whom the veterans from now on will watch with due regard for his millions and the way they will influence the market.

Mr. Rockefeller was elected a director of the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western Railroad Feb. 21, 1899. The fact was chronicled as his launching into business.

Rockefeller was prepared for college by private tutors. He entered Brown University when seventeen years old, and graduated with honors in 1897, without a single escapade during his course. His habits are extremely simple, and he uses neither tobacco nor alcoholic liquors.

At college he joined Alpha Delta Phi, one of the most exclusive of Greek letter fraternities. In athletic sports he was a mild enthusiast, playing with the "scrub" at football and acting as treasurer of the "varsity team.

He entered his father's office immediately after his graduation two years ago. Here he served the apprenticeship for the work before him. He applied himself assiduously and gained the confidence of his father. With his election as railroad director came a secretary and a clerk. He now has a private office with his father on the fourteenth floor of the Standard Oil Company building on Lower Broadway.

Punctually at 10 o'clock he appears at the office. Shortly before 1 o'clock he lunches at a Broadway cafe and returns to his desk and works until 3 or 4 o'clock. He is easily accessible to any one with legitimate reason for talking up his time. But he dislikes to be annoyed for trivial reasons, as he is a hard worker.

He has never been on the floor of the "Change," because he is not a member, although his father and Uncle William are the possessors of seats. He confines his business to the private transaction of his father and himself, and is not personally interested in Standard Oil, if is said.

Few are the hours that he spends away from business or his home, No. 4 West Fifty-fourth street. He plays moderately well on the violin, society has never claimed him simply because he refuses to be drawn into social life. He is somewhat of an equestrian, preferring morning rides in the Park.

His religious training was most careful, and, as his father did formerly, he now teaches a class of boys in the Sunday-school of the Fifth Avenue Baptist Church, of which the Rev. William H. P. Faunce is pastor. His circle of friends is large, but intimates are few. He is of medium height, rather stockily built, with steel-blue eyes and brown hair. His features are well compressed, lips and a firm chin, denoting tenacity.

He inherits to a degree the energy, foresight and sagacity that have brought his father millions.

A WONDERFUL TOP.

It Is Capable of Spinning More Than Forty-three Minutes.

A marvelous top, capable of spinning forty-three and one-half minutes and then remaining erect and still, has been constructed by Prof. Charles Jacobus, for many years superintendent of the New Brunswick, N. J., public schools, but now of Springfield, Mass. The inventor of this top guards it carefully and never allows it to pass out of his hands. He has spun it scores of times before scientists in New York, Philadelphia and many other cities. He spun it a short time ago before the Boston Society of Civil Engineers, who devoted one hour to watching it. The inventor calls it a scientific top, and when it is not in use he locks it up in a case and carries the key with him.

The wonderful top is made of bronze and looks like the small sized humming top the boys buy in the stores for five cents. It was constructed under the direction of Prof. Jacobus, who had the pieces made by several different mechanics. The top is spun by a string, and the inventor always spins it on a plate. He has a small piece of bronze, which he places over the upper end of the rod while he winds the cord around the same, as it does in a winding top; then he places it on the plate, holds it firmly by the little bronze piece at the head and pulls the string. As the string leaves the top he removes the attachment and the wonderful top spins on.

The point of the top, upon which it spins, is about as large as the head of a small nail, and it is so true and delicate that the resistance is kept at a minimum. The inside of the top is so balanced that when the top ceases to revolve it will remain erect, unless it is jarred. The rod that runs through the centre is about an eighth of an inch in diameter and is flat on the sides, the sharp point on the bottom to the small cap on the head. The top body is three inches in diameter.

When Prof. Jacobus lectures before schools or educational institutions he has a habit of spinning the top and using it to illustrate the beauty of a symmetrically developed life.

West Virginia University,
MORGANTOWN, W. VA.

The growth of the University is quite as notable in its equipment, its faculty, and its new departments as in its attendance. For example, look at

The School of Music

established two years ago. It has a faculty of seven instructors, trained under the best teachers in this country and Europe. It occupies a separate building fitted up especially for its needs. Instruction on all stringed instruments including violin, viola, mandolin, guitar, etc., is free. For voice and piano the fees are very low. A magnificent pipe organ for Commencement Hall is being constructed and it will be for the use of students of the School of Music. If you are interested in the study of music, write for full information.

Other departments of the University are developing with equal rapidity. The Premedical Department, with its four new instructors, deserves special mention. Write for a special pamphlet about it.

The University has a faculty of sixty-five instructors, graduates of the foremost schools in the world.

The Winter Quarter begins January 2, and the Spring Quarter April 2.

SPRING.

Spring is here with that nameless pathos in the air
That dwells with all things fair—
Spring, with her golden suns and silver rains,
Is with us once again.

But many gleams and shadows need must pass
Along the budding grass,
And weeks go by, before the enamoured south
Shall kiss the rose's mouth.

Still, there's a sense of blossoms yet unborn
In the sweet airs of morn:
One almost looks to find the very street
Grow purple at his feet.

At times a fragrant breeze comes floating by,
And brings—you know not why—
A feeling as when eager crowds await Before a palace gate

Some wondrous pageant; and you scarce would start
If from a beech's heart
A blue-eyed dryad, stepping forth, should say:
"Behold me, I am May!"

County Sketches

A Mountain Bear.

The timber lands of Wauchope County were coming in demand. For about one hundred and fifty years they had been owned by Wauchope families who had paid taxes on them with great regularity. As far as the enjoyment of these forest shades were concerned the sportsmen and sang-digger got all the good and let the land-poor farmer pay the taxes. Man after man carried these lands along, until each "abode his destined hour and went his way," and, beyond the consciousness of owning so many acres, it was a burden to him. Occasionally a field was cleared—the timber felled and burned—but this was too laborious to be very extensively practiced by the mountaineers, most of whom we were willing to leave less when they went their way, and have time to idle by the pleasant paths in which their lives were laid. They fostered their little herds, paying great attention to the care and comfort of the brute beasts, and the increase brought a small income each year, sufficient to pay the taxes, and buy coffee and tobacco and other necessaries of life.

A century ago there were no railroads anywhere and timber was valuable. The land did not sell for much money an acre, but money was so scarce that it commanded a good price. Then railroads were invented and by and by it became evident that the railroad was to be the important factor in marketing timber.

The timber that would be used was the timber growing along the line of some railway, and when the men of the mountain realized this, the timber lands dropped lower than they were in pioneer days. Then came restless spirits with surveying corps running lines for imaginary railroads until every hollow of any importance could boast of a road of three pollysyllables. The people got used to civil engineers and the last generation scornfully pulled up the stakes in their meadow planted by the engineers which their forefathers had held sacred.

With every new railroad timber would rise a little, and between times would be a drag on the market. Finally the unexpected happened, and some men with money came along, and after them the donkey and the mule, and a railroad was coming to the county within a year. The county was strange things and were made acquainted with strange customs. In the old time if two were slower together, to use Biblical language, the whole county stopped work and discussed it. The courts took the matter up and considered it professionally, lengthy judicial words were drawn and much lawyer was held.

Now in the railroad camps there was shooting, cutting, knocking down and dragging out, men dying from gunshot wounds, and the talking how would come along. Well, the law ought to know about this, but I can't stop building railroad to fool with the courts. This railroad has got to be built."

A foreman and an Italian fell out at a speakeasy near a camp. The Italian plunged his knife through the skull of the foreman, and the foreman shattered six beer bottles over the head of the Italian. Result, both men came near dying. The people all said, "It's just railroad people," and did not trouble themselves to report it to the authorities, and some say the authorities were glad of it.

And timber went up by leaps and bounds. Men ceased going to their neighbors and asking for a board tree, as a city man would ask another for a match. The spring the first shovel full of earth was thrown on the new railroad there was not a log-rolling or a log heap burned in the whole county, and the oldest inhabitant would tell how the site of the county seat was covered with walnut trees and how they had been cut down and burned.

Strangers with money and strangers without money came to buy timber, and a citizen with a desirable piece of timber was pestered half to death by real estate men. There was a great setting of prices and giving of options, and occasionally a real estate man was able to set as the missing link between the man with the timber and the man with the money, and his rake-off was considerable.

Old man Hiram Powers had held his 4000 acres through thick and thin at ten dollars an acre. He had gone security for a neighbor and had to pay the debt of $2500, and all the return he got was the neighbor's 4000 acres of land. His friends had pitied him, and it had taught old man Hiram a lesson. From that day forth he refused to sign his name to anything.

When asked for an option the old gentleman would very emphatically decline. "No, sir. I put my signature to a paper once and it cost me $2500, and I don't sign nothing. There's the land. You can have it for ten dollars an acre when you bring me the cash. No checks mind you." The real estate men found it impossible to move him, and all but one left him to find some one who would obligate himself to make a deed if they succeeded in bauding it.

The one who considered the old man's word as good as his bond was Dr Smith, a young physician, who wanted to get rich faster than he could by taking live stock for his fees. After combining with a city real estate man, he had sold the land to a capitalist for twelve dollars per acre. He was out some hundreds of dollars and stood to make $8000 if Hiram Powers would meet them in the city and turn over a deed and receive the money.

When the doctor informed him that the money was waiting for him, old Hirsm began to hesitate, and the signs indicated that he would not take the decisive step. The doctor knew such men, and he was in an uncomfortable position. He had builded upon making the deal and he wrote to his partner in the enterprise that they were about to fail.

The real estate man quietly cursed himself for putting anything in a deal where he was at the mercy of the land owner, but went to work with his head. The result was two letters to his correspondent. One was to the effect that the railroad company had made a deal with the Pennsylvania system and that the company was that the road would be be abandoned. The doctor was given instructions to sell certain lands at once for the construction work on the railroad was now being maintained at the expense of A. K. VanAstor, the multi-millionaire of Wauchope County, in order that he could dispose of all his holdings. When this was done the grass would grow over the right of way, the tunnels fall in and the cities lots along the route be used for fuel.

The doctor let his usual indignation and trusty friend use the letter and in a night reduce were that the owners would not get the cash out after all. So one had to decide information. It was a case of "They snatched at a rumor and caught at a breath, of this one knoweth and that one saith." The county had been filled with skeptics who always averred that the county would never get a railroad. These had been silenced for a few months, but now they talked and said, "I told you so," with redoubled vigor.

Powers heard it and came to Dr Smith. The two laid their heads together and got up the deed and started to the city in the hope that the capitalist had not heard the news. They were bent on swindling now and that suited old Hiram. The deed was delivered, and he held the forty-thousand dollars in his hands for a few minutes before he put the money back in the bank.

The railroad men worked on and completed the road, but Powers still retains the impression that he swindled the capitalist who bought his land.

And this how the real estate men became bears and put down the price of mountain lands.

A very Remarkable Remedy.

It is with a good deal of pleasure and satisfaction that I recommend Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, says Druggist A. W. Sawtelle, of Hartford, Conn. "A lady customer, seeing the remedy exposed for sale on my show case said to me: 'I really believe that medicine saved my life the past summer while at the shore,' and she became so enthusiastic over its merits that I at once made up my mind to recommend it in the future. Recently a gentleman came into my store so overcome with colic pains that he sank at once to the floor. I gave him a dose of this remedy which helped him. I repeated the dose and in fifteen minutes he left my store smilingly informing me that he felt as well as ever."

Tortured a Witness.

Intense suffering was endured by witness, T. L. Martin, of Dixie, Ky., before he gave this evidence: "I coughed every night until my throat was nearly raw; then tried Dr Kings New Discovery which gave instant relief. I have used it in my family four years and recommend it as the greatest remedy for coughs, colds and all throat, chest and lung troubles. It will stop the worst cough and not only prevents but absolutely cures consumption. Price 50c and $1. Every bottle guaranteed. Trial bottles free at Harry R. Echols Marlinton; N. J. A Woman's Awful Peril.

"There is only one chance to save your life and that is through an operation" were the startling words heard by Mrs I. B. Huss of Lime Ridge, Wis. from her doctor after he had vainly tried to cure her of a frightful case of stomach trouble and yellow jaundice. Gall stones had already formed and she constantly grew worse. Then she began to use Electric Bitters which wholly cured her. It is a wonderful Stomach, Liver and Kidney remedy. Cures dyspepsia, fine complexion, 25c. Only 50c. Guaranteed. Sold by Harry R. Echols, Marlinton; J. J. Brown, Mill Point; E. L. Beard & Co., Academy; S. F. Myles, Falling Springs, W. Va.

THE HUMOROUS SIDE OF POLITICS.

John J. Ingalls, in the Evening Post.

Charles Sumner had no more sense of humor than a hippopotamus, but there was something excessively humorous about his colossal self-consciousness, of which it is no paradox to say he was apparently unconscious.

His egotism was inordinately vast, the innocent in its simplicity. It was far from conceit and led to no disparagement of his associates. Indeed, I doubt if he ever instituted comparisons.

Probably Grant, whom he hated and abused, came the nearest to sizing him up when he said: "The reason Sumner doesn't believe in the Bible is because he didn't write it himself!"

He had large intellectual powers but not so large as he imagined. He had no influence on legislation. He was unable to endure opposition. If he could not have his own will he would do nothing. But this is not intended as an analysis of his work or his character. I started out to say that soon after I entered the Senate we were riding up the Avenue in a street car, and by way of conversation he asked me about my predecessor. Senator Pomeroy, who had met with an accident politically. He spoke of his early fidelity to the cause of freedom and the unusual degree to which he held the confidence of his associates till the impeachment of Andrew Johnson.

"Indeed," he continued with great gravity, "had he died before that time Kansas would have owned him a monument, and I should myself have pronounced his eulogy."

Roscoe Conkling in the Meridian of His Power.

The self-consciousness of Roscoe Conkling was quite as egregious as that of Mr Sumner, but his egotism was tinged with vanity and compounded with scorn, contempt, and disdain. He was a past master in the gentle art of making enemies and well versed in the vocabulary of derision and hatred. Hamlet might have had him in mind when, in his soliloquy, he mentioned, among other things that make life not worth living, "the proud man's contumely." The hinges of his knees were not pregnant and he had none of the thrift that follows fawning. When I first knew him he was in the meridian of his great powers. He possessed an extraordinary assemblage of physical and intellectual attributes that made him by far the most prominent, picturesque, and impressive figure in public life.

His presence was noble and commanding; his voice and elocution were superb; his bearing and address somewhat too formal, but marked by dignity and grace. His vocabulary was rich and ornamental, sometimes almost to the borders of the grotesque, but fertilized with apposite quotations and allusions that showed wide reading especially in poetry, romance, and the drama. Some hostile critic described one of his speeches as a "purple earthquake of oratory." But he was always heard with delight on any theme.

Had he possessed greater flexibility of temper, been less irascible in his animosities, and learned how to forget where he could not forgive, there was no height he might not have reached, even the highest in the people's gift. But he would not flatter Neptune for his trident, nor Jove for his power to thunder.

In that state of moral typhoid which always follows great wars, an era of profligacy, of sudden wealth at the price of honor, of gould nobilior and Star Route scandals, he was not contaminated. He walked through the furnace with no smell of fire upon his garments.

Toward the end of his career in the Senate he fell out with the newspapers and sometimes, when he arose to speak, swore repentance in the press gallery, closing his note-book. His whole mood would not unwillingly run into the lobby, leaving every seat without an occupant.

He flushed at the insult, but speaking of journalism afterward, he was moved to remark in his propitatory way that the only people in the world authorized to use the first person plural, "we," in speaking of themselves, were "editors and men with tapeworms!"

His allusion to Governor Cornell as "that lizard on the hill," and to President Arthur, after his refusal to abdicate in favor of Mr Conkling, as the prize ox in American politics, and his refusal to speak for Blaine in the campaign of 1884 on the ground that he was "not engaged in criminal practice," are well known illustrations of his methods of compelling his political associates to be either his vassals or his enemies.

But Jove did not always sit on Olympus. Sometimes he descended to the plain, the never quite on terms of absolute equality with mankind. He was inclined to "jolly" those whom he did not feel disposed to bully.

When Thurman once asked him in a debate on some legal proposition why he kept looking at him all the time, Conkling replied with elaborate raillery that he turned to him as the source and fountain of the common law as, at the call of the Mu-zzin, the Musselman turned to Mecca.

The Genial Urbanity of Senator Evarts

William Maxwell Evarts came to the Senate in 1885, at the age of sixty-seven. He was a candidate in 1861, and waited twenty-four years for the realization of his ambition. The interval was oppulent in noble achievements at the bar, in statesmanship, in oratory, and the highest civic and social activities.

The Story of Washington and the Silver Dollar.

Probably the mot of Mr Evarts most widely flown concerns the apochryphal feat told of George Washington "jerking," a silver dollar across the Rappahanock.

The story goes that a party of tourists, visiting the haunts of Washington in Virginia, came to the spot where the anecdote was related by some local antiquary, to illustrate the prodigious strength of the man whom Providence made childless that he might become the Father of His Country.

Aside from the unlikelihood that the lusty George would throw a silver dollar over the river when a pebble would have done as well, the distance was so great that the skeptics were incredulous, and another legend seemed on the point of being destroyed, when Mr Evarts came to its rescue with the suggestion that "a dollar went much farther in those days than now!"

The explanation is so simple and so satisfactory that the wonder is it occurred to no one before.

Among the guests at a dinner to Daniel Webster in New York was Dr Benjamin Brandreth, the inventor of a celebrated pill known by his name. Mr Evarts united these two men in a volunteer toast to "Daniel Webster and Benjamin Brandreth: the pillars of the Constitution!"

Objections had been filed with the Judiciary Committee to the confirmation of of a nomination on account of the dissolute habits of the appointee.

When the case came up for consideration the chairman called for the affidavits. The clerk produced a number from the files. Consulting his docket, Mr Edmunds thought there were more, and others were found. A search disclosed another batch that had been overlooked or mislaid.

"The papers in this case," said Mr Evarts, "appear to be more dissipated, if possible, than the candidate!"

Senator Evarts' Reply to his Critics.

Mr Evarts was a born orator, an inveterate diner out, and great at the most elaborate and artistic dinners himself. To a lady who expressed surprise that one of such slender frame and fragile physique could endure so many feasts with their varying viands and different wines he replied that it was not by virtue of the different wines that gave him trouble as the indifferent ones.

President Hayes was a total abstainer at home. Soothes and he only drank the "O. P. brands." His State dinners, otherwise very elegant and costly, were served without wines. The only occasion on which he conviviality was the Roman punch, flavored with Jamaica rum. Evarts was accustomed to allude to this course as "the life-saving station."

Failing to address informally the guests at a Thanksgiving dinner he began: "You have been giving your attention to a turkey and I were eggs. You ate your meat in a single stuffed with truth."

When he was Secretary of State in the Cabinet of President Hayes the struggle for places in the diplomatic service was very active. As he was leaving the elevator at the close of a very busy day, he said the conductor since noon had "taken up a very large collection for foreign missions"; and when asked what had been done, he replied, "Many called, but few chosen."

As an orator Mr Evarts was not limpid. But he confounded the critics who condemned his long sentences by saying that, so far as his observation went, the people who objected to long sentences belonged to the criminal classes.

General Grant was popularly supposed to be habitually grave, reserved and taciturn, but on occasion was very vivacious in conversation with a keen sense of dry, quiet humor.

One evening, after a stag dinner at the White House, the company assembled in the library to smoke. Talk fell upon the happiest period of life—childhood, youth, manhood age.

Grant listened but said nothing till asked for his opinion.

"Well," he said after a pause, "I believe I would like to be born again," which indicated that he had found existence enjoyable all the way through.

Mr Edmund's Quotation of St. Paul.

One of Grant's Secretaries of the Navy was George M. Robeson, of New Jersey, for whom Senator Carpenter, of Wisconsin, a great jurist and advocate, conceived a violent dislike. His mildest definition of Robeson was that he was "a great lawyer among sailors, and a great sailor among lawyers."

Mr Rosco con Conkling undertook to task for having referred rather contemptuously to the beneficiaries of a certain measure as "things."

"Things," replied Thurman bluntly, "why we are all things." "To all men," interrupted Mr Edmunds in a low voice, and great glee at this sentence and the discussion ended.

Hopkins, of Indiana, for many years waged virulent and unremitting war on amendments to appropriation bills, which gave him the sobriquet of the Watchdog of the Treasury." He was not very strong in his district and had an unusually long service, which gave him great power and influence in the House by his knowledge of the rules and practice.

Toward the end of his term we remember was offered in which a new subsidy was very properly denied. The familiar "I object" was not heard and the amendment went through with his support, whereupon a member sitting near exclaimed:

"He rises to hear the former vouch—
Sing! Sing!
One inconsistent scruples to an ass
Some wise lions."

Nothing brighter and more apt has been said in either House of Congress since the inauguration of Washington.

Good Blood!

Your heart beats over one hundred thousand times each day. One hundred thousand supplies of good or bad blood to your brain.

Which is it?

If bad, impure blood, then your brain aches. You are troubled with drowsiness yet cannot sleep. You are as tired in the morning as at night. You have no nerve power. Your food does you but little good.

Stimulants, tonics, headache powders, cannot cure you; but will. It makes the liver, kidneys, skin and bowels perform their proper work. It removes all impurities from the blood. And it makes the blood rich in its life-giving properties.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

To Hasten Recovery.

You will be more rapidly cured if you will take a laxative dose of Ayer's pills each night. They arouse the sluggish liver and thus cure biliousness.

WHO TO VOTE.

The Democratic Executive Committee adopted the following qualifying clause:

"All Democrats and all others who wish to affiliate with the Democratic party in the nomination and election of county officers, are invited to vote in this primary, and their voting will be construed to be a promise and a pledge to support the nominees of this primary at the general election; but every one voting must be a legal voter of this county, entitled to cast a vote at the general election.

This leaves room for prohibitionists, Populists and Independent Republicans to have a chance in selecting county officials. We are glad to see our Republican friends at our primary, but we have seen some who have been active in our primaries and then take a hand in their own county conventions, trying to be both fish and fowl.

At the request of the chairman of the County Executive Committee we warn all men who are here by reason of their being a work on the railroad in this county. The section referred to reads: "Nor shall any person in the employ of any incorporated company, or of this State, be deemed a resident of any county or of any district, by reason of being employed in said county or district."

Waitman T. Willey died at Morgantown May 24, aged 80 years born in 1841. Previous to the war he was a prominent Whig orator and was a member of the Virginia convention, spoke and voted against secession and refused to sign the ordinance. He was the author of the West Virginia State Constitution; served several terms as U. S. Senator and then spent many years as clerk of the courts of Monongalia County. For his great ability and firm adherence to whatever he deemed to be the right, his fellow citizens of all parties regarded him with high esteem and unite in honoring him as the foremost man of his day in the history of our State.

A CARD.

Let each voter in the county look to his interest and vote for H. A. Yeager for House of Delegates.

Mr Yeager is the right man; he made a good record when he was a Delegate a few years ago. He realized the responsibility resting upon him and faithfully performed his duty to the people he represented.

H. A. Yeager for House of Delegates! Everybody come out to the Primary and vote for him.

A LEAF FROM MY NOTE-BOOK.

Here we are at Robert Gibson's. The beautiful garden spot referred to above narrows somewhat right here, but widens out just above here, and with its fertility and beauty presents to the eye of the onlooker much to attract his attention and incline him to pitch his tent in this vicinity. Robert is a clever man, and has, like many of his neighbors, heaven's second best gift to man—a good wife.

We pass the school house where during five months of the year the training of the "young idea how to shoot" goes on. Here is a large and commodious church stands inviting every one within its reach to bow down and worship the Lord his Maker.

Away to the left of us nestled in against the foot of a grand old mountain is Uncle Jim Gibson's residence. Mr Gibson has seen much of the cares and trials of this life. Two of his daughters live with him, his wife having gone on before him to the spirit world. He is kind and hospitable, and both able and willing to use you well. He feels sure that his visitors can make an occasional meal on what he lives on all the time. He is right about this. We wish we knew just what to say to Uncle Jim to induce him to be sure and make no mistake about being fully ready to "cross over Jordan into the sweet fields of Eden" when the time comes for him to go.

We also have a word of good cheer and pleasantry for his son John Gibson, who lives near by his father. We think as we pass of that bright-eyed little boy of his, who like some of the other little folks of Elk gave us some money for the preacher not long since. We want John also to do well for both worlds.

Away up the mountain side lives James Jackson. He has grown large and fat from laughing or otherwise. We will not be obliged to wrestle with him as he will outweigh us, if were both put on the scales. We hope however that he will not mind our foolishness, as—

"A little nonsense now and then
Is relished by the best of men."

We get in earnest in reference to our "present peace and eternal welfare."

We wish those well whom we pass as in gloom up this ravine towards the heights of the gigantic Knob, without mentioning names. Here we hasten by John Jackson's. He has built an addition to his house. We certainly wish him well in his hard struggle to live. We often think of many a poor fellow who has such a hard time in this world, and then after all this if he were to miss heaven at last, how very sad it would be. Our prayer is that John with the rest of us get to heaven—that he will be rich in the heavenly world.

Still to the left we keep looking. Now J. B. Shelton's residence attracts our attention. He and his are from Bath County, Va. They show very plainly the commendable politeness of Virginia. We pass them in haste as we fall in with some others going to Marlinton to Court. We still keep prominent in our mind the religious welfare of all, and breathe a prayer to Heaven for them as we go by.

"Little" Jim Gibson lives up a hollow hollow here still to the left. He is not so little either in body or mind, but we presume he is like the man who said he was little when they named him. You can get honey here at Mr Gibson's nearly any time, and it will be good. We scarcely know how we came so far up this creek without making mention of the delightful honey so plentiful in this section. This is a clever man and makes things that he takes hold of come to pass. He is doing well; we also wish him well, and hope that he and his large and interesting family will shine with the rest of us by and by, "brighter than the sun in the kingdom of our Father."

We look up this run farther still past Randolph Hamilton's and Mr Kinder's. Mr Kinder is badly crippled; we hope he is making the proper preparation as such when people will never be lame.

Up near an elevation is a house a few hundred feet. Little Jake Gibson is preparing to put a bird in this cage. This is all right, Jake. We wish you much happiness in this life and your share of happiness in the world to come.

Pursuant to a decree rendered in the above cause at the April Term, 1900, of the Circuit Court of Pocahontas County, West Virginia, the undersigned commissioner will proceed at his office in the town of Marlinton, W. Va., on the 6th day of June, 1900, to take, state, and report to the Court the following matters of account, to wit:

First—A settlement of the administration accounts of R. W. Hill, Administrator of Wm H. Cleek, deceased.

Second—A statement of the just and subsisting debts and liens against the estate of the said William H. Cleek, deceased, with their date, dignities, and priorities.

Third—A statement of the lands of which the said Wm H. Cleek died seized, and which may be subjected to the payment of his debts, with the location of the same.

Fourth—Any other matter is to be stated by the commissioner, deemed pertinent by himself or required by any party in interest to be so stated.

At which time and place all parties who desire may attend.

T. S. McNEEL,
Commissioner.

NOTICE TO CREDITORS.

To the creditors of Wm. H. Cleek, deceased:

In pursuance of a decree of the Circuit Court of the County of Pocahontas made to a cause therein pending to subject the real estate of the said Wm. H. Cleek to the payment of his debts, you are required to present your claims against the estate of said deceased H. Cleek for adjustment to T. S. McNeel, commissioner, at his office in the said county, on or before the 6th day of June 1900.

Witness J. H. Patterson, Clerk of the said Court, this 16th day of April, 1900.

M. J. MCNEEL, Commander.

One of the canards that moved the people most deeply last Saturday in the town election was that one of the leading candidates had [illegible] unconditionally, maliciously, feloniously, unlawfully milked another man's cow. It was hard to down and kept cropping up in the most unexpected places.

There seems to be no doubt but that the West Virginia Paper and Pulp Company will establish a sawmill at the mouth of Leather bark with a capacity of 100,000 feet daily. This is built to cut into lumber that timber on their lands which can not be used for pulp. This means much for the county, as a town of several thousand people will soon be built about such an industry.

Col R. S. Turk, as Editor of the Staunton Spectator and Vindicator has had a series of articles on the wealth of Pocahontas County, calling attention to the timber, iron ore, coal and limestone. The people of this section appreciate this work on the part of Col. Turk. No one knows the country better than he, having once been the leading lawyer of the county. He was largely instrumental in attracting the attention of the West Virginia Pulp and Paper Company to the vast quantities of spruce in this county, and acted as attorney in the purchases which made the additional inducement needed to bring the railroad.

Rev James Hayes Dead.

Rev James Hayes, a minister well and widely known in Monroe, Greenbrier and Pocahontas, died April 26 at St Clare, Tenn., aged about 66 years.

His entire ministerial life of 38 years was devoted to the service of home evangelization among the mountains of West Virginia and Eastern Tennessee, and he seems never to have become weary of his obscure but important and successful service. The story of his life suitably told, would be more interesting than a romance and far more edifying. He was a nephew of the late Mrs Mary Dunlap and received his preparation for college at the Hillsboro Academy while conducted by the Rev M. D Dunlap.

NEGRO SHOT AND KILLED.

John Robinson Kills Frank Reed at Pitts Camp No 2.

Thursday Frank Reed was instantly killed on the grade of the railroad two miles above Marlinton by John Robinson. Both were negro laborers in the employ of John L. Pitts, the well known railroad contractor. After the killing Robinson came to Marlinton and gave himself up, where he is now waiting a preliminary hearing.

The particulars of the case as gathered at the inquest and from eye witnesses are as follows. Both left the camp together to go to work on the grade up the river. Reed was in an ugly mood, and he picked up a round rock weighing a pound or more and ordered Robinson to walk in front of him. Robinson was not willing to do this, as there was an old feud between them of several months standing. They progressed about a mile in this manner, quarreling, Robinson walking with his eye on Reed the whole time.

They reached a gang of men who were at work where Robinson says Reed belonged. He followed Robinson through this group of men, carrying the rock in his hand. He said, "John, I'm going to cut your guts out this morning or breakfast in hell."

Robinson told him not to follow him farther. That if he was going on up the work to pass on and leave him alone. He rejected the expression above, and as he was advancing Robinson pulled a pistol from his pocket and shot him, killing him instantly. Robinson fired three shots in quick succession, two of which took effect, inflicting two wounds either of which would have been fatal. The first shot entered the right arm and ranged across the body, cutting off the large artery at the heart. The other shot was in the other arm at exactly the same place and ranged downward. The weapon used was a 44 calibre revolver.

In point of character Robinson has greatly the advantage. Robinson being said to be the best negro in camp, and Reed the worst. Reed has been in trouble ever since he came here and has the reputation of being a bad negro. He has been in jail twice at this place and some of his companions say that he claims to have shot a negro woman and a white man in the South. Some weeks ago the walking boss S. S. Butler disarmed him. At another time he knocked a man senseless with a pick handle. He is the same man who fired at a man in a crap game and ran away from the camp to hide, and was discovered by the glint of the moonlight on the barrel of his pistol. Squire Bird sent him to jail, and he was released on condition that he leave the county. Instead of doing so he went back to camp where he got work. He was considered a very fine hand.

On the other hand Robinson has been accorded more privileges than any negro in the employ of Mr L. H. Hankins, who runs the camp. He has entrusted him with considerable sums of money and sent him to North Carolina to bring on hands to work on the railroad. Owing to the trust imposed on him in this and other ways it was reported that he was a foreman, but that was a mistake. He has been about Marlinton a great deal where some disliked him, but the only fault we have ever heard specified was that he was a little "stuck up." Robinson is 27 years old, is from Charlotte, N. C., and claims to have never been in a scrape in his life. Reed was 22 years old and came from Salisbury, N. C.

W. H. Grose, J. P., came down from Hunterville to hold the inquest. He summoned the jury as follows: S. J. Boggs, A. B. Kincaid, J. W. Yeager, J. M. Yeager, F. P. Anderson, Ashby Slaven. The body was found where it had had fallen, with guards of men working near it. Drs. Price, Brown and Dungan then were pressed and made post-mortem examination and traced the course of the balls.

A large crowd of people attended from Marlinton. The jury returned a verdict to the effect that the deceased had come to his death from two wounds from a pistol unlawfully inflicted by the prisoner. The prisoner was remanded to jail. The body was buried at the expense of the county.

CIRCULAR OF INFORMATION.

CHESAPEAKE AND OHIO RAILWAY CO.
TRAFFIC DEPARTMENT.
RICHMOND, Va., April 20, 1900.

We are receiving, from various sources, complaints that parties can not make progress in locating Lumber Mills, Tanneries, Wood-Working Factories, &c., in the section of the Greenbrier River Valley, because of lack of information as to freight rates, facilities, &c.

This is to advise, therefore, that the Chesapeake and Ohio Railway Company is interested in the construction of a STANDARD GUAGE LINE following the Greenbrier River from Whitesville to a point at or near the headwaters of the Greenbrier in Pocahontas County, W. Va., a distance of one hundred miles, more or less, which will make accessible a large area of timber lands, covered with oak, pine, spruce, hemlock, and other woods, also large quantities of bark.

The question of the rates upon products of the forest has not yet been fully determined, but it is the desire of the Company to secure the location of mills, tanneries, &c., and to this end request that communications be addressed to Mr. E. EDRAY.

We had a very cold snap a few days since, and we fear the fruit is greatly damaged.

Singing at the church every Thursday night. Come one and all and let us make it a grand success.

Misses Lena Moore and Leva Gay are taking music lessons at Marlinton, under the instruction of Miss Glenna Hill.

E. H. Moore, the enterprising drummer for Armstrong, Cater & Co., was in town last week.

Cutlip Geiger's little girls have the measles.

Mrs E. B. Vaughn and two little sons are visiting friends and relatives in this part. Mrs Vaughn will soon join her husband in their Ronceverte home.

Willie and Emery Miller, of Rocky Point, spent Saturday and Sunday in this part.

William Wooddell and wife were visiting at Mr Geiger's last week. They moved to Elk Saturday.

Harlow Waugh is expected home from Baltimore this week.

If that young man from Marlinton, who makes his appearance here so often, could be bought for what he is worth and sold for what he thinks he is worth, how the money would jingle in somebody's pocket.

Mrs Lora Price is very sick at this writing. Also Reed Moore.

We are sorry Rev W. T. Price has resigned his usual work. In him we lose a good preacher, but we hope he will be able to be with us occasionally. OLIVET.

GREEN BANK.

The frost last week killed about all the fruit, and it is too late for another crop.

Mrs W. J. Yeager was in town for a week and returned Sunday to Travelers Repose.

Dr and Mrs C. L. Austin are off to Lewisburg.

Mrs James Streach has the measles at this time.

J. H. Curry says, if elected Justice, he will serve, but he is not a candidate.

Mr Bennett, of Pendleton, has moved into J. H. Patterson's shop.

We want all the young men and old men in reach to attend Sunday school so that we can have a large male class.

Forest Warwick is building a house on his farm and he will soon be ready to move into it.

Candidates Moore, Bird, Bratton and McClintic were in town last week.

Col Dan O'Connell's teams and camp outfit went to the camp at the head of Greenbrier last week to commence operations again.

Oh Yes! Could not some one fix the bridges between Green Bank and Dunmore? It is not safe to travel the road after night.

Mrs P. D. Yeager is very low at this time, and is not expected to recover.

Measles and grippe are raging.

West Virginia University.

MORGANTOWN, W. VA.

The growth of the University is quite as notable in its equipment, its faculty, and its new departments as in its attendance. For example, look at

The School of Music

established two years ago. It has a faculty of seven instructors, trained under the best teachers in this country and Europe. It occupies a separate building fitted up especially for its needs. Instruction on all stringed instruments, including violin, viola, mandolin, guitar, etc., is free. For voice and piano the fees are very low. A magnificent pipe organ for Commencement Hall is being constructed and it will be for the use of students of the School of Music. If you are interested in the study of music, write for full information.

Other departments of the University are developing with equal rapidity. The Premedical Department, with its four new instructors, deserves special mention. Write for a special pamphlet about it.

The University has a faculty of sixty-five instructors, graduates of the foremost schools in the world.

The Winter Quarter begins January 2, and the Spring Quarter April 2.

"WHITE SUPREMACY."

Senator Tillmann's Amazingly Frank Story of the Surpression of the Negro Vote, in Leslie's Weekly.

The overwhelming majority of the white people of South Carolina, grown desperate at the misrule and robbery to which they had been subjected, and with their angry passions aroused by the threatened destruction of our civilization set to work in January, 1876, to redeem the State at any and all hazards. The Democratic party was reorganized, and its one battle cry was "white supremacy." The work of reorganization was soon rapidly under way in all the upper portion of the State. In many of the lower counties the whites were so down-hearted and depressed at the hopelessness of the struggle that they made little or no movement; but in the Piedmont, where the Hampton canvass had its beginning, there was inaugurated one of the most remarkable campaigns in history.

The whites were organized rapidly into military companies and armed, for the negro militiamen, armed and well equipped, numbered upward of 8,000 and were frequently on the move to and fro from the places of regimental rendezvous. There were not lacking threats and actions by them to terrorize white women and children and enrage the white men. The whites were in a minority of 30,000 voters in the State, but this had no effect on the leaders. The Democrats adopted the red shirt as a uniform and followed Hampton as he went from county to county, marching in procession as his escort. As many as 3,000 red-shirted horsemen were seen in different counties riding across country from Court House to Court House. When Chamberlain began his canvass his first meeting at Edgefield, where the negroes were two to one was captured by 1,500 in red shirts under Mart Gary, a Confederate Brigadier, and the boldest leader of the white's in the State. A division of time was demanded and the negroes were addressed by the Democratic speakers, who told Chamberlain, who was running for reelection, of the villainies which he and his associates had perpetrated.

This was the first fruits of the new policy, and the effect over the State was electrical. Cowed and crestfallen at being thus branded in the presence of his black dupes, the Governor left Edgefield never to return, and after a similar experience at Midway, in Barnwell County, a week later, he quit the canvass and began to lay plans for the use of the United States troops as the only hope left. The Hamburg riot which occurred the 7th of July gave the excuse, and a regiment of troops was sent into the State under Gen. Ruger. The Ellenton riot followed in September and more troops were sent. I was in both riots, but space forbids any details. Hampton in his campaign urged persuasion and peaceful methods. Gary and Butler, on the contrary, advocated the "shotgun policy," and favorite maxims of the former were: "Fight the devil with fire." "An ounce of fear is worth a ton of persuasion." The respect for the State Constitution and the laws which had been thrust upon the people at the point of the bayonet by the carpet-bag government was overthrown at once. Oath's became idle words without force or meaning. The purpose was to carry the election at any and all hazards, and in any and all way necessary. As the election approached, the sky at night was lit up by the light of blazing gin houses, the work of incendiaries.

Having such a large majority to overcome and knowing that in only about two-thirds of the State the ballot were unbiased, there were no scruples on election day as to how the votes got into the boxes and how many times a man voted, or whether the negroes were allowed to vote—as they were not in many instances. The people were wrought up to such a pitch of desperation that life was not worth having under conditions which existed. It was openly declared to be purpose to have a white man's government or a military government, and in those counties where troops were stationed the Democratic majorities were greatest. At the election Hampton had more votes and was declared elected but Grant sustained Chamberlain's claim, and the troops held the State House from the first week in December until Hayes was inaugurated, in March following.

There was a dual government and a dual Legislature, but Hampton's government alone received any money from the taxpayers and the settlement of Hayse's title to the Presidency by the Electorial Commission carried with it the agreement to with draw the troops. Then the carpet-bag government collapsed in a night, and each thief who could get away hurriedly left the State. The work of rehabilitation and restoration was slow. The State's credit was for the time ruined, but with labor and patience order came out of chaos, the debt was refunded, and all legal obligations met; honest Judges took the place of bribe takers who had disgracee the bench. There were so many indictments in the State courts against the county officers, legislators and other Republicans that by arrests and resignations nearly all the offices were soon in the hands of decent white men. There were hundreds of indictments against white men in the United States courts for riot, murder, intimidation, &c., and finally an understanding was reached that the whites would make an exchange of prisoners so to speak, and all prosecutions on both sides were dropped.

In the campaign of 1878 there was a more or less determined effort on the part of the negroes to regain their lost power, but the whites swept everything by the same methods used in 1876, in a modified degree. It did not require as drastic measures to hold the State as it had to capture it. In 1880 the negroes made a feeble spasmodic attempt, and then, with the enactment of the "Eight-Box law," which was a modified form of educational qualification, all organized effort to overthrow the white or Democratic party ceased; and from that time until 1895 when the new Constitution requiring an educational qualification for suffrage was adopted, the negro vote ceased to be a factor in South Carolina politics. Very many of them never took the trouble to go the polls at all, and when they did go it made no difference. In 1876 the whites had voted along with the negroes for a Constitutional two-mill school tax. In 1895 the convention, composed of 154 whites and 6 negroes, increased this to three mills. South Carolina now leads the South in education and manufactures. Its credit is such that its 4½ per cent bonds are at 120. Its negro population is as happy and contented and as prosperous as any other State in the Union.

The suppression of the negro vote, first by force and fraud and later by Constitutional methods, has been the subject of much adverse criticism by those who knew nothing of the horrors of carpet-bag rule; but those who participated in the struggle to wrest the State from the hand of robbers who had used the ignorant and debased negro vote to waste our substance and destroy our civilization have no apologies to make, and will leave to the impartial historian of the future the question as to whether the end justified the means. The people of South Carolina do not doubt what the verdict will be, neither do they care.

COCAINE DID IT.

Doctor Suicides by Use of Chloral Habit—Second Attempt Succeeded.

Charleston Gazette.

Addison, W. Va., May 7.—Dr Lyman Eugene Wycoff, who a year ago tried to commit suicide at Benwood, where he was located for the practice of medicine, killed himself here a few nights ago by the use of cocaine, morphine, chloral, and amyl nitrate. He had practiced medicine in Benwood, Mannington, Gaston, and at various places in Randolph, Tucker, and Pendleton counties, and came here two weeks ago from Romulus, N. Y., where his mother and little son resides. His wife, from whom he has been separated several years, lives at Franklin, W. Va.

Several years ago he was in partnership with Dr Judy, at Harman, W. Va., and, accusing Judy with intimacy with his wife, shot and badly wounded him. He claims Judy did him up in business and taught him to use cocaine In his will, in which he left several thousand dollars' worth of property to his wife in trust for their son, he consigned Dr Judy to "the hottest portion of hell, to be punched up with Roman javalines and forever haunted by my sad and heart-broken spirit." He consigned to purgatory others in Randolph County, who, he said, had conspired to bring about his ruin and disgrace.

He left a scrap of paper near him when he died, on which was written:

April 29, 1900—I swear before God that this is the first cocaine I have used since November 22, 1899, and only a small amount of morphine—two drachms of morphine a month. Long ago, two years, I used one ounce every one or two days.

Dr L. E. WYCHOFF.

In his hip was found a hypodermic needle, with evidences that it had been used a great deal. He seemed broken-hearted because his wife refused to return and live with him.

SOME MORE AUCTION TALK.

Uncle Abraham while the crowd was in waiting for the auctioneer to take the block, continued his talk, as follows:

What does it matter tho as yet you have found no treasure, nor has any rich relation left you a legacy; be not out of heart, for diligence is the mother of good luck, and God gives all things to industry.

Then plough deep while sluggards sleep,
And you shall have corn to sell and keep.

Work while it is called to-day, for you know not how much you may be hindered to-morrow;which makes Poor Richard say, One to-day is worth two to-morrows; and, further, Have you somewhat to do to-morrow? Do it to-day.

If you were a servant would you not be ashamed that a good master should catch you idle. Are you then your own master? Be ashamed to catch yourself idle, as Poor Dick says. When there is no much to be done for yourself, your family, be up by peep of day! Let not the Sun look down and say, "Inglorious here he lies." Handle your tools without mittens! Remember that 'the cat in gloves catches no mice.'

'Tis true there is much work to be done, and perhaps you are weak handed; but stick to it steadily and you will see great effects; for constant dropping wears away stones, and by diligence and patience the mouse eats in two the cable; 'little strokes fell great oaks.'

Methinks I hear some of you say, 'Must a man afford himself no leisure?' I will tell thee, my friend, what Poor Richard says: Employ thy time well if thou meanest to gain leisure; and since thou art not sure of a minute, throw not away an hour. Leisure is time for doing something useful; this leisure the diligent man will obtain, but the lazy man never; so that as Poor Richard says, A life of leisure and a life of laziness are two things. Do you imagine that sloth will afford you more comfort than labor? No! For as Poor Richard says, Trouble springs from idleness and grievous toil from needless ease. Many without labor would live by their wits, but they will break for want of capital,—not having wits enough; whereas industry gives comfort and plenty and respect. Fly pleasures and they'll follow you. The diligent spinner has a large shift; and—

Now I have a sheep and a cow
Everybody bids me good morrow,

All which is well said by Poor Richard. But with our industry we must, likewise be steady, settled, and careful, oversee our own affairs with our own eyes, and not trust too much to others; for as Poor Richard says:

I never saw an oft removed tree
That throve so well as that that settled be.

And again, Three removes are as bad as a fire; and again, Keep thy shop and thy shop will keep thee; and again, If you would have your business done, go; if not send; and again:

He that by the plow would thrive
Himself must either hold or drive.

And again, The eye of the master, will do more work than both his hands; and again, Want of care does us more damage than want of knowledge; and again, Not to oversee workmen is to leave them your purse open.

An Indignant Poem on the Queen's Irish Soldiers.

J. A. Hobson agrees with Professor Goldwin Smith in his new work on "The War in South Africa." Dr Smith has declared:

None of my English friends and correspondents has ever doubted what would be the issue of a war in which the entire forces of the British empire were opposed to those of a population not half as large as the population of Liverpool. The Boers have put into the field decrepitude and childhood. They have no reserve. We shall win; and, having won, we shall too, probably, reap in the judgment of posterity a measure of the same glory which we reaped by the burning of Joan of Arc. We shall be fortunate if we escape the guilt of opening an era of unscrupulous rapacity and violence which might throw back for a century the progress of moral civilization.

The part of the shamrock decorated soldiers in this war against the Boers has inspired Ernest Crosby to exclaim in the current number of the Conservator:

Sword of the Irish, tempered by the sun
Of torrid Hindostan and by the snows
Of chill Quebec, who are the various foes,
Or north or south or east or west; undone
By your stern prowess? Do proud tyrants run
Before your bloody blade, or is it those Whom Britain longs to crush that you oppose,
Winning new lands of slaves as yours was won?
O ye, who never yet have fought so well
For your own freedom as ye do to fix
Your chains on fellow nations; hear your knell
In the deep-mutored blasphemies that mix
With the last gasp of slaughtered Boers who call Vengeance from hell on thralls who would enthrall.

One Irishman Rejoiced in Queen's Visit.

Last week a friend of mine was sitting in Phœnix Park, when up peared to him a ragged old chap, most gloriously intoxicated. God save the Queen, Sor!' said he to my friend. 'Certainly,' was the reply. 'God save Queen Victoria!' reiterated the old fellow. By all means. Send her victorious, happy, and glorious!' 'That's right, Sor! I wish she came to Dublin every year, every month, every day, Sor! Think of what she's done for the country; think of all the good she does to people. Why, look at me; here am I, as drunk as hell, and never paid a penny for it!'—London Daily News.

TRULY RURAL.

A truly rural lover, with a truly rural cot,
Wooed a truly rural maiden all the May;
Said the truly rural lover, "Truly rural is our lot,—
Let us marry in a truly rural way!"

So a truly rural wedding and a truly rural feast
Made two true truly rurals truly one;
For naught not truly rural truly cared they in the least,—
Oh, truer truly rurals there are none!—Life.

A Woman's Perfect Gift.

"One crown of glory the elderly woman may proudly wear, and it is a distinction she could never have had in girlhood or early matronhood—she may be a grandmother," writes Margaret E. Sangster in The Ladies Home Journal. "I can think of nothing so perfectly satisfying and so thrilling with a subtle ecstasy as the cooing in one's arms and looking into the face of the child of one's son or daughter. It is the second generation and you have lived to see it. That fact in itself is delightful. You compare the baby's face with those of your own children and trace the quaintest points of resemblance, and, oddly enough, you see what nobody else can see—flitting likenesses now and then to the child's remoter ancestors, to some great grandfather or grandmother long vanished from the earth. Your granddaughter and you will be chums, your grandson and you will be comrades, and good, and only good, will be the outcome of the beautiful association for all concerned. One of the most perfect gifts which come into the life of a woman is the joy which comes to her over the cradle of the grand child. It is without a single flaw."

Judge Biggle not only knows a lot about horses, but what is more important, he knows how to impart his information in a way that will be understood. One does not have to wade through a mass of undigested, unimportant matter. The Biggle Books are models of clearness and conciseness. The price is 50 cents, by mail; address the publishers, Wilmer Atkinson Co., Philadelphia.

Twenty dollars a month on a farm is very much better than $35 a month in a city store. As a general thing at the end of nine months the former has $150 in cash, three pairs of overalls, and a straw hat, while the latter has two or three suits of clothes, a pair of golf socks, and is $17 in the hole. Yet there are seventy-five applicants for the latter job to one for the former.—Record.

A very Remarkable Remedy.

It is with a good deal of pleasure and satisfaction that I recommend Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, says Druggist A. W. Sawtelle, of Hartford, Conn. "A lady customer, seeing the remedy exposed for sale on my show case said to me: 'I really believe that medicine saved my life the past summer while at the shore,' and she became so enthusiastic over its merits that I at once made up my mind to recommend it in the future. Recently a gentleman came into my store so overcome with colic pains that he sank at once to the floor. I gave him a dose of this remedy which helped him. I repeated the dose and in fifteen minutes he left my store smilingly informing me that he felt as well as ever.

He Knows.

Hon John S. Wise, Democratic Congressman from Virginia, addressed the following letter to the editor of the New York Times:

"You announce that the Democrats of Virginia are lukewarm or long estranged, are altogether. The Republican party in Virginia has never been so shorn by faction or so utterly leaderless as it is to-day, as I have known it. It contains 40,000 votes of which in 1896, and the only convention held at Norfolk not marked by contests, recriminations, and personal controversies, is that the reasonable element of Republicanism has despaired of doing anything and left the empty shell of organization to a gang of scalawag office-holders and office-seekers, who are running the thing for profit and neither hope nor care for a victory. The silence with which you take hope is the silence of death."

The publishers, Wilmer Atkinson Co., tell us Biggle Cow Book is most elaborately illustrated in wood cuts, some in half tone and in colors, and the type, press work and binding are simply superb. The principal breeds are given, each colors true to life by a skilled artist. No expense has been spared on these illustrations and they most certainly gratify the eye. There are twenty-six chapters covering the whole ground of dairying. Those on Ailments of Cattle are worth the whole price of the book to any one who owns a small dairy. The whole book is one we will find the reader will find the most helpful. The economy of keeping cows is to-date and well considered throughout. It is an up-to-date and should form part of the library of every progressive dairyman and farmer in the United States. It contains 144 pages of matter, and 120 beautiful illustrations. It is handsomely bound. The price, $1.50 cents, is low. Address the publishers, Wilmer Atkinson Co., Philadelphia.

THE PRIMARY ELECTION.

The primary election passed off quietly last Saturday. A large vote was polled and every candidate received support, which tho not sufficient to elect in half the cases, must have broken the fall as nothing else could have done. The contestants without exception were good men, and the news of the result was awaited with the feeling on the part of the average citizen that while it would proclaim one friend elected it must necessarily announce the defeat of another for whom he had an equal regard.

The primary method of selecting nominees is the most satisfactory in the nomination of county officials, but that having been done it has a tendency to take the sap out of the party, as far as the state or national politics is concerned. The contest is heated and the near friends of some defeated candidate hear the news with feelings of disappointment, and are not such enthusiastic partizans the rest of the campaign. There was little of that this election, and we think we can safely say that the contest just ended carried with it the minimum of danger to the strength of the party in this county.

From two to three hundred Republicans joined with the Democrats in selecting county nominees. These were men of a liberal turn of mind who recognized the fact that a Democratic nomination is virtually an election in this county.

A WORD A DAY PAYS.

"There is only one chance to save your life and that is through an operation" were the startling words heard by Mrs. E. E. Hood of Lincoln Ridge, Ky., but her doctor after he had vainly tried to cure her of a frightful case of stomach trouble and pitiful paralysis, said stronger and more powerful and the operation was given up. Then she began to use Electric Bitters which finally cured her. It is a wonderful Stomach, Liver and Kidney remedy. Cures dyspepsia, loss of appetite, try it. Only 50c. Guaranteed.

Sold by Harper & Sydnor Marlinton, R. F. Barlow, Mill Point, T. L. Hannah & Co., Hillsboro, & F. Moore, Valley Springs. 2 tf.

IN RECONSTRUCTION DAYS.

There is a tale knocking about this county about two legislators who went to Wheeling, the State Capitol, to attend a session of the legislature in the days of the reconstruction. One of them thought the other too plain to represent his county and he undertook to coach him, so that he would make a better appearance in society

His friend said he would do as he pleased, and that he had as much sense as any of them.

"No you havn't," said the monitor. "You know you havn't. I'll bet you five dollars you can't say the Lord's Prayer without looking at the Book."

The bet was accepted, and the legislator to prove it, rattled off the verse: "Now I lay me down to sleep," etc.

His teacher heard him through and said resignedly: "Take the money. I didn't think you knowed it."

MT. TABOR.

Fine weather after a few cold days and heavy freezes which injured the wheat and fruit crops considerably.

Most of the farmers have finished planting corn.

Mrs J. D. Dilley is on the sick *list, but we learn she is improv*ing.

A. C. Moore, who has been ill for some time, is able to go about again.

Ed Flendrick is going to England, his native country, to see his friends and relatives, whom he has not seen for 35 years.

Clayton Dilley lost a fine cow some days ago.

Miss Stella Weiford are going to Hillsboro soon to take music lessons.

The meeting at Tabor last Sunday was largely attended considering the bad day.

John Andrew Cleek purchased a nice bunch of sheep from G. S. Weiford last week.

Ira Buzzard of Dunmore was in the West Virginia Hills Sunday, looking after his interests.

Keep your eye on the gobbler; the indicator is in the pen.

S. H. Wanless and H. T. Gum are in the poultry business. H. T. Gum furnishes the turkeys and Mr Wanless is to grease them.

H. T. Gum is enlarging his corn crib this year.

J. H. Sampson is putting out a large crop of corn this spring. He is also enlarging his crib.

A. L. Dilley had a concert at Tabor May 5.

Charles Warwick, of Bath county, was in our midst visiting his sister, Mrs Amelia Wanless. He returned home Monday.

LAWLESSNESS.

Occasionally it becomes necessary for the newspaper man to give the county represented by his newspaper a black eye. We think it proper to refer to the increasing amount of petty crimes committed in this county, and it is high time the people of the county were doing something to counteract the spread.

Beside the actual commission of the crime, the fact that a law, which ought to be held sacred, has been broken, calls up a fear that there may be coming a time when the disregard for law and order may be a real menace. It is outrageous that a man should break laws just for the mere bravado of the performance, or that a man who is a hibitual lawbreaker should not be regarded as a man apart. The people of this county will stand shoulder to shoulder if necessary to enforce the laws, but just at present there is an era of lawlessness which we must consider seriously.

The root of most of it is the illegal sale of whiskey. There is something debasing in the conducting of the "speak-easy," both for the seller and the buyer. Many persons have been aroused to the condition of the illegal traffic here, but so far we have lacked men who are willing to take the iniative necessary to enable the officers to close the places. We have been willing to employ the cumberous means of indicting a few semi-annually by the grand jury. What we want is a man who will make a complaint, have the liquor dealer arrested and make him give bond before a justice, conditioned on his not selling whiskey. There is al*so another means which could be* employed, that of injunction against people who maintain such nuisances in a neighborhood. If we would catch several of the most notorious of the speak-easy people in this way, there would be such a blight on the whiskey trade that a wayfarer could not get poisoned the whole length and breadth of the land.

We consider this responsible for most of the rowdyism. Another evil is the carrying of concealed weapons. When you take a revolver away from a hasty youth it is like clipping the claws of a tiger. He is rendered harmless. We must frown down the fad of carrying a pistol. The condition of affairs is such that every endeavor to enforce a law must be fostered and encouraged by every good citi*zen. Pocahontas must not let her* enviable repution for law and order slip from her at the very time when she needs it most

MRS POLLY ERVINE.

*Died, at her home near Arbo*vale, May 12, 1900, Mrs Polly Ervine, aged about 82 years. Her ailment was la grippe in virulent form.

Mrs Ervine was the daughter of Benjamin F. Ervine, who died during the war in the Confederate service, and was thus left in charge of little children whom she faithfully cared for. She was the daughter of Robert Kerr, and for sixty years has been a communicant in the pale of the Presbyterian church and was held in high esteem by everyone as a genuinely pius person, and one who had been rightly exercised by many sorrows and sadly afflictive events.

Doubtless she has been made glad according to the days she has been afflicted and the years where*in she has seen evil. Very merci*fully was she spared to recover strength before she went hence to be no longer with us, her earthly kindred and friends.

Now in heaven we hope to meet her
When the day of life is fled,
And then with joy to greet her,
Where no farewell tear is shed.

Sheep shearing is the order of the day. Farmers all done planting corn.

James Gibson, Jr., has contracted to do a large job of logging on Hairy Fork. We hope he will make plenty of money. A very large mill will be moved in to do the sawing.

William Gibson is hauling a nice quality of lumber, sawed at his lower farm.

Pat Gay continues to log and sell lumber, but we notice his lumber does not match very well when he get his little mule. We wish him continuous success.

Burton Hoover is working in the shop at Hairy Fork. He is a promising young man and is doing a nice business. Tom.

ELK ITEMS.

Sheep shearing is the order of the day. Farmers all done planting corn.

James Gibson, Jr., has contracted to do a large job of logging on Slaty Fork. We hope he will make plenty of money. A very large mill will be moved in to do the sawing.

William Gibson is hauling a nice quantity of lumber, several of his brace logs.

Paul Gay continues to log and sell lumber, but we notice his logs have been cut much easier since he got the little mule. We were told he was confederate money.

Burton Hunter is working in the shop at Slaty Fork. He is promoting young men and is doing a nice business.

Go to the Parlor Millinery for the pulley belt: the latest thing in belts.

Born to Mr and Mrs F. A. Chapman, of Academy, Saturday, May 12th, 1900, a boy.

Just received: A lot of fresh clean cook stoves at Slaven's, the reliable stove dealer.

The Parlor Millinery Co. have just received a fresh stock of summer goods goods; hats from 12½c up to $10.

Cream Freezers: the only freezer with 3 motions at once; it will freeze cream in 5 minutes; also water coolers, at Slaven's tin shop.

The Parlor Millinery Co. will have by the first of next week a first class dressmaker of ten years practical experience, from Armstrong Cater & Co., Baltimore Md.

Hon J. H. Holt of Huntington is an aspirant for the Democratic nomination for Governor. He is a lawyer and is conceded to be one of the most eloquent orators in the State.

Rev G. W. Bogle, the pastor of the Methodist church, preached his first sermon at this place last Sunday to a large congregation. The church has secured an able man. Mr Bogle is a Virginian, a graduate of Emory and Henry College.

Dr L. J. Marshall will locate at Marlinton for the practice of his profession. He will be here Saturday, and build an office near the postoffice. He is a son of the late Captain J. W. Marshall and has thoroughly prepared himself by a four years course at the Baltimore Medical College. He will be welcomed to this town where he has a host of friends.

Rev W. M. White of Lewisburg will preach at Marlinton next Sunday morning at 11 o'clock, and declare the pastorate vacant, according to the rules of the Presbyterian church, in view of the resignation of the late pastor, Rev W. T. Price. A full attendance of the membership is desirable.

Forest fires in Webster county have been very destructive. The plants owned by T. A. Blankenship and the Stout Lumber Company on Gauley two miles north of Camden were burned May 7th. Blankenship lost about a million feet cut and uncut. Stout & Co. a million feet of stock along with the mills. The entire loss of the two firms over $30,000.

A number of timber men are engaged in making an estimate of the amount of timber which will be in reach of the new railroad in this county. One way of arriving at an estimate is to take the amount of white pine floated out by the St. Lawrence Boom and Manufacturing Company, which exceeds 100,000,000 feet. They have not taken one-tenth of the timber in the county. Every one here knows that. This leaves out of the calculation that there is a billion and a half of timber now ready for the axe in this county.

John Moore, a colored North Carolina laborer in the employ of John L. Fitts, at Camp 2, had his thigh broken last Sunday. He and a comrade had decided to move their personal effects from the tent at camp to a shanty near the head mills of an adjoining camp. They removed the contents of a trunk and divided it to lighten each. On the return the mule ran away and upset it. The car went over the track, catching Moore under it and crushing and breaking the bone which fractured the thigh. Dr Price set the fractured thigh the whole length in plaster of paris. He is feeling to be laid up for six weeks or so. Fortunately for him no worse injury was suffered. Moore's home is in one of the best hands of the county.

ALLAN COULTER MURDERED.

Waylaid and Shot in the Back—Grandson Under Arrest.

Allan Coulter, a well known citizen of the county, was shot by some one who had lain in wait for that purpose at his barn on his farm on Laurel Run, in the Levels District opposite the mouth of Locust Creek, Tuesday the 8th inst.

The deceased had been planting corn and had come to the barn, about three-quarters of a mile below his house, to put his horse up. It would seem from appearances that Coulter had put his horse in a stall and passed through a shed into the cutting room, fed his horse, and had probably reached up for his coat which was hanging on a nail when he was shot throught the heart from behind with a 38 repeater. It is thought the shooting was done about noon. The body was discovered at dusk.

An examination of the locality showed that the woods came down within thirty yards of the barn. Traces of where a man stood behind a tree were found and from there a trail as tho he had hurried down to a fence corner near the barn. This corner had been fitted up with bark to make it a sort of a "blind."

The deceased was about sixty years of age. He was well known here some years ago as a party to a long divorce proceedings in which the court finally entered a decree giving the parties six months to return to each other in order to ascertain some of the property rights in the case. There was a decree of divorce granted finally. Afterwards he married a Mrs Rider, who survives him. He was not a man who was generally liked.

Last Saturday William Coulter, his brother, had a warrant issued for Ed Coulter, a grandson of the murdered man. Young Coulter is about of age. The case against him is wholly circumstantial and is based on his refusal to give an account of his whereabouts on the day of the tragedy. He was brought to jail Saturday night.

The District Lines.

A very present cause of trouble in Edray district is the impending change in the lines of the Edray and Huntersville districts. One of the fairest and most intelligent gentlemen of the county said to us the other day: "Just say in your paper that if the county court changes the line, they should do it so that it will stand no matter how the court is made up. Otherwise it will become another issue to divide the people of the county." We think there is something in this, and everyone knows we have enough sectional bitterness to last us a generation.

As the question of railroad taxes is the only reason apparent for a change, we took the railroad maps and district lines recorded in the clerk's office and found that when the Greenbrier Railway is completed Pocahontas will have 61½ miles. Of this mileage, the Levels will have 14, Huntersville 9¼, Edray 12½, and Green Bank 25¾ miles. When the Elkins road is completed Green Bank district will have nearly as much more. Therefore the Edray people are ready to suggest that Huntersville has the wrong pig by the ear, and that Green Bank could give Huntersville three miles of railroad and never miss it and make it equal to Edray.

Letter from Rev M. M. McNeil.

Smithville, W. Va. /
May 4, 1900. /

Enclosed I send you one dollar to renew my subscription to the Times. On the 14th of last December my house was burned down and nearly everything in it. I was destitute, but I can not do without the Times. Among the highly-prized things I lost was a complete file of the Times containing the biographical sketches of the early settlers of Pocahontas County.

Respectfully,
M. McNEILL.

A charter has been issued to the Cherry Valley Railroad Company, which proposes to build a railroad from Rockwood, in Nicholas county, by the most practicable route, to Locust, in Pocahontas county. The principal office is to be at Richwood. The capital stock is $50,000, held by J. W. Oakwood, C. D. Simpson, Henry Berlin, F. L. Park and C. F. Davidson, of Lackawanna.

The Fairmont pollution trouble has been compromised between the city of Cumberland and the West Virginia Paper Co. The mills grumble still go into use August. What effect this will have on the extension of operations at Covington does not appear as yet.

NOTICE TO STOCKHOLDERS.

The undersigned will receive bids until May 20, 1900, for the erection of a boat building 16 x 40 feet three stories high. For further particulars apply to the undersigned at the Bank of Marlinton.

GLADE HILL.

Marion Gum is about done sawing at Taylor's.

Several heavy frosts in this section last week, which killed about all the fruit.

W. T. Slavin, of Mill Point, was around last week selling tombstones. He is meeting with good success in this vicinity.

Rev Callison delivered a very entertaining sermon at New Hope church, Monday night.

And still they move. Jam Gum has moved to the Butterbaugh house; Henry Briscoe to Martin C. Dilley's; General Grant to near Huntersville; Sandy Patterson to the Harvey Nottingham place; Zack Nottingham to James Carr's; and Noah Hoover moves every time the moon changes.

The sick are all improving.

Wash Hoover is likely to be our next President.

Marvin Wenger passed here one day last week, enroute for Arbovale.

Corn planting is the order of the day.

Some of the farmers have had a great deal of damage done by forest fires in the past few weeks. Some sneak is running loose who ought to be hard at work in Moundsville.

Miss Maud Mason's school at Michel's Peak has closed, with the good wishes of all in the teacher's behalf.

Miss Bessie Patterson, who has been in Virginia for some time, is at home.

Rev Pullin delivered a sermon at New Hope Church last Sunday at 3 p. m. Our pastor life will be in danger if some one does not soon mend the steps of New Hope.

Several of the boys were out on their bicyles last Sunday.

Quarterly meeting at New Hope the first Saturday and Sunday in June. Let every one attend.

C. W. Dilley's eyes are improving, but he still goes to Frost.

William Arbogast is hauling supplies for O'Connel.

SKY LARK.

MT. ZION.

The weather continues fine with but little rain.

The singing at Mt Zion Sunday conducted by Prof J. A. Reed was largely attended, and very interesting.

J. W. McCarty is erecting a dwelling house.

William and Hevener Dilley are doing a rushing business.

It all signs don't fail there will be a double wedding in the Hills soon.

G. S. Weiford is doing a hustling business selling harvesting machinery.

I. B. Shrader is in from the Horton lumber camps for a short stay.

J. H. Shrader anticipates going to Hillsboro soon.

The bridges between Dunmore and Green Bank are in a dangerous condition. The overseers should look after this.

Chalmer says every thing was lovely when the clouds rolled by.

RIDGEWAY BILL.

Memorial of Captain J. W. Marshall.

We have been complimented with a copy of the memorial brochure prepared in memory of the late Captain J. W. Marshall of Mingo, W. Va., by his daughter, Mrs S. W. Holt.

The contents consist of the memorial sermon by Rev W. T. Price, personal reminiscences by his brother H. B. Marshall, a tribute in verse by Mrs Margaret E. Sangster, an extended appreciative sketch by Dr Plumer Bryan of Chicago; a tribute by his pastor, W. E. Hudson; letters of condolence from Rev J. B. Bittenger, of Washington County, Va.; Charles G. B. Bruce, North Devon, England; A. H. Winchester and Mrs Winchester Buckhannon, W. Va.; G. W. Peterkin, Bishop of West Virginia; Judge R. C. Davis, of Louisville, Ky., and Rev F. J. Brooke, Alexandria, Va. There are also a memorial of his wife, Mrs Georgiana Marshall, prepared by a friend, and the obituary written by her pastor, Rev J. B. Bittenger.

STOCKHOLDERS MEETING.

Notice is hereby given that a general meeting of the stockholders of the Cherry Valley Railroad Company, a Corporation created under the laws of the State of West Virginia, will be held at the office of Campbell, Holt and Campbell, in the City of Huntington, County of Cabell, and State of West Virginia, on the 25th day of June, 1900, for the purpose of electing a Board of Directors, adopting by-laws, and transacting any other business which may be legal to the said stockholders in general meeting.

It blew, it snew, and then, by jing, it friz!

Several of the boys attended the hop down on the mountain last week, and report a good time generally and ramps in full blast.

Sebert Kelley has a new boarder—he says he has come to stay.

Miss Alice McLaughlin is teaching a first class school at this place.

A good deal of moving is being done around here. Charles Slaven moved to Durbin and Adam Arbogast moved into the house vacated by him.

H. C. Dickinson's new goods came on last week. Cross-eyed darning needles a specialty.

A great deal of sickness in this part of the county and Drs Lambert and Judy are kept busy.

A large drove of cattle came in last week for O'Connel's lumber camp.

William Gragg's log rolling was largely attended.

Squire Gillespie says he is going to stay with us this summer.

Rev McNeil preached a splendid sermon at Traveller's Repose to a large crowd, last Sunday.

Joe Buscard and his mule passed through town last week.

Rev Benjamin Collins, one of our Dunkard brethren, started on a trip to Pennsylvania last week. He got as far as Beverly, where he was taken suddenly ill and had to abandon his trip. X. Y. Z.

EDRAY.

Harlow Waugh has returned from Baltimore.

Miss J. Ann Smith is at home again, after an extended visit to her sister, Mrs Samuel Moore on Back Allegheny.

Rev M. W. Atkinson made a flying trip to Mill Point last week.

We noticed a mistake in our last week's items. Instead of Miss Lova Gay, it is Miss Lora Gray who is taking music lessons at Marlinton.

Mrs Samuel Moore spent Sunday with her mother, Mrs Betty Sharp.

A gay party of young people spent Sunday evening at A. J. Smith's, and had some music and a good time. We all enjoy going to Mr Smith's, as he is a jolly fellow and treats the young people in a way that pleases them.

Edward Rutledge was in this part Sunday to see his girl.

OLIVET.

PERSONAL—I am shocked to think that my lady friend from Edray should express herself in such a way about the "young man from Marlinton," (in the Edray news of last week) as I thought a great deal of her—as I do of all the good Edray people. I guess when her young man gets able to come around again, she wont need care how highly I value myself.

Good-bye. F.

Beware of a Cough.

A cough is not a disease, but a symptom. Consumption and bronchitis, which are the most dangerous and fatal diseases, have for their first indication a persistent cough, and if properly treated as soon as this cough appears are easily cured. Chamberlain's cough remedy has proven wonderfully successful, and gained its wide reputation and extensive sale by its success in curing diseases which cause coughing. "DANGER IN THE EARTH AND AIR; DANGER EVERYWHERE."

A Wise and Venerable Doctor Talks about Advanced Science.

In a leading hotel, in a great city, a famous and aged physician was converse... Listening to his wise and sententious discourse, were a group of well and most, evidently lawyers, business men and commercial travelers.

"My friends," he said, in "that medical science is certain yet to show that all dis... is without exception are caused by invisible germs which are living organ... Here is the germ of that terrible disease diphtheria. Here is the bacillus typhoid fever; and here is the still more dreadful bacillus of tu berele which ... that most destructive of all diseases, consumption. This of that very ... mon and supposed incurable disease, catarrh."

"I wish, Doctor," said the traveling man, "that you would tell us about ... I have had it for years, and I am thoroughly discouraged."

The Doctor answered: "Catarrh, like diphtheria, consumption, typhoid ... and a host of other diseases, is the result of a microbe invading the blood ... attacking specially the mucous membrane. This foul and most disgusting ... is especially prevalent in the United States and it is rare to meet one ... be not, or has not been troubled more or less with it. How often is he or ... obliged to remain at home from pleasant entertainments, deprive themselves ... intellectual treats, from fear of the disagreeable odor arising from ca... affections. In its worst phase, the patient becomes loathsome both to ... self and his friends.

"I believe," continued this great physician, "that the true way to heal ca... is to medicate the blood. This can be done only by powerful alteratives ... such as blood purifiers."

Betsy A. Margil, of Manistee, Manistee Co., Mich., writes:

Dear Sirs:—For ten years I was a sufferer from general debility and chronic ... sore. My face was pale as death. I was weak and short of breath. I could ... dly walk. I was so dizzy and had a ringing in my head all the time. My ... ds and feet were always cold. My appetite was very poor. On getting up ... the morning, my head swam so I was often obliged to lie down again. I had ... ful pains in the small of my back. I had a continual feeling of tiredness. ... muscular power was almost entirely gone, and I couldn't go half a dozen ... s without stopping to rest, and often that much exercise caused me to have ... ain in my side. It seemed as though the blood had left my veins. The doc... said my blood had all turned to water. I had given up all hope of ever get... well. I tried the best physicians in the state, but failed to get any relief. ... husband got me a bottle of Johnston's Sarsaparilla. I took it, and then I ... ght another. When those had been used, I was somewhat improved in ... alth. I continued its use, and felt I was growing stronger; my sleep was re... shing, and it seemed as if I could feel new blood moving through my veins. I ... on taking it, and now consider myself a well and rugged woman. I work ... the time, and am happy. I am positive that the Sarsaparilla saved my life. ... sick headaches I have had since childhood, have disappeared, and my ca... rh has almost entirely left me. I cannot be too thankful for what Johnston's ... rsaparilla has done for me. I recommend all women who have sick head... he to use your Sarsaparilla.

THE "CONFEDERATE VETERAN."

Low Club Rates Given With the Pocahontas Times.

The growth of the Confederate Veteran, published by S. A. Cunningham at Nashville, Tenn., is remarkable. Its circulation of eighty-four issues, monthly, aggregated to January, 1900, 1,195,452 copies. Average for 1893, 7083; 1894, 10,138; 1895, 12,916; 1896, 13 444; 1897, 16,175; 1898, 19,100; 1899, 23,166.

Subscriptions for the Veteran will be received at this office. It and the Times will be sent for one year at the club rate of $1.50. By application to the Pocahontas Times copies of the Veteran will be sent to our veteran friends who are unable to subscribe.

The editor of the Farm Journal asks: 'Why have a mortgage on the farm, poor crops, rheumatism, sour bread, grip, leak in the roof, hole in the pocket, skeleton in the closet, or any other pain or trouble when you can get the Farm Journal for 1900, 1901, 1902, 1903, 1904, nearly five years, by paying all arrearages and a year in advance for the Pocahontas Times?' This you can do if you speak quick. But only a limited number of Farm Journals can be had, so pay up before the last one is gone.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure d afness and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by the inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh which is nothing but an inflamed condition of of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars.

Hall's Family Pills are the best.

The colored work in Biggle Berry Book is an immense aid to berry growers. It shows the leading berries true to size, shape and color. They were first carefully painted by an experienced artist, and then reproduced by lithography at a cost of over one thousand dollars. Aside from the color work there are scores of reproductions made directly from photographs of berries, so that the reader may have an accurate idea of them. The price is 50 cents, by mail; address the publishers, Wilmer Atkinson Co., Philadelphia.

A Sprained Ankle Quickly Cured

"At one time I suffered from a severe sprain of the ankle," says George B. Cary, editor of the Guide, Washington, Ga. "After using several well recommended medicines without success, I tried Chamberlain's Pain Balm, and am pleased to say that relief, and as soon as I began its use and a complete cure speedily followed. This remedy has also been used in my family for frost-bitten feet with the best results. I cheerfully recommend its use to all who may need a first class liniment. Sold by—

COMMISSIONER'S NOTICE.

Marlinton, W. Va., April 24, 1900.

Andrew Edmiston, - - Plaintiff
vs.
Mary A. Scott and others, Defendants

Pursuant to a decree rendered in the above styled cause at the April Term, 1900, of the Circuit Court of Pocahontas County, West Virginia, the undersigned commissioner will proceed at his office in the town of Marlinton on the 19th day of May, 1900, to take, state, and report to the said Court the following matters of account, to wit:

First: An account showing the amount coming to Withoe McClintic from the sale of the lands in this cause, and on what debts the said fund should be applied.

Second: An account showing the interest of all parties interested in the fund arising from the sale of the lands in this cause, and showing the amount coming to each.

Third: An account showing the amount in said fund to Annie M. Edmiston, the widow of George B. Edmiston, and Ella J. Edmiston the widow of Mathew Edmiston, as and for their dower in the interests owned by their husbands in said lands.

Fourth: Any other matter deemed pertinent by the commissioner or required by any party to take out.

At which time and place all parties who desire may attend.

T. S. McNEEL, Commissioner.

VOL. 18, NO. 44 MARLINTON, WEST VIRGINIA, MAY 24, 1900. $1.00 PER YEAR

West Virginia University,

MORGANTOWN, W. VA.

The growth of the University is quite as notable in its equipment, its faculty, and its new departments as in its attendance. For example, look at

The School of Music

established two years ago. It has a faculty of seven instructors, trained under the best teachers in this country and Europe. It occupies a separate building fitted up especially for its needs. Instruction on all stringed instruments, including violin, viola, mandolin, guitar, etc., is free. For voice and piano the fees are very low. A magnificent pipe organ for Commencement Hall is being constructed and it will be for the use of students of the School of Music. If you are interested in the study of music, write for full information.

Other departments of the University are developing with equal rapidity. The Premedical Department, with its four new instructors, deserves special mention. Write for a special pamphlet about it.

The University has a faculty of sixty-five instructors, graduates of the foremost schools in the world.

The Winter Quarter begins January 1, and the Spring Quarter April 1.

A QUAKER OF THE OLDEN TIME.

The Quaker of the olden time!
How calm and firm and true,
Unspotted by its wrong and crime,
He walked the dark earth through.
The lust of power, the love of gain,
The thousand lures of sin
Around him had no power to stain
The purity within.

With that deep insight which detects
All great things in the small,
And knows each man's life affects
The spiritual life of all,
He walked by faith and not by sight,
By love and not by law;
The presence of the wrong or right
He rather felt than saw.

He felt that wrong with wrong partakes,
That nothing stands alone,
That whoso gives the motive, makes
His brother's sin his own.
And pausing not for doubtful choice
Of evils great or small,
He listened to that inward voice
Which called away from all.

—Whittier.

MORE AUCTION TALK.

Uncle Abraham kept on talking, and though he did this talking in 1757, it reads as much to the purpose as if he had been at the last auction cried in Pocahontas, for Uncle Abraham went on to say.

Trusting too much to other's care truly is the ruin of many; for in the affairs of this world men are saved not by faith, but by the want of it. A man's own care is what that profits or saves in worldly matters, for Learning is to the studious, and Riches to the careful, as well as Power to the bold, and Heaven to the virtuous. And further, if you would have a faithful servant and one that you like, serve yourself.

Uncle Abraham advised circumspection and care, even in the smallest matters, because sometimes a little may breed great mischief; adding For want of a nail the shoe was lost; for want of a shoe the horse was lost; and for want of a horse the rider was lost, being overtaken and slain by the enemy, all for want of a little care about a horse shoe nail!

So much for industry, my friends, and attention to ones own business, but to these we must add frugality, if we would make our industry more certainly successful.

A man may, if he knows not how to save as he gets, keep his nose all his life to the grindstone, and die not worth a nickel at last. A fat kitchen makes a lean will, and—

Many estates are spent in the getting,
Since women for tea forsook spinning and knitting,
And men for punch forsook hewing and splitting.

Now if you would be wealthy think of saving as well as of getting. The Indies have not made Spain rich, because her outgoes are greater than her incomes.

Away then with your expensive bottles, and you will not have so much cause to complain of hard times, heavy taxes, and chargeable families, for—

Women and wine, game and deceit,
Make the wealth small and the wants great.

And furthermore, What maintains one vice would bring up two children. You may think perhaps that a little tea, or a little punch or toddy now and then; a diet more costly, clothes a little finer, and a little more entertainment now and then can be no great matter, but remember what Poor Richard says, Many a little makes a muckle. Beware of little expenses. A small leak will sink a great ship, and again: Who dainties love shall beggar prove; and moreover, Fools make feasts and wise men eat their.

Here are you all got together at this vendue of fineries and knick knacks. You call them goods; but if you do not take care they will prove evils to some of you. You expect they will be sold cheap, and perhaps they may for less than cost, but if you have no occasion for them they must be dear to you. Remember what Poor Richard says: Buy what thou hast no need of, and ere long thou shalt sell thy necessaries. And again, At a great pennyworth pause awhile. He means that perhaps the cheapness is apparent only; or the bargain, by straitening thee in thy business, may do thee more harm than good. For in another place he says, Many have been ruined by buying good pennyworths. Again Poor Richard says, 'Tis foolish to lay out money in a purchase for repentance, and yet this folly is practiced every day for lack of proper consideretion.

Wise men learn by others; fools scarcely by their own; but felix quem faciunt aliena periculum cautum, which means "he is lucky who is made cautious by other men's perils." So here is the secret of being lucky.

Then again Uncle Abraham says, Many a one for the sake of finery on the back has gone with a hungry belly and half starved their families. Silks and satins, scarlets and velvets, Poor Richard says, put out the kitchen fires. These are not the necessaries of life; they can be scarcely called the conveniences, and yet because they look pretty how many want to have them. The artificial wants of mankind thus become more numerous than the natural; and as Poor Dick says, For one poor person there are a hundred indigent.

By these and other extravagances the genteel are reduced to poverty and forced to borrow of those whom they formerly despised, but who through industry and frugality have maintained their standing; in which case it appears plainly that a ploughman on his legs is better than a gentleman on his knees, as Poor Richard says.

Fond pride is, sure, a very curse,
Ere fancy you consult, consult your purse.

The Passenger Pigeons.

From the West come reports of the occurrence of small bands of passenger pigeons, and their publication will no doubt call forth those questions concerning the species and its present abundance, which so frequently find a place in these columns.

It is to be hoped that the gunners who may see wild pigeons will not forthwith feel prompted to go out and kill as many of them as they can. The thoughtful sportsman can be depended on to spare this bird, but unhappily many are not thoughtful, and those who are not so are anxious to make sure that the birds they see are really passenger pigeons, or to try the flavor in the pot of these birds, of which they have heard so much, or to have the doubtful glory of having killed the last wild pigeon. The average man has no difficulty in finding excuses for killing.

If for a few years these beautiful birds should be preserved from destruction and should be permitted to increase in peace and quietness, there is a fair prospect that once more the race would become firmly established and that the danger of its extermination would no longer threaten.

Already several species of North American birds have been exterminated, and one of them at least by the gun. Surely it is worth while now for each man to hold his hand as to the pigeon, and as to certain other birds which in many localities are yearly growing fewer in number, and to exert what influence he can to persuade others to let them alone.

The days of the old pigeon roosts, and the days when from sunrise to sunset, and long after, the sky was blotted with clouds of the passing birds or streaked with long lines of their flight have gone—never to return. But if the men and boys who carry guns can be taught to exercise a reasonable self control, we may hope in the future still to see from time to time, and to take pleasure in, little flocks of these birds.

Each State in the Union should pass a law prohibiting the possession of pigeon.—Forest and Stream.

The Negro in Business.

Atlanta University, an institution for the higher education of the Negro, has published a pamphlet presenting the results of recent investigation to ascertain the part taken by freedmen in the business life of the South. The range of inquiry was not like that of a census, but was limited to localities that could be reached promptly by letter. The term "business men" was interpreted to include all men with stocks of goods to sell and such others as had at least $500 each in invested capital. It did not include barbers, except where there was $500 or more invested in a shop. It included blacksmiths and wheelwrights who kept stocks of wagons or other goods on sale.

The report shows that there are about 5,000 Negro business men in the United States. Definite reports, however, were received from only 1,906. Of these 136 are in Alabama, 324 in Georgia, 123 in South Carolina, 131 in Tennessee, 159 in Texas, and 105 in Virginia. Of those engaged in business 432 are listed as grocers, 166 as general merchandise dealers, 162 as master barbers, 30 as green grocers and dairymen, 24 as caterers, 48 as builders and contractors, 47 as dealers in meat, and 40 as merchant tailors. The 162 barbers have $200,000 capital invested. There are 17,480 Negro barbers reported, most of them working for wages or as proprietors of small shops. Of the Negro merchants in the country 598 are covered in this report. They represent a total investment of $1,828,243.

The 1906 business reported have $5,691,137 invested. On these returns it is estimated that the total capital invested by the American Negro in business is $8,748,537. Seventy-nine per cent of the investment is in sums of less than $2500. Only twelve establishments reach the sum of $50,000 or more. Of the 185 educated Negroes in business, thirty started with borrowed capital, and the others with money saved

An interesting feature of this report is the tracing of the different classes of the old slaves into business. It is found that of the 1906 Negroes covered by the report 462 came from the house-servant class, which took up naturally the work of barbers, restaurant keepers, expressmen, butchers, caterers, liverymen, bakers and milliners; 61 from the field-band class, gravitating to the work of market gardeners, green grocers dairymen, florists, and lumber mill owners; 176, from the plantation mechanic class, taking up the work of builders, blacksmiths, brick-makers, jewelers, shoe dealers, machinists, tinners, paper hangers, and painters; 695, from the trading class, that is, from the old slaves who were employed in a way to bring out the bargaining or mercantile instinct. The compiler of the report reasons that "naturally business of all vocation was far removed from slavery; even the antebellum plantation owner was hardly a good business man, and his slaves were at best sharers in a monarchal communism. Therefore, it is contended, for a Negro to go into business means much—hard labor, thrift in saving, ability to learn a new vocation, and the comprehension of social movements.—The Outlook.

The Member's Bear Story.

"Bears," said the member just back from a trip. "Yes, saw one. Wait till I tell you. Bull, the guide, wanted to go and look at a bear trap before we went down the river, and I went along with him. He had his axe and I carried a gun. As we came in sight of the trap there was the bear. 'We've got him!' said Bull, in the words of the Winchester Calendar. I was taking my rifle but Bull said: 'Don't shoot; he's safe.' We walked up close and the bear stood up. Bull aimed a crack at him with the axe and the bear dodged one side and ducked it. He wasn't in the trap at all, and I forgot to shoot. Bull said——Scare wind."—Forest and Stream.

The Great Wall of China.

It would seem from the account of this extraordinary work that there was a time when the Chinese possessed a most remarkable persistence and were masters of what is even now one of the greatest wonders in existence.

This great wall was recently measured by Mr Unthank, an American engineer engaged on a survey for a Chinese railway. His measurement gave the height eighteen feet. Every few hundred yards there is a tower twenty-five feet high. The foundation of the wall is of solid granite. Mr Unthank brought with him a brick from the wall which is supposed to have been made 200 years B. C. In building this immense stone fence to keep out the Tartars, the builders never attempted to avoid mountains or chasms to save labor or expense. For 1,300 miles the wall goes over plains and mountains, and every foot of the foundation is of solid granite, and the rest of the structure solid masonry. In some places the wall is built smooth up against the bank or crosses a precipice where there is a sheer descent of 1,000 feet.

Small streams are arched over; but on the larger streams the walls run to the water's edge and a tower is built on either side. On the top of the wall there are breast works or defenses facing in and out, so that the defender's forces can pass from one tower to another without being exposed to an enemy on either side.

To calculate time of building or cost of this wall is beyond human skill. So far as magnitude of the work is concerned, it surpasses every thing in ancient or modern times of which there is any trace. The Pyramids of Egypt are nothing compared with it. I have heard Chinamen in California tell about it, but scarcely believed their stories.—J. E. Emerson, in The Scientific American.

The Colonel's Romance.

"Colonel," said the romantic girl "tell me how you got that scar upon your left cheek. Oh, I just know it must be a thrilling story. Was it made by a bullet or a saber thrust? I prefer a saber thrust. It seems so much more like the old knighthood of old. You can't see a bullet coming, and there is no way to escape or combat it. But when your enemy rushes at you with his uplifted saber there is the possibility of parrying his blow and cutting him down. That seems much more manly, even if the victor in the fray does receive a wound or two, than to just be laid low or to lay the enemy low by a bullet that cannot be seen. There is no bravery in shooting a man, but there is something knightly in meeting another face to face with a sword. Your scar looks like one rendered by a gleaming blade, and I know your enemy must at least have been rendered hors de combat. Tell me all about it, Colonel—when it happened, and how. I am so interested in war stories!"

"Yes," he replied. "I agree with you fully about the sword and saber business. There isn't much bravery in shooting a fellow, and there is something knightly about standing up and thrusting and parrying with a blade. But I got this wound while acting as an innocent bystander at a Chicago strike riot. It was a brick.—Chicago Times-Herald.

A very Remarkable Remedy.

It is with a good deal of pleasure and confidence that I recommend Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, says Druggist A. W. Scoville, of Hartford, Conn. "A lady customer, seeing the remedy exposed for sale on my show case said to me: 'I really believe that medicine saved my life the past summer while at the shore, and without an enthusiastic over its merits that I at once made up my mind to recommend it in the future. Recently a gentleman came into my store in connection with other goods, but much of mine in this line. I gave him some of this remedy which helped him. I repeated the case and in fifteen minutes he left my store seemingly informing me that he felt as well as ever.

OLD CONFEDERATE.

A Woman's Awful Peril.

"There is only one chance to save your life and that is through an operation" were the startling words heard by Mrs I. B. Hunt of Lime Ridge, Wis., from her doctor after he had vainly tried to cure her of a frightful case of stomach trouble and yellow jaundice. Gaul stones had already formed and she constantly grew worse. Then she began to use Electric Bitters which wholly cured her. It is a wonderful Stomach, Liver and Kidney remedy. Cures dispepsia, loss of appetite. Try it. Only 50c. Guaranteed.

Biggle Poultry Book is the most comprehensive and helpful poultry book ever gotten out. In addition to the vast amount of valuable information covering seventeen chapters, there are sixteen beautifully colored plates, showing true to color and shape, twenty-three varieties of poultry. Chickens, ducks, turkeys and geese are all shown in their proper plumage, and with comb, beak and shanks as true to nature as it is possible to produce. Also forty-two handsome engravings in half-tone, and sixty-one other helpful illustrations of houses, nests, drinking vessels, etc. The price is 50 cents by mail; address the publishers, Wilmer Atkinson Co., Philadelphia.

Beware of a Cough.

A cough is not a disease, but a symptom. Consumption and bronchitis, which are the most dangerous and fatal diseases, have for their first indication a persistent cough, and if properly treated as soon as this cough appears are easily cured. Chamberlain's cough remedy has proven wonderfully successful, and gained its wide reputation and extensive sale by the success in curing diseases which cause coughing if it is not benefited it will not cost you a cent. Missouri's Grand Old Man.

Mr Vest gloriously said: "I do not belong to this modern school which is teaching the young men of the United States that our country has outgrown the Constitution, and that 'the young giant can no longer be amused by the nursery songs of his childhood.' I believe that the men who are teaching this doctrine are worse enemies to the Republic that its armed foes." This is the doctrine for all patriots to teach at all times. The Constitution is an embodiment of those elementary principles which are absolutely necessary for men to observe and respect if they would hope to live together in a society *where all stand upon an equal foot*ing and every man has an opportunity to better himself according to the powers and abilities which nature has given him, and the blackest hearted traitor which our country can know is the man who would attempt to corrupt the public mind and morals by persuading men to believe that the Constitution is the work of old fogies, unsuited to the new order of things. The Constitution is the embodiment of the theory that every man shall be treated with perfect impartiality and justice, and there can never be any order of things, old or new, when that theory is snarled to the actual condition of affairs.—Richmond Dispatch.

We always read the Times with great interest. We think it real good, especially "A Leaf from my Note book." We would be glad to know whose notebook it is from.

The health of the dear people of Augusta is some better, but death has been in our midst. There were five deaths near us last week.

Wm. F. Kiracofe died at his home near Sangersville April 23. He was known to the people of Pocahontas as a pump maker. He was much respected by all who knew him there, as well as in Augusta.

We were sorry to read of the deaths of Mrs I. B Moore. William Buzzard and Rev G. P. Bannah. While we mourn their loss, we hope the Realms of Eternal Day are blessed with three more sainted spirits.

The Presbytery which met at Mt Horeb, below New Hope, was quite a success.

Mrs J. N. Vandeventor wife of the Presbyterian minister at the Old Stone Church, at Ft. Defiance, who has been quite ill all winter, is improving slowly.

Rev. R. M. Martin, M. E. minister at New Hope, has entered upon his second year in delicate health.

Clark Gum, the blacksmith at Frost, may continue to strike while the iron is hot with no fear of competition.

Corn planting over and coming up, but it is being cut down before it is ripe by cut worms.

The frost last week did not kill the fruit.

The sick in our community say they are tired of the word grippe, and much more tired of the disease.

Col Turk seems to be taking great interest in the prosperity of old Pocahontas. We enjoy his pieces written for the Spectator. He has many friends here, where his boyhood days were spent.

May has been extremely warm and very dry. People are longing for a nice rain.

Persons seeking health are invited to visit Salem Springs in Agusta County. The large hotel will be occupied and ready for boarders this season.

LITTLE ME.

DIED.

Rev M. H. Bittenger, a widely known minister, died at his home, Centreville, Monroe County, May 12, aged about seventy-three years. He has been in the ministry about forty-five years, and has spent nearly all of his ministerial life in West Monroe. He was held in highest esteem for his piety, culture and fine pulpit abilities. He collected the largest private library in West Virginia, so far as known, and made good use of the same. His decease was the result of paralysis that struck him more than a year since.

Capt. R. E. L. McNeer, of Monroe County, died suddenly, May 12, at the Red Sulphur. He had been a soldier in the Cuban Insurgent Army three years, and was on General Maceo's staff at the time the General was slain in an ambuscade. He was captured by the Spaniards and put in prison at Mantanzas, but, escaping therefrom, joined the 7th Ohio Volunteers and served until mustered out as Regimental Sergeant Major.

Va., on the 6th day of June, 1900, to take, state, and report to the Court the following matters of account, to wit:

First—A settlement of the administration accounts of R. W. Hill, Administrator of Wm. H. Cleek, deceased.

Second—A statement of the just and subsisting debts and liens against the estate of the said William H. Cleek, deceased, with their date, dignities, and priorities.

Third—A statement of the lands of which the said Wm H. Cleek died seized, and which may be subjected to the payment of his debts, with the location of the same.

Fourth—Any other matter is to be stated by the commissioner, deemed pertinent by himself or required by any party in interest to be so stated.

At which time and place all parties who desire may attend.

T. S. McNEEL,
Commissioner.

NOTICE TO CREDITORS

To the creditors of Wm. H. Cleek, deceased:

In pursuance of a decree of the Circuit Court of the County of Pocahontas made in a cause therein pending to subject the real estate of the said Wm. H. Cleek to the payment of his debts, you are required to present your claims against the estate of the said Wm. H. Cleek for adjudication to T. S. McNeel, commissioner, at his office in the said county, on or before the 6th day of June 1900.

MARLINTON, THURS. MAY 17, 1900

Entered at the post-office at Marlinton, W. Va., as second class matter.

Our editor friend, the editor of the Monroe Watchman, was not elected a delegate to the National Convention at Kansas City. On the other hand J. W. St Claire, Joe Chilton, and John D. Alderson were. Without knowing the particulars we presume that it was a deal in which three kings beat a lone ace. Newspaper men, as a rule, do not get rewarded for their trouble. Their work is so constant and so harassing that they have no time to lay schemes for themselves in politics. When they do come out, they generally hark back to the printing office to take up the burden of life again, and say "the back of the ox is shaped for the burden." West Virginia editors are used to sucking the blind tit.

The friends of sobriety and good order are much gratified at the change that has recently come over the spirit of Marlinton's dreams. Rev Mr White was more than pleased by what he heard and saw. Let it be remembered that a good name is more to be desired than silver or gold, for a good name in a place will go farther than the other things will go, not backed by a good reputation. W.F.P.

Local Events.

Fine rains fell throughout the county last Friday and Saturday.

If you want to get the highest price in the country for your wool, see A. Harrison & Co.

The commencement of the Lewisburg Female Institute will be held the 25th—29th instant.

Dr Ligon Marshall has located in Marlinton and will be found at the Yeager Hotel.

B. N. Rayburn had the misfortune to lose an excellent horse on the trip to the railroad, last week.

Preaching service at Sunset next Sunday morning at eleven; Mt Vernon at four in the afternoon by W. T. Price.

The Knapps Creek bridge will be done on time. A substantial cofferdam has been built and the pier is all that remains to be done.

Wm. G. Rodgers, a Highland citizen of wealth and well known in our county, died recently at his home near Vandervpol, aged about 75 years.

Oscar Slaven, of Kansas, is now in Marlinton visiting his sisters, Mrs S. L. Brown and L. M. McClintic. Mrs Brown has been able to ride out most every day the past week and finds it very refreshing.

We cannot conceive what has become of all the sawmills in the country. It is praticably impossible to buy lumber for quick delivery in Marlinton, and our building boom has been greatly hindered by this state of affairs.

J. A. McNeel, of Rockbridge, accompanied by his daughter Mary See and son Paul, passed Marlinton Saturday, enroute for the Levels. Miss McNeel will remain several weeks visiting friends and relatives.

The Parlor Millinery Co. have now a first class dress maker from the city. All ladies wishing a dress made first class and up-to-date will do well to call and see Miss Emma Rowan, from Armstrong & Cater, Baltimore, Md.

The fine large grey that Ed Rutledge drives to the Jericho quarry is a horse with a past. Three or four years since he kicked a buggy to pieces and killed an aged lady, Mrs Fitzgerald, near Ronceverte.

A deed has been recorded from John T. McGraw and others to the Gauley Company for the one half undivided interest in 6123 acres on Williams River. This gives the Gauley Company the ownership of the Penick, Slaughter, and John A. McNeel tract.

May 10, John Williams, once a supervisor of Greenbrier County, was found dead on Droop Mountain near the Pocahontas line, aged about 60 years. His ailment is thought to have been heart disease and when stricken fell from his horse.

Rev W. McC. White, from Lewisburg, preached a series of sermons at Marlinton the past week which were impressive and edifying to a marked degree. The Marlinton and Hunterville churches were declared vacant, and measures will be at once taken for a new pastor.

Arbuckle best roasted coffee 12c lb. Watts white oil 12c per gal. 200 nails $3.95 per keg. Paper of pins 1c. Pencil with rubber 1c. Plug good tobacco 35c per pound. Cubics 5c per yd. Good brown sateen double knee 45c per pair. Boiled to pants 25 and 45c a pair.
The Golden Store.

In the passing month three outlawed outlaws have left West Virginia for good and all. May 10, Wm Gray, at Cooperton, shot himself. May 11, Wm. Lee, from North Carolina, taken out of jail at Hinton, hung and robbed, with $60 booked for a nonexistent offense, and Frank Rose, from the same State, shot at Pitts Camp, near Marlinton, early in the month.

Hot rain for Oats. Take them during or before they get wet. For Cash: bills of best backing made thereon. To any one who will buy $5 worth of dry goods we will sell one nice set of glass tumblers for 10c. This offer is good for a short time. Your gain and our loss.—L. D. Sharp, Linwood, W. Va.

There will be a total eclipse of the sun May 28th, next Monday. The course in North America will be from the gulf of the to the Atlantic. The time of maximum contact will be about 9 o'clock. Scientists are coming from all over the world to view this eclipse from 3 to 5 o'clock. About nine tenths of the sun will be darkened at this place.

BURNED TO DEATH.

What was probably the most shocking Accident ever occurring in our County, occurred near Buckeye, May 15.

Josie Francis Dorman, the little daughter of M. Dorman who attends McClintic's mill, was kindling a fire in the stove preparing to get supper. In some way a large can of kerosene became ignited and enveloped her in flames. No assistance was nearer than the mill where her father was at work.

She ran toward the mill and was met by her father who extinguished the flames, after being frightfully burned himself. In the meantime the building was set on fire by the burning kerosene and was only saved by the efforts of some men who happened to be working near. A physician, who fortunately passed by at this time, was called in and everything possible was done to relieve the child but in spite of all efforts she died the following morning at 4 o'clock, aged 11 years, 3 months and 18 days. She was buried at 11 o'clock on Thursday at Bethel church.

If the sympathy of a host of friends would sooth the distress of the grief stricken family, their sorrow would be short lived, but death is a thing for which earth has no consolation, save the knowledge that we can have no sorrow too great for heaven to heal.

She was loved by all who knew her, and is mourned by her youthful playmates and older friends.

Thou art gone, little Josie,
Child of our love;
From earth's fairy strand
To bright mansions above.

A FRIEND.

Meeting of Committee.

The Democratic Executive Committee met in the county court room last Thursday, the day set, to canvass the returns of the primary. There were present the chairman E. I. Holt, the secretary Andrew Price, Dr McClintic, one of the members from Levels district, and H. A. Yeager of the Edray District.

Ordinarily the declaring the result of a primary and certifying the nominations to the Clerk of the Circuit Court under the Australian ballot law, is a perfunctory duty devolving upon the chairman and secretary. Under the rules laid down in the call for a primary, four members were made a quorum to ascertain and declare the result of the primary Mr Yeager being a candidate for the House of Delegates in the primary appeared with his attorney S. B. Scott, Jr., and announced that he would contest the election as to the House of Delegates, L. M. McClintic having received a majority of three on the face of the returns and would therefore not act as a member of the committee.

Attention was called to the fact that only three members of the committee remained to be present, and desiring a full meeting of the committee it was decided to adjourn until Saturday, June 2 next, when it is desired that a full meeting of the committee be present to consider the question.

The ballots of the election from Marlinton were presented to the committee in the ballot-box, and were taken out placed in an envelope and sealed by the committee. The sealed returns from the other precincts were not opened but the whole were deposited in bank for safe keeping.

The Coming Theatricals.

May 24 and 25.

The local talent will give a two-night entertainment on Thursday and Friday nights, May 24 and 25, at the Court House, for the benefit of the Marlinton Brass Band. A first class play is billed for Thursday night. The program for Friday night is varied—a general entertainment. No pains have been spared to make this show a success, and the best of its kind.

Trout Fishing Party.

Governor William A. Stone of Pennsylvania, accompanied by his son Stephen, his brother-in-law General James L. White of Washington, Congressman William R. Graham of Allegheny City, Pa., and others, according to the Baltimore Sun, are at the Chest club-house in this county on a trout-fishing trip.

Musical Association.

The next meeting of the Pocahontas County Musical Association will be held at Academy mountain on Thursday evening at night of each June 7th, and con-tinuing over Friday and Saturday.

All leaders of music expected to attend. Respectfully,

B. F. MOORE, President.

A LEAF FROM MY NOTE-BOOK.

Do bear with us, dear readers of the Times. We were not so long in making the trip from Slaty Fork to Edray, but the delay was in getting our notes in the paper.

Well, there is an old steam engine. It has a history of course, but we do not know much about it save one thing. It bursted some years ago and fatally scalded a young man named Jack, whose father now lives on yonder height of land on the opposite side of the pike. Mr Jack we are told has a good farm on the top of that mountain. We hope that if he be taken from earth as suddenly as his son was, that he will be ready to go and make a bright and shining star on the table lands of immortality.

The next thing that attracts our attention is Mrs McLaughlin's neat and quiet little home. She, though a widow lady and living almost alone, seems to enjoy life. As an eminent divine said to us once, she has a good Presbyterian name,—and so have many of the good people on this creek. But if God fore-ordained from all eternity for them to be Methodist, they can not help it, and we will not grumble about it whether they be Methodist or Presbyterian, so long as they have and retain the one thing needful, for which the Lord commended Mary of old. We may say, however, in passing that we think Mrs McLaughlin is a very good woman—a widow indeed.

Yonder is Boud Hannah. He speaks kindly, politely, and treats us, as he always does, with the greatest respect. Boud has a good farm here and another good one farther down this creek. The greater part of both these farms is nestled down in the bottom lands of this quiet valley. We hope their owner and occupants will live in the valley of humiliation before God, so that when the light of eternity fully breaks upon his vision that he will occupy a highly exalted position in the heavenly world.

Hurrying on, for our company rides faster than we generally do when traveling alone, we are nearing Jacob Moore's residence where peace and quietude seem to reign supreme. Here lives a good man. He is a member of the School Board and well thought of by the people generally. He belongs to the church, and we hope to shake hands with him when we some never comes. We must not pass here without noticing yonder mound on a high knob where the mortal remains of Mrs Moore await the resurrection of the just. Mrs Moore died last summer and left quite a large family behind her. Our earnest prayer is that they will see to it, each one of them, not to miss their mother's heaven when called to quit this mundane sphere.

Now we reach the school-house, near the foot of the mountain, where John S. Moore taught school last winter. Mr Moore is one of the lucky teachers this year—he got two schools. He is teaching at Huntersville now. Across the creek to the right of us is a little cabin where Wesley Brown, a colored man lives. Wesley is an octogenarian. He was a slave and is now supported in his old age by some of the family he served so faithfully. Wesley might differ from us in some minor points of doctrine were we to talk religion to him, but we take it for granted that he possesses the needful thing and will turn up all right in the general roll call.

Here the creek forks. You could jump across the great Elk River at this point. Out of sight up a ravine is where Hamilton Gay lives. We are not very well acquainted with Mr Gay but we wish him and feel well toward him, as we always aim to have a good place in our affections for all.

We now make mention of Mrs Jordan, another respectable widow lady, who lives among the spurs of the Elk mountain, which stretch itself upon us and becomes a stern reality at this stage of things. We right here recall the death and burial of Newton Jordan, which occurred in the latter part of last summer. Newton tried hard to live, and we think he might. Now would die until they have to, but Newton finally died in peace. We had something to do in connection with his burial. We hope to meet Newton "where sickness, sorrow, pain, and death are felt and feared no more." Mrs Jordan has a world of kindness and love for to cheer and encourage the still living members of this family, and do not forget in this connection Newton's widow and precious child. We send a warm wish to heaven for them all.

By this time we have gotten quite a start up the big mountain. Joseph Gay joins us here. He comes riding out from his beautiful stock farm on those splendid heights. We think well also of Mr Gay. So far as we know him we like him, and pray that he may continue to do so. The high hills seem to be down on earth. But away down yonder on the opposite side of the road lives a poor man in Giles Sharp's house, whom we saw by the roadside yesterday making shingles for Luther Sharps addition to his store house. We do not remember this man's name, but we would like to say something or do something if we could to help him up the steep and rugged hillside of life and make him ride in the glory world, though he may not own a foot of land in this world.

We top the mountain and would like to pause a little if time would permit and survey the grandeur, beauty and pristine loveliness of the scene which the God of Nature spreads out before us. But we go on winding down the other side of the mountain over this well graded road, getting an occasional glimse of the old road nearly straight up and down the heights. What an improvement in roads as well as other things. Sometimes we think of this world as but in its infancy and the perfection it will finally reach a long way off. But however this is, trusting God all will be well. Truly, A. M.

A Missionary Tale.

In the historic town of Lewisburg two girls were trying to make money for the missionary society. One young lady wished to help raise a fund to send a missionary to the Philippines, and the other a missionary to Pocahontas, or in other words, one was working for foreign missions and the other for home missions. The people of the benevolent town of Lewisburg are divided as to which place needed the gospel the more, and so there are two funds.

One young lady of the eminently respectable town of Lewisburg had a hen which was to lay eggs and set on them and rear a brood or two of chickens, the proceeds of which was to go to help the heathen. You can take a pencil and a piece of paper any day and figure out profits in the poultry business. We got at it one day, and the only thing that prevented our ordering an incubator was the fear of glutting the market.

The other young lady of the socially delightful town of Lewisburg planted a pansy bed intending to bring light to the Philippines or Pocahontas.

One day recently the hen got into the pansy bed and utterly destroyed it. The owner discovered the hen in the act, and taking a club utterly destroyed her.

Now the heathen of Pocahontas stretch their hands to the heathen of the Philippines in their destitution and wonder if the missionaries will come anyway.

Resolutions.

Whereas, a request has been received from Rev W. T. Price, asking that the pastoral relation existing between himself and the churches at Huntersville and Marlinton be dissolved, on account of advancing age and recent illness; and

Whereas, this request has been concurred in by the churches under his urgent insistance; therefore be it

Resolved, That the request be granted and the pastoral relation be hereby dissolved.

2. That Rev W. McC. White be appointed to preach in the churches and declare them vacant.

3. That Presbytery hears of our dear brother's enfeebled health with sincere sympathy, sorrows with him in the sadness of this trying hour, and tenders him this expression of our esteem, confidence and brotherly love, with prayer that the "God of all Comfort" may be very near, and graciously grant this servant light at evening time.

4. That a copy of these resolutions be forwarded to Rev W. T. Pribe, and also to the Pocahontas Times, with request for their publication.

By order of Presbytery.

Stated Clerk.

GREEN BANK.

We had a very fine rain Friday night and Saturday which was badly needed as the grass was burning and wheat and oats dying.

Mrs Henry Sharp and daughter Miss Pearl, of Driscol, were visiting in town Saturday and Sunday.

Cooper & Son were in town Saturday. They will do some painting for James Stretch.

Dr L. L. Little bought a fine saddle horse last week from H. A. Yeager.

L. J. R. Dysard was over to the Durbin town last week.

Why don't some one take the bridges out of the road between Green Bank and Dunmore so the people go over in safety.

There is a good big frost this Monday morning, with some ice.

The Secretary of the Board of Education of Green Bank District desires all persons having claims against said boards to present same for payment.—By order of the Board. MIss POOR.

BROWNS CREEK.

We had fine rains Friday and Saturday, which were badly needed.

Working the roads and shearing sheep seems to be the order of the day.

J. J. Noonan moved to Craigsville, Va., last Friday. A. W. Curry from Frost to Brown's Creek.

J. W. Loury and H. P. McLaughlin were the guests of J. F. Wanless last Sunday.

Frank Hogsett is at home from the railroad.

W. P. Hogsett, who has been quite unwell for some time, is able to be about again, we are glad to say.

Amos McCarty seems to be the champion shot up here. He killed five crows at one shot.

All quiet since the Primary.

UNCLE BILL.

MILL POINT.

"More rain," the farmers say.

Isaac Simmons, Moody Pyles and Ira Clendennin have gone to Dan O'Connell's camp to spend the summer in the shade of the pines.

Our constable was on special business Sunday.

We are certainly glad that Mrs Bessie Shafer is permitted to be with us again. Her health has been restored.

We are glad that our little town will furnish our next Prosecuting Attorney, T. S. McNeel.

Frank Jerio, musician and entertainer, went to mill Sunday to give lessons.

We think a few more murderous acts will make our county worse than the State of Kentucky.

CATARRH CAN BE CURED BY

Johnston's Sarsaparilla

QUART BOTTLES.

"DANGER IN THE EARTH AND AIR; DANGER EVERYWHERE."

A Wise and Venerable Doctor Talks About Advanced Science.

In a leading hotel, in a great city, a famous and aged physician was conversing. Listening to his wise and sententious discourse, were a group of well dressed men, evidently lawyers, business men and commercial travelers.

My firm belief, is "that medical science is certain yet to show that all diseases without exception are caused by invisible germs which are living organisms. Here is the germ of that terrible disease diphtheria. Here is the bacillus of typhoid fever; and here is the still more dreadful bacillus of tubercle which causes that most destructive of all diseases, consumption. This of that very common and supposed incurable disease, catarrh."

"I wish, Doctor," said the traveling man, "that you would tell us about catarrh. I have had it for years, and I am thoroughly discouraged."

The Doctor answered, "Catarrh, like diphtheria, consumption, typhoid fever, and a host of other diseases, is the result of a microbe invading the blood and attacking specially the mucous membrane. This foul and most disgusting disease is especially prevalent in the United States and it is rare to meet one who is not, or has not been troubled more or less with it. How often is he or she obliged to remain at home from pleasant entertainments, deprive themselves of many intellectual treats, from fear of the disagreeable odor arising from catarrhal affections. In its worst phase, the patient becomes loathsome both to himself and his friends."

"I believe," continued this great physician, "that the true way to heal catarrh is to medicate the blood. This can be done only by powerful alteratives which act as blood purifiers."

Benj. A. Margil, of Manistee, Manistee Co., Mich., writes:

Dear Sirs:—For ten years I was a sufferer from general debility and chronic catarrh. My face was pale as death. I was weak and short of breath. I could hardly walk, I was so dizzy and had a ringing in my head all the time. My hands and feet were always cold. My appetite was very poor. On getting up in the morning, my head swam so I was often obliged to lie down again. I had a awful pains in the small of my back. I had a continual feeling of tiredness. My muscular power was almost entirely gone, and I couldn't go half a dozen steps without stopping to rest, and often that much exercise caused me to have a pain in my side. It seemed as though the blood had left my veins. The doctors said my blood had all turned to water. I had given up all hope of ever getting well. I tried the best physicians in the state, but failed to get any relief. My husband got me a bottle of Johnston's Sarsaparilla. I took it, and then I bought another. When these had been used, I was somewhat improved in health. I continued its use, and felt I was growing stronger; my sleep was refreshing, and it seemed as if I could feel new blood moving through my veins. I kept on taking it, and now consider myself a well and rugged woman. I work all the time, and am happy. I am positive that the Sarsaparilla saved my life. The sick headaches I have had since childhood, have disappeared, and my catarrh has almost entirely left me. I cannot be too thankful for what Johnston's Sarsaparilla has done for me. I recommend all women who have sick headaches to use your Sarsaparilla.

by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by the inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars.

"But this is too radical," protested King John, looking at the document the Barons wanted him to sign. "It subverts my whole kingdom, gentlemen. I can countenance no such change as that."

"We'll change your countenance if you don't!" sternly answered the Barons. "That puts a new face on the matter," rejoined King John, affixing his seal with an effort at sprightliness.—Chicago Tribune.

A Sprained Ankle Quickly Cured

"At one time I suffered from a severe sprain of the ankle," says George E. Cary, editor of the Guide, Washington, Ia. "After using several well recommended medicines without success, I tried Chamberlain's Pain Balm, and am pleased to say that relief came as soon as I began its use, and a complete cure speedily followed. West Virginia University.

MORGANTOWN, W. VA.

The growth of the University is quite as notable in its equipment, its faculty, and its new departments as in its attendance. For example, look at

The School of Music

established two years ago. It has a faculty of seven instructors, trained under the best teachers in this country and Europe. It occupies a separate building fitted up especially for its needs. Instruction on all stringed instruments, including violin, viola, mandolin, guitar, etc., is free. For voice and piano the fees are very low. A magnificent pipe organ for Commencement Hall is being constructed and it will be for the use of students of the School of Music. If you are interested in the study of music, write for full information.

Other departments of the University are developing with equal rapidity. The Premedical Department, with its four new instructors, deserves special mention. Write for a special pamphlet about it.

The University has a faculty of sixty-five instructors, graduates of the foremost schools in the world.

The Winter Quarter begins January 1, and the Spring Quarter April 1.

MORE POINTERS FROM UNCLE ABRAHAM.

Uncle Abraham was much out of place, it would seem, for if every one was like him sales would be few and far between.

Having expressed the opinion Uncle said gentlemen on their knees, he proceeds to moralize in this manner. Perhaps the parties now on their knees have had a small estate left them, which they knew not the getting; they think 'T is day and will never be night; that a little to be spent out so much is not worth minding. (A child and a thoughtless one, as Poor Richard says, imagine that twenty shillings and twenty years can never be spent), but, Always taking out of the meal tub and never putting in soon comes to the bottom. When the well is dry people know the worth of water, and such might have known before if they had only heeded good advice.

It is always easier to suppress the first desire than to satisfy all that follow it, and Poor Dick was of the opinion, 'T is as truly silly for the poor to ape the rich as for the frog to swell in order to equal the ox.

Great estates may venture more,
But little boats should keep near shore.

This, however, is a folly soon punished; for Pride that dines on vanity sups on contempt, and in another place poor Richard says: Pride breakfasted with Plenty, dined with Poverty, and supped with Infamy. And after all, exclaims Uncle Abraham, warming up to his subject, of what use is this pride of appearance for which so much is risked, so much suffered? It can not promote health or ease gain; it makes no increase of merit in the person; it creates envy; it lessens misfortune.

What is a butterfly? At best
He's but a caterpillar drest:
The gaudy legs's his picture just, as poor Richard says.

But what madness must it be to run into debt for these superfluities. Here we are offered by the lessee of the vendue six months credit, and that perhaps has induced some of us to attend it, because we could not spare the ready money and hope now to be fine without it. But O! think what pain it will give you at the time to pay for your expensive purchase; and what uneasiness in the interim. If you can not pay at the time, you will be ashamed to see your creditor; you will be in fear when you speak to him; you may perhaps be tempted to make poor pitiful sneaking excuses, and by degrees come to lose your veracity and sink into base downright lying; for as Poor Richard says, The second vice is lying, the first is running into debt; and again to Debt's back; whereas a freeborn citizen ought not to be ashamed or afraid to see or speak to any man living. But poverty often deprives a man of all spirit and virtue. 'Tis hard for an empty bag to stand upright, as Poor Dick truly says.

What would you think of that prince or the Government who should issue an edict forbidding you to dress like a gentleman or a lady on pain of being sold out of house or home? Would you not say that you are free, have a right to dress as you please, and that such an edict would be a breach of your privileges, and such a Government? And yet you are about to put yourself under such tyranny when you run in debt for dress or show. Your creditor has authority at his pleasure to set you out in the big road, should you not be able to pay him.

Then again, when you have gained your bargain, you may perhaps think little of payment, but creditors (Poor Richard tells us) have better memories than debtors: and creditors are a superstitious set, great observers of set days and times. Pay day comes round before you are aware, and the demand for settlement before you are prepared to satisfy it; or if you bear your debt in mind, the term which at first seemed so long, will, as it lessens, appear extremely short. Time will seem to have added wings to his heels as well as to his shoulders. Those have a short Lent, saith Poor Dick, who owe money to be paid at Easter.

Then since, as he says, The borrower is a slave to the lender, and the debtor to the creditor, disdain the chain preserve your freedom, and maintain your independency. Be industrious and free; be frugal and free. At present perhaps you may think yourself in thriving circumstances, and that you can bear a little extravagance without injury, but—

For age and want save while you may,
No morning sun lasts a whole day.

Now as Poor Richard says, gain may be temporary and uncertain, but ever while you live expense is constant and certain; and it is easier to build two chimneys than to keep one in fuel, as neither go to bed supperless that rise in debt. This doctrine, my friends, is wisdom and wisdom.

Get what you can and what you get hold,
'Tis the stone that will turn all your lead into gold.

But still, after all, do not depend too much upon your own industry, frugality, the such excellent things for they may all be blasted without the blessing of Heaven; and therefore ask that blessing humbly, and be not uncharitable to those that at present seem to want it, but comfort and help them. Remember Job suffered, and was afterwards prosperous.

And now to conclude, Experience keeps a dear school, but there are some who will learn in no other—and scarce in that; for it is true we may give advice, but we can not give conduct. However, remember this, They that wont be counseled can't be helped; and further, If you will not hear Reason she'll surely rap your knuckles, quoth Poor Richard.

Uncle Abraham reports that the crowd gave him good attention, approved his doctrines, and immediately practiced the contrary,—just as if it had been a common sermon. For the auctioneer took his place and the people bought extravagantly, notwithstanding all the cautions he gave them and their own great fear of taxes and hard times.

There was one person, however, that was influenced. It was his purpose to buy stuff for a new coat but the harangue seemed to have its effect and he went away resolved to wear the old coat a little longer. It was a satisfaction whenever he thought of the old coat, that it was paid for, and the profit derived from that act of self-denial was such that in the course of time he had a new paid for coat, when the old one was sent to the

The Horse in Battle.

Horses wounded on the battlefield are duly attended to when no danger to human life is involved. At the conclusion of the battle, if it has been decisive and one or other of the combatant armies has been driven from the field, a party of veterinary surgeons, with their assistants, is sent out to examine every animal that has fallen, and to shoot such as are badly wounded. Those suffering from only slight injuries are collected and taken to the veterinary hospital lines. Here they are again examined by the officers waiting for their reception, and operated on as occasion may necessitate. The station is fitted with operating tables upon which the animals are strapped for the extraction of bullets, after which they are sent down to the sick-horse hospitals for recovery.

At Talavera 250 horses were killed and 240 men, while at the famous charge of the Light Brigade at Balaclava the losses among the horses was 360 and among the men 280.

The horse is more liable to suffer from hunger and want of rest than a man, and consequently we find that in all protracted wars the loss in horses from diseases from disease is terribly heavy. In Napoleon's campaign across the Niemen, out of 60,000 horses no fewer than 45,000 succumbed in six months. At the seige of Plevna the Russians lost over 30 per cent. of their draft animals; and in the Egyptian war of 1882 half the English horses were disabled, of which 600 died from sickness and only 60 on the field of Battle.—Pearson's Magazine.

Tortured a Witness.

Intense suffering was endured by witness T. L. Martin, of Dixie, Ky., before he gave this evidence: "I coughed every night until my throat was nearly raw; then tried Dr Kings New Discovery which gave instant relief. I have used it in my family four years and recommend it as the greatest remedy for coughs, colds and all throat, chest and lung troubles. It will stop the worst cough and not only prevents but conclusively cures consumption. Price 50c and $1. Every bottle guaranteed. Trial bottles free at Sharp & Mc-Nett's drug store. SHALL THERE BE A POCAHONTAS COUNTY HISTORY!

Having been repeatedly asked by quite a number of persons whether I would consent to edit and have printed such a History, I have concluded to do so, provided safe financial arrangements be made in advance.

Individually, I have nothing, financially, that I could afford to risk on a venture of this character.

Moreover, the time and labor required for a respectable History such as our County richly deserves, I learn from professionals they would not undertake for less than a thousand dollars as their own personal compensation, paid in advance or well secured at least.

Now, as my part of the proposed publication, prompted as I believe and trust, by local attachment and a patriotic desire to see my native county and her worthy citizenship have a suitable History, I will undertake the literary work, without any guarantee of adequate pecuniary compensation personally, provided four hundred responsible citizens would subscribe each $2.50 in advance.

Let it be understood, however, this subscription will not be payable until the book be put into the hands of the subscribers.

The names of the advance subscribers will appear in the preface of the book, and recognized as co-workers in the service of preparing the book for publication. To all others the book is to be sold at $3.00 per copy payable on delivery.

It is proposed to print an octavo volume of four or five hundred pages, according as the advance subscriptions may seem to justify. All persons inclined to favor and help this historical publication will please send me a postal card or letter with their own names, and as many other names they may find it in their power to procure or recommend, and they will be entered as advance subscribers.

As to the contents of this history, a prominent feature will be the "Biographical Notes" republished from The Pocahontas Times," corrected and extended to date, with some additional families yet to be written up, along with many miscellaneous articles illustrative of our county history yet to be prepared.

Our readers will perceive from what has been written, the matter stands in this way: I undertake a literary work without guaranteed personal recompense that professionals of the class, I would like to peg, would not undertake for less than one thousand dollars, and place the book in the hands of the advanced subscribers for $2.50 per copy, before the subscriptions become payable.

On the part of the advance subscriber, he is to write a postal card or letter to me at Marlinton, W. Va., be enrolled as an advance subscriber and have $2.50 ready. Several names might be on the same card or in the same letter, somewhat in this way: "We, the undersigned, hereby become advance subscribers to a History of Pocahontas County, to be edited by William T. Price, and pledge ourselves to pay $2.50 each per copy on delivery of the same"

This offer remains open till August 1st, 1900.

Right now may not be the best time for such a work that has yet been; still, it is quite manifest it may be, and in fact is, the best time that may ever be again. The little that I have already done, in many instances, seems to have been just in time.

Quite a number of my best informed and reliable authorities in local history have already passed away in the little while since I interviewed them,—Mrs Elizabeth McLaughlin, Squire John W. Warwick, Colonel J. W. Ruckman, John Hanna, John and Samuel Sutton, Allan Gaiford, Mrs Nancy Callison, Dr Matt Wallace, and Captain William L. McNeel.

[illegible] opportunity and each person guarantee $2.50 on the terms indicated, it is possible to prepare and publish a history that will do credit to their county and be an honor to themselves for all time to come, or as long as any one remains that may be interested in the annals of our great county, now emerging from obscurity with prospects of becoming one of the foremost counties of the West Virginia commonwealth.

Esteemed Friends, I now await your pleasure. Let your postals or letters be in hand on or before the 1st of August, 1900, the sooner the better, in order your names may appear in the preface, and thus due credit be accorded you as helpers without whose assistance the book would not have been published, and those coming after you will know whom to thank and honor for the pleasure and benefit afforded them by the proposed History.

If four hundred citizens, to be known in all time to come as the "Historical Four Hundred," do each the part suggested, I will do what has been proposed, and possibly more, should it please God to spare my life and keep me in health. —WM. T. PRICE.

IS THIS YOUR STORY?

"Every morning I have a bad taste in my mouth; my tongue is coated; my head aches and I often feel dizzy. I have no appetite for breakfast and what food I eat distresses me. I have a heavy feeling in my stomach. I am getting so weak that sometimes I tremble and my nerves are all unstrung. I am getting pale and thin. I am as tired in the morning as at night."

What does your doctor say?

"You are suffering from impure blood."

What is his remedy?

The Danger of Euphuism.

"Can I tell you the meaning of euphuism?" [illegible] the younger men on the staff. "Why certainly, my boy. It is the pleasant art of calling a boatblack a gentleman of polish, and its very valuable in newspaper work, provided you do not carry the joke too far. I remember when I was a 'cub' myself and was working out in Denver a fellow came in one day asked me to write a nice little notice about the marriage of his brother to a girl over in Centre City. 'Who is the bride?' I asked, so as to get some material for a paragraph; 'what is her father's occupation?' Why, he's a—teller' said my caller, with some hesitatating a little. 'All right,' said I, and thinking it would sound a shade finer, I referred to the lady as 'the beautiful and accomplished daughter of the well-known banker of Centre City.' Next day the boss came in foaming at the mouth. 'What in the blazes do you mean by speaking of old—— as a banker?' he bellowed. 'He's a professional clairvoyant and the biggest old fraud out of jail! He's got an old ad in the paper right now, offering to reveal the past and future for 35 cents and lock of your hair!' I was overwhelmed with chagrin and handed up my informant. 'Why did you tell me that girl's father was a banker?' I asked reproachfully. 'I did?' he answered; 'I said he was a teller.' 'It's one and the same thing,' I retorted. 'No, it isn't,' said he, 'you jumped at conclusions. I didn't mean a paying teller, I meant a fortune teller.'"—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

A very Remarkable Remedy.

It is with a good deal of pleasure and satisfaction that I recommend Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, says Druggist A. W. Sackville, of Hartford, Conn. "A lady customer, seeing the remedy exposed for sale on my show case and in use, really believe that medicine saved my life the past summer while at the shore," and she became so enthusiastic over its merits that I at once made up my mind to recommend it in the future. Recently a gentleman came into our store so overcome with colic pains that he could not stand in the floor. I gave him a dose of this remedy which helped him. I repeated the dose and in fifteen minutes he left our store smilingly informing me that he felt as well as ever."

INDUSTRIAL DEVELOPMENT.

The new railroad chartered to be built from Nicholas to Pocahontas county will develop one of the richest countries in the world. The land is underlaid with coal and the growth of timber on the surface is marvellous. It is the class of country that has proved too heavily timbered to clear. Around the heads of Cherry and Cranberry rivers lies a great wilderness. On Williams River the timber is practically untouched. It is in this section that a landowner sold a measured acre of timber to a sawmill man. The saw bill showed that 64,000 feet was cut from that acre.

The new town of Cass, which is to be established on the Greenbrier River about 25 miles above Marlinton at the mouth of Leatherbark Creek, will be one of the biggest towns of the county. A saw mill with the capacity of the St Lawrence Company's mill at Ronceverte will be established there. The pulp timber will be taken to the Covington mills and the saw timber to the mill at Leatherbark. Next to securing the pulp mill is the establishing the saw mill here, and the saw mill has some of the best features of the pulp industry.

The stream Leatherbark comes into the Greenbrier River from the west. It goes back from the river right into Ghost Mountain and drains a fine timber country. Its headwaters extend to the banks of Cheat River. By a short cut of not over 20 feet depth the waters of Ghost River could be diverted into Greenbrier River by way of Leatherbark. Ghost River is on top of Ghost Mountain and Greenbrier River washes the foot of Ghost Mountain.

The town of Durbin, which will certainly be the beneficiary of the expenditures of the Greenbrier River Lumber Company, will be laid off in lots and will be an important town on the new railroad.

Marlinton, as the county seat of what is probably the richest county in the State in natural resources, is certain to be one of the big towns of the State. It is the natural shipping point for a vast area of country, extending up the Greenbrier Railway which runs north and south at Marlinton.

As a field for investment Pocahontas County offers unparallelled advantages. Every man who wants work can find it here. The thin section is in the east the same advantages are here that were to be found in the west when Horace Greely advised young men to go west and grow up with the country.

A CARD.

Editor Pocahontas Times:

In the issue of the Times of the 17th day of May, you call attention to lawlessness in this county and correctly attribute it to the unlawful sale of whiskey. You say that "many persons have the illegal traffic here," but that we lack men who are willing to take the initiative to aid the officers to close the places, presumably here in Marlinton.

This I consider an unjust reflection on the law abiding citizens of Marlinton and is an intimation to outsiders that this class is small in Marlinton. On the contrary we have as many law abiding citizens here as in any other place in the county, and these citizens have shown in every possible way their willingness to aid the officials to eradicate this evil, and stand ready now to take the initiative to bring about this result, it they can have the assurance of the support of the proper officers of the county and of the court.

If complaints are made will you sustain with your paper all efforts to punish thedfenders and to abate the nuisance.

Let us all understand each other.

Resp'tl., H. A. YEAGER.

[NOTE: The article referred to the conditions existing in the whole county. The Times will be found on the side of law and order in any and every event.]

Circular 7,730 sent out by the Government contains the following statement: "More women marry than men." This seems rather remarkable for upon examination of the records of this county we find that each year since its formation exactly the same number of men and women have been married. We cannot imagine a different state of affairs in any other county so there must be something wrong about this statement of the Census Department.

In the Kanawha primary Goebel carried the county over Edwards by a majority of 13 in a vote of over six thousand for Congress. The Republican Executive Committee refused to recount the ballots on Edwards' motion.

In response to the question as to when the war will end, Lord Roberts telegraphs: "I regret that I cannot give any reply to your question, as it is impossible at present to predict when the campaign may end."

ARBOVALE.

And, by the way, it rained again.

Phil Edmeston was in town last Friday on business.

Benjamin Arbogast, George Oliver and Schuyler Fitzgerald were out to Huttonsville for goods last week.

Misses Virgie Gillespie and Lexie Sutton were in town one day last week.

Rev Pullen is holding a protracted meeting at the Moore school house on Back Alleghany.

John Coffe's little girl aged four years was very badly scalded the other day. She is not expected to live.

Mrs C. L. Burner and daughter Minnie were in town last week trading at the store.

Mrs Bertie Clark was in town last Friday.

Colaw & Moses, of Highland, are sawing a nice lot of lumber for David Shears.

Fount and Glen Arbogast were up to Traveler's Collapse last Saturday and Sunday on a fishing scout.

Working the roads is the order of the day.

Pearl Arbogast is able to be out again.

Marvin Wenger is in this part visiting friends and relatives.

The graveyard at Arbovale will be cleaned up next Thursday. Let every one come out and fix up the graves of the ones they love.

Robert Gum is tending the Hevener mill.

George Sutton and daughter Miss Lucy are in this part visiting friends.

This town is on a boom. There are eight dwelling houses, one church, harness shop, post office, store, carpenter shop, and milliner shop; all inside the corporation.

W. J. Lambert has moved to that beautiful town of Durbin.

George Hannah has bought him a new bike.

William Bestor is in this part again.

Rev C. C. Arbogast bought a fine horse the other day.

We are sorry to learn that Amos Gillespie had a fine horse stolen. May the guilty person be captured and sent to Moundsville, where he can behave himself.

We extend our sympathies to the people of New Hope, Va., where death has been so prevalent.

Rev Pullen preached a good sermon at Arbovale Sunday evening.

The funeral sermon of Wm Hill will be preached at Arbovale next Sunday by Rev Yoke of Greenbrier.

The International Peace Bureau at Berne, Switzerland, will make and appeal to the twenty five powers signing the conventions adopted by the Hague Peace Conference, in favor of the restoration of peace in South Africa by means of mediation. The results of this appeal will be a crucial test as to whether there was any virtue in the Hague Peace Conference, or whether it was a pretentious, sanctimonious fiasco, having the form but destitute the power of peace. If the appeal fails the world may look out for the most terrible military cyclones before long.

Webster.

Good morning Mr Editor.

I see you have had your primary election. A splendid ticket. You have one of the best men in the county for Representative, tho he had a close shave. Such a ticket is bound to bring victory to the Democrat party this fall.

They tell me that Marlinton is a spirit the town was the right move in the right direction. I think she had room for improvement. Now for a first class saloon to bring you a revenue for your streets and walks, and not so many easy going drug stores. We have experienced this in our little county. Cowen is a good example —Addison is a better one.

The lumber business is progressing in this section. W. G. Gray has about 3 million of poplar yet to cut on Gauley River belonging to the Gauley Company. The Middle Fork Driving Company has ten million to cut this year. Henry Lynch has the cutting. Henry is a hustler, and will no doubt make good money. He is running a crew of fourteen men, and wants several more good men.

W. McClintic will commence skidding this week.

The Isenhart logging job on Little Fork is rather on the slow move, but probably they are catching a head.

We noticed the pleasant face of W. McClintic in Cowen last week. He is always a welcome visitor in town.

We learn his favorite road teamster, O. W. Kellison, is putting out a large crop of potatoes at the three forks of Williams River. Owen is a hustler and is always looking ahead.

Nath. Doverspike's camp was consumed by fire last week.

A fine rain last week which was badly needed.

Webster Snake.

Brass Band Benefit.

Three very creditable entertainments were given in the court room last week by the young people of Marlinton, and a neat sum of money raised to help along the organization of a brass band at this place. We understand the instruments will be ordered at once, and the candidates will proceed to practice band music.

The promoters of the entertainment and all concerned tender heartfelt thanks to the honorable County Court for kind permission to use the court room on this occasion.

The programme of this entertainment are printed in full on the front page of this paper.

Musical Association.

The next meeting of the Pocahontas County Musical Association will be held at Academy commencing on Thursday evening at eight o'clock June 7th, and continuing over Friday and Saturday.

All leaders of music expected to attend. Respectfully,

S. B. MOORE, President.

GREEN BANK.

Fine growing weather, but a little cold.

Farmers are complaining about corn not coming up well, and the cutworm is getting in his work. In some places frost cut the corn down, but there will be a good crop of fruit if it don't fall off.—

S. M. Burner and Miss Pearl Yeager were in town one night last week.

Mrs J. C. Arbogast and son Earl were out to Doe Hill last week.

If you want a plaster that will stop pain in any part of the body, call on J. H. Curry and he will supply you.

Rev J. W. McNeel preached a very good sermon last Sunday night at this place.

J. W. Oliver of Wanless was in town Saturday.

There will be quarterly meeting services at this place on June 9th and 10th, at which time Rev Hutchinson will be here. Preaching on Saturday at 11 o'clock and on Sunday at the same hour.

S. R. Sutton and Wilson Sutton and family have rented the G. C. Cooper property near town and moved in last week.

The postoffice at this place will change hands shortly.

Dr J. P. Moomaw is off to Lewisburg for his daughters who have been attending the L. F. I. The school is in vacation.

L. J. R. Dysard is on the sick-list at this time.

We are looking for the eclipse this morning as we write. Yes, it is coming on now! I will clean my lamp and have it ready: I will not need it—it is getting lighter now.

Rev Caldwell will preach at Liberty church next Sunday at 11. We are glad to have him among us again.

CATARRH CAN BE CURED BY

Johnston's Sarsaparilla

QUART BOTTLES.

"DANGER IN THE EARTH AND AIR; DANGER EVERYWHERE."

A Wise and Venerable Doctor Talks about Advanced Science.

In a leading hotel, in a great city, a famous and aged physician was conversing. Listening to his wise and sententious discourse, were a group of well dressed men, evidently lawyers, business men and commercial travelers.

My firm belief, is "that medical science is certain yet to show that all diseases without exception are caused by invisible germs which are living organisms. Here is the germ of that terrible disease diphtheria. Here is the bacillus of typhoid fever; and here is the still more dreadful bacillus of tubercle which wrecks that most destructive of all diseases, consumption. This of that very common and supposed incurable disease, catarrh."

"I ask, Doctor," said the traveling man, "that you would tell us about catarrh. I have had it for years, and I am thoroughly discouraged."

The Doctor answered: "Catarrh, like diphtheria, consumption, typhoid fever, and a host of other diseases, is the result of a microbe invading the blood and attacking specially the mucous membranes. This foul and most disgusting disease is especially prevalent in the United States and it is rare to meet one who is not, or has not been troubled more or less with it. How often is he or she obliged to remain at home from pleasant entertainments, deprive themselves of many intellectual treats, from fear of the disagreeable odor arising from catarrhal affections. In its worst phase, the patient becomes loathsome both to himself and his friends.

"I believe," continued the great physician, "that the true way to heal catarrh is to medicate the blood. This can be done only by powerful alteratives which act as blood purifiers."

Betsy A. Margil, of Manistee, Manistee Co., Mich., writes:

Dear Sirs:—For ten years I was a sufferer from general debility and chronic catarrh. My face was pale as death. I was weak and short of breath. I could hardly walk. I was so dizzy and had a ringing in my head all the time. My hands and feet were always cold. My appetite was very poor. On getting up in the morning, my head swam so I was often obliged to lie down again. I had awful pains in the small of my back. I had a continual feeling of tiredness. My muscular power was almost entirely gone, and I couldn't go half a dozen steps without stopping to rest, and often that much exercise caused me to have a pain in my side. It seemed as though the blood had left my veins. The doctors said my blood had all turned to water. I had given up all hope of ever getting well. I tried the best physicians in the state, but failed to get any relief. My husband got me a bottle of Johnston's Sarsaparilla. I took it, and then I bought another. When these had been used, I was somewhat improved in health. I continued its use, and felt I was growing stronger; my sleep was refreshing, and it seemed as if I could feel new blood moving through my veins. I kept on taking it, and now consider myself a well and rugged woman. I work all the time, and am happy. I am positive that the Sarsaparilla saved my life. The sick headaches I have had since childhood, have disappeared, and my catarrh has almost entirely left me. I cannot be too thankful for what Johnston's Sarsaparilla has done for me. I recommend all women who have sick headaches to use your Sarsaparilla.

After Big Bears.

Dr Frank Baker, of the Smithsonian Institution, has sent Elwood Hofer, a guide and hunter of the Yellowstone Park, to catch some of the monster bears on Kadiak Island, in the Gulf of Alaska, for the National Zoological Park. These bears are of the polar breed, perfectly white with long, heavy fur, and at full growth are twice as large as the ordinary black bear of the Rocky Mountains, weighing from 2,4000 to 3,000 pounds and standing as high as an ordinary cow—the biggest carnivorous animal living. The tracks they leave in the snow have often measured 15 inches long and 10 inches wide. They are very savage and fight desperately when attacked. Several have been killed and the skins brought to this country, but no Kadiak bear was ever captured alive. Dr Tarleton H. Bean, the fish expert, who is in charge of the department of fisheries at the Paris Exposition, while making an exploration of the fishing resources of Kadiak Island last year, saw a good many of these bears and describes them in graphic terms. He says that while climbing a rocky hill one day he saw a large drove of them near the coast running about and playing like so many lambs. There must have been a hundred and fifty or two hundred in the bunch, he says, and some of them were enormous.—Baltimore Sun.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by the inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars.

The Bustle.

When the daily toil is over and the sun is going down, you are ready then to read the news that's going on in the world—to learn what's the favorite paper, here's a hint, 'twill make you smile; perhaps you'll find it on your daughter, for the bustle's back in style. When you wash your face in sonpsuds and are looking for a towel, while the soap is getting in your eyes, you start to swear and howl; wipe your face upon your coat sleeve, and remember all the while, that the towel's hard to locate since the bustle's back in style. Now, there's no use in getting angry and it does no good to swear; if your Sunday shirt is missing and you've nothing clean to wear, try your hardest to look pleasant, do your best to wear a smile, and remember when you miss things that the bustle's back in style.—Exchange.

A Sprained Ankle Quickly Cured

"At one time I suffered from a severe sprain of the ankle," says George E. Cary, editor of the Globe, Washington, D. C. "After using several recommended medicines without success, I tried Chamberlain's Pain Balm, and am pleased to say that relief came as soon as I began its use and a complete cure speedily followed. This remedy has also been used in my family for frost bitten feet with the best results. I cheerfully recommend its use to all who may need a first-class liniment. Sold by—

The Masterpieces of America's Greatest Artists

Are to be Reproduced in the Finest Photogravure Process

THESE photogravures represent paintings that have been sold for thousands of dollars, and others that are fresh from the artists' brush. They would sell rapidly at any art store at $5 each, but they can be purchased only from us, as we absolutely control the copyrights.

The Masterpieces of twenty-five of our Greatest American Artists now for the first time available in a single collection

Beautify Your Home

This collection of paintings, varied in style and color-tone, will superbly adorn any home. They are 18 x 24 inches in size, are placed in a beautiful portfolio, and so arranged that they can be conveniently removed for framing.

An Art Educator

This magnificent collection will at once stimulate and cultivate a desire for the artistic. A complete description accompanies each painting, also a portrait and biographical sketch of the artist, an interesting account of his early studies, how he was led to take up art as a profession, in what schools and under what masters he received his instruction. It describes his trips and sojourns abroad, where and when his paintings were first exhibited, and the honors they received both in Europe and America. The titles of the artist's most notable paintings are also given, and where they are now. All this information is not only interesting, but exceedingly instructive.

SPECIAL PROPOSITION

To those who write at once we will send one of our original specimen sets by express, being the first sharp, clear impressions from the fresh, new plates. The price will be less than one-third their real value, and the payments easy, with the privilege of return if not satisfactory. Clip this special proposition and send with your letter.

A Warning to Borrowers.

A man who was too economical to take this paper sent his little boy to borrow the copy taken by his neighbor. In his haste the boy ran over a $4 stand of bees and in ten minutes looked like a warty summer squash. His cries reached his father, who ran to his assistance, and, failing to notice a barbed wire fence, ran into that, breaking it down, cutting a handful of flesh from his anatomy and ruining a $5 pair of pants. The old cow took advantage of the gap in the fence and got into the cornfield and killed here-if-eating green corn. Hearing the racket the wife ran, upset a four gallon churn of rich cream into a basket of kittens, drowning the whole flock. In her hurry she dropped a $7 set of false teeth. The baby, left alone, crawled through the spilled milk and into the parlor, ruining a $20 carpet. During the excitement the oldest daughter ran away with the hired man, the dog broke up the setting hens and the calves got out and chewed the tails off four fine shirts.—Exchange.

A Woman's Awful Peril.

"There is only one chance to save your life and that is through an operation," were the startling words issued by Mrs. L. B. Hunt of Stone Ridge, Wis., from her doctor after he had vainly tried to cure her of a frightful case of stomach trouble and yellow jaundice. Gall stones had already formed and she continually grew worse. Then she began to use Electric Bitters, which wholly cured her. It is a wonderful stomach, Liver and Kidney remedy. Cures dyspepsia, loss of appetite, try it. Only 50c. Guaranteed.

Beware of a Cough

A cough is not a disease, but a symptom. Consumption, and bronchitis, which are the most dangerous and fatal diseases, have for their first indication a persistent cough, and if properly treated at once in this stage, cures are easily cured. Chamberlain's cough remedy has proven wonderfully successful with people with reputation and extensive sale by its success in curing diseases which cause coughing. If it is not beneficial it will not cost you a cent. For sale by—

West Virginia University,
MORGANTOWN, W. VA.

The growth of the University is quite as notable in its equipment, its faculty, and its new departments as in its attendance. For example, look at

The School of Music

established two years ago. It has a faculty of seven instructors, trained under the best teachers in this country and Europe. It occupies a separate building fitted up especially for its needs. Instruction on all stringed instruments, including violin, viola, sound, 'cello, etc., is free. For voice and piano the fees are very low. A magnificent pipe organ for Commencement Hall is being constructed and it will be for the use of students of the School of Music. If you are interested in the study of music, write for full information.

Other departments of the University are developing with equal rapidity. The Pre-medical Department, with the new courses, deserves special mention. Write for a special pamphlet about it.

The University has a faculty of sixty-five instructors, graduates of the foremost schools in the world.

The Winter Quarter begins January 1, and the Spring Quarter April 1.

POCAHONTAS, THE INDIAN PRINCESS.

As no historical name is more familiar to the residents of our great county, this article is intended to recall some interesting particulars of her history.

Thomas Mann Randolph was the Governor who approved the act that formed Pocahontas County, and his being a descendant of Pocahontas perhaps had much to do with this selection of a name for the new county.

About the first of March, 1899, a portrait of Pocahontas was presented to the Virginia Senate by Mr Henry S. Welcome, an American resident of England, a distinguished chemist and druggist.

This picture is a fine copy of a painting hanging on the walls of Boothin Hall, Norfolk, England, the former home of the Rolfe family. The original was painted from life by De Passe, an eminent artist of the 16th and early years of the 17th centuries. On the canvas of the original painting are these words painted: Matoaka Rebecka, filia potentis Principi Powhatani Imp. Virginia." Then lower down on the same canvass is this inscription, likewise painted:

Matoaka, alias Rebeka, daughter of the mighty Prince Powhatani, Emperor of Attanough Komouck of Virginia; a Christian converted and married to the worshipful Mr Thomas Rolfe. Aged 21, 1616."

It seems there was a superstition among the Indians that prompted them to conceal the true name; Matoaka was the true name of the princess, yet the Indians called her Pocahontas.

Time and space will not be taken to repeat what is on record in all our histories, how Capt. John Smith, soldier, sailor, and knight-errant, landed at Jamestown, Virginia, May 13, 1607, and by his courage, wisdom, and tact with [illegible] preserved the colony from many trials and dangers.

The land was beautiful and fertile, and what bordered on the river was covered with groves of wonderful foliage and enchanting colors. Fish abounded in the waters and game roamed the forests beyond anything ever dreamed of in the old country.

Nevertheless danger lurked in every forest recess. Showers of arrows from Indian warriors hidden in the tall grass was the salute with which the settlers were received in that wilderness ruled by Powhatan, having a tribe estimated at 8000, of whom 2400 were warriors. There was discontent in the colony, and the royal order came for Captain Smith to go in search of the South Sea, of which the Gulf of Mexico is a well known feature to us. So to carry out the royal order, Captain John Smith on a bleak December day, 1607, with a small detachment embarked on a barge and headed up the Chickahominy River to find the South Sea. Coming to the shallows he had to leave the barge and most of his party.

Having secured a canoe and some Indians for guides, he detailed two of his companions and continued up the river to a point in the White Oak Swamp east of Richmond that he named Rossweik. Here he was hindered in his search for the South Sea by a band of Indians, and being captured by them he was taken before their chief, Opechancanough, a brother of King Powhatan, who turned him over to his kingly relative to be disposed of, and so Capt Smith was sent under guard to Werowocomoko, Powhatan's chief place of council, in what is now Gloucester County, at a point not so very far from Yorktown, on the North Fork of York River.

Passing over the incidents of Capt Smith's rescue as an old fable, and of the many acts of kindness the young princess showed the settlers, we find that in the course of events Pocahontas became a prisoner in 1613, taken by Captain Samuel Argall, and was carried to Jamestown from her forest home much against her will, a demonstrative and surprising copious screamer of eighteen years of age.

John Rolf, sometimes called Thomas Rolfe, one of the colonists, was smitten with her charms, and his attachment was reciprocated. Rolfe it seems became now "much troubled in spirit." The Bible as he read it forbade marriage with strange wives, and their mutual love kindled a "mighty warfare in his meditations." The moving impulse of his soul, like most of colonists, was to christianize the heathen, and so Mr Rolfe reflected upon the question whether it was not his duty to marry and convert this heathen creature Pocahontas. And so the historian says of this marriage: "What most touched and decided Rolfe was her desire to be taught and instructed in the knowledge of God; her capabilities of understanding, her aptness and willingness to receive any good impressions, and also the 'the spiritual beside her own incitements stirring me up thereto."

So according to the true poetic justice of romance the lovely Indian girl at the age of eighteen became Mrs John Rolfe in the old church at Jamestown and was endowed with the christian name of Rebecca.

Three years later Mr Rolfe carried his bride to London, where she was honored as the daughter of a king, her arrival creating a great sensation.

In her Virginia forest home Pocahontas had dressed in doeskin lined with down from pigeon-breasts. Her adornments were anklets and bracelets of coral, with a white plume badge of royalty floating over her hair. But in London and in her English home she appeared in all the splendors of courtly apparel, and was the first lady of the New World to appear in the home country of her husband.

Pocahontas was received at [illegible] most "graciously used" by the King and Queen.

The Primate of England pleased with her conversion to christianity gave a grand entertainment in her honor and for a time Pocahontas was all the fashion in the brilliant revels of the great metropolis.

In March, 1617, she died suddenly at Gravesend, aged twenty-two years. All her arrangements were about made for her return to Virginia. But she made "a godly end" and was buried in the parish church and her name carelessly registered Rebecca Wrothe. This building was afterwards burned, and in its ashes disappeared the earthly relics of Pocahontas.

She left one son, Thomas Rolfe, who was brought up in London. He finally came to Virginia and was known as Lieutenant Rolfe, commanding Fort James on the Chickahominy. Lieut. Rolfe married in England afterwards and brought his wife to Virginia, where he became a gentleman of note and fortune. Their only daughter became Mrs Robert Bolling, a widely connected family of Virginia. And now, as a Virginia historian says, "This remnant of the imperial family of Virginia, which long ran in a single person, is now increased and branched out into very numerous progeny."

The character and worthy services of Pocahontas were fully attested and appreciated by the colonists. They were deeply touched by "the love of Pocahontas," who "never once in four or five days brought food which saved many of their lives, that else for all this had starved of hunger," and they called her the "dear and beloved Pocahontas." Capt. John Smith said of her: "As for her stature, countenance, and expression she far exceeded any of the rest," and in his letter presenting and commending her to Queen Anne, Captain Smith declared that,—"During the time of two or three years, she, next under God, was still the instrument to preserve this colony from death, famine and utter confusion, which if in those days had once been discovered Virginia might have been as it was to our first undertakers."

Senator Daniel, who presented the portrait to the Virginia Senate for Mr Welcome, closed his presentation address in this manner:

"The charm of romance will ever hang over the story of Pocahontas, and that flower of the wilderness will ever shed its brightness and fragrance over the rude, stern, and cruel scenes of our people's earliest struggles to get a foothold in the land, whose inhabitants are now as the stars of heaven, the leaves of the trees, and the sands of the sea. But far beyond this, it should not be forgotten that she was indeed the guardian spirit of the great frontier Captain John Smith and his feeble companions; and who knows but for her what would have been the new world's destiny?

"It is meet that her portrait should hang here, in remembrance of her lovely character and her pious deeds, and the myriads that gaze upon it, wondering whence came the gentle spirit that dwelt in the savage breast, will be minded also that all men are brethren, and that even in dark shadows of the forest primeval there may shine a light from Heaven and be found, or find at least,

"'A spark of that immortal fire,
By angels shared, by Allah given,
To lift from earth our low desire.'"

LOOSE PIECES OF ROCK.

While it is a fact that Pocahontas County cannot keep her roads in first class order, still they can be vastly improved every spring by sending men over them throwing out the loose pieces of rock which interfere so seriously with the traveling public. Every one recognizes that the roads could be improved fifty per cent by this method at trifling cost, but it seems to be a case of official inertia.

If someone would institute a general rock picking on the county [illegible] cost of not over [illegible] per annum, the roads would improve as though by magic.

Go on any of our roads and you will see five pound pebbles which have been worn round and smooth by the wheels of vehicles. Thousand of people have come in contact with them and have let them lie. When the road mender comes by with a shovel (to save stooping) he takes the stone, and it requires just about one second to hurl it over the bank and out of the way.

How all the stones get into the road is more than we can imagine. There are certainly more stones in the roads than elsewhere. The county court is always providing for improvements, but there has never been a rock picking fund. Some men will of their own accord stoop and roll a stone away from the line of travel, but they are few and far between, and are philanthropists.

THE KENTUCKY CASE.

The Supreme Court of the United States decided that Taylor had had his rights under the Constitution of Kentucky, and that there were no grounds to give the Federal courts jurisdiction. This gives the Democrats control of the Governorship and minor offices. The Taylor militia decided not to disrupt the Union, so they gave three cheers for Taylor and disbanded. Beckham is governor.

It will take Kentucky a long time to recover from the effects of the terrible time she has experienced through her politicians. As long as people allow themselves to be moved by professional politicians such conditions are possible. Hardly one public man out of ten is sincere and honest. We believe that politics will corrupt any man. He is continually in a war in which hate, envy, malice, falsehood, fear and licentiousness mingle until his nature becomes warped and crooked.

He must be elevated to office by ways so crooked and has to stoop so low that when he is elected he feels that he has paid the price and is under no obligations to anyone.

Kentucky's condition is only the disease in a malignant form, and under our entire boy system of politics any State is liable to [illegible] through just such scenes of horror

AN OLD CLOCK.

Mr J. M. Price, of Ronceverte, W. Va., writes us concerning a remarkable old clock:

I notice in a recent issue of your paper an account of Geo. Brown's clock, 40 years old. I have one in my house, one my father bought 1825 to 1827. It kept time for father ever afterwards, until his death, which occurred in 1877. Then sister Sarah kept it until she died, and then I had it brought to my house, and it is our standard time, far superior to any of the modern clock. In fact, the jeweler here says it is not worn any, as far as he can see.

It is a wooden clock and runs with weights. I read on the inside the following announcement by the maker: "Patent Clocks. Invented by Eli Terry. Made and Sold at Plymouth, Conn., by E. Terry & Sons. Warranted if well used."

This clock cost $40 when new—the price of 8 or 10 calves, at least, and about the highest price for a horse or two steers. Who says old things are not as good as the new—at least, clocks.

Our First International Marriage.

Some people are given to thinking that the Englishman's predilection for the American girl is a recently developed passion. Such [illegible] portrait in oils of one of the very first American girls to catch an Englishman of position. let them journey to Boonton Hall, in the County of Norfolk, the hall that was in former days the seat of the Rolfe family. In this hall hangs a portrait of a handsome young woman with high cheekbones and complexion splendidly swarthy. This portrait of the far-famed Princess Pocahontas was painted but a few weeks before she died on a ship about to sail for America. She was buried in the parish church of Gravesend, at the mouth of the river Thames, and to this day the curious can see the following entry in the parish register: "1616. March 10. Rebecca Wrolfe, wife of Thomas Wrolfe, gent., a Virginia lady born, was buried here in the chauncell." Unfortunately the original edifice was burnt down a century ago, otherwise Americans could now look upon the tomb of the first American girl who took an English husband.—Saturday Evening Post.

A Good Cough Medicine.

It speaks well for Chamberlain's Cough Remedy when druggists use it in their own families in preference to any other. "I have used Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for the past five years with complete satisfaction to myself and customers," says druggist J. Goodsmith, Van Etten, N. Y. SIMMONS—JOHNSON.

About noon May 30th, 1900, at the home of William E. Johnson near Marlinton, George Hampden Simmons and Miss Lavinia Johnson were joined in holy matrimony by William T. Price as officiating minister.

The groom is a young industrious farmer residing on Spruce Flats near Buckeye; the bride is the youngest daughter of Ewing Johnson and his deceased second wife, who had been Miss Montana McKay of Augusta County, Va.

Several nice presents were received by the bride. A bountiful dinner, handsomely spread and nicely served was enjoyed by a goodly number of guests. Many sincerely kind wishes attend these young people in their now blended lives.

John Andrew Warwick.

Died, at Warwickton, near the Warm Springs, Bath County, Va., May 29, 1900, of pneumonia complicated with other ailments, John Andrew Warwick, aged 63 years.

He was a Confederate soldier from start to finish in the Bath Squadron of Cavalry, with the rank of lieutenant. During the war he received a wound that was a grievous affliction to him for many years, although not disabled from military service very long thereby. Since the proclamation of peace between the States, he has been closely occupied in farming and handling live stock. He spent many years on Western ranches, but returned to Virginia a few years ago to be near his aged parents and assist in caring for them and their younger children.

He had but recently purchased Warwickton, the old Jackson's River Houestead, and very flattering prospects were opening up before him when he was taken hence by death. His decease is a calamity to be deeply deplored by his family, many attached friends and relatives, while Bath and Pocahontas counties are bereaved of an intelligent, patriotic citizen.

We attach a tribute to his memory by a life long friend:

John Andrew Warwick was sixty three years old, being the oldest of Judge James Warwick's family, of Bath County, Va. His mother having died when he was quite young, much of his early life was spent with his uncle, James Woods of Nelson Co., Va.; a man possessed of many sterling qualities. The one, however, which most impressed the young man was his great honesty, and so it is not surprising that this principle thoroughly permeated his life. His old comrades of the Bath Cavalry, of whom some are living, all testify with tears to his steady courage in action, his general kindness, his magnanimity to his comrades.

Soon after the war he moved to Dunmore, this county, and lived there some years, when he moved west and fixed himself in the live stock business in Washington Territory, and had collected quite a herd of cattle, when one of the hard winters overtook him. He attempted to take his stock thro' crusted snow two feet deep a long distance to a settlement, having to go ahead and break the crust frequently on foot, using up all his blankets tied about his legs, when the crust had gotten into his flesh; and thus with unnaturally hard serve only a few of his cattle. This with one other experience left him with only a pair of mules as property. With these he began hauling rails for Henry McNeel of Washington, and gradually worked up to the ownership of a sawmill, which burning up with a great quantity of lumber left him again penniless.

But his indomitable pluck and his strength of character were beginning to be found out. Walking the streets of a town, calculating what next to pursue, a man met him and proposed to sell him a mill. Without a dollar, the man took his note, and he began operations again and succeeded until he was owner of land which produced $6000 worth or wheat a year. Every dollar he possessed was literally by the sweat of his brow.

As an instance of the esteem in which he was held, he was elected without solicitation or even knowledge, Clerk of the Circuit Court at a salary of $3000 a year; but with characteristic modesty and conscientiousness he declined, not considering himself qualified to fill the office.

At another time he was employed by a Portland man at $75 per month to measure a large lot of lumber he had bought and having shipped from Dayton, Wash. The Dayton party who had sold the lumber had also fixed upon him to measure, so they each paid him $75 per month; but the Dayton party wished him to bill the lumber for the railroad at less than measurement to save freight, which he refused to do. So he was left to measure, but the false billing was given to other hands.

The banks let him have money on his own recognizance, knowing that he refused to give or go security. He would loan a friend money rather than sign his name on his paper.

Hearing of his father's perplexities in his advancing years, he sold his property in the West and hastened to his relief. He frequently spoke of his gratification at being able to make his declining years free from care.

Whilst west he attended the ministrations of the church regularly, and spoke frequently of Rev Mr Penrose of the Congregational church, who was a brother of Senator Penrose of Pennsylvania. He was immersed whilst out there, and was a conscientious Christian. His strong mind was always utterly averse to the levity and familiarity which frequently marks our conversation on religious subjects. A monumental rebuke to all who are ashamed of their profession. The Bible was his text—he wanted nothing more or less, and daily prayer his practice. We shall feel the need of his stalwart nature, his presence was an inspiration, a very prompting to right action. The little children will miss him, for they loved him. "Bold as a lion," yet "gentle as a lamb."

No more pathetic scene could be than his aged and faithful comrade, Stephen Sullivan, who bore him off the Wilderness battle field grievously wounded, - standing by his bedside with sleepless eyes, ready to bear him off this greater battlefield, victorious at the last, but ready to say even now, according to his creed, "God rest his soul!"

Meeting of Committee.

The County Democratic Executive Committee met last Friday to canvass the returns of the May Primary. Nine members of the twelve who form the committee were present. S. B Scott, Jr., appeared in behalf of H. A. Yeager and asked that the ballots be recounted for the office of representative in the legislature. The committee proceeded in executive session to open and count the ballots. The returns of the Commissioners of election were found to be correct in every case except one. At Mill Point there was one ballot which indicated that the voter had attempted to erase the pencil marks over Yeager's name and then scratched McClintic. The committee and commissioners both counted this vote for Yeager. A ballot from Green Bank was torn so that only a small part of McClintic's name remained. Except for the fact that the form of the ballot was familiar the name could not have been distinguished. The entire heading of the ballot was gone. A pencil mark on the remnant of McClintic's name showed the intention of the voter, in the minds of the committe, and this mutilated ballot was counted for Yeager. These were the only debatable votes of the lot.

When Spitt Rock was reached, the ballots returned were 69. The poll-books showed that 69 persons had voted. The commissioners returned 70 votes cast for legislator and 71 cast for sheriff. The commissioners' written return showed McClintic 55, Yeager 15. The ballots counted out McClintic 54, Yeager 15. The addition of votes cast in the whole county showed 566 votes for McClintic and 565 votes for Yeager. The result of the recount was announced, and Mr Yeager's attorney asked the committee to take up the question of how those persons who had no right to vote in the primary voted for this office, naming several men whom the speaker averred had voted for McClintic and were not voters of the county. Mr McClintic replied that he too had information of men who probably had no right to vote who had voted for Yeager, and expressed himself as being most unwilling to undertake such a contest.

The committee adopted the following resolution and adjourned after signing certificates of nomination for the county offices:

Whereas, on the 12th of May, 1900, the Democratic party of Pocahontas County held a primary election to nominate candidates for public offices to be filled at the next general election, and whereas there were cast in the primary the representative in the House of Delegates 566 votes for L. M. McClintic and 565 votes for H. A. Yeager, ascertained by a careful canvass of the Executive Committee, and whereas the said committee after so finding the result as aforesaid were moved by the attorney for H. A. Yeager to take up the question of illegal votes cast in said election to ascertain who had received the majority of votes from those persons who had no right to participate in said primary,

Be it Resolved, That it is the sense of this committee that it has no right to take up the question aforesaid, owing to the fact that it would be an impossible task to ascertain how many irregular votes were cast and for whom, and because the commissioners of election at the various precincts were constituted under the call for said primary sole judges of the qualifications of the voter. This committee earnestly appeals to the contestants and all other good Democrats of the county to unite in the support of the ticket as this day certified by this committee, and calls upon all who have the good of the party at heart to join in the effort to carry this county by an increased majority at the general election.

A LEAF FROM MY NOTE-BOOK.

We turn another leaf in the Note-Book and get a glance at the headwaters of Indian Draft down the mountain side to the left of us. Mount Pleasant and its surroundings catch up our attention for a little, but as we are hurrying on, and have to even glance back to pick up a note by the wayside, we forbear to make mention of the good people in this quiet vale which reposes at the foot of the mountain in this direction.

Our friend Jacob Beverage has been passed,—not intentionally, however, in hastily turning the leaves of our book, we drop back then right at this point to drop a good and pleasant word in his behalf. Mr Beverage lives in quietude on the slops of the mountain between the headwaters of Elk River and Clover Creek. We learn that he thinks of moving across to the other side of Elk soon. We trust that he and his are getting ready to "see the King in His beauty" when the veil is lifted. But in missing a leaf, we seeem at least to be rambling in our thoughts, as Isaac Sharp's place is the next thing that heaves in sight

Isaac is a good man and has a nice little family. We hope, however, that he will not fail to lead that good family of his heavenward, that when the King shall come he will pronounce the 'well done" in behalf each one of them.

Here are stock scales. Another stock man lives here. G. W. Munn is an active, energetic man; wherever you see him he is busy. Besides his attention to farming and stock here, he has a hotel and livery stable at Marlinton. He belongs to a good church, and our prayer is that we may all keep in touch with Heaven all through this life—that we have the promise of the Gospel which gives both this life and the next to the faithful.

We are well at the foot of the mountain, and watering our horses in this beautiful spring at William Sharp's milk-house. This is a nice location, just "back from the village street," but close enough to town to make it both pleasant and profitable. We are commanded not to be covetous, unless it be to covet the good gifts of God. We want to be submissive to the laws of Heaven; and yet we would like a location like this. It is near enough to the beautiful little village of Edray; it is even near enough to the scene of the great Greenbrier Valley Railroad. But why particularize since we are in the midst of nice locations and pleasant surroundings. Pitch our tent any where in this vicinity and we will have a good place and good people for neighbors.

We have reached Edray at last. We cannot pass Mr Sharp's place without noticing those two little mounds out in the field. A new graveyard is started here. Two precious little ones, children of Dr J. W. and Mrs Price, sleep here. The great Shepherd of the sheep has taken these little lambs to Himself. The people of this household have such an interest in heaven as they did not have before these precious ones went there. They lead the way for parents, grandparents and all of us to that bright clime where they will not need the light of the sun, but all shall shine brighter than the sun in the Kingdom of heaven.

Here our company leave us. They hurry on to Marlinton to Court, as we linger a little at the post office. Just here we cannot refrain from thinking of the great White Throne before which we all shall stand on the great day for which all other days were made. We can not afford to fail in being ready to pass the final test. We are at Edray now. Here we find two store houses filled with general merchandise, and very accommodating clerks to wait on us. Geo. P. Moore, the P. M., is a friend to all and is very popular among the people. Alvin Gay, is friendly, talkative, and a good clerk—knows his business well and attends to it.

S. B. Moore is behind the counter. He also is one of our very best men, and takes delight in waiting on the people. In his absence Adam Baxter or his daughter Miss Lena, clerk—fill the bill well.

Time flies and we hurry on, but at the end of Indian Draft we do up a good round for Hoskin Ponge and his as we pass. Mr Ponge occupies one of those nice locations we talked of above. We are glad to see our friends so comfortable and happy in this life, and as we wish to be wise in attending their attentions to the things of the better life. Nearing the end of our journey we hasten on without going further up the Draft at present.

Here is a shoe shop, saddler's shop, tannery, &c. The occupants of those lines pass on the hill yonder. Here is another good place to live. Here you will be kindly treated, get a nice community, &c., at A. Sheets's residence. My Report leave them at there.

The church and school house are at hand right here, inviting all who come within their reach to school and to heaven. Life eternal is bound up in the knowledge of "the true God and Jesus Christ whom he has sent."

Here is S. B. Moore's residence in a quiet and retired spot, and yonder is J. W. Tyler's farther on. Here is the forks of the road that leads to the Big Spring, &c. In all this little village we cannot tell you where we would get the best treatment. We are sure that any of these good people would use us well were we to stop for dinner, as it is nearing this time of day. We go on past Mr Tyler's, a place where they can take either wood or iron and make anything out of it they wish, and alight at the next house on the height of land at the Pine-bush. Making our best bow to all, we get down here and rest awhile, as well as take dinner with the people.

If we get time and chance, we may, if it is thought best, drop your readers some more jottings from our Note-Book.

We never would refuse,
If we could find all out,
In our short round about,
To give you all the news.

So then, dear friends, be kind,—
If in this jotting lot
We notice you or not,
And bear us well in mind.

A. M.

FROST.

Brad Sharp, who has been gone for nearly two years, has returned, some say, ready to hang out his sign as an attorney-at law.

Peter Gum, the sheep and cattle buyer of Highland, was here on Thursday buying lambs.

Rev C. M. Fultz spent some time in our quiet town Thursday.

We are certain that Uncle Sam is somewhat puzzled to know what to do in regard to re-establishing our mail route. His bosses, vice-President from Canada, has looked over the route, but has been slow in making out the required papers. We wonder if it isn't time for the fool killer to come this way. He could make good use of his cycle.

Our Sunday school is progressing finely under the supervision of J. H. Lantz, to whom the people are greatly indebted for the interest he manifests in it.

Hannah & Harper's wool trade is immense. They are selling goods right along, and the bargains they give are drawing a good trade from the Dunmore neighborhood.

Mrs Sherman Curry returned last Sunday from Highland, where she was visiting her parets for the first time in three years. Miss Mollie Curry, her sister, accompanied her back. Saul is now under the treatment of Dr Jordan. She will remain some time.

"Reuben," in a recent issue of the Times, said that Frost would soon have a blacksmith. We would inform the writer that we had one already: a good smith and a Christian gentleman. Always ready to attend his own business—a thing he learned when he was a boy.

We hope the railroad will soon be completed to Clover Lick so we can get our mail on time.

Mrs O. B. Sharp, who has been very ill, is slowly improving.

I suppose, Mr Editor, that those candidates who have just returned from Salt River have settled down and are willing to take up the banner and be on top for Democracy and the county ticket from head to foot. MIKE.

DUNMORE.

Fine weather.

Several railroad men were in town last week—Major Hotchkiss and Wooding. Amiral Dan was inthe crowd.

The hop, skip and jump Saturday in town was only tolerably.

Mr Perly Brown Noel and lady spent last week in town.

A little child 2 months old of Jacob Sheets' died last week.

Sandy Sutton died at Cheat Bridge Friday night on his way home from Horton where he had been sick for 2 months. He was 20 years old and one of our best young men. He was buried at the Sutton graveyard Sunday and a very large crowd attended his funeral.

Peter Warwick and Mrs George W. Sigle attended the burial of their sister Mrs Lightner in Bath last week.

H. M. Moore and family are on a visit to Highland county.

Miss Lucy Baxter will close her school at Dunmore this week.

The big sawmill will soon be ready for operation at Leatherbark.

We would like for old Mrs Pooh to take the bridges out of the road before she breaks her neck.

We want to put in new bridges soon.

The legal voters of Pocahontas County demand of the Executive Committee to know who the legal voters are. This is a question of importance.

A great many people want C. B. Sweeker to run independent for Commissioner of the Court. He declines on these grounds: He believes in good roads by taxation and believes in a hog law, and it would be a hard matter to elect a man for commissioner who believes that way,—and both are needed.

The cut worms and the Republican party have the lead at present.

Sweeker will run a big auction dering Circuit Court, which commences June 19.

West Virginia University,

MORGANTOWN, W. VA.

The growth of the University is quite as notable in its equipment, its faculty, and its new departments as in its attendance. For examples, look at

The School of Music

established two years ago. It has a faculty of seven instructors, trained under the best teachers in this country and Europe. It occupies a separate building fitted up especially for its needs. Instruction on all stringed instruments, including violin, viola, mandolin, guitar, etc., is free. For voice and piano the fees are very low. A magnificent pipe organ for Commencement Hall is being constructed and it will be for the use of students of the School of Music. If you are interested in the study of music, write for full information.

Other departments of the University are developing with equal rapidity. The Preparatory Department, with its four new instructors, deserves special mention. Write for a special pamphlet about it.

The University has a faculty of sixty-five instructors, graduates of the foremost schools in the world.

The Winter Quarter begins January 1, and the Spring Quarter April 1.

ODDS AND ENDS.

A Persian Poem.

A Persian poet named Omar Kayyam lived in the eleventh century. He was also a great astronomer and mathematician. He wrote a poem called the Rubaiyat of Omar Kayyam, which owes its great poularity to the exquisite translation by Edward Fitzgerald, who died in 1883. Omar was an old heathen who believed in the temporal things of this world. The poem contains 101 verses. We copy some of the finest. They are taken from different parts of the poem at random.

Ah, make the most of what we yet may spend
Before we, too, into the dust descend;
Dust unto Dust and under Dust to lie,
Sans Wine, sans Song, sans Singer, and sans End.

The worldly hope men set their hearts upon
Turns ashes, or it prospers and anon,
Like snow upon the desert's dusty face,
Lighting a little hour or two is gone.

Whether at Naishapur or Babylon,
Whether the cup with sweet or bitter run,
The wine of life keeps oozing drop by drop,
The leaves of life keep falling one by one.

For some we loved, the loveli-st and best
That from this vintage rolling Time hath pressed,
Have drunk their cup a round or two before,
And one by one crept silently to rest.

Waste not the hour, nor in the vain pursuit
Of This and That endeavor and dispute;
Better be j-cund with the fruitful grape
Than sadden after none or bitter fruit.

O threats of Hell and hopes of Paradise!
One thing at least is certain—this life flies;
One thing is certain and the rest is lies;
The flower that once has bloomed forever dies.

The revelations of devout and learned
Who rose before us and as prophets burned,
Are all but stories which awoke from sleep
They told their comrades and to sleep returned.

Heav'n but the vision of fulfilled desire,
And Hell the shadow from a soul on fire,
Cast on that darkness into which ourselves,
So late emerged from shall so soon expire.

The moving finger writes and having writ,
Moves on; nor all your piety nor wit
Shall lure it back to cancel half a line,
Nor all your tears wash out a word of it.

Oh Thou who didst with pitful and with gin
Beset the road I was to wander in,
Thou wilt not with predestined evil round
Enmesh and then impute my fall to sin!

Come fill the cup and in the fire of Spring
Your winter garment of repentence fling:
The Bird of Time has but a little way
To flutter—and the Bird is on the wing.

Ah Love! could you and I with Him conspire
To grasp this sorry scheme of things entire,
Would we not shatter it to bits—and then,
Remold it nearer to the heart's desire.

We had copied some of the foregoing with a view to printing them. They were lying on the desk when a young attorney came in. This young gentleman has spent a considerable portion of his limited existence in college, and he is supposed to know poetry when he sees it. He caught sight of the copied verses and picked them up and read them and laid them down with the remark that the editor of the Pocahontas Times was breaking over and writing doggeral again.

Sappho.

Have I read Sapho? I have and found it about as inane, dull, uninteresting, and unvarnished a tale as ever came my way. From the amount of free advertising the book had received we imagined that was something that man, who is as prone to do evil as the sparks are to fly upward, would want to read but should not. Finally chance threw temptation in my way and I picked up a copy of Sappho marked "unabridged." We thought how dreadful it would be if we should be taken off with a copy of that dreadful book in our possession. This is the orthodox thought to have on such occasions. We looked into the book and found it dull as dish water. It reminded us of some young man we dosed to be bad masquerading as a desperate villain. The search of after erotic literature will find more of it in Paradise Lost on the centre table in the parlor than in the insipid Sappho.

A short time after we discovered that Sappho was a fraud, we were in the town that was bearing some of the members of the Baltimore Confederate Stuffs. The player from monotony tried to chain us for his own, and for first game he made us at us was to sell us a copy of Sappho. We remarked that it was not a suitable book for a minister of the gospel to read, and he gave us a sorrowful look and troubled us no more that trip.

Repartee.

The substantial citizen was sitting in his office when he received a call from an improvident friend who wanted to borrow fifty dollars of him. As usual he began to inquire into the nature of the case. The would be borrower explained.

"My landlady gave me the ultimatum this morning. She came down mad and told me that if I did not pay her fifty dollars to-day she would have my trunks and boxes carried down stairs and piled on the side-walk."

"Well, what did you say to that?"

"Say? I couldn't say anything. You know I never was good at repartee."

The Colonel.

There is a certain good-natured Virginian who is by courtesy a Colonel. He decided to take the Kesley cure, and before matriculating he went to Washington to wind up his drinking days with one more big spree. After some days drinking he had his friend drive him around to the institution. The dean received him very politely. The first question he asked him, however, was not a success. The dean said, "What regiment did you belong to, Colonel?" "What regiment? D—n you go read the history of your country!"

Maud Muller on a summer's day
Raked the meadow sweet with hay
And as she raked, now here, now there,
The hayseeds fluttered from her hair

She knew amid the show tents brown
Her brother loitered in the town;
While down the glen in bushes thick
Her dad was fishing in the crick.

"Ah, me," she cried, "what lots of joy
I've missed because I ain't a boy!
Ah oh, I'm sadder than of sin,
To think, alas, it might of been."

19TH CENTURY CONVENIENCES

Many of the leading magazines are publishing articles illustrating the various reasons why the 19th century should be regarded as the most progressive in the history of human development of all the centuries.

One of these articles has this to say about lucifer matches, which are so common and so cheap, compared with what matches were as first remembered by the writer, fifty or more years ago. So far as the writer knows, the first box of matches, costing 25 cents, ever brought to Marlinton was by the late J. A. Price. It consisted of twenty-five matches, much like the matches now in ordinary use, tipped with a preparation of sulphur and phosphorus, and ignited by a piece of sand paper, which came with every box.

The paper was doubled up, the match inserted in the fold and compressed tightly by thumb and fore-finger, and then drawn out quickly, being ignited by the friction. The fumes of sulphur were stifling and sneezing and coughing so severe that the match was sometimes dropped and the person seek the fresh air, leaving the match to take care of itself among the shavings or dry stuff prepared beforehand. This was considered, however, a marked advance on flint and steel, flashing of powder in a flintlock gun, or carrying a chunk of fire a mile or two, as the writer knows from experience.

One of the magazine articles contains this paragraph in substance: The present generation of younger people can hardly realize how much the anxiety of living has been allayed by the invention and production of lucifer matches, for the power to make fire at will is the great fundamental necessities of human existence. While all times prehistoric, it is never, to us difficult was the acquirement of this power to make fire at will that there is much plausibility in the classic belief that fire was a direct gift from the Almighty, and much to justify the ancient custom of preserving fire as a religious ceremony. But the primative methods of producing fire through friction by rubbing together two dry sticks of wood, or whirling one piece of wood pivoted into another was difficult of execution; while the later method of eliciting a spark by striking a flint upon steel was dependent for its success on the possession of the choicest tinder most carefully prepared.

But few persons now living can fully realize the anxiety and with which our grandmothers raked the ashes off the embers in the fireplace on a cold winter morning to see if there was life enough left in them to kindle a flame, because there was so much dependent on one live coal, for food and comfort. Now all this source of anxious apprehension has passed away. With a penny the housewife can now buy a gross of matches with which to produce the heavenly gift of light and warmth. In this connection about the facility of producing fire at will one may remember and reflect upon the advantages to be derived from the abundance and cheapness of materials of various kinds for illuminating purposes. How dreary our lives would be in long winter evenings if for the sake of economy or any other reason families were compelled to while away the hours in darkness.

About seventy years ago aluminum was discovered by Washington and for thirty years it was regarded as a mere scientific fancy article, and it was only about forty years ago that any industrial use began to be made upon this one of the most wonderful of all metals. Today it commands the attention of the entire industrial world in a way no other metal does. Not so very long since a pound of aluminum sold at the fancy rate of thirty or forty dollars, but work it could have been bought in any required amount for thirty or forty cents a pound, and there is ample reason for the opinion that it will not be long until thirty or forty cents will look as fanciful as thirty or forty dollars appear to us now, so great are possible improvements in the method of manufacture. It is only a question of a brief period when it will supercede copper, as it serves all the uses of copper and more besides. Having superceded copper in industrial uses, it will come in competition with iron and the issue of the contest will hinge on the question whether iron shall be indispensable in machinery for the production of electricity, and this question the future alone can settle by actual experimental tests yet to be put into use.

While all this may be true, still enough has been settled by actual appliances as to leave little or no doubt that the age is just in sight when aluminum will virtually dethrone King Iron, and aluminum assume the crown as emperor of all metals yet discovered, when in the times so near at hand aluminum will become the chief means of increasing and extending the range of human performance on the land, the sea and the illimitable realms of the firmament above.

In this respect aluminum has capabilities greater by far than any other metal now known, and its civilizing potency may be estimated at fully a hundred times that of iron, however startling this statement may fall upon our ears. This estimate as to the potency of aluminum contrasted with iron, though astonishing in the extreme, is not at all exaggerated. To familiarize ourselves with a state so strangely astonishing let us reflect upon the fact that in bulk available for the uses of man there is thirty times as much aluminum as iron, or in other words, where is a ton of iron in bulk there are thirty tons of aluminum.

This feature of comparative abundance suggests great possibilities. Moreover, aluminum is ductile, which adds to its value. In many of its properties aluminum partakes of the character of a precious metal, which gives it additional worth. Its electric conductivity, which, for a given weigh, is greater than any other metal, would be alone sufficient to make it one of the mott important factors in future homan progress. The extreme lightness of aluminum makes it far more easy to transport the object manufactured. In virtue of this relative lightness, aluminum bids fair to revolutionize the construction of war ships, and making transportation more rapid and secure and thus increase enormously the useful performances of human energy and endeavor.

But by an increasing number of thoughtful people it is coming to be believed that the greatest civilizing potency of aluminum will be developed in aerial navigation and travel, which is well nigh sure to be brought about by its use. Telegraphic and telephonic instruments made of aluminum will slowly enlighton the millions of barbaric peoples. Electric motors and lamps will do the work of enlightenment and civilization more quickly than telegraph or telephone; but more quickly still will the flying machine enlighten and civilize beyond anything hitherto accomplished by the uses of aluminum. By rendering travel easy and rapid, aluminum will prove the best of means for unifying the diversified and heterogeneous elements of our wonderful humanity.

THE FRENCH COACH HORSE

Editor Times:

As many ignorant or unprincipled persons are trying to put upon the public scrub horses as French Coachers, I send you a translation from the French of the Resolutions by the Horse Breeders Association of France, establishing a model type of Coach horse with description of typical stallion, which I think you will consider worthy of publication.

Respectfully, &c., ——.

Realizing that the highest degree of success in all things is only accomplished through the united and persistent efforts of enthusiastic and intelligent workers, and being inspired by ambitious desires to achieve greater perfection, more uniform production, higher physical qualities, greater endurance, more speed, and more in the breed of carriage horses of our country, we join in the establishment of a model which shall be outlined as a standard to which all breeders may look as typifying in form and qualities our ideal breed of horses. A standard that by its perfection will inspire us with higher ambition to place the name of the carrosier of France first among the breeds of the world.

As the breeders of France we inherit that historic race of horses developed under Charlemagne and all the great feudal lords of France; a race whose courage, strength, and endurance carried the armored chivalry of France to victory on the battle-field of Tours, and hurled back that vast wave of infidel Saracens, saving Europe to Christianity and Civilization. A race whose energy and stoutness gave William the field of Hastings and name of Conqueror; to France the domination of England, and to the world a new language and new civilization. A race that bore the Crusades and a number of her noblest knights to do successful battle for the Holy Sepulcher at the very gates of Jerusalem, hurling back the Arab of the desert. A race that has carried the victorious armies of France to every capital of Europe.

In the past the horse of France shines in the reflected light of the tempered shield, the gleaming battleax, the glistening helmet, the gaudy uniform, and all the blazing panoply of war. All the resources of a great nation have been energized to mould the noblest of the animal creation into a powerful agent for war.

The demands of peaceful pursuits and the requirements of a luxurious age require him for a different purpose. Elegant, active, enduring, courageous, and swift must be the horse of the future.

Model Carrosier.

In repose impressive and stately; in form harmonious in all proportions, height 1 metre 63 centimetres, (16 1-20 hands) with depth of shoulder and body sufficient to guarantee great lung power and digestive capacity, without a suggestion of coarseness or grossness.

This form necessitates high withers, deep brisket, prominent breast, well sprung ribs, and good flank; head medium sized, clean and bony; large, open nostril; jowl not too prominent, frontal broad and full. Large, clear hazel eye; ear small at base, medium length, sharp at point, erect and quick. Throttle small; head set at a flexible angle; neck, long slight crest, with easy graceful arch, springing from very sloping shoulders overlaid with prominent muscles; high thin withers; back short, slightly hollowed from middle to withers, muscled powerfully over the loins, with quarters long and smooth sloping with easy curve to tail, which should be attached high and gracefully elevated the moment the animal moves. Hips smooth but well muscled; thighs, strong wide and powerful; hocks, broad, low, and clean.

The bony tractues clearly delineated; legs, between hocks and pasterns short and flat with all cords and tendons clearly delineated, especially on back of leg which should be neither too crooked nor too straight; pasterns, medium length and sloping backward slightly more than front line of hoof. Hoof, large, for blooded [illegible]

The fore feet should be somewhat more round with good frog and hoof; pasters well sloped; leg short from pastern to knee, flat and broad; tendons clean and free in the back. Knees, broad and flat. Leg, from knee to elbow, long, strong, and well muscled both inside and out.

At rest the horse should stand squarely on all four legs with toes turned slightly outward. Skin, thin; hair soft and silky; mane fine but not too abundont; easy, quick walk. Trotting action quick, high and round, free and clean; not so long in stride to be displeasing, yet sufficiently long and quick to attain a high rate of speed.

With the typical form and perfection of movement, we demand that no animal be used for breeding purposes that is not absolutely free from all hereditary taint; and further, that the speed necessary to the production of a typical carrosier should not be less than 4000 metres [about 3 miles] in eight minutes under a weight of one hundred and seventy pounds in saddle by actual test.

A Wrath of Beauty.

Is often hidden by unsightly pimples, eczema, tetter, erysipelas, salt rheum, etc. Bucklyn's Arnica Salve will glorify the face by curing all skin eruptions, also cuts, bruises, burns, boils, felons, ulcers, and the worst forms of Piles. 25c a box. Cure guaranteed.

Does Your Head Ache?

Are your nerves weak? Can't you sleep well? Pain in your back? Lack energy? Appetite poor? Digestion bad? Boils or pimples? These are sure signs of poisoning.

From what poisons?

From poisons that are always found in constipated bowels.

Unless the contents of the bowels are not removed from the body each day, as nature intended, these poisonous substances are sure to be absorbed into the blood, always causing suffering and frequently causing severe disease.

There is a common sense cure.

AYER'S PILLS

They daily insure an easy and natural movement of the bowels.

You will find that the use of

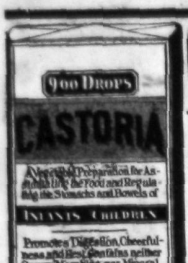

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

with the pills will hasten recovery. It cleanses the blood from all impurities and is a great tonic to the nerves.

THE STATE CONVENTION.

The convention at Parkersburg last week was one of the largest and most enthusiastic meetings of the kind ever held in the State. The ticket nominated will have the desired effect of uniting the party and when the convention adjourned every delegate from the highest to the lowest was impressed with the idea that the Democratic party would sweep the State this fall.

For Governor, John H. Holt was nominated over Judge Tavenner.

For Auditor, James H. Miller, of Hinton, with Joseph Hanlan, of Wheeling, as second man.

For Superintendent of Schools, Robert A. Armstrong, with H. L. Swisher second.

For Attorney General, George A. McCoy, of Sisterville had a walk over.

For Treasurer, J. Garland Hurst or Harper's Ferry was nominated.

For Judges of the Supreme Court, John W. English, the present incumbent was nominated by acclamation to succeed himself. To succeed Brannon, Judge W. G. Bennett was nominated with Judge A. B. Campbell a close second.

We see it stated generally that Judge Campbell was beaten solely by reason of his geographical position. The southern part of the State having received her share of the nominations.

The platform was a safe and very satisfactory one. The first clause adopts the principles laid down by Thomas Jefferson in his inaugural address, which is a general way settles an ideal form of government. The second clause reaffirms the Chicago platform so far as it contains an exposition of those principles. That was a master hand that steered so close to the rock on which we split in 1896. Bryan is sat-isfied and we gladly ourselves to abide by the result of the Kansas City Convention. We denounce imperialism, wars of aggression, trusts, protective tariffs, militarism, and the law recently passed by Congress in regard to the currency.

We insist upon the maintenance of the Monroe Doctrine. We sympathize with the Boers in the unholy war which has been thrust upon them. We favor building and owning the Nicaragua canal, and we reiterate that we do not owe any part of the Virginia State debt. We then show up the rottenness of Republican State politics, and call attention to the fact that the appropriations by the legislature in the six years of Republican domination have increased from $1,400,000 to $2,000,000. So we call upon the State to return to its old love. Some things are conspicuous by their absence. For instance, in all that long platform, we have looked in vain for such words as bimetalism, ratio, demonitization, and silver. This is just as well, perhaps, as there are some Democrats who are easily frightened away by such words and there is no need to strife over what can not become a live issue.

A Lingering Death Right.

Prof. Hy. Almont, the almost miraculous escape from death, says: "Exposure after measles induced serious lung trouble which ended in Consumption. I had frequent hemorrhages and coughed day and night. All my doctors said I must die. Then I began to use Dr King's New Discovery which wholly cured me. Hundreds have used it on my advice and all say it never fails to cure Throat, Chest and Lung troubles. Regular size 50c and $1.

CONFEDERATE VETERANS. ATTENTION.

In obedience to a general order from General Green, (Comdj. 2nd Brigade) Burgess Camp, No. 929, U. C. V., met at Academy Saturday, June 2nd, 1900, and appointed a committee to arrange for the execution of said order, viz.: the observance of Memorial or Decoration Day.

The Committee fully realize how sacred is the duty which the Camp has commissioned it to perform. We have a tender recollection of the Cause that was lost. As time removes us from the scenes and events of that thrilling and passionate period, our thoughts and affections revert more frequently and vividly to all that we then knew and witnessed.

In the mysterious recesses of a memory which communes with the things long gone, we again hear the war drum's throb, the clarion note of the bugle, and see the gray columns marching to the fight, and when they are gone and the roar of combat has opened, we listen to the prayers of aged men and the sobs of helpless women, breaking down under the grief *which they had hidden in the pre*sence of those for whom they had prayed and wept. Heroic forms pass proundly before us in that vision, and our eyes seem to catch *once more a glimpse of the "Bon*nie Blue Flag."

We can never forget that the Confederate soldier and all with which he was connected have on us a claim which sympathy, patriotism, charity and affection alike compel us to acknowledge and discharge, and we have remembered that the noblest purpose a people can cherish is to preserve for the guidance of generations yet to come the best traditions and the greatest examples of the past.

Hence we feel that there rests upon the men and women of the South an obligation no less imperious than the call which once summoned our fathers, husbands and brother to arms; an obligation from which no condition can excuse and no power acquit. Therefore in this memorial service we endeavor to perpetuate and honor the memory of our heroic dead. The noble patriots who wore the and firesides, who fought for their homes ciple and died that principle to maintain.

We call upon all members of Burgess Camp and other Confederate veterans to meet at Academy June 23, at 9 o'clock a. m. At the same time and place all members of the Julia Jackson Chapter U. D. C. are requested to assemble and unitedly honor our fallen comrades by placing a flower upon the grave of every Confederate in loving remembrance of his noble, unselfish and heroic deeds.

DIED.

Died, April 23, 1900, of pneumonia, Grace Eva, youngest child of Mr and Mrs J. W. Riley, aged 8 years, 8 months and 20 days. Her sufferings were of a short duration and every effort to keep off the fast approaching hand of death was made, but He who does all things well summoned our darling home to live with the redeemed. The untimely and unexpected death of this dear one was a deep wound, felt in the hearts of many. But we bow in humble submission to the *Lord, who has said "Suffer the lit*tle children to come unto me, for of such is the Kingdom of Heaven."

Now our home is sad and lonely:
It was Grace we loved so well:
She has gone to live with Jesus:
God knows best: He does all things well.

We are left to wander lonely
Through this bitter world of woe:
And we long for bliss immortal,
In that land where all must go.

—Written by a Sister.

John P. McDannald, a prominent citizen near Warm Springs, was thrown out of his buggy near the Shields tannery, May 28, and was so injured that he died June 8, aged 77 years. He was widely known and was much esteemed. In youth he attended among the first pupils the Hillsboro Academy in our county. Upon attaining his majority he and his brother Charles went out with the Forty-Niners to California and they were fairly successful in mining gold. He had a watch encased in gold of his own digging. For many years he was a merchant. In the war between the States he was a faithful soldier in the Bath Squadron. For several years he has devoted his attention to farming and handling livestock. His wife Saidie, a daughter of the late Alexander McClintic, on lower Jacksons River, survives him, along with three sons: Clyde, a physician in charge of a New York Hospital; Alexander, a Cincinnatti lawyer; Boyd, a student at Roanoke College. W. T. P.

Mrs Asbury Pullin, nee Bird, died May 29, near Mt Grove. J. D. Pullen at Marlinton is her nephew.

Mrs Jacob Lightner, of Upper Back Creek, died in Staunton May 27. She was a daughter of the late William Warwick, near Green Bank, and has many friends in this county.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseas s put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescrib ed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires a constitutional remedy, Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer $100 for any case it fails to cure. Send for testimonials.

Local Events.

William Gatewood of Linwood was in town Sunday.

James Turner and wife, of Driftwood, were in town Saturday.

Dr C. P. Casto, of Buchhannon, is in town visiting his friend, Dr L. J. Marshall.

The bass season opens on Friday and the local fishermen and others are preparing for the sport.

Capt. A. E. Smith and F. W. Harper have started a big brick plant at this place.

J. D. Hotchkiss, traffic agent of the C & O passed up the line of the new railroad last week.

Dr Austin, dental surgeon, has located at Marlinton for the practice of his profession.

The suit pending for the settlement of the estate of James McClure has been compromised.

Marvin Carter is putting up a building in town. His mother Mrs Susan Carter has moved to town.

The pine tree in the yard of the Methodist parsonage at Edray was stricken twice with lightning during the thunder storm of a week ago.

Mrs Silas Sharp returned from Fayette County last week accompanied by Mrs George P. Hannah and children, who were sorely bereaved by the recent decease of Rev G. P. Hannah.

George Baxter's next surveying service will be on the projected new road from Linwood via Thorny Flats to Driftwood, thence to Dunmore, which presents a perplexing problem of its kind.

Rev G. W. Nickel has been called to the pastorate of the Marlinton and Huntersville Presbyterian Churches. Rev H. W. McLaughlin will in all probability receive a call to the Green Bank and Dunmore churches.

Rev J. M. Sloan, Presbyterial evangelist, is in this county arranging to supply the vacant churches with ministers. He conducted services at Marlinton and Huntersville, and will also visit Dunmore and Green Bank.

Rev W. T. Price is in Virginia visiting the scenes of his early association, and will spend some time on a horseback tour of the Valley. He has not visited that section since his removal to this county, fifteen years ago.

Dr A. L. Austin, Dentist, of Lewisburg, has opened an office at the Marlinton House. The people of this vicinity now have an opportunity to have first class work done, which they should take advantage of, as the Doctor does not know how long he will remain here.

The Ellis Mill & Manufacturing Company, of Milwaukee, will put in a large band sawmill opposite the mouth of Stoney Creek, just above the town of Marlinton. It will be one of the largest mill in West Virginia. We have it from authentic sources that the contract securing this industry to Marlinton has been signed.

Little head little wit; big head not a bit. That's an old proverb, so don't get it—the big head I mean—for it doesn't pay. The Golden Store don't pretend to know it all. The days of foolishly high prices is passing; women will buy their hats with some of the judgment they display in buying other things. The Golden Store don't boast that it has all the styles of America and no one else the say. The Golden Store is made up of many little stores. If you want a trimmed hat you can get it there cheaper than elsewhere. If you want a good substantial bed stead in oak you can get it there for $2.95. Women's waists, tig new kinds—the percale the mohrie, the piqué, and the organdie—exclusive styles, a nice line for 75 cents.

FROST.

Nice growing weather. The sun and rain makes everything put on a lively appearance, and makes us think of young life when we bloom and send forth fragrance, either to made the world better or worse for having lived, or to wait the coming of fall when we will be cut to the ground by the bleak northern winds.

Hello Mike! we surely were delighted to hear from you, well knowing that you are witty and wise. Your reputation as a journalist is secure in the haven of rest among the tadpoles of Swamp Hollow, where your praises will be sung both night and day.

Peyton Moore has moved his saw mill from Greenbrier River to H. Lee White's where he will saw a large set.

Wise Herold was in the upper end on business Friday.

D. W. Dever is on Elk superintending the construction of a house on his farm.

A. J. Hooks purchased 1000 lbs. of wool in this vicinity, which he delivered to Paul Golden at Marlinton.

A number of our people have been in Marlinton the past week trading out their wool.

Rev Pullin delivered a very able sermon at Frost Sunday morning and at Trinity Church Sunday evening.

Go to A. L. Dilley for bargains.

EAST FROST.

The farmers have been quite busy in their corn fields during the past week.

S. R. Hogsett and daughter of Brown's Creek were pleasant callers in our town last week.

Ellis Buzzard was off to the Hot Springs last week for goods for our merchants.

The post office has never been located in our town yet.

Floyd Williams of Green Bank was in our town on business last week.

Mrs E. Spitzer was off to Doubtard's Creek last week.

Don't forget the concert at Cove Hill Saturday night June 16.

Ben Sharp made a flying trip to Dunmore Friday.

A. L. Dilley opened up his new store last week. He will exchange goods for wool and grain at cash prices. If you want to save money go to his cheap cash store.

SLY FOX.

GREEN BANK.

Fine growing weather at this time.

Oh Yes! Mrs Pooh is not the overseer of the road between Dunmore and Green Bank or she would remove the bridges. She kindly asks the overseer to do it.

Capt Sweeker was in town last Thursday on business.

Deputy Sheets was in town on Thursday.

F. P. Patterson was in this vicinity last week taking the census of the district.

Scott Gum and C. C. Burner were in town Friday.

The quarterly meeting at this place was largely attended, and there was some fine preaching by the Presiding Elder, Rev Hutcheson.

The polls have had an honest count and we hope the party is satisfied with results. Let every Democrat in the county be in his place next November and vote the straight ticket, regardless of feeling. Let us marshal our forces and stand to our colors. Our Republican friends are urging every man to his post and to vote the straight ticket, but let not one vote be lost to the grand old Democratic party, and we will see W. J. Bryan as our leader to give us a prosperous time in the next four years.

We would like to see the vote cast for our district officers, if any were voted for. We have not seen the first figures yet.

MUM POOH.

INDIAN DRAFT.

Fine weather with refreshing showers. Corn hoeing is the order of the day.

Cochran & Waugh have opened up their new store and are doing a good business.

Taylor & Barlow are kept busy with their blacksmithing and wagon repairing.

Henry Fouse will go to Millboro this week for a load of goods for Cochran and Waugh.

William Gay is off to Huntersville this week for Lucky.

Mr. John Waugh is on the sick list, but we hope to see her about again soon.

Sunday school at Mt Pleasant Sunday and much interest shown. Preaching in the evening by Rev Bogle.

Frank Dilley passed here one day last week enroute to Frost.

Wesley Barlow spent a day or two of pleasure in this part last week.

J. W. McClure still trades between J. R. Lambie has put a new supply of ghost-stuff goods and is ready for business. FIG.

GILLESPIE.

Plenty of rain and grass is growing fine, and the mocking bird is singing in the trees.

Several wagons passed here enroute for Huttonsville for supplies for the railroad contractors and D. O'Connell.

Industrious boy, if you want work come to O'Connell's camp and you will find it. He is running two camps with about fifty or sixty men at each one.

Miss Minnie Burner spent Sunday with Misses Virgie and Lucy Gillispie.

Rev J. W. McNeill preached an able sermon to an attentive audience at the Big Fill school-house Tuesday night.

Clyde Y. Beard is scaling logs for D. O'Connell. Clyde is a hustler.

We are glad to see Wade Kelley back in our midst.

James Brooke, who has been very ill for some time, is improving.

Dr J. Cambert has located at Durbin.

G. W. Clarke and Miss Dora Lynch of Alvon, Greenbrier county, spent a days visiting friends at this place.

S. W. Kelley and wife, who were visiting Mrs Kelley's parents at Travellers Repose have returned to their home.

Mr. Willis G. Burner of Travellers Repose and Miss Emma Lee Kelley of this place were united in marriage on Wednesday, June 6th at 8.30 a. m., at the bride's home, Rev J. W. McNeill officiating minister. The brides maids were Misses Roberta Kelley and Maude Burner, and the groomsmen were Messrs Ward Burner and Wade Kelley. The bride was becomingly attired in a beautiful costume of white cashmere, trimmed in rich white satin and silk braid. The brides maids were dressed in white lawn with green sashes. They started on an extended bridal tour, accompanied as far as Huttonsville by the attendants, where they took the train for Weston, Buckhannon and other places. They have our best wishes. "CHEAT."

Biggle Horse Book contains more "horse sense" than many volumes ten times its size. It tells all about breeds, about feeding and gaiering, about stable and road management, of vices and vices, of harness, of diseases and remedies, of breeding, of colt education of shoeing and indeed it covers the whole subject in a concise, practical and interesting manner. It contains 128 pages, is profusely and beautifully illustrated, and handsomely bound in cloth. Every man or woman who drives a horse should have a copy. The price is 50 cents by mail, address the publishers, Wilmer Atkinson Atkinson Co., Philadelphia.

HIS LIFE SAVED

By Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy.

"I am sure that Chamberlain's colic, cholera and diarrhoea Remedy saved my life," says A. E. Ladue of Gregory Landing, Clark county, Kansas. "I was in such a condition from the effects of a severe attack of bowel trouble that the doctor said I could not live. When I was at the lowest ebb, one of my neighbors brought in a bottle of Chamberlain's colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and I took it and got instant relief. I want to say to my fellow men that was one year ago and I am still in good health. Since then the medicine has always been in my house and always will be. It is the best in the world."

A PUGILISTIC PARSON.

The Royal Oak, Mich., Minister Tells Why He Fought in the Prize Ring.

For some time the saloons have run the town of Royal Oak, Mich., and paid no taxes. Thus they were privileged to do about as they pleased. The boxing contest in which I participated was the outcome of a call I made on them Sunday evening, when I found the leading officials of the village and town enjoying themselves in the saloon.

I called because they had been selling to minors and men habitually and injuring them. They had sold to comman drunkards whose families our church was helping, and gave beer to a man I helped from my own scanty supply; because they were as bad as you can picture them, and as bold as getting a band to play in front on Sunday and selling liquor openly, keeping open until 2 or 3 A. M., also wide open on Sundays and holidays, selling to men already intoxicated and then taking money from them, more than due.

(Rev. J. J. Axtell).

They opened a new saloon across the street from the church. Men come into church with whisky breath, sit a while, go out and return worse than before.

The streets are thronged with drunken men on Sunday nights, making it unsafe for our ladies to come to church. The insulting conduct of officials became unbearable and their refusal to take a complaint against a saloonkeeper became a scandal.

The evidence I secured made the conditions such that before daring to open again my influence must be destroyed and I driven from town. Therefore the saloon-keepers and officials entered into a conspiracy. An article was prepared and printed in the official organ of the whisky dealers.

First, however, a fight must be had in order to draw me into the net and thus prove the statements made in their article—that I was a wolf in sheep's clothing and used to advertise me a pugilist. Saloon-keeper Dondero wanted to slap my face, and, being an artist with the gloves, sought a means by which to bring about a friendly contest for points and then secure an opportunity to slug me and prove my conduct disgraceful as a minister. Thus he had me fixed. If I accepted his challenge I was a pugilist and would not be allowed to preach again, the officials having great influence in our church. If I refused I was a coward and fit prey for the gang, who would enjoy themselves at my expense and harass me until I would have to leave. The officials betting against me and betting on my showing up, I was forced to depend upon my own resources.

So persistently did they keep at me that I finally, at 10 P. M., Saturday, Dec. 9, consented to take my chances with one man rather than be at the mercy of the gang. So I went with them to a barn which they had prepared for the occasion. I being challenged claimed the right to furnish the gloves and make the conditions. I got out a peculiar set of gloves, made according to my own ideas while at college, which the boys had dubbed "Axtell's pillows." They chose timekeepers and a referee and appointed my second. I am twenty-six years of age, and weigh 125 pounds, being 5 feet 8 inches in height. a Wolverine of Yankee descent. Gus Dondero, of Italian parentage, weight 170 pounds, is about thirty years of age, and a well known character hereabouts.

The contest was a lively one from the word go. I took the defensive and maintained it until the latter part of *the third round, when I became aggres*sive, landing a right hook on the jugular. In the fourth and fifth I kept him groggy, my aim being to convince him *without badly injuring him. The la*ter few seconds of the fifth I landed right and left and had him up ready and just about to deliver a solar plexus when the referee, his brother-in-law, called time and decided it a draw. I was escorted home by the gang and wished well.

The officials and saloon element are making it unbearable here, however, and the landlords, one of their sympathizers, has notified me that my rent is to be raised, and as there is not a vacant house in town I don't know what the outcome will be.

Dondero has been arrested on several charges, and as the cases are sure ones he may also have to leave town, escorted by the Sheriff. I wish every young man was a properly trained athlete learning that it is glorious to possess a giant's power, yet cowardly to use it in any but a just cause, which would make better Christians and citizens. I have spent a large share of my time in the study of anatomy, and believe in upbuilding the human race rather than uplifting it.

"Mens sana in sano corpore" is my motto, and "alterum vive" my purpose.

JOSHUA J. AXTELL.

Poison in Potatoes.

The Sanitary House is authority for the statement that potatoes contain a poison known as solanin. New potatoes contain considerable quantity of this poison unless they grow above the surface of the ground and have a green skin, when they are generally known to be poisonous.

It is not, however, generally known that many persons terrible cases of poisoning have occurred in late autumn when potatoes are used. In 1892 and 1893 there was almost wholesale poisoning among the troops of the German army. Two thousand were found hors-de-combat, diarrhœa, vomiting, weakness, and slight stupor and in many cases delirium set in. Professor Ficker of Munich investigated the case, and found in the potatoes, kept in a damp place and sprouting, the poisonous solanin. Since then the potatoes are to new potatoes as to new potatoes.

West Virginia University

MORGANTOWN, W. VA.

The growth of the University is quite as notable in its equipment, its faculty, and its new departments as in its attendance. For example, look at

The School of Music

established two years ago. It has a faculty of seven instructors, trained under the best teachers in this country and Europe. It occupies a separate building fitted up especially for its needs. Instruction on all arranged instruments, including violin, viola, mandolin, guitar, etc., is free. For voice and piano the fees are very low. A magnificent pipe organ for Commencement Hall is being constructed and it will be for the use of students of the school of Music. If you are interested in the study of music, write for full information.

The departments of the University are developing with equal rapidity. The Premedical Department, with its four new instructors, deserves special mention. Write for a special pamphlet about it.

The University has a faculty of sixty-five instructors, graduates of the foremost schools in the world.

The Winter Quarter begins January 1, and the Spring Quarter April 2.

The Great Pan-American Exposition, 1901.

THE STADIUM.

The completed Stadium for the Pan-American Exposition at Buffalo next year will offer a novelty in sports the most spacious and splendid ever erected in America. The Athletic Carnival to be held during the great Exposition will be the most notable in the history of American sport. The co-operation of many of the best promoters of athletic games and contests has been secured. Visitors to the Pan-American Exposition may therefore expect to witness the meeting of the most famous athletes of the world, in competition for prizes worthy of their best feats of endurance, strength, and skill.

It is said that the great Colosseum at Rome, built in the first century of the Christian Era, could accommodate 87,000 spectators. The Pan American Stadium will be 129 feet longer and but ten feet narrower than the historic amphitheatre of Rome. The Stadium, however, will have a larger arena, and the seating capacity is estimated for 25,000 people. The top row of seats will be sixty feet above the ground, and every seat will command a perfect view of the vast interior. Standards are to be placed at various points for the support of awnings in such a way that they will not obstruct the view from the other seats.

The Stadium resembles in a general way that erected at Athens a few years ago, altho this one can be, of course, only a temporary structure. It is intended as a model of what it is hoped may be executed some day in permanent form of the river and trips should be made the length of the Gorge, either along the cliffs above or over the trolley road which runs close to the water's edge.

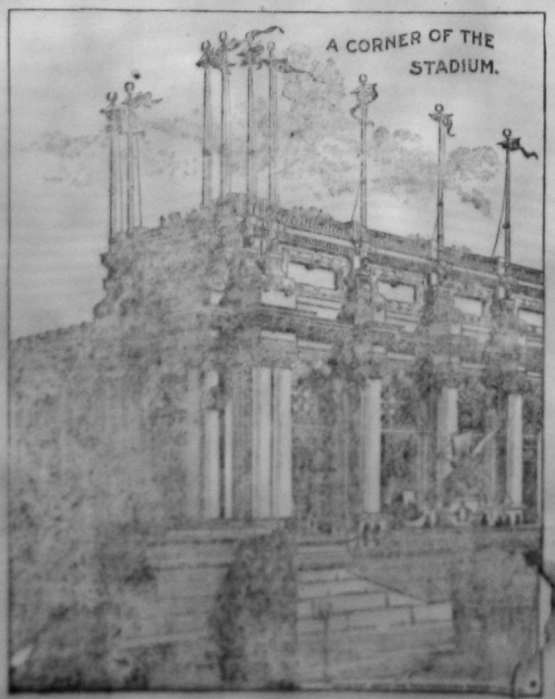

Perhaps the most comprehensive near views of the Falls are those obtained on the Canadian side of the Gorge, especially that from Falls View station. Here is seen a complete panorama, embracing the rushing and turbulent currents of the upper rapids and the whole sweep of the falling waters, reaching from end to end nearly four-fifths of a mile, with the great Horseshoe Fall in the Foreground, separated by Goat Island from the American Fall, which is 158 feet high and 1264 feet wide.

On the American side there are two great corporations utilizing the current of the Niagara River for developing electric power used in many industries at the Falls. The power thus generated by one of these corporations is also transmitted to Buffalo, 25 miles distant, for use as the electric lighting of the city, for operating a great electric car system, and in many important manufacturing establishments. The power thus transmitted will also be extensively used for the purpose of the Exposition.

THE FALLS OF NIAGARA.

GREATEST AUXILIARY ATTRACTIONS TO THE PAN-AMERICAN EXPOSITION.

The importance of the great Falls, Rapids, and Gorge of the Niagara River as auxiliaries to the many and varied attractions of the Pan-American Exposition to be held in Buffalo, May 1st to November 1st, 1901, can not well be overestimated. In its immense flow of water, its grand scenery, and its historic lore, the Niagara is one of the most renowned rivers of the world. Its great cataract has defied the descriptive powers of poets and philosophers and baffled the delineative skill of painters and photographers. The grandeur of their environment renders the falls perennially interesting at all seasons of the year, and very few of those who visit the Pan American Exposition but will desire also to visit them. The trip from Buffalo can be made in half an hour. There are many points of view and places of interest and the visitor can plan his itinerary according to the leisure time at his disposal. If time will permit, the cataract should be viewed from both sides

A Life and Death Fight.

W. A. Hines of Manchester, Ia., writing of his almost miraculous escape from death, says: "Exposure after measles induced serious lung trouble which ended in Consumption. I had frequent hemorrhages and coughed day and night. All my doctors said I must die. Then I began to use Dr King's New Discovery which wholly cured me. Hundreds have used it on my advice and all say it never fails to cure Throat, Chest and Lung troubles. Regular size 50c and $1.

REPUBLICAN CONVENTION.

Proceedings of the Convention in Marlinton, June 19, 1900.

At a convention of the Republican party of Pocahontas County, held in the court house in Marlinton June 19, pursuant to a call, the house was called to order by Hon N. C. McNeil, chairman of Executive Committee of Pocahontas County. George P. Moore was called to the chair as temporary chairman, and W. B Sharp as temporary secretary. On motion the temporary organization was made permanent.

Daniel O'Connel and S. B. Moore were nominated for House of Delegates. When a rising vote was ordered Daniel O'Connel received sixty-three votes and S. B. Moore forty-three. Daniel O'Connel receiving the majority of votes cast was declared elected. On motion the nomination was made unanimous.

James Gibson was nominated for Sheriff, and there being no other nomination, was elected by acclamation.

W. B Sharp was nominated for Prosecuting Attorney, and there being no other nomination, was elected by acclamation.

Peter Hill was nominated for Commissioner of the County Court and there being no other nomination, was elected by acclamation.

G. E. Moore was nominated for Assessor, and there being no other nomination was elected by acclamation.

On motion the following delegates were nominated and elected to represent Pocahontas County at the State and Congressional Conventions to be held in Charleston, W. Va.; the former on July 11 and the latter on July 19: Capt. E. A. Smith, Wm. Gibson, John E. Barlow, W. B. Hill, Alvin R. Gay and N. C. McNeil.

On motion the following delegates were nominated to represent Pocahontas County at the Senatorial Convention to be held in Alderson, on July 21, 1900: W. B. Sharp, Wm. Burns, Oliver McKeever, D. T. McNeel, A. D. Williams and James I. Beverage. A motion was made and carried that any of the delegates at either convention cast the entire vote of the County.

On motion the following resolution was adopted: Whereas, L. J. Williams, of Greenbrier County, President of the West Virginia Bar Association, a lawyer of recognized ability and a gentleman of sterling ability, will be a candidate before the convention for the nomination for one of the Judgeships of West Virginia of the Supreme Court of Appeals, Therefore, Be it Resolved, That we the Republicans of Pocahontas County, in convention assembled, do hereby instruct the delegates from this county to said Convention to support said L. J. Williams for said nomination, and to use every honorable means to secure his nomination by said convention.

On motion a resolution was adopted that the proceedings of the convention be sent by the Secretary to the Wheeling Intelligencer, the West Virginia News and the Pocahontas Times and ask for its publication in said papers.

At this juncture in the Convention, upon motion, it was ordered that the several districts organize into separate district conventions for the purpose of nominating district candidates, which resulted in the following reports:

Edray District—For Justice, N. C. Rodgers and W. Hannah; for Board of Education, Aron M. Kee, President, Harmon Sharp and John E. Barlow, Commissioners; for constables, J. O. Morrison and Geo. L. Hannah; for members of the Republican Executive Committee, N. C. McNeil, John D. Gibson, and Beverly Waugh.

Huntersville District—For Justice, D. B. McElwee; for Constable, E. H. Moore; for Member of the Board of Education, W. A. G. Sharp; Republican Executive Committee, O. E. McKeever, J. W. Grimes and W. B. Sharp.

Little Levels District—For Justices, S. W. McCarty and T. W. Hogsett; for member Board of Education, Frank Kennison; for constables, E. F. Smith and J. E. McMillion; Republican Executive Committee, J. W. Snedegar, T. A. McCarty, and Wm. Burns.

Green Bank District—For Members of the Republican Executive Committe, Phil Edmiston, C. C Wanless and Benj. Arbogast.

The above reports were adopted by the Convention as a whole, There being no other business for the Convention, on motion, said Convention adjourned.

G. P. MOORE, Chairman.
W. B. Sharp, Secretary.

Views of Life.

A great contrast is usually presented between the view of life entertained by a young man and that presented to an old man. The one is filled with the bright colors of hope; the other is tinged with the dark shades of sorrow and disappointment. Age in years does not regulate the character of the view, for some men remain young for a long time and others grow prematurely old. Much depends upon temperment, but more upon experience. The young and innocent have no cares of any kind; their books are balanced each day, and they have nothing to look too except the future, and that future appears bright to their imagination because they have had no experience that would suggest to them anything sad or sorrowful. As the years pass, however, each has his share of sorrows, and then the view of life alters. The future may still appear promising but not quite so bright as formerly. The shadows of the past creep into it, and as age increases the future loses interest. It has become altogether dull and commonplace. Happy the man who can preserve to the end a view of past life illuminated by good deeds, something that will take the place of the visions of future happiness which regaled his early years. To the young life is a great holiday, seemingly without end; to the old it is an experience eaten or bitter, as the case may be, from which the holiday element has disappeared. The views describe one into another, but not at rates regulated by the mere age of the individual and as those of the young are so much more enjoyable than those of the old, one should aim to prolong them as much as possible. This can be done only by leading a life of innocent enjoyment throughout maturity. Some men and some women manage to maintain their youthful spirits through sympathy with their children and even their children's children. Others become soured in early life. Their sufferings, deserved or undeserved, make them cynical, they are no longer agreeable companions and therefore lose the the associations which have the greatest influence in preserving youth and the hopefulness of youth—association with youth itself. The cheery old man is always surrounded by youthful companions; the morose man is deserted by those of his own age. But one cannot be either cheery or morose or cheery to order or at will. These are states of mind produced by a great number of influences. One who is to be cheery and hopeful must have a pleasant past to look back upon, a past that is free from wrong doing and illuminated by good deeds. And so also we may be quite sure that the dissatisfied or morose man has abundant reason for his disposition in conduct that has warped and twisted his view of life. We start in life with everything before us, nothing behind us; we end it in a good old age with everything behind us, nothing before us. The change is gradual, and we should aim by our conduct to make both views pleasant, that when we reach the middle period imagination may picture an enjoyable future out of the material furnished by an enjoyable past. Right living is the surest means of perpetuating the joys of youth. Only those whose backward view of life shows no shadows can preserve to the end the glorious spirit of youth which sees in the future nothing but happiness.—Baltimore Sun.

Glorious News.

Comes from Dr D. B. Cargile, of Washita, I. T. He writes, Electric Bitters has cured Mrs Brewer of scrofula, which has caused her great suffering for years. Terrible sores would break out on her head and face, and the best doctors could give no help; but now her health is excellent." Electric bitters is the best blood purifier known. It's the supreme remedy for eczema, tetter, salt rheum, ulcers, boils and running sores. Stimulates liver, kidneys and bowels, expels poisons, helps digestion, builds up strength. Only 50c.

They were sitting on the beach at Coney. He turned at length and said: "Why is the Ocean like June?" There was a flutter of interest in the group sitting about them. She should have said: "I don't know," she said. "Why?" "Because," he replied amid a breathless silence, "because it is maritime." A man nearby who had been burying himself in the sand arose and left with every indication of sickness.—Princeton Tiger.

Entered at the post-office at Marlinton, W. Va., as second class matter.

THE REPUBLICAN CONVENTION

Two great Republican Conventions were held last week, one at Philadelphia and the other at Marinton. It is the Marlinton one of which we wish to speak. There is no use in denying the fact that the Republicans had a large and enthusiastic meeting and showed determination to unite to elect a whole or part of the ticket. All day there were signs that the leaders were determined to take advantage of internal dissentions in the Democratic party in this county, and to our shame be it said that we have given them reason to hope.

N. C. McNeil, County Chairman called the meeting to order and took advantage of this opportune moment to make one of those neat little addresses for which he is so famous. He referred to the fact that heretofore their conventions were merely perfunctory matters held in some small room in the town, where a handful of the faithful met, made nominations with no hope or thought of election, and adjourned. Now the largest room in the court house was filled to nominate a county ticket. In regard to the office of Representative especially the Democratic party had "fixed themselves." He stated the object of the meeting and called George P. Moore to the chair. Mr Moore made a short speech in regard to the necessity of there being two great parties, and gave the Democrats credit for honesty of purpose, but claimed for his party the loyalty of being able to give the country the good government both parties desired, more effectually than the Democratic party. W. B. Sharp was made secretary of the meeting and nominations were in order.

The whole ticket was nominated in a cut and dried style, with the exception of the nominee for Representative in the Legislature. This resulted in a contest between B. O'Donnell and S. B. Moore. Captain Walt Allen nominated O'Donnell and Captain A. S. Smith immediately nominated S. B. Moore. Then followed a lot of speech making. Senator McNeil was another opening for a row in the speech, and lot of it sometimes long and exhausting both ways. He was decidedly impolitic; called both names blessed, and referred to all the claims of both. He left them in statu quo. O. A. McKeever seconded O'Connell's nomination in a vigorous speech, and it was plain from the applause that O'Connel had a great deal of strength in the audience. The vote finally showed Moore 41 and O'Connel 63. Moore represents the old line Republicanism and O'Connel is a late recruit from the Democratic ranks. He went over to Palmer and Buckner in 1896, and broad is the road that leads from those men into the Republican party.

After this nomination the rest of the ticket was nominated in a harmonious manner. James Gibson, Jr., of Elk was put up for Sheriff; W. B. Sharp of Frost, a recent graduate of a Tennessee law school, was nominated for Prosecuting Attorney; our old friend Peter Hill of Jacox was nominated for County Court; G. E. Moore of Academy for Assessor.

DENTISTRY.

Dr Campbell of Monterey requests us to announce that he will be at points in this county on or near dates given, prepared to attend to dental operations. He has taken a special course of training in gold crown and bridge work in Baltimore recently, and is prepared to do work in that line, in up to date style.

Rev E. O. GUERRANT, D. D., Kentucky

"A good female school is a public blessing, and among many noble institutions I do not know a better one than the one presided over by Rev R. L. Telford at Lewisburg, W. Va. It is Christian, Biblical, thorough, and attractive—making not only finished scholars, but lovely Christian characters. It is good enough to educate my own daughters, and I take pleasure in commending it to my friends."

Dr J. M. POYNTZ, of Richmond, Va.

"Rarely indeed does one have the opportunity of placing their daughters in so good an institution of learning as the one presided over by Rev R. L. Telford at Lewisburg. Anyway, it has been good enough for me. My daughter has been cared for as if she had been a member of the family."

J. J. SCHOLS, Esq., of West Virginia.

"I have been a patron of the Lewisburg Female Institute for the last six years, and I believe that under the present management it is the very best Female School in the two Virginias. If I had a dozen daughters I would want them all educated there."

Rev M. L. LACY, D. D., of West Virginia.

"I honestly believe it to be the best school of which I have any knowledge."

Hon JOHN W. MCCREARY, of the State Senate, West Virginia.

"I regard the school as one of the best in the country."

Pitts Camp at Academy and others conditionally challenge the town of Marlinton for a baseball game, the condition being that Marlinton organize a team and give due notice of their intention to play so all hands can get ready. All the local players, including the strangers within our gates, are urged to meet at the Times office on Thursday evening at 7 o'clock to arrange for a team and outfit.

It is easy to see where the trees are leaved out what immense damage was done the forests by the great fires of last November. One might say that all the young trees were killed in the burnt districts and where there are no large trees the prominence against bald and barren for a great distance. It will be remembered that smoke from numerous fires made living almost unbearable in the late fall, the fires being the greatest and most widespread in the history of West Virginia.

A Mistaken Identity.

Receiving an invoice, in a type of Chinese origin. The printer of this journal is left to suppose, however, that the 10 Kings Iron Ore Paint are a safe and reliable paint for iron or tin roofs, as the manufacturers claim. Send to S. F. Kaye, Sole Agent, 6 E. Kaye Building, Baltimore, Md.

The Cherry Railroad.

In the rush attending the building of the Greenbrier Railway and the Coal and Iron Railway to meet it, very little general attention is given to the new railway projected to unite the Camden System and the C. & O. The new railroad starts at Cherry Bottom and comes up Cherry River until it reaches a gap which lets it over on the waters of Hills Creek in Pocahontas County. At this point there is a wonderful formation in that there is no perceptible divide between the waters of Cherry and the waters of Hills Creek. Up to this point the grade is easy and unnatural. Immediately after the waters of Hills Creek are reached the trouble begins for the engineer.

Hills Creek has falls 150 feet high and great difficulty is experienced in getting down to a level below them. This has been accomplished, but Hill's Creek unfortunately runs into and under Droop Mountain and makes that route no thoroughfare. The engineering corps at the present time are surveying for a tunnel underneath the mountain. Hills Creek comes through the mountain and is known as Locust creek. It is believed to be about a mile through the mountain as the creek runs. It is quite a large stream and the passage through must be quite large, but no one has ever had the hardihood to follow it through the mountain. No fish have ever penetrated the mountain either, for while Locust Creek has always been well stocked with fish no fish have ever been known in Hills Creek. The mountain is of limestone formation. In time of flood on the Hills Creek side the water has been dammed back until it formed a lake fifty or sixty feet deep.

Another route is to keep up on the Hills Creek side and cross over Droop Mountain and get down to the Greenbrier River by means of the Stamping creek valley.

The distance from the Greenbrier Railway to the Camden System is 31 miles by the route surveyed, but it is thought that a railroad can be built between the two in 28 miles. If this road be built it will open one of the richest timber sections in the country, all of which is practically a wilderness.

Circuit Court.

Circuit Court passed off very quietly. The town government had the desired effect of keeping down disorder on the part of those who have been accustomed to become too noisy and riotous by reason of too much drink.

There were two juries empaneled. The case of the State vs. W. D. Sharp resulted in an acquittal owing to an error in the writing of the indictment.

The case of Dawson vs. Smith and Whiting and others resulted in a verdict in favor of Smith and Whiting.

The case of A. M. McLaughlin vs. John T. McGraw was arranged by compromise.

The order of the Supreme Court dismissing the case of Andrew Herald vs. Amos Barlow was entered.

An order was entered to the effect that if the jail at this place was not put into a good sanitary condition by the next term of this court, then the Prosecuting Attorney is instructed to begin suit against the County Court to compel it to make the necessary improvements. Owing to the unsanitary condition of the jail, John Robinson who is confined therein on a charge of felony is ordered to be removed to the Greenbrier jail until the next term of this court.

Death of Mrs S. L. Brown.

Wednesday, June 21, Mrs Josephine Brown, the wife of S. L. Brown, County Clerk of Pocahontas, died at her home in Marlinton after a long and painful illness, aged 47.

Mrs Brown was a daughter of the late Randolph Slaven. She leaves surviving her husband, a sister Mrs L. M. McClintic, and a brother O. H. Slaven of Hutchinson, Kansas. She was a most estimable lady, whose loss in the community will be greatly felt.

The interment took place at Huntersville Thursday. Rev G. W. Bugle officiating.

Bank of Marlinton Building.

The contract for a bank building was let by the Bank of Marlinton last week to F. B. King of this place for $10,954.50.

The building is to be 50 x 62, three stories high to be built of brick with stone foundation and trimmings to be finished in oak. The banking department is to be on the ground floor, and the rest of the building will be fitted up for a hotel.

Fatal Accident at Bower's & Co's. Camp. Other Items.

On Thursday evening at six o'clock Harvey Shanklin, aged 23, son of John Shanklin, a member of the firm of Bowers & Co., railroad builders, and a Greek laborer about thirty-five years old were engaged in loading a blast on the Greenbrier Railroad. They had placed five kegs of black powder, 125 pounds, in the hole. A negro laborer was sent for more powder. A rock was in the hole and young Shanklin tried to move it with a crowbar. A spark was struck igniting the powder. The unfortunate young man was immediately over the charge and was hurled at least sixty-five feet in the air and landed in the middle of the Greenbrier River. He was of course killed instantly. The Greek was close by. He lived until 1 o'clock that night but never recovered consciousness. A foreman near by named Williams received slight injuries. The laborer who had gone for the powder escaped. The rest of the working force were absent, having gone to supper.

The burial took place Friday at Dunmore, services conducted by Rev R. M. Caldwell.

Young Mr Shanklin bore an enviable reputation. He was very much liked by all who came in contact with him. The bereaved father and mother have the sincerest sympathy of the people of this vicinity. A very large crowd attended the funeral, among them 75 Greeks from the camps on the river.

ACCIDENTAL SHOOTING.

On last Thursday morning D. A. Tharp was accidentally shot with a pistol by J. E. McMillion, who picked up an empty pistol and after looking at it laid it down while looking at another one, and not knowing that the first had been loaded by a third party in the meantime, picked it up and it was accidentally discharged, striking Mr Tharp who was standing nearby. The ball passed through one finger and thumb and entered the left leg. The Doctor dressed his wounds but failed to locate the ball. He is doing very well, being pretty badly hurt but not dangerously.

Contrary reports to this have been circulated but are false.

"THE CONFEDERATE VETERAN."

Low Club Rates Given With the Pocahontas Times

The growth of the Confederate Veteran published by S. A. Cunningham at Nashville, Tenn., is remarkable. Its circulation of eighty-four issues, monthly aggregated to January, 1900, 1,395,453 copies. Average for 1-93, 7,865; 1894, 16,116; 1895, 12,816; 1896, 13,444; 1897, 16,175; 1898, 19,146; 1899, 20,166.

Subscriptions for the Veteran will be received at this office. It and the Times will be sent for one year at the club rate of $1.50. By application to the Publisher, Tenn., a sample copies of the Veteran will be sent to old veteran friends who are unable to subscribe.

A severe strain will usually disable the injured person for three or four weeks. Many cases have occurred, however, in which a cure has been effected in less than one week by applying Chamberlain's Pain Balm.

FIFTY YEARS OLD

Why let your neighbors know it?

And why give them a chance to guess you are over five or ten years there?

Better give them good reasons for guessing the other way. It is very easy; for nothing hits of age so quickly as gray hair.

Ayer's Hair Vigor

It restores the original color to gray hair. It gives new life to weak hair. It stops the hair from coming out.

It feeds the hair bulbs. They get nourishment from it, and grow hair luxuriantly long.

It destroys the germs of dandruff, and prevents its formation.

We have a book on the hair which we will gladly send you.

HIS LIFE SAVED

By Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy.

"I am sure that Chamberlain's colic, cholera and diarrhoea Remedy saved my life," says A. E. Lafayette of Gregory Landing, Clark county, Missouri. "I was in such a bad shape that the doctors said I could not live. When I was at the lowest ebb, one of my neighbors brought in a bottle of Chamberlains Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and I took it and got instant relief. I soon got up and around. That was nine years ago and I am still in good health. Since then the medicine has always been in my house and always will be. It is the best on earth."

West Virginia University,

MORGANTOWN, W. VA.

The growth of the University is quite as notable in its equipment, its faculty, and its new departments as in its attendance. For example, look at

The School of Music

established two years ago. It has a faculty of seven instructors, trained under the best teachers in this country and Europe. It occupies a separate building fitted up especially for its needs. Instruction on all stringed instruments, including violin, viola, mandolin, guitar, etc., is free. For voice and piano the fees are very low. A magnificent pipe organ for Commencement Hall is being constructed and it will be for the use of students of the School of Music. If you are interested in the study of music, write for full information.

Other departments of the University are developing with equal rapidity. The Preparatory Department, with its four new instructors, deserves special mention. Write for a special pamphlet about it.

The University has a faculty of sixty-five instructors, graduates of the foremost schools in the world.

The Winter Quarter begins January 3, and the Spring Quarter April 3.

A NIGHT OF TERROR.

BY A. L. P.

'Twas the first winter month and in the mountains of the old Granite State December was wont to earn its name for cold and rigor. Halfway between the hill top and vale the L family had an humble but entirely comfortable dwelling and everything within and out of the homestead betokened thrift and its twin sister—industry.

The family in question had gathered after supper around the ample hearthstone and many were the comments on barometrical changes evidenced by sharp gusts of wind and the pattering of icy snow upon the window pane. A whining at the door brought the dog Nero in to notice and he was ushered in, while Mr L. remarked that animals knew more and said less than all the scientific Weather Bureaus.

It was observed that one member of the family group remained unusually silent this evening and occasionally ceased from her loved knitting, an almost unheard of thing; for some of the younger children averred that "Aunt Elsie" knit all through the night—they left her knitting when they retired and at early dawn they found the needles still flitting between her fingers. There were many feet marked "L" that needed guarding from the cold and the "mother" was wonderfully helped by aunt Elsie's continuous knitting; but this useful woman did other things also and took her rest beside, as wise people ever do.

The weather and innocent gossip of the neighborhood being fully discussed and passed around, a novel subject was introduced by Philip, the half-grown boy: "Say, is it true, what I have read and heard spoken of, that human hair will turn white suddenly?" One member of the family declared it would, and gave several instances from history to this effect. Another doubted the truth of such records and the general opinion was in the negative. "Ask your aunt Elsie of the matter," said the mother, and while all turned to aunt Elsie for information she was silent and seemed distressed; then the children noticed for the first time in their lives that aunt Elsie's hair was a great deal whiter than her age justified, and their curiosity now aroused and supported by their mother's word, they exclaimed: "O, aunt Elsie, tell us, did your hair turn white in a single night like Queen Marie Antoinette's?"

"Have you not promised, Elsie, to tell sometime the story of your adventure and fright, and now is a good time, I think." I was the father who thus interposed, and great silence fell upon the group as aunt Elsie was seen to fold up her knitting work and accede.

"Long ago, children, during a winter like this and when I was young and gay like you, my home for the time being was at an uncle's, in a part of the State entirely new to me. Word came just the middle of the day for some one of the family to assist relatives in distress and at once. I was chosen for the emergency, and preparations began to get me off quickly. Of course the traveling must be by sleigh for the bare ground had not been seen for a month. All day the cold had been increasing and a storm such as this to-night threatening. My escort on the journey was a young man hired for farm work and who thought he knew the country well; but a blinding bitter snow fell and wind might well perplex the truest mind. We had never heard of "blizzards" then: I think 'twas one that we encountered. Well wrapped in furs and shawls, with heated bricks at our feet and the exertions of a sleigh we started, and the cold started with us but not the snow. Within allowance we are silent and this was the shortest of all. As the dark gathered my companion showed signs of perplexity which I had been feeling for some time; but I was not a timid girl for had I been so would not have been on the road.

"Relying in the home my driver spoke thus, 'I wish I was to home!' 'Why?' said I. 'Because we be lost, that's all.' I made no immediate reply when the young man added, 'from Dan to Beersheba!' The connection of these words under the circumstances I was unable to discover; but I suggested our seeking a house by the way for shelter until the night, now fairly set in, should be over and we could get our bearings in the way. A glimmering light in the distance guided us, and at last we were glad to be under a roof.

"The family that so kindly took us in from the night storm and our perplexed situation seemed to consist of two persons, a man and his wife. Mine hostess was talkative and as the exciting scenes of the road had robbed me of desire to sleep I was a patient listener; she carried me through her whole life, I believe, and all her troubles, reserving the greatest for the last disclosure, and well had it been for me if this grief never met my ears. 'My man and I have a child, an only son—poor dear boy!' and then she wept violently. 'Your boy is dead?' and my own voice became unsteady in presence of a mother's sorrow. 'Nay, young lady, not dead—it is worse than that.' A horrible surmise struck me for nothing was so awful as the loss of reason, and could it be, her son crazy? and perhaps here at home near his parents. On the wild tempest, the cold night outside and the unknown road were nothing compared with contact to the insane!

"And it was even so as the mother informed me speedily; but perceiving the alarm I could not hide added, 'He cannot hurt you; our poor senseless boy is tied and kept close: no one sees him and he sees no one.' Frightened, restless and unable to perform my part as guest I begged to retire, and was led up the bare stairs that creaked so to my step I imaginged the maniac boy was near at hand and would touch me. Opening one of the two doors at the upper landing, the lady said, 'You do not mind being in the house alone? We occupy the small building in the yard with our poor child!' Reproaching myself inwardly for my fear so selfish compared with the great affliction and thankless care and labor of these lone parents, I meekly answered, 'O no, I mind nothing, except—' and hastily added, 'Forgive me; I do thank you so much for taking us in tonight. I pray God to bless you!' 'Well, well, young lady, I see you are clean worn out and it is late. Good night, and try to go to sleep.'

"Sleep does not always or ever follow trying; the sweet restorer comes unwittingly, and when to me that night it was a feverish slumber, scaring my senses with the screams and jargon and aimless efforts of the mad. The rickety door of my apartment had no fastening, and evidently I arose while sleeping and crossed the narrow landing to the room opposite and lay down upon a bare lounge left with other things in a kind of lumber room. The window panes were mostly out and the cold air awakened me, but did not explain my strange surroundings. Just then a sound from below froze my brain and stilled every effort to move from my position on the lounge where I seemed to have been spirited. The sound was the opening of a lower door and the clanking of a chain! Steps approached the door and that terrible chorus of the chain steadily seconding. It was the maniac boy; it could be nothing else! He had escaped, and what was to become of me! Great horror seized upon me, tremblings, the cold sweat stood on my forehead, and I could not scream, which I escaped time and again. Night scenes are time described, but I was wide awake and horror stricken.

"As the chain and its bearer reached my door and entered I mercifully 'put myself and was dead to all other things. How long unconscious I know not and even other morning well troubled gently by kindly friends, I refrained from asking my questions."

"But, aunt Elsie," said one of the interested and deeply attentive group at the fireside, "you found out sometime all about the matter, did you not? Please tell us the whole."

"Yes, my dears, I found the cause of my intense alarm imaginary as in ghost stories, but mine is not such; my story is real and the effect was serious. I remained ill, weakly and nervous for a long time and my once brown hair speedily whitened, young as I was, until as you see it now."

"Aunt Elsie, you walked in your sleep to that other unused room; but what of the chain and the step?"

"Tunt, my dear nephew, was only a large Newfoundland dog which had slipped his halter and was seeking as often, doubtless, before, the upper solitary room to lay him down and sleep; farthest from the mild animal's thoughts was the scaring of a human being almost to death." "Aunt Elsie" ceased speaking and resumed her knitting.

Times When we Pay War Taxes.

Secretary Gage says the war taxes are piling up a surplus that will reach $70,00 ,000 at the close of the present fiscal year, and in all probability will be greatly in excess of that amount. And still the Government fines the citizen—

When he sends a telegram.

When he draws a check.

When he becomes a member of a corporation.

When he transfers his stock.

When he insures his house or his life.

When he assigns his insurance.

When he makes a note to raise money for the payment of his other taxes.

When he buys a money order.

When he executes a lease.

When he sends a paid telephone message.

When an indemnity bond is given.

When a bill of exchange is drawn.

When the citizen executes an instrument necessary in the sale of merchandise on Change.

When he ships goods by freight or express.

When he clears a vessel and files a manifest.

When he files a ticket to go abroad.

When he executes a power of attorney.

When he buys proprietary medicines.

When he chews gum.

When he uses any perfume or his wife indulges in cosmetics.

When a note is protested.

When a warehouse receipt is given.

When merchandise is entered at a Customhouse.

MAUD MULLER AND THE MOBILE

Maud Muller on a summer's day
Went out to rake the fragrant hay.

She glanced up toward the distant town
To see if the judge was riding down.

Then she leaned upon her rake to rest
And a nameless longing filled her breast.

A blue fly buzzed around her and Got smashed upon her soft white hand.

Again she looked, and her round cheeks glowed—
A speck appeared far up the road.

Maud raked the hay with all her might,
Still keeping the growing speck in sight.

In his automobile the Judge sat proud
Leaving behind a thick dust cloud.

He'd never been out until that day
In the splendid thing, and his heart was gay.

O'er his features played a contented smile
As he ran over dogs in a lordly style.

Maud saw him come, and her breast
Heaved high
As she dropped the rake, saying "Mercy me!"

Then she cooled where the cool spring bubbled up
And scraped to fill her little old cup.

She knelt in the cool inside the bank
Where the Judge's dust will not sink
But passed the rake and passed the
While the Judge had been saying things to Maud.

Oh, on he came like a fast express!
She gave a hitch to the back of her dress

And straightened her hat and jabbed her hair
To be sure the frizzle and all were there

The Judge gave his gray mustache a twirl
And smiled as he saw the waiting girl,

And gazed at the sky as if wondering whether
The cloud in the west would bring wet weather,

And noticed the grass and flowers and trees
And the grazing kine as he cleft the breeze.

Then he grasped a handle some where at last,
To stop himself from going so fast:

But it seemed to stick and he gave a jerk
And seemed surprised that it wouldn't work!

And, in his hurry, he steered at Maud,
Who dropped her cup and yelled "O lord!"

And tried to climb the fence and got Half way across, when, like a shot

From a cannon, the Judge arrived and went On, after the manner of Gov. Kent.

* * * * *

At last Maud rose from the wreck and gazed
Around at the scattered rails, amazed.

She saw the cows rush o'er the mead,
Developing awful rates of speed.

She heard hens cackle and people call,
And then at last she remembered all.

Looking away o'er the fields, she saw
The undulating expounder of the law,

As he skipped the valleys and hit the hills,
Smashed the fences and jumped the rills,

Clutching her brow she sighed, "Ah me!"
Which the mock-bird echoed from his tree.

Then she took up her rake and mused awhile,
Saying "Blast the automobeel or byle!

Why didn't he stick to the sorrel mare?
Ah, where is he now?" Echo adswered "Where?"

Maud's rake is hanging unused today;
In a horseless age what's the use of hay

And oft in her palm she rests her chin
And thinks of the Judge and what might have been

If he only had stuck to the old mare's back—

Alas! Alas! Likewise alack!

NOTES BY THE WAY.

At old Millboro I passed an hour at the Sulphur Spring recently covered in by an elegant dome roof and enclosed by a picket fence, painted white. In the meantime Prince was turned loose to graze and he seemed to be more than satisfied until he lifted up his eyes and noticed a young lady holding a horse near the creek, a few hundred yards away, and he started for them. Upon calling to the young lady she came forward to check him, which she did by taking him by the bridle waited for me to come up, in the meantime while waiting she caressed old Prince very gently, which he seemed to appreciate very much. When I came up puffing and blowing from the race I asked her to see what trouble her charms had caused me. A blush and a smile beautified her features and in the most self-possessed manner replied: "Oh, well all horses love me." In an instant she had vaulted her own horse in clothes-pin fashion, and galloped away, presenting a most picturesque appearance in her riding habit, white bodice, navy-blue skirt and summer hat trimmed in flowers that might allure the humming bird in its search for honey dew.

At the Warm Springs the summer hat is to be seen in alluring floral splendor. On a recent morning while a party of ladies were standing on the slated walk in merry conversation, a humming bird poised above them and sampled the flowers but finding no nectarine sweets, sped away like a flash of rainbow light.

Several localities in Rockbridge have been considerably injured by rain storms and freshets at intervals since May 28 and June 13. On June 12 the rain fall at Lexington in less than an hour was 2½ inches, and was the heaviest down pour of rain for fifteen years. Side walks and gardens were considerably damaged.

The impression seems to be prevalent in Virginia that in the course of a year or two millions of dollars will be invested in Pocahontas county alone, to say nothing of what may be in store for Greenbrier and Randolph counties. So it seems one of the best ways to see ourselves as others see us is to take a trip from home. The only observation the writer feels equal to is, We shall see what we will see; and, All things come to those who wait, at the hands of hustlers. To the writer it is a source of regretful surprise, however to reflect that children of the pioneers who had been toiling, waiting and bearing the heat of the past days will have no more in hand than those who have come in at the eleventh hour, and possibly in many instances not near so much in the outcome.

Owing to rain and swollen streams in addition to and virtue of a cordial and pressing invitation the writer spent several June days in the charming Rockbridge home of Captain J. A. McNeel, once a widely known resident of our county. Mr and Mrs McNeel are the favored parents of four sons and three daughters, who are being faithfully trained up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord, and are children of much promise.

Col Wm. T. Poage, one of the most distinguished of Confederate artillery officers under Stonewall Jackson and successors, afforded the writer one of the most pleasant afternoons of his stay in Lexington by devoting himself to my personal entertainment. Seated with him in one of the nicest of buggies he showed us the city, moved slowly throughout the University and Institute grounds, and then selected one of the most eligible points of view to take in the last race on the final stretch, and witness the enthusiastic demonstration of two thousand spectators at the crucial moment. Patiently and kindly Col Poage showed me through the Jackson memorial Hall with its many objects of interest. On the wall of the Library has been but recently hung a portrait of Stonewall Jackson, which is the only portrait that I have seen that reminds me of the manner of person Jackson was, as I remember him. For three years no one's form and features were more familiar to me than Jackson's, and this portrait presents him as I remember him with speaking lifelike, and in my estimation compared with this one portrait all others are decidedly inferior cartoons.

To persons of reflective habits and few means could be more impressive than those who need at Lexington during commencement exercises. When the Tucker Memorial Hall was dedicated the address made by President Wilson, Rector Strickler and Prof. Quarles were pervaded by sentiments eulogistic of a life first consecrated to personal piety towards God, then elevated statesmenship, and purest jurisprudence. The addresses impressively illustrated how essential all these characteristics are in the characters of those called to care for and promote the highest interests of our country and the homes of our millions of people The mind is filled with thoughts too deep for tears seeing our American youth receiving their deplomas, then going forth to their places in life's arena to perform the parts assigned them in their re*spective spheres of service,* as one fondly hopes, by Providential interposition and personal guidance. In the estimation of very competent and appreciative listeners the most masterly address of the current University series was that to the Alumni by Hon J. W. Davis, of West Virginia. Considered as to matter, manner and fitness of things this address deserves to be assigned rank with oratorical utterances. Like a voice in the wilderness it was a startling protest against the materialistic tendencies of the age that so seriously menace hard bought constitutional rights and forebode an imperial dynasty, having the form of liberty but denying the power thereof.

Hot meals and cool cooks

You'll not need to regulate your cooking by the thermometer when you get a Wickless Blue Flame Oil Stove. On the hottest days you can cook whatever you choose, in whatever way you wish, without suffering any additional discomfort while cooking. The comfort you'll gain is only one of the advantages of using a

Wickless Blue Flame Oil Stove

It is handier than a coal stove and cleaner and cheaper. The Wickless Blue Flame Oil Stove is absolutely safe; it burns ordinary kerosene, without wicks and causes neither smoke, smell nor soot.

TO THE READERS OF THE TIMES.

The business known as the Pocahontas Times has been reorganized and a new partnership formed of Andrew, Norman and Calvin W. Price, to be known as Price Brothers. The writer has been editor, printer, devil and general scrapper in the running of this paper nearly eight years. He had cast on these hospitable shores learned law student, and the people showed an alarming tendency to search out lawyers of age and experience for consolation and advice. The paper was then bought and the same week we got a case in the justic's court. Since then we have posed before the public both as a lawyer and a newspaper man. But it is hard to serve two masters, and we knew sometime or other we would come to the parting of the ways. For the last year other work has prevented us from giving the paper much attention and it has been principally under the control of the editor's younger brothers, both of whom are first class printers and all-round newspaper men. From now on, the writer will give his undivided time if necessary to the practice of law, and only do such work in giving the county a paper as will not interfere with his duties as a lawyer, which in fact he has been doing all along. We expect to enlarge our paper in the near future, and will at all times endeavor to get out as good a paper as the field justifies. All country lawyers suffer from seasons of enforced idleness and at such times the writer will help in the office. Thanking you for your attention, I remain.

Yours very truly,

ANDREW PRICE.

BY A. L. P.

[Mrs "Josie" Brown, wife of Mr S. L. Brown, who departed this life in hope of Heaven, the 20th of June, 1900 at Marlinton, W. Va.]

I.

Sister, friend, Ah! she hath left us,
But 'tis God who hath bereft us;
And sorrow-full, we bow to him,
While bitter tears our eyes bedim.

II.

We thought that she was needed here—
Her home was bright, her friends were dear:
Age had not settled on her brow—
Her face, her voice seem with us now.

III.

"A little while," 'twas thus she spoke,
Ere yet life's silver cord was broke;
And it is so—a little while,
Until we reach life's latest mile.

IV.

And there are lonely hearts this way,
Who walked beside her many a day,
Until her hand slipped from their own—
The spirit from earth's hold had flown!

V.

To Heaven above, those mansions bright
Where comes no weary troubled night;
Sickness and pain forever fled,
And Death itself, thro' Christ, is dead!

OBITUARY.

Mrs S. L. Brown.

The sympathies of a wide circle of friends in this and other States have been profoundly stirred by the decease of Mrs Mary Josephine Brown, wife of S. L. Brown, clerk of Pocahontas County. This sorrowful event occurred June 20, 1900, at her home in Marlinton, after a prolonged and distressing illness, resulting from a baffling complication of chronic ailments, aggravated by an attack of the prevalent influenza, late in the winter.

Mrs Brown was a daughter of the late Randolph Slaven, of Huntersville, and was born near Green Bank. As a dutiful daughter, an affectionate sister, faithful wife, kind neighbor and exemplary christian in the pale of the Presbyterian branch of the church of Christ. She acquired a reputation not to be forgotten for long years to come on earth and be everlastingly remembered in heaven.

Among the many touching incidents transpiring during the final months of her life this is recalled. Several weeks before her decease her Heavenly Redeemer gave her "a song in the night" in this beautiful way. Upon awaking she found herself singing:

"I am thine, O Lord; I have heard Thy voice,
And it told Thy love to me;
But I long to rise in the arms of faith,
And be closer drawn to Thee.

"There are depths of love that I cannot know,
Till I cross the narrow sea;
There are heights of joy that I may not reach,
Till I rest in peace with Thee.

"Draw me nearer, nearer, blessed Lord,
To the cross where Thou hast died;
Draw me nearer, nearer, blessed Lord,
To Thy precious bleeding side."

Her departure was attended by all the consoling evidences that affords peace and comfort to all who believe that Jesus Christ died and rose again, and those that sleep in Jesus will God bring with Him.

One of the last sacred songs she wanted to hear was "In my Home We'll Meet Them." Her countenance beamed with joy as she said, "Yes, I know my name is on the page bright and fair in the book of my Savior's Kingdom. Yes, my name is written there." Her precious but sacred memory, flowers and little children was intense; a word sung but she said, of blessing and love and consecration.

In the early part of April she attended a social and the cold she caught developed into pneumonia. Her regret seemed to be mainly she could not remain with them to minister to their comfort. She seemed to be at a loss for words to express her heartfelt appreciation of all the care and attention shown her day and night during her sufferings. Her farewell message to her venerable father-in-law Wm. L. Brown, then too infirm to visit her, was touchingly filial, assuring him that with a daughter's love she would wait for him at the pearly gates and try to be the first to meet him, coming home at the Savior's bidding.

Gently as a tired child she fell asleep thus assuring us that Jesus can and does make the dying bed feel soft as downy pillows when we have faith in his promise lean our heads on his breast and breathe our lives out sweetly there.

Church Notes.

The Quarterly Meeting will be held at West Union next Saturday and Sunday, July 7 and 8.

Rev M. W. Atkinson will not preach at Marlinton next Sunday, as announced.

Greenbrier Presbytery met in called session in Lewisburg July 3. There were present ten ministers and two ruling elders. The calls of Green Bank and Dunmore churches and Marlinton and Huntersville churches to Revs H. W. McLaughlin and G. W. Nickel to be their pastors, were heard and their action approved by Presbytery. It appearing that Rev Nickel had submitted his resignation as pastor of his present charges in Monroe, to consider such resignation congregational meetings will held Sunday, July 8. Presbytery adjourned to meet in Ronceverte July 12, to hear reason, if any, why said pastoral relation should not be dissolved. It is hoped that by that time matters may have shaped themselves so that Presbytery may see clear to arrange for their installation as pastors of the above named churches.

Almost thirty-three years since the Chinese authorities founded schools of instruction at the Foo Chow arsenal, and secured foreigners for instructors. Highly recommended German, French and English professors were employed to instruct in ship building, in fortification, in the manufacture of arms and handling the same, and also in the English language. As a feature of English study the students were required to write compositions in English. When Dr. T. F. Cummins, editor of the Christian Observer, was in China, thirty years ago, he read one of these compositions which was as follows:

"We are very glad to have the foreigners come here and teachers how to build ships and how to make guns and how to shoot, and when the foreigners have taught us how to make ships and guns, then the foreigners can go."

GRASSHOPPER GLACIER.

Icy Tomb of Thousands of the Long-legged Insects.

There are many remarkable glaciers in that part of the Rocky Mountain uplift that crosses the southern border of Montana. A part of this region has hitherto been unmapped and its more elevated portions were unvisited and unnamed until last summer, when a geographical party piloted the way up the mountains and discovered some of the largest glaciers in the temperate regions of the western world. Here rises Granite Peak which, according to Mr. Gannett is the culminating point of Montana, 12,824 feet high.

Among the glaciers found in these mountains and recently described by James P. Kimball is Grasshopper Glacier, which derives its name from the enormous quantity of grasshopper remains that are found on and in the glacier. Periodically the grasshoppers that thrive in the prairie to the north take their flight southward and must needs cross the mountains. Their favorite route seems to be across this wide glacier, and in the passage scores of them succumb to the rigor of cold and wind, fall helpless upon the snow and are finally entombed in the ice. In the course of time billions of them have been the victims of this glacier. They are, of course, carried by the ice river down into the valley and deposited at the melting edge of the ice, and Mr. Kimball says that thousands of tons of grasshopper remains are the principal material at the lower edge of the glacier. We hear very often of rocks and sand as forming the terminal moraine of glaciers, but here is a glacier whose principal moraine material is grasshoppers.

These insect remains are washed out of the ice in furrows wherever the sun's heat has grooved the surface into runlets of descending water. The grasshopper's perimeter the glacier from top to bottom. No fragment of ice can be broken so small as not to contain remains. Most of the insects have been reduced to a coarse powder, and the furrows of them washed out by the runlets and naturally disposed in parallel lines are very dark in color.—Omaha Bee.

MADE FROM DREAMS.

Inventors Can Tell of Some Strange Experiences.

"It is remarkable how ideas of an inventive nature occur to one," remarked Henry Ho lingsworth, a Cleveland inventor. "Frequently when engaged upon problems in mechanics I have gone to bed and dreamed what seemed to be a perfect solution of that which had been uppermost in my mind during the day. But the trouble is that upon awaking, while recollecting perfectly that I had dreamed the solution, it was impossible to recall the details necessary to a practical application of my idea. You know, it is said of the automatic car coupler, of the double-law type, that the originator of the idea was a telegraph operator, who, while bending back in his chair with his hands clasped behind his head dozing, was brought to his senses by the blowing of a locomotive whistle. That noise served as a connecting link for his thoughts. With his hands still clasped, sailor fashion, he slowly brought them around in front of him, and wondered why the cars of that train could not be connected with one another in the same way his hands were hooked together. As a result of this curiously suggested idea we have the almost universally used car coupler, the two jaws of which fit into each other and clasp after the manner of the human hands.

"There is a Western inventor who tells of dreaming of railroad spikes one night last summer. He saw around him nothing but spikes, hundreds and thousands of them, and tons and tons piled up in front of him. But these spikes differed from any other he had ever seen in that the four faces were grooved. He thought about those spikes when he woke up, and next night saw more spikes than ever in his dream. Then he became convinced that those spikes were intended as the foundation for the fortune that he had been looking for. As a result the Western man has applied for a patent upon the invention, which it is claimed effects a saving of 25 per cent. in the steel used, and makes a cheaper and better means of holding the rail to the tie than heretofore employed."—Washington Post.

A Literary Policeman.

The news of the disastrous death of Charles Ashton, the "literary policeman," as he was called, will be received with genuine regret throughout the whole of Wales. Mr. Ashton was one of those patient students so numerous in North Wales where there is much less of the rush and stress of life than in the south-eastern portion of the principality. A child of the Elisteddfod, he had published an historical work under its auspices. But the dream of his life was to produce a complete and authoritative bibliography of Welsh literature. Amid the picturesque solitudes of Dinas Mawddwy, where the policeman's life ought to be a happy one and the most heinous crime in the absence of the owner's name from a cart, Mr. Ashton toiled year in and year out up to his task, corresponding with scholars everywhere who were interested in the subject of Welsh literature and were happy to help him with notes and suggestions.—Birmingham Post.

Oldest Tree in the World.

The town of Kos, the capital of the small Turkish island of that name lying off the coast of Asia Minor, possesses the oldest tree in the world. Under its shade Hippocrates inculcated his disciples in his methods and views concerning the healing art 2,000 years ago. Tradition carries the age of the tree back to the time of Aesculapius, of whom Hippocrates was a lineal descendant, which would add some 400 years to its age. A great part of the trunk is built round and upon the old fragments known as Hippocrates Fountain. The almost circumference of the trunk is 20 feet, and there are two main branches, which are supported by masonry columns.

Local Events.

Miss Delia Edgar is visiting at Clover Lick.

C. A. Yeager will build a residence near Captain Smith's.

A party from Lewisburg will camp in Pocahontas this summer.

R. W. Hill, Uriah Bird and B. M. Yeager were in Grafton last week.

J. W. Yeager has built a very neat law office near the Court house.

L. M. McClintic, T. S. McNeel, R. K. Burns and I. F. Hill are on Cranberry this week camping.

Misses Emma Warwick, Mabel Ligon and Delia Edgar were visiting friends in Marlinton Monday.

Smith and Harper have orders for over 600,000 bricks. The first kiln of 250,000 will be ready for burning by August 1.

The name of the post office 5 miles below Franeford on the Lewisburg mail route has been changed from Hattie to Maxwelton.

Norman Price went to Lewisburg to attend the called meeting of Presbytery to consider the call of Rev G. W. Nickell to the Marlinton and Huntersville churches.

E. M. Arbogast and W. A. Bratton expect to build a big brick-office building. L. M. McClintic will build a brick law office building this fall.

County Court met last Tuesday and after auditing claims, refusing to build roads and to grant liquor license adjourned to Saturday next when it will meet to lay the levy.

During the late flood the Middle Fork Driving Compahy put in about 10,000 logs. The breaking of a chain on one of the dams was the cause of not getting in 2,000 more.

Two gentlemen were in town last week in regard to building the big mill to be put in at Marlinton. The mill will be brought here to saw lumber to build buildings, and the heavy machinery will be ready to be placed in the mill as soon as the railroad is finished to this point. They speak of building an engine house to take 200,000 bricks.

Dr A. L. Austin, Dentist, of Lewisburg who has been practicing in Marlinton during the past month will go to Green Bank on Thursday where he will practice for several weeks. He will be found at the office of his brother Dr C. L. Austin. He will return to Marlinton at a later date, notice of which will be given in these columns.

The railroad track is four miles this side of Filling Springs. The laying of track is temporarily suspended until the track already laid can be ballasted. The rails laid are taken from the main line which are replaced with the heaviest rails manufactured. The work on Locust creek bridge is not progressing very fast and quite a lot of grading is to be done. To an outsider it would seem that if the railroad reached Marlinton by October Court it will do well.

The engineer of the West Virginia Pulp and Paper Company is at the mouth of Leather Bark, laying off the ground for the immense sewmill plant to be erected there. There 140 houses to be built at once for occupation by the employees of the company. The big mill will be in charge of Mr Shoemaker, who is said to be a very public spirited man and who takes a personal interest in the welfare of the community in which he chances to be. Much is hoped for from the establishment of this big industry in the county. There is said to be as much as 50,000,000 feet of lumber on the waters of Leather Bark alone.

The present wheat crop harvested in the Lowell in the memory of man is being taken off this week. The fly is the trouble. This unwelcome insect in a fly nearly as long as the common house fly but much slimmer. It lays the eggs in the fall at a certain period and if there is any wheat up the eggs are deposited in the ground at the point of the stalk. The eggs hatch about the time the heads fly makes its appearance apparently in the spring, and the insect feeds on the stalk of the wheat until it is weakened that it falls down. The fully grown fly has not killed but the grains are shriveled. Much of it rots and the grass stands up and looks as if it had not been cut. In the state of Virginia formerly the farmers burned the wheat stubble and then sown clover to kill out the pest, but now it is thought that the egg can only be prevented by late sowing.

The Knapps Creek bridge is completed.

W. W. Beard in the Levels is preparing to build a big barn.

In the Randolph Republican Convention one colored gentleman John McDowell, of Beverly, had a seat as a delegate. He is the first of his race to be recognized by any political party in this way in Randolph County, and it is supposed that on that account most of the colored people in the county will vote the Republican ticket at the comigg election.—News.

The oldest inhabitant fails to remember any display of electrical phenomena surpassing what occurred in view of Huntersville Friday evening. A very dark and rugged cloud loomed just above the horizon from Buckleys Mountain to Browns Mountain which was illuminated by vivid flashes of lightning so continuous and frequent as not to be counted, and this too for an hour or more. Some of the flashes were of exceptional brilliance and magnitude. The silence in the meantime was very profound, but for an occasionally scarcely audible echo of very remote thunder. After the disappearance of this magnificent electrical display towards the north another cloud came up from the southwest attended with rain, thunder and lightning. The very earth seemed to be shaken.

News from former Citizens.

News from absent friends widely known in our county is always pleasant.

Robert H. Moffett lives at Moberly, Missouri, and is prospering in business.

Mitchell W. Beard resides at Loma, O. T., and speaks of farms, rating at six or eight hundred dollars, a few years since, now selling for three or four thousand.

J. W. Ervin, a nephew of the late James Ervin, of Jackson's River, near Warm Springs, Va., now a resident of Charleston, Arkansas, writes an interesting letter. From it we glean the following interesting item: "During the last winter of the war part of Wm. L. Jackson's command, of which I was a member, camped at Hillsboro. I belonged to the 19th Virginia Regiment. Capt. Wm. L. McNeel and Capt. Jacob W. Marshall commanded Companies A and B of the same Regiment. I was acquainted with Capt Marshall, brother Robert and sister Ellen in Greenville while a child. Miss Ellen was my second teacher.

Married.

Frank Tolbert Sharp, of Slaty Fork, and Miss Emma S. Doyle, of Cloyer Creek, were married on Wednesday, June 27, 1900 at the residence of W. P. Dilley, Rev M. W. Atkinson officiating.

After receiving the congratulations of the nine little company assembled to witness the ceremony, Mr and Mrs Sharp drove to Slaty Fork where they will reside for the present. They are a promising young couple and their many friends wish them a long, useful and happy life. R. W. H.

There will be a good deal of wheat cut this the first week in July.

Col Dan O'Connel's drive started Saturday morning and passed Leather Bark Sunday morning at 9 o'clock.

A postoffice will be established at Leather Bark; also at Collins Depot.

A railroad will be built up Brush Run to the timber on Buffalo Mauntain, in the near future.

Willis Gibson, of Vanderpool, is in this vicinity running out timber lands for E. M. Arbogast and others.

The Ladies of the Green Bank Aid Society will give a festival on July 21, 1900, in the church lot at this place. Ice Cream, Cake, Lemonade, &c. They will offer for sale a very nice quilt. Proceeds to go to go to repairing the Methodist church at this place. A cordial invitation is extended to all. Will commence at 11 a. m.—By order of the Committee.

Liquor License.

The county is infested with speakeasies all along the line of the Greenbrier Railroad from the top of Cheat to Droop Mountain. The liquor is hauled into the county with no attempt to hide the nature of the wagon load.

These resorts sell very mean whiskey at about $6 per gallon. There are the cause of a good deal of wretchedness. Young boys frequent the places, often spending Sunday there. They shelter behind a depraved condition of society. Many young men of our county have been taught to go in before the grandjury and swear falsely as to their dealings with these speakeasy men.

We have considered the question seriously and have reached the conclusion that this county is rotten ripe for licensed places. Until men are built like angels they will sell liquor, and it has reached that stage here that we cannot consider the state of society healthful. It is diseased in regard to this one thing and we must take bold measures to meet the evil.

Our idea is to grant liquor licenses for awhile to responsible men, place them under bond of $3,500 outside of incorporated towns, and twice that in such towns. Attack this bond if they ever sell to a minor, a drunken man or keep open on Sunday, and have brought the hidden disease to the surface teach our boys and young men the danger of the first drink, and let them learn to pass a saloon and gauge it at its true value.

We are opposed to the traffic, always have been and always will but just now we would like to break up the secretive, degrading speakeasies with which the county is infected. We are ready to fight the devil with fire.

The Columbia Gramophone.

To meet the growing demand for a gramophone of the Grand type at a figure that will suit the popular purse, the Columbia Phonograph Company announces that the price of the Columbia Grand Graphophone is reduced from $75 to $50, of Grand records from $1.50 to $1 each, and of Grand blanks from $1 to 75c each.

It is confidently believed that this substantial price reduction will have the effect of placing Graphophones of the genuine Grand type in the hands of thousands of persons who have hitherto been restrained from purchasing by reason of the comparative high prices heretofore prevailing. As a further and even greater means of stimulating the sales of grand machines and records, and of overcoming what undoubtedly has been the principal deterrant to their almost universal use the price of records has been to $1 each, instead of $1.50 as heretofore.

Columbia Grand records have justly earned the reputation of being the finest product of the record-making art, and the manufacturers pledge themselves that the goods will continue to deserve this reputation. The reduction in price has been made possible by new manufacturing processes which result in improved records as well as in more economical manufacture. Grand blank cylinders, formerly $1 each, have been reduced to 75c.

It is anticipated that the new prices will create a demand for these wonderful machines that will greatly tax the superb facilities of the manufacturers. Their plant at Bridgeport, Conn., is the largest and most modern and complete talking machine factory in the world and their facilities for the quick and economical production and distribution of their goods are unapproached.

The Columbia Phonograph Co. has brought about every substantial improvement in the talking machine art. The most recent achievement and one as startling as the original invention itself was the discovery of the principles governing the construction of Graphophones of the Grand type. These machines give forth reproductions of sound with the same volume and quality as the original rendition. They speak and sing with the volume of a giant's voice; yet with the intensified vibrant power there is no sacrifice of quality, but on the contrary a richer, fuller and more faithful reproduction of the timbre of the original sound is obtained.

Five hundred dollars was the price of the machines when first offered for sale, and the original price of large records was five dollars each. Facilities for the manufacture of goods on a large scale and the bringing out of new models have made possible great reductions in price. There is now no obstacle to universal adoption of the Grand Graphophone as the most fascinating home entertainer of modern life.—Adv.

Cure for Cholera Infantum Never Known to Fail.

During last May an infant child of our neighbor was suffering from cholera infantum. The doctors had given up all hopes of recovery. I took a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera, and Diarrhoe Remedy to the house, telling them I felt sure it would do good if used according to directions. In two days time the child had fully recovered. The child is now vigorous and healthy. I have recommended this medicine frequently and have never known it to fail.—MRS CURTIS BAKER, Bookwalter, Ohio. Sold by H. R Echols, Marlinton, Barlow and Moore, Edray; Amos Barlow, Huntersville; D. T. McNeel, Ruckeys.

Heartburn.

When the quantity of food taken is too large or the quality too rich heartburn is likely to follow, and especially so if the digestion has been weakened by constipation. Eat slowly and not too slowly of easily digested food. Masticate the food thoroughly. Let six hours elapse between meals and when you feel a fulness and weight in the region of the stomach after eating, indicating that you have eaten too much, take one of Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets and the heartburn may be avoided. For sale by H. R. Echols, Marlinton.

The Chinaman may just as well get off the earth; he is not a good man and does not treat foreigners well in return for being illtreated himself in foreign lands, and so the Powers are after him. Of course, his outrages will make a rich feast, but that is a minor consideration to robbing the earth of the greatest.

When you need a tonic, or laxative please try Chamberlain's Tablets. They will please you. For sale by H. R. Echols, Marlinton.

IN THE SHADOW OF DEATH.

A Whole Family Cured.

Mrs. C. H. Kingsbury, who keeps a millinery and fancy goods store at St. Louis, Gratiot Co., Mich., and who is well known throughout the country, says:

"I was badly troubled with rheumatism, catarrh and neuralgia. I had liver complaint and was very bilious. I was in a bad condition; every day I began to fear that I should never be a well woman; that I should have to settle down into a chronic invalid, and live in the shadow of death. I had JOHNSTON'S SARSAPARILLA recommended to me. I TOOK FOUR BOTTLES AND IT CURED ME, and cured my family both. I am very glad that I heard of it. I would cheerfully recommend it to every one. I have taken many other kinds of medicine, I prefer JOHNSTON'S to all of them."

TESTIMONY.

Rev E. O. GUERRANT, D. D., Kentucky

"A good female school is a public blessing, and among many noble institutions I do not know a better one than the one presided over by Rev R. L. Telford at Lewisburg, W. Va. It is Christian, Biblical, thorough, and attractive—making not only finished scholars, but lovely Christian characters. It is good enough to educate my own daughter, and I take pleasure in commending it to my friends."

Dr J. M. POYNTZ, of Richmond, Ky.

"Rarely indeed does one have the opportunity of placing their daughters in so good an institution of learning as the one presided over by Rev R. L. Telford at Lewisburg. Anyway, it has been good enough for me. My daughter has been cared for as if she had been a member of the family."

J. J ECHOLS, Esq., of West Virginia.

"I have been a patron of the Lewisburg Female Institute for the last six years, and I believe that under the present management it is the very best Female School in the two Virginias. If I had a dozen daughters I would want them all educated there."

Rev M. L. LACY, D. D., of West Virginia.

"I honestly believe it is the best school of which I have any knowledge."

Hon JOHN W. McCREERY, of the State Senate, West Virginia.

"I regard the school as one of the best in the country."

Thou regardin' the natur o' man more'n a spout,
Nor it don ask much gumption to pick out a flaw
In a party whose leaders are loose in the jaw;
An' so in our own case I ventur'to hint
That we'd better set air our personalities in print,
Nor pass resolootions ez long ez your arm,
Thet may, on things happen to turn, do us harm?
For when you've done all your real meanin' to smother,
The darned things 'll up and mean sunthin' or 'nother.

NOTES BY THE WAY.

At Millboro Depot it was pleasant to renew acquaintance with Dr A. F. Kerr, one of the resident physicians. He was one of my many Monterey pupils at the close of the war. His career has been varied, arduous, and eventful, but now in his lovely home he passes a serene and useful life in the bosom of his young and attractive family. He is useful as a good physician, ruling elder in his church, leader in prayer meetings, superindent of Sunday - schools, chorister and organist in the absence of the leader. No matter how numerous his patients this doctor generally finds time to be in his place at public worship. Dr Kerr is the youngest son of Colonel David W Kerr, a native of Pocahontas, and for many years a prominent and widely known citizen of our county. The Colonel is now in his 87th year, in fairly vigorous health and with mental faculties unimpaired. He lives with his son, and it is beautiful to notice how attentively he is cared for by the doctor and excellent wife.

Among the newspaper readings enjoyed in the recent outing was afforded by a Lexington newspaper. It was a notice of a sermon recently preached in Wilmington, N. C., by an eminent minister, taking for his text "Of the making of books there is no end." Newspapers is one of phase of bookmaking, and in discussing the papers the preacher affirmed the printing press to be a school, college, and university for the brightest intellects of every age since printing was invented. A newspaper office is a school of unselfishness. No other class serves a community so well, and too often for so little pay, either in cash or deserved appreciation. Every day and night the newspaper is doing free work for the general betterment of the community. If a lawyer was called upon by the city authorities to do for the city the same amount and sooner value in writing than that which every newspaper does free every week, the charge would be fifty dollars or more. Were the newspapers to cease for a single week, it would be as dark and lonesome as if the face of an eclipse covered us and Washington would be to the ordinate world practically as though she were not."

But few of the more prominent citizens of Bath County are so widely known in our county as Abram Bellington, near Bath Alum. It was the writer's pleasure to spend a day at his charming country residence, where, at the age of 83 years, Mr Bellington is quietly spending the comfort of a cozy home life. As is necessary he is of the purest Scotch Irish stock. Many of his earlier years were occupied in the duties of sheriff of his county, in which Bath was much larger than now. He was a gallant Confederate soldier, enrolled in the Bath Squadron during the war between the States, and participated in Jubal Early's raid down the Valley among the bravest of the brave when under fire. His home, situated in the midst of a vast expanse of forest, is an ideal one, adorned with vines, shaded with trees, beautified with flowers and furnished with entertaining books.

Thomas R. Kellison, near Mt. Grove, has the distinction of being the chief seng digger. Last year he with the aid of his six children procured and sold $150 worth. The output of the year promises to be as good, if not better. What he has not learned of gin seng craft is scarcely worth considering. He operates the seng producing grounds from Pocahontas to Albemarle and Nelson Counties, bordering the Blue Ridge.

One day about noon I stopped at the home of George Miller, near the head of Kerr's Creek, thinking it was a public house, to have dinner and horse fed. By a series of searching questions the land-lord learned who and what I was, and most positively objected to my going any farther that day. He could not promise me any rats for supper having fed the last he had to a preacher, but he would take me in his surrey to night preaching. I was not hard to persuade and went with him and family to the church where I heard a discourse by an evangelist from Roanoke City who was a striking counterpart to Ward Beecher in appearance, manner and voice. He will be heard from some day in Baptist circles. Mrs Frances Miller is a sister of Bishop Wm. Taylor, and has numerous relatives in Pocahontas. She was putting up cherries of the wax variety, some of them too large to go through an inch sugar hole, and she put me to reading the Apocrypha, in which book she is much and intelligently interested. During the war Mr Miller was a Confederate soldier, Co. D, 27th Virginia Infantry, known as the Monroe Guards. He was fearfully wounded at the second Battle of Manassas. The ball entered just below the left cheek bone and came out just behind the right ear, a little above. Upon his recovery he was put on duty at Lexington in the "Provoking Guard" until hostilities ceased.

On the journey home it was my pleasure by special invitation to spend two nights and a Sabbath at the Rockbridge Baths and recently in the house of the late Hugh Adams and Robert Fitzbaugh. All of our Pocahontas readers who remember Mr Adams will be pleased to hear that Mrs Adams and her three children are in prosperous circumstances, doing as well as it is possible for any people to do. Mr Fitzbaugh's 7 and his death, Rev Hunter Fitzbaugh, now in her third year, having been born March 31, 1900. When quite young she was married to Robert Dunlap and Elder brother of the late Rev. E. E. Dunlap, of our county. Some after marriage they came with their family, a younger brother, migrated to Indiana and located six miles east of Crawfordsville. In the course of a year or two scarlet fever of a virulent form made its appearance, and in the course of thirteen days Robert, his child a year old and brother John died. The father, a Mr McCutcheon, uncle of Robert D. McCutcheon, late of Dunmore, went to Indiana to bring home his bereaved daughter. He found her so broken hearted that he felt it his duty to use somewhat heroic measures to divert her mind from her troubles. He had her to mount a two year old colt, never saddled before the morning of the departure home ward, while he came back in a wagon. On the journey home he would fix up and start and leave her to saddle and mount the colt as best she could and follow on, and would sometime be out of sight before she could get started. In the course of a week or so the colt became gentle as a lamb, and she rode him the entire distance. The experience broke the spell of melancholy. After a widowhood of a few years she became Mrs John Firebaugh, who has been dead a number of years.

Robert Dunlap Firebaugh, her son, with whom she resides at the old homestead near Cedar Grove was a Confederate soldier attached to the 62nd Regiment of Mounted Infantry; Col George Smith commanding. He has a cane made of the poplar flagstaff that was carried in the battle of New Market, during which four color bearers were killed or wounded. The 62nd Regiment and the Cadet Corps bore the shock of the battle upon that bloody day, and the losses of the 62d exceeded those of the Cadet Battalion, in proportion to numbers engaged. How very suggestive such a relic is, and what deep and tender associations, reminding us of so much effort and all at last to go down to the dust of defeat.

Much more yet remains of notes on the way, but let this installment suffice for the present.

Allah, Not the English.

I remember some few years ago I was up the Nile, away from big towns, and had a long talk with various sheiks and cousins of village. I was the only Westerner present and we knew and trusted each other in a way. I asked if Islam were tighter. "Yes," was the answer. "Is water fairly distributed?" "Yes." "Are the soldiers good property?" "Yes." "Are you fond of fighting, because a Faqir?" "Yes." "And who did all this?" I asked, expecting to be told it was the English. There was a pause; they are never in a hurry. Then an old sheik answered: "Allah."—London Standard.

THE SALOON IN MANILA.

Lately a friend in the Philippines sent us a copy of The Manila Times. We examined the paper with some interest, as indicating the state of the new American journalism and enterprise in our oriental possessions. A striking feature of the paper was the number of liquor advertisements, of which we counted seventeen of saloons and special brands which filled about one-fourth of the space in the eight pages of the paper. This confirms in a way the reports of the growth of intemperance in the Philippines since the occupation of the island by the army, bringing this country into discredit with the temperate Filipinos.

A writer in The Independent (New York) gives some of the facts in the case. At present there are 170 licensed saloons in Manila and 53 wholesale liquor establishments, against a dozen saloons and wine shops before the American occupation. These pay a license of $1200 yearly of the first district, and $500 if in the second district. This high license reduced the number of saloons from 224 at the end of January, 1900, to the 170 existing to day. The writer says:

"It is difficult to state accurately whether our soldiers stationed in and about Manila, and those who are continually passing through the city, indulge in more heavy drinking out here than they would in a home station under similar conditions. This must largely be a matter of personal opinion. I believe they do, and for these reasons: First, because a warm country causes perspiration, which brings its consequent thirst; second, because a tropical climate is debilitating to men of Northern race, and their systems feel the need of stimulants; third, Manila offers very little in the way of healthy distraction and recreation, and there is little here for men to do in their leisure hours except drink; and, lastly, because when men are ten thousand miles away from home and living the rough life of a soldier they become subject to certain feelings of license and a freedom from moral restraint. These above stated reasons, in my estimation, tend to make our men in the Philippines drink more than they would at home.

"Before the arrival of the American soldier in Manila there was very little heavy drinking here, and this because both Spaniards and Filipinos are temperate people; they do not drink to excess. Any one who has been in Spain or has seen the Spanish soldiers in Cuba, in Porto Rico, and the Philippines will admit they are not addicted to heavy drinking, and I do not think this point needs any further support. And the Filipino is as temperate as the Spaniard. I have been in these islands for one year and I have yet to see an intoxicated native. I do not maintain that the Filipino never gets drunk, but the occurrence is unquestionably very rare. It is true that before we came they manufactured and consumed large quantities of this 'bino' that has such a terrible effect upon our own men, but they drank it in moderation, while our men use it to excess. A gentleman who has been two years and a half in the Philippines has just told me he has seen, during that time, two or three natives who, he thought, were drunk; and inquiry among the old Spanish and English residents of the country elicits statements all of one tenor, that the Filipinos are a most temperate people.

"Hence, given the incontrovertible facts that both Spaniards and Filipinos are not addicted to drink we can understand how Manila runs on, before we came here, with three saloons licensed for the sale of liquors, such as brandy, whiskey and other strong drink, while today, May 15th, there are 170 licensed saloons in the city and ill licenses for the wholesale distribution of liquors.

Before the Americans came to Manila there were in and about the city more than thousand natives who were rooms. Such wine rooms are distinctly a product of wine-drinking countries, such as France, Italy and Spain. They were quiet and orderly places, where Spaniards and natives went for their wine. Since the Spaniards have gone the demand for Spanish wines has dropped, the houses for a wine, and to-day about seven hundred of these native wine rooms are being turned into saloons. The writer quoted above says: "I believe that one well patronized saloon here at home is accountable for as much drunkenness and disorder as were one thousand of these wine rooms in Manila."

"It is not my purpose to speak of the effects of alcoholism in the tropics; they are already well known. It is a fact that a large number of the insane soldiers sent home on our transports can trace their affliction to the excessive use of stimulants, and it is a fact that the drinking of liquors in the tropics weakens a man's constitution and renders him more liable to disease.

"The Filipino people, like any other people in the world, form their judgment of another race by the men of that other race with whom they come in contact. In the matter of drinking they believe the whole American nation to be on a par with the drunken element of our present army of occupation. They don't like us, and decline to give us the benefit of the doubt. A temperate people themselves, they have a deep contempt for drunkenness.

"I do not believe our advent to the Philippines has yet caused any appreciable increase of drinking among the islanders; this effect may possibly come later. We have brought our own vices to this land and up to the present time we alone indulge in intemperance. When the Filipinos consider the matter at all, they say our men are fools not to realize their excesses will eventually kill them, and they marvel at the American lack of self-control in the matter of drinking as exemplified by our army."

How to Handle a Gun.

In picking up your gun from lying flat, standing against anyting, from a companion or a boat, do not take hold of the muzzle and drag it toward you; take hold of the forestock and muzzle if you are only using one hand; if two, in the regular way you grasp it when you go to shoot. In carrying your gun do not keep the muzzle directly behind you; throw the butt to the right or left, whichever shoulder you are carrying it on. This will bring the muzzle toward the opposite shoulder, thus rendering it easy to carry, as it will be resting on your neck and shoulder instead of the small part of your shoulder, and with the muzzle upward will also lighten it a little.

I think there are more men shot with their own guns by taking them from a boat than in any other way. When you run your boat or conoe to the bank you gun is likely to be in the bow, which I think is the best place for it. Take hold of it by the forestock and step out. Put it in a safe place where you are sure it will not fall down. Then draw up your boat or do anything else you have to do but do not let your gun stay in the boat until you have shouldered the pack and then catch hold of the muzzle, drag it up over the gunwale, hook the hammers and have it explode. It is likely to blow your brains out.—Forest and Stream.

White Man Turned Yellow.

Great consternation was felt by the friends of M. A. Hogarty of Lexington Ky., when they saw him turning yellow. His skin slowly changed color, also his eyes, and he suffered terribly. His malady was yellow jaundice. He was treated by the best doctors but without benefit. Then he was advised to try Electric Bitters, the wonderful stomach and liver remedy, and he writes: "After taking two bottles I was wholly cured." THE NATIONAL CONVENTION.

The Democrats met at Kansas City and adopted a bone of contention, nominated William J. Bryan whose name has been mentioned for the office, for President, and good old Adlai Stevenson, for Vice-President, and adjourned.

Bryan was not present in person but he was the idol of the party and was nominated with a whoop. Hill was a long way behind Stevenson for the second place.

The party adopted a free silver plank, declaring that the ratio should be 16 to 1. This was done by the National Committee by a vote of 26 to 24. Nearly every member from States which have been carried by the party voted against it, among whom was the member from West Virginia. Some of the members wished to carry the question to the floor of the convention, but Croker had decided that it was not of enough importance to war over.

The strain was greatly lessened by the plank declaring that the question of imperialism and expansion is the question of paramount importance. The whole proceedings were harmonious and not a delegate went away disgruntled. The party will poll it full strength, the fall and the swing of the pendulum may put the Democrats in power again just in time to receive the subsiding wave of prosperity as usual. New York got a black eye in the convention and it is thought that we will have to look for our electoral vote outside of that State. We believe that the Democrats will have a majority of the nation, but are not so sure of the electoral vote.

A curious piece of news is reported from Rarotonga, one of the Cook Islands, belonging to the English, as being in a serious state of rebellion. The natives are flocking to the English settlements along the coast and threatening the capital. Fifty of the British are reported slain. The quarrel is about what day is the true Sabbath. The first missionaries years ago seemed to have forgotten that in coming to the islands they had crossed the 180th meridian and hence observed the wrong day for Sunday. After so many years an attempt was made to remedy this and the natives became completely confused, and as they continue to worship the old Sunday while the new Sunday Christians keep the new Sunday. Thinking this to be a work more to the native taste they have taken up that STAND UP.

The stanchest trait of American character has never been pictured in bolder relief than it was by Justice Brewer in his vigorous speech at the Bunker Hill Day dinner of the New England Society of Chicago. The old time men of New England, he said, were not in the habit of keeping their ears to the ground. They often lacked sweetness and grace, but they never lacked independence, force or steadfastness of purpose. "A man with his ear always to the ground to catch the rumbling of the people," the Justice remarked, "is not worth a snap of the fingers." The politicians will not be admonished by Mr Brewer's characterization of their habitual attitude and his contemptuous estimate of their value, but the plain people, whom Mr Lincoln believed in, will accept the portrait and the estimate as true. The average American has many faults, but he is no grazing Nebuchadnezzar. He stands up and looks around; he is not everlastingly barking for the hoofbeats of some other ass. And because we are a nation of men who think for themselves, we are able to conduct the experiment of democracy on a gigantic scale with a fair measure of success. When every man has his own opinions and sturdily fights for them with the intellectual weapons of argumentation, a reasoned public opinion is created, and in a good degree it shapes the policy of the nation. When every man listens for the mutterings of the crowd before he makes up his own mind what he himself believes and stands for, the nation is swayed wholly by the lower forces of imitation, suggestion, and emotion, and, like an incapable beast, it moves mostly this way or that, as licking gains, it rushes madly on destruction.

Deference to others in all that pertains to the greater side of life, to manners, to gentleness, to kindliness in speech and act, this also is never sorry, for without it life is cold and cruel, but in the neighborly matters of national convention, of legislation, deliberate and stanch are more here in place. A man who gives comfort to intolerance, betrays the cause of the quadrupeds, is a coward, and a traitor to all of his own species and a [illegible]

Epigrams of Balzac.

The famous French writer Balzac possesses genius for epigrams of a very superior quality. Among the most suggestive the reader is invited to notice these:

There is no love between equals.

Vanity is the most tenacious of all habits.

Love is not only a sentiment; it is an art.

Generous souls are defective in business faculty.

Women have presentiments whose justness is wonderful.

All human power is a compound of time and patience.

The savage has feelings only; the civilized has feelings and ideas.

Nations like individuals derive their vigor from noble sentiments only.

Men of fine character confess their faults to themselves and punish themselves for them.

A woman's errors come almost always from her belief in good, or her confidence in truth.

If society gives us pillows she makes it up by gout, just as she puts up law to modify justice.

IT GIVE OF MUSIC

Fought Over the Lord's Prayer.

Coadjutor Bishop Anderson has a wee daughter of four who is already a stanch churchwoman and who has inherited much of her father's force of character. The other day the family entertained some friends from Denver. In the visiting family there was a little girl of the same age as the Anderson child. Her family were Presbyterians. It was proposed that the two little girls share the same bed, which was assented to by the children. When bedtime came they both knelt down to say their prayers in unison.

When little Miss Anderson was saying, "Forgive us our trespasses," she heard her companion say, "Forgive us our debts," and she said sharply:

"It's 'trespasses!'"

"No; it ain't," said the Denver Calvinist, "its 'debts.'"

"Trespasses!"

"Debts!"

"Trespasses!"

"Debts!"

Out flew a chubby Anderson fist and struck a Presbyterian eye. There was a mix-up immediately.

"Now it's 'trespasses,' isn't it?"

"No," said she stoutly. "It's 'debts.'"

Peace was restored, and the two consented to go on with the prayer. When they came to the end the Presbyterian said "Amen," giving the flat "a" of the dissenters, while the little Episcopalian intoned "Ah-men," with the broad sound to the first vowel.

"Amen," repeated the Presbyterian.

"Ah-men," said Miss Anderson, with conviction.

They were only saved from another encounter by being bundled into bed. As the door was closed upon them each was still maintaining her idea of pronunciation.—Philadelphia Record.

On June 18 the German minister, Baron Von Ketteler was murdered by Chinese troops and Boxers while on his way to the Tsung Le Yamen, in Pekin. He was dragged from his horse and hacked to pieces with swords, along with some of his servants. It is reported that on the day after the Chinese Government offered the remaining ministers twenty-four hours to leave the city of Pekin, but this was declined. It is believed they feared the guard offered was not sufficient for their safe conduct.

One of the most serious reports from China is to the effect that Prince Tuan, who is very hostile to the foreigners, is in control of the Chinese capital. Admiral Seymour says imperial Chinese troops joined the Boxers in fighting him. About July 1 the international troops already landed were about 14,000. The report is the Powers have decided to place 80,000 troops in China at once, to be led by the Russian Grand Duke, Alexiff, but this number of men would be a mere handful to fight China with.

Lord Roberts and Gen. Buller have their armies so deployed as to separate the Boers in the Transvaal from those in Orange Free State. But nevertheless the Boers are very lively and keep up an active guerilla warfare around Standerton, Lindley and Frankfort in the Orange Free State. Small battles are reported from all these points. As to South African affairs, it appears that President Kruger is at Machadodorp, one hundred and twenty-five miles east of Pretoria on the railroad to Delagoa Bay, living in his private car, which he calls the Capitol of the Transvaal. His main army is in the district between Lydenburg and Middelburg, a region of a few small hills, the valleys resting numberless mountain fastnesses and steep rocky defiles. Here they have their guns, ammunition, and supplies sent from the British seacoast, and they have even established a cartridge factory. It is believed too that the Boers are still receiving fresh importations of French made artillery, landed at some secret point on the Portuguese coast.

A gentleman, calling on a farmer, observed: "Mr Jones, your clock is not quite right, is it?"

"Well, you see, sir," said Mr Jones, "nobody don't understand much about that clock but me. When the hands of that clock stand at twelve, then it strikes two and then I know its twenty minutes to seven."—Exchange.

Local Events.

William Mann is at work on his residence in West Marlinton.

Mrs Cologne, of Marshall, Va., is visiting her daughter, Mrs W. A. Bratton.

Preaching services at Marlinton next Sabbath at 11 a. m. by W. T. Price.

Sterling Yeager, a pupil of the Romney Institute, is spending his vacation at home.

Andrew Bratton, of Millboro, has been spending the past two weeks at Marlinton.

Samuel M. Robinson, a timber buyer from New York, has been in Pocahontas County a few days.

There will be a basket meeting at the Droop M. P. Church, the 3d Sunday in July. All are invited.

Marvin Carter is building a combination business and dwelling house near the Marlinton Bank building, on Camden Avenue.

W. A. Bratton has been very sick, but is thought to be better. During last week his life was despaired of.

Col. and Mrs August, of Washington City, are the guests of Mr and Mrs W. A. Bratton, and expect to pass the summer in Pocahontas.

Pat Simmons has been quite sick for a week or more, and his work hindered on the houses he had undertaken to plaster.

Messrs Frost and Berry from Fredonia, New York, were in Marlinton to learn something of its business possibilities.

Last Saturday Charles Bruce passed Marlinton with thirty or forty head of cattle bought in Greenbrier, on his way to Mingo.

The past week William Irvine and others have been busy with their teams hauling rock for the Marlinton Bank building from the Koe quarry.

Andrew Price and S. B. Scott, Jr., were at Lewisburg last week in the interest of numerous creditors having claims on the firm of Cogan, Noble & House.

Ten dead and three hundred injured was one result of the Fourth of July celebration in the city of Philadelphia alone, from accidental explosion of fireworks.

After the very hot wave of last week the reactionary spell of cooler weather has set in, and every one has remarked that there is a "fall" feel in the air, which for early July is unusual here.

The basket meeting in the grove near West Union was largely attended. It was decided to build a church near there. $250 were raised, and a committee appointed to select a site.

The census enumerator for Edray district had some trouble completing the work in the prescribed time. Some deputies were put to work and the last house visited about midnight June 30th—the last day.

The house fly—always a nuisance—comes nearer being a genuine Pharaoh's plague this year than ever before, because of their unnumbered millions. The supply of "tanglefoot," insect powder, wire screens, and mosquito bar at the stores has been used up in the effort to stay the plague.

The dust in the Marlinton bridge is a serious evil to those who are compelled to cross it frequently. The floor is double and so tight that none sifts through; the dust collects from year to year and every passing vehicle raises a fresher cloud. About the only thing that can be done would be to sweep the bridge once a month or so. In consideration of the above trouble travelers are warned not to cross the bridge until they come to it.

H. A. Yeager was appointed receiver for Cogan, Noble & House last Saturday by Judge McWhorter. He will finish laying the stone for the bridges across Greenbrier River and Stephen Hole Run and collect the outstanding accounts of the concern. The engraving of some trust deeds for the benefit of H. J. Payne, one of the contractors, was the immediate cause of the receiver being appointed.

Good morning! Hot enough for you? The Golden Store is selling nice soft sweet patterns at reduced prices. $2.25 silk in new effects for 98c a yard, or $2.75 a waist pattern for $1.49. $1.25 a waist pattern for 49c. 50c silk for 25c a yard, or $1.00 a waist pattern. Lemons and oranges sold at another reduction now in quantity and price. I will sell the best 50c mocha coffee at 35c a choice roasted, ground, fine. Don't pay old prices to pay increase. One jar of 25-cent fruit goes more than many farthers.

JEFF HOUCHIN KILLED.

Constable Burner Shoots Him through the Heart with a Winchester.

Last Thursday Jeff Houchin, a well known citizen of Travelers Repose neighborhood, was shot and instantly killed by C. B. Burner, a constable of Green Bank District. The affair is held to be justifiable.

Houchin was at Durbin during the day and had taken a drink or two, but was not though drunk. When in liquor he is known as a dangerous man. Houchin was guilty of what Burner, as constable, considered disorderly conduct, and he told him that he would have to arrest him if it was continued.

Houchin went home for supper and brooded over what he considered was unwarranted interference on the part of the constable. After supper he told his wife he was going after Burner and would get him before morning. His wife did what she could to keep him from going, but was unsuccessful.

He went to P. D. Yeager's and inquired for Burner, and next to C. L. Burner's. He went on to Durbin. Burner was warned of his coming and concealed himself. Houchin came on with his gun held ready for shooting, crouching as he walked. He came to a place where he was on the point of discovering Burner, and Burner says that just as he fired Houchin caught sight of him and made a movement, as though to fire. Burner fired three shots into the body of Houchin before he fell. The first shot was through the heart, the next just below it, and the third took effect in his hand and thigh.

It is a very lamentable affair, but the end of Jeff Houchin does not surprise any one who ever knew him. He was a most likeable man when sober, a fine companion, and a good husband and father, but liquor transformed him into a dangerous, quarrelsome man. He was probably the finest rifle shot at live game in the county. He shot without taking sight apparently. While not drunk on the day of his death he probably had had enough to raise the demon in him that prompted him to go after the constable who had threatened him with arrest.

The inquest held by Justice Gillespie exonerated Burner.

Woodford Hutton Shot.

Woodford Hutton, son of Colonel Elihu Hutton, was shot and dangerously wounded by C. P. Darlington, editor of the Randolph Enterprise.

The shooting occurred in a saloon in Huttonsville. The difficulty arose through a dispute over county politics, which is now very heated in Randolph in view of the coming primary election. The lie was given and Hutton struck Darlington with a beer bottle, then Darlington drew a pistol and shot him twice in the right side of the abdomen. He was at once put on a special car and sent to the Johns Hopkins Hospital, Baltimore, where he arrived Friday.

Hutton is about 22 years old and well known in this county. Recently he was with a camping party on Williams River. He and Will McLaughlin, of this place, attended the races and celebration at Elkins Wednesday. They returned to Huttonsville together and the latter left him and started for Marlinton at 4 p. m., only a few hours before the shooting.

Darlington escaped and fled some distance, but returned the next day at noon and gave himself up. For several years he owned and operated the Webster Echo, and lately bought the Enterprise.

A Problem.

When General Grant got into financial trouble some years before his death he sold much of his property to satisfy his obligations. A pair of horses sold for $1200 each and in paying over the money to Grant the auctioneer remarked that he came out even on them at least, as on one he had gained ten per cent and on the other lost ten per cent. General Grant smiled and remarked that "some people might figure it out that way." What did General Grant gain or lose in the transaction, if anything?

"Success," a New York magazine, propounds the problem, with prize offer for its solution.

Baseball Game.

The Marlinton team and a team organized by the railroad men at Academy gave an impromptu exhibition of baseball at Academy Saturday. Both teams met with our generous practice, as balls, bats &c., were not forthcoming until the day of the match, but the Marlinton aggregation proved superior in batting and fielding, and gathered a decisive victory. Several innings were played when the game at 5 o'clock in the afternoon was called on account of rain and darkness.

The return match will be played at Marlinton Saturday, July 21st.

MRS POOR.

LIQUOR LICENSES.

Messrs Editors: Well, I never thought fire was the right thing to fight fire with all the time, but only in a few ways; and to undertake to put down the sale of whiskey by granting license to sell it I would not favor that way. And to say it causes misery and wretchedness is putting it very lightly. Think of mothers heartbroken on account of children drinking the killing stuff. I am glad to know we have men on the County Court that can say no, no, and always no to license.

Talk about revenue! Our county is not so poor we have to get revenue that way. It would take more to feed the lawbreakers and prosecute them than we could get from revenue by the license.

And think of the lives put out by those intoxicated with the stuff and themselves sent to a drunkard's grave and perdition, and say we ought to have saloons in our county! Why, it looks like a man raising a family was surely crazy to say such a thing. If the law will not prosecute those who are breaking the law by illegal selling of liquor, neither would it if the Court would grant license.

I don't want to see the day when there will be a saloon in Green Bank. Our community was sorely shocked last Saturday on hearing of the shooting of Mr Jeff Houchin, in Durbin, because of whiskey; and then say any sane man would want license to sell more. God forbid that it should be done.

Arrangements are being made to secure the services of a competent instructor.

This vast, rich Republic spent in the last fiscal year for administrative purposes nearly half a billion of dollars—$487,709,171. It collected from all sources $568,988,948. War revenue taxes yielded $256,290,388, while customs revenues under the oppressive Dingley tariff schedules were $233,857,568. The net result of Government fiscal operations during the twelve-month was to put $81,229,771 of surplus into the public Treasury—to be squandered hereafter, no doubt, in reckless schemes of public extravagance. Practically this large surplus is available as a corruption fund to keep the Administration in power. The people are taxed too much.—Philadelphia Record.

$100 REWARD $100.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages and that is catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer $100 for any case it fails to cure. Send for testimonials.

THE CENTAUR COMPANY, NEW YORK CITY.

In a Wichita Canyon.

An incident of our return is along the line of still hunting. As the boys went down into a small canon they discovered two fairly well dressed fellows seemingly asleep near the road. They were armed to the teeth and neither looked like a cowboy. As they drove out of te canon, I, following entered it in time to catch these fellows peering at the retreating buckboard they were merely "possuming" I noticed two horses further up the canon, both wearing saddles. They were frightfully poor and were trying to gain a little nourishment from some dry twigs along the side of the canon. The saddles were good ones. The horses had undoubtedly been shamefully abused. I caught the buckboard and urged an investigation. I did not admire the look of things. Ransom deemed it advisable to let them alone. Those poor horses excited my interest.

In about an hour we met the stage bound for Cloud Chief and the western part of the Territory. Beside the driver sat a clothing drummer. Whatever he was out in that country for I do not know. We apprised the driver of the presence of the two men in the canon. When some distance from the spot he gave the reins to the drummer, and with a threat or two if he did not explicitly obey orders, compelled him to drive toward the canon and into it. Near the canon the driver dropped out of the rear boot of the stage, swiftly crept through the grass and thin oak brush to a spot where he could command a view of the crossing in the canon. The men proved themselves bandits by stopping the stage, the impromptu driver nearly shaking the vehicle to pieces trembling. They ordered out the passengers and iquired for the driver, who answered for himself with his Winchester by promptly killing both bandits from his position aboye, came down leisurely, tumbled the bodies into the rear boot, laced it up to keep them from falling out, secured their horses, unsaddled the poor beasts, tied them beside the wheelers and rooled into Cloud Chief on schedule time with the entire outfit.—Forest and Stream.

Cure for Cholera Infantum Never Known to Fail.

During last May an infant child of our neighbor was suffering from cholera infantum. The doctors had given up all hopes of recovery. I took a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera, and Diarrhoe Remedy to the house, telling them I felt sure it would do good if used according to directions. In two days time the child had fully recovered. The child is now vigorous an healthy. I have recommended this medicine frequently and have never known it to fail.—MRS CURTIS BAKER, Bookwalter, Ohio. Sold by H. R Echols, Marlinton, Barlow and Moore, Edray; Anoor Barlow, Huntersville; D. T. ~cNeel, ruckeye.

BY IMPLICATION.—"Most of the crowd," said the matron with the square jaw, who was presiding at the picnic, "seems to have gone boating down the creek Is there any one here that ever lived on a farm and has a good voice for calling hogs?" "Yes'm," answered one of the men standing by. 'Well I wish you'd just go down to the bank and holler out that the dinner's ready."—Chicago Tribune.

Heartburn.

When the quantity of food taken is too large or the quality too rich heartburn is likely to follow, and especially so if the digestion has been weakened by constipation. Eat slowly and not too slowly of easily digested food. Masticate the food thoroughly. Let six hours elapse between meals and when you feel a fulness and weight in the region of the stomach after eating, indicating that you have eaten too much, take one of Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets and the heartburn may be avoided. IN THE SHADOW OF DEATH.

A Whole Family Cured.

Mrs. C. H. Kingsbury, who keeps a millinery and fancy goods store at 84 Louis, Grathot Co. Mich., and who is well known throughout the country, says:

"I was badly troubled with rheumatism, catarrh and neuralgia. I had liver complaint and was very bilious. I was in a bad condition; every day I began to fear that I should never be a well woman; that I should have to settle down into a chronic invalid, and live in the shadow of death. I had JOHNSTON'S SARSAPARILLA recommended to me. I TOOK FOUR BOTTLES AND IT CURED ME, and cured my family both. I am very glad that I heard of it. I would cheerfully recommend it to every one. I have taken many other kinds of medicine, but I prefer JOHNSTON'S to all of them."

TESTIMONY.

Rev E. O. GUERRANT, D. D., Kentucky

"A good female school is a public blessing, and among many noble institutions I do not know a better one than the one presided over by Rev R. L. Telford at Lewisburg, W. Va. It is Christian, Biblical, thorough, and attractive—making not only finished scholars, but lovely Christian characters. It is good enough to educate my own daughter, and I take pleasure in commending it to my friends."

Dr J. M. POYNTZ, of Richmond, Ky.

"Rarely indeed does one have the opportunity of placing their daughters in so good an institution of learning as the one presided over by Rev R. L. Telford at Lewisburg, W. Va. Why, it has been good enough for me. My daughter has been cared for as if she had been a member of the family."

J. J ECHOLS, Esq., of West Virginia.

"I have been a patron of the Lewisburg Female Institute for the last six years, and I believe that under the present management it is the very best Female School in the two Virginias. If I had a dozen daughters I would want them all educated there."

Rev M. L. LACY, D. D., of West Virginia.

"I honestly believe it is the best school of which I have any knowledge."

Hon JOHN W. McCREERY, of the State Senate, West Virginia.

"I regard the school as one of the best in the country."

A SANITARY MESSAGE.

Last night, above the whistling wind,
I heard the welcome rain—
A fusillade upon the roof,
A tattoo on the pane:
The key-hole piped; the chimney-top
A war-like trumpet blew:
Yet mingling with these sounds of strife
A softer voice stole through.

'Give thanks, O brothers!' said the voice,
'That He who sent the rains,
Hath spared your fields the scarlet dew
That drips from patriot's veins:
I've seen the grass on eastern graves
In brighter verdue rise;
But, oh! the rain that gave it life
Sprung first from human eyes.

'I come to wash away no stain
Upon your wasted lea;
I raise no banners save the ones
The forests wave to me:
Upon the mountain-side, where Spring
Her farthest picket sets,
My reveille wakes a host
Of grassy bayonets.

'I visit every humble roof:
I mingle with the low:
Only upon the highest peaks
My blessings fall in snow;
Until, in trickings of the stream,
And drainings of the lea,
My unspent bounty comes at last
To mingle with the sea.'

And thus all night, above the wind,
I heard the welcome rain—
A fusillade upon the roof,
A tattoo on the pane:
The key-hole piped; the chimney-top
A warlike trumpet blew;
But mingling with these sounds of strife,
This oymn of peace stole through.

—BRET HARTE.

NOTES BY THE WAY.

The obsequies of the late John P. McDannald at the Warm Springs, June 9, 1900, were solemnly impressive. An immense assembly,—one of the largest ever seen on similar occasions,—gathered in and around the church, while the body, escorted by the Masonic fraternity, was placed in front of the pulpit. Rev W. C. White invited me to assist in the church services. I was deeply moved by the scene, while near the remains of a former schoolmate and personal friend ever since we attended the Hillsboro Academy in 1842. Prayer was offered by Pastor White; "How firm a foundation," stanzas 1, 4, 5, and 6 wre sung by the choir; appropriate selections from the Scriptures were read as arranged in the Manual of forms. Prayer by the writer and the hymn Nearer My God to Thee closed the service in the church. After viewing the remains the funeral cortege moved to the cemetery on the opposite hill. The Masonic ritual was recited over the grave lined with white material, the body lowered and the vault deeply covered with mown grass so as to muffle the heart-rending sounds of the falling clods. Evergreens were thrown in emblematic of immortality. Over the mound was spread a Masonic floral apron. This apron was made of white fabric, seven feet in length and four feet in width. The Mystic Monogram formed of flowers was placed in the centre. The rest of the apron was covered and bordered with flowers of many tints and ferns, the red, white, and blue emblematic tints predominating.

While in Rockbridge it was my privilege to pass several pleasant and profitable hours with two ministerial friends, well known to many persons in our county. Revs D. A. Penick and J. B. McCown. For 27 years Pastor Penick has been in charge of the historic Monmouth Church. His pleasant home is in one of the most inviting sections of Lexington. Three daughters are with him and they make his surroundings of ideal home likeness. The sons Paul and Daniel are young men worthy of their parentage. Daniel is a rising young physician located in Kentucky while Paul McNeel seeks well to business in Lexington.

Rev J. B. McCown, while he some extent diverted from regular or continuous pulpit service, is nevertheless pursuing a useful life. He is an enthusiast on local option and bore in one of the few discourse that occasion set Mr McCown, with others, recently went to work and obtained an order for a a special election that is soon to come off. The contest promises to be one of the fiercest of its kind, as this district seems to be the last ditch towards Bath and Pocahontas, which counties seemingly appear to be the last refuge for the advantage of the Valley distillers now looking elsewhere for escape from an outraged and indignant people, by whom they have been tolerated so long at such fearful cost of life, property, and morals.

The Rockbridge press is represented by two worthy young editors, Barclay and Paxton. The Lexington Gazette, June 20, 1900, issued the 25th number of the 96th volume, hence the Gazette centennial not far removed—1904. If Editor Barclay lives the interesting event will be celebrated in fitting style. He was once my Sunday school scholar and I am proud of him. The Rockbridge news man, Mr Paxton, is a born editor, and while an enthusiastic Palmer Democrat, he was not offensively so,—too much gentleman in his makeup for that.

On the home stretch I passed a night at Mt Grove, where I found that Mrs Cash and D. G. Cleek had arranged for a lecture on prophetic study. Mrs Cash had posted notices and otherwise announced for persons to prepare themselves by reading Daniel 2d, Leviticus 26, Micah 4, and 2d Peter 1st chapter. Whatever this lady takes in hand she goes by Solomon and does it with her might. An audience assembled worth going a hundred miles to meet.

At one of the Rockbridge homes where I was entertained I was shown a book of travel in the Holy Land written by Marion Harland. She was kindly received by the venerable Rabbi of Jerusalem, who is regarded with sincere veneration by all the Jewish people of the world. During the visit she requested her guide and interpreter to say to the Rabbi that some of the most learned rabbis in America no longer expect a personal Messiah. They believe that the prophecies relative to the coming have reference to the perfectibility of human nature, to an advanced morality and subjugation of whatever is base and depraved, the elimination from Eden and mind of all that engenders sorrow, pain, and even death itself. Marion Harland says the reason the Rabbi became excited and replied: "No devout Jew believes such a monstrous thing. The men who assert it are infidels, or materialists. The Messiah will be a real personage, great, holy, powerful, perfect, and He shall reign in the Mt Zion for ever and ever." She then requested her interpreter to inquire, "When will the Messiah come?" The Rabbi's reply was "That is in God's mind, not mine." That rabbi rose and left the room in March A. year 11-13.

Now see many rabbis are so flayed against them, they dare not say that say. Let her be left and let our eye look upon Zion.

But they know not the prophecies of the Lord, another appointed they His answer, for it stood forth as shown to the Lord

Arise and thresh, O daughter of Zion, for I will make thine horn iron and I will make thy hoofs brass: and thou shalt beat in pieces many people, and I will consecrate their gain unto the Lord and their substance to the Lord of the whole earth."

*No wonder the rabbi became ex*cited in view of such a prophecy and it is not one out of many, and looks upon the Messiah as a real personal [illegible] holy, powerful, perfect, and He will reign in the Mount Zion forever and ever. In the light of such prophecies that old rabbi sees nothing to wonder at or be surprised about as his daughters read to him the news of passing events day by day in their quiet home near the Jerusalem synagogue. —W. T. PRICE.

Baseball in the Millenium.

"Safe!" said the umpire.

Murphy, the second baseman was a trifle surprised. He considered the runner out.

"I beg your pardon!" he said, a trifle sharply.

"Safe!" repeated the umpire, gently but firmly.

Then the Nine walked in from the field and the captain addressed the umpire.

"We are sorry to disagree with you, Mr Callahan," he said; "but in our judgment the ball was in the hands of the baseman five-eighths of a second before the runner reached base."

"I am sure you are mistaken," replied the umpire. "Umpires are fallible, of course; but you will remember that the rules of the game oblige me to accept the evidence of my own senses. I assure you that I am acting conscientiously in the matter, and nothing but a strong sense of duty would induce me to refuse to acquiesce in your views."

"Why, of course," replied the captain; "nobody would think for a moment of casting the slightest aspersion on your motives; but you will recognize that an adverse decision, the correctness of which we do not recognize, is a severe trial to our equanimity at this critical stage of the game."

At this point murmurs were heard from the audience. "Kindly play ball!" "Pray proceed!" "Oblige us by continuing the game!" came in plain chorus from grand stand and bleachers.

"I can only express my regret," said the umpire; "I can not alter my decision."

"In that case," replied the captain, cheerfully, "we must accept the inevitable as gracefully as possible." And, after shaking hands cordially with the umpire, the Nine went out into the field.

It is true that murphy, on his way to second base, said "Holly cow!" and probably would have made other remarks to the same effect, but the captain reproved him gently, reminding him that such a display of feeling was in bad taste.—Puck.

Cash and Leonine was headed by Chamberlain's Pain Balm in about every instance where a severe and most painful surprise because of its extraordinary qualities which cause the pain to cease without intervention.

The First Camp-Meeting.

It is just 100 years since the first camp meeting originated. It was the result of the most phenomenal wave of religious enthusiasm that ever swept over America. It began in Kentucky and Tennessee, and the phenomenon, which was known as the "jerks," seems to have been fully authenticated. No building then erected could accomodate the crowds that concentrated from all parts of the adjacent country. This necessitated the camp meeting.

In 1799 a sacramental meeting was held in the old Red River Baptist Church near Port Royal. Elders Hodge, Rankin, McGready and John McGree were present. After a fervent address by Elder Hodge, the emotions of the vast crowd became uncontrollable.

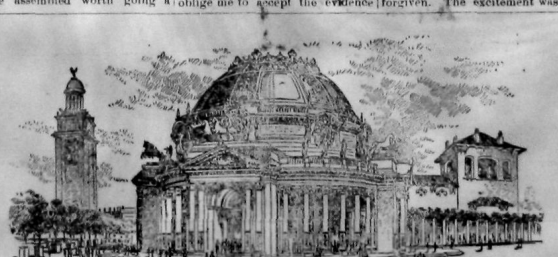

Two aged ladies, Mrs Pacely and Mrs Clark, commenced tremendously vociferating sentiments of praise. Despite the attempt of the preacher to continue singing, the shouting increased. The minister, descending from the pupit, passed along the aisles vehemently exhorting. The clamor and confusion increased tenfold; screams for mercy were mingled with shouts of joy; a universal agitation pervaded the multitude. Suddenly individuals began to fall prostrate to the floor as if dead, where they lay for some time, unconscious and and unable to rise.

The elders were so surprised and astonished that they retired for a conference. They concluded that nothing could be done, arguing that if it were the work of the devil it could not last, and if of God, any effort to control it would be in vain. They reentered the house and found nearly the entire congregation on the floor. Two or three at a time began to rise shouting praise for the evidence of sins forgiven. The excitement was so intense that the preachers could not attend the demand upon them. Hundreds professed to have been converted that day. This was the beginning of the religious movement which, on account of the strange bodily exercise and agitations attending upon it, was looked upon as the most wonderful event of the timess.

The next meeting was held at Muddy River Church, a few miles north of Russellville, Ky., where similar scenes were witnessed. The people came in all kinds of vehicles, from distances as far as 100 miles. Long before the hour of preaching there were present three times as many as the house could seat, and a constant stream of people kept pouring in. A temporary pulpit was erected in the woods and seats for the multitude made by felling large trees. As night came on, it was evident the crowd did not intend to disperse. Some took wagons and hurried to bring in straw from the barns. Some fell to sewing the wagon sheets together and others cutting forks and poles on which to spead them. Countenances, coverlets and sheets were also fastened together to make tents and camps. Others were dispatched to town and the nearest houses to collect provisions and cooking utensils to prepare food for the multitude. In a few hours night came on, fires were made and hundreds of candles were lighted and fixed to trees. This was the first camp meeting in the world.—Chicago Record.

ETHNOLOGY BUILDING, PAN-AMERICAN EXPOSITION.

A GOOD WORD FOR THE BOERS

From the West Cumberland Times.

Dear Sir—Knowing well the independent nature of your excellent paper, and being a firm believer in the truth of the saying "Audi alterum partem" perhaps you will be good enough to "hear my humble say on the above subject. People are often "shot so black as they are painted" by their indignant opponents. There is a standard work, entitled "A Breath from the Veldt," published in 1895, written by Mr John Guille Millias, F. Z. S., and handsomely illustrated by Sir J. Millias. On page 214 after fully describing the pleasures and excitements of hunting big game in South Africa, Mr Millias says:

"The day had come at last when I had to say 'Good Bye' to my dear old friend, Oom Roelef. Together we had tasted the hopes and fears, the wants and disappointments of the happy hunting grounds, and, under these influences, our comradeship had ripened into the affection of brothers; for no form of existence brings men closer together than the wild free life of the hunter. The charm which I felt in his society was, perhaps, in great measure due to our mutual love of Nature and of the excitement of the chase; but the longer one knew him the more one's interest and affection was enlisted by the simplicity and unaffected earnestness of the man's whole nature. When Oom Roelef said a thing he meant it in its most literal sense, and in all he said or did one could not fail to notice the kindness and generosity of his heart. We seldom meet with our ideals in this life, but in my mind old Oom will ever stand out as a model of what a hunter and a true gentleman should be." Bret Harte has given a similar character in "Luke," in words so appropriate to the man of whom I am now writing that I cannot refrain from quoting them:

"We are going today," she said, "and I thought I would say 'Good-bye'
To you in your own house, Luke—
These words and bright blue sky!
You've always been kind to us, Luke, and papa has found you still
As good as the air he breathes, and wholesome as Laurel Tree Hill!

"And we'll always think of you, Luke,
as the thing we could not take away
The balsam that dwells in the wood, the rainbow that lives in the spray
And you'll sometimes think of me,
Luke, as you know you used to say
'A rifle smoke blown thro' the woods, a moment, but never to stay!'"

"As good as the air he breathed, and pure as Laurel Tree Hill!" such natures lift us above ourselves making us feel that the world is not quite so bad a place, or human nature quite so despicable as some of us latter-day pessimists would have us believe. As the old man wrung my hand at parting, he said amongst many kind things I should not care to repeat, that tho' he felt himself growing too old for the hard work of the veldt, and should hunt no more on his own account, he would never forgive me if ever I came to Africa again and journeyed with another! Yes, Boers have hearts like other people, as you soon find out if you only go the right way about it. The old Frau and the girls were in tears as we kissed all round, with little hope of ever meeting again, and I must confess I was deeply moved. And now let other writers say what they may in disparagement of the Dutch nation, I can never bring myself to join in that sweeping condemnation that is so frequently given them by my countrymen. Mynheer Van Dunck is far too cautious a man to open his heart to a stranger, and his kindness of speech and manner is apt to create a false impression on any one who does not know him well. Hence, had I left those people after a month's acquaintance and without being able to speak their language, I should have come away with a very different opinion of them from that which I eventually formed. So, here's to Van Staden and his good family, and may they live long and prosper, as they deserve. As long as I live I shall remember that morning when the beautifully kindly face and noble figure of the old man faded slowly away in the flush of the crimson morn. Good-bye, old friend!"

No doubt your unprejudiced readers will be able draw their own conclusions from the above statement of such a good authority. I take it that the Boer is a sportsman and honest—pace and stogie—who makes good use of the intelligence with which nature has endowed him. Self-reliance, pluck and perfect freedom on the boundless veldt have made him what he proves to be—a deadly antagonist.

Apologizing for encroaching on your valuable space, believe me,

Yours sincerely,
ARTHUR LAWSON.

The Sageness of Secrecy.

"Enoch," impressively began the Kohack Philosopher, addressing his long-suffering nephew, "there is one great truth that I want to firmly fix in your mind, and now is just as good a time as any, I guess. It is this, that the only way to keep a secret is not to get anybody to help you.

"The popular conception of a secret is that it is something that you tell; but that is not true. If you tell it once, even to your most intimate friend, under the most solemn and awful vows of eternal silence, it ceases to be a secret any longer. You might just as well load it into a blunderbuss and shoot it broadcast into the passing multitude—they'll all get on to it just as quick.

"Tell it to one, and that's one; he tell it to one more, and that's two; that one tells it to one other, and that's 111—one hundred and eleven. See? Before you impart the secret to your friend, remember that your friend has a friend, and your friend's friend has a friend, and your friend's friend's friend has a friend, add your friend's friend's friend's friend also has a friend; and so on and so forth, something like the old story of the talented liar who traveled so rapidly on the cars that the wind would have blown all the hair off from his head if there had n't been another man holding it on for him. There was another man holding the second man's hair on, and a fourth man holding the the third man's hair on, and so on down to the cheap boy who was holding the seventeenth man's hair on; and, last of all, the bald-headed man who was holding the cheap boy's hair on.

"The only difference is that the spreading of a secret does not stop when a bald-headed man is reached. A hairless man can scatter a secret with as much efficacy as an Indian doctor. The spreading abroad of the secret goes on and on, like the way in which the water used to come down at Lodore, in the old Third Reader, and I s'pose is still coming down. The only way to keep a secret successfully is to retain it right in your own shell. That's all this time, Enock, you can run along now if you want to."—Judge.

The Best Remedy for Stomach and Bowel Troubles.

"I have been in the drug business for twenty years and have sold most all of the proprietary medicines of any note. Among the entire list I have never found anything to equal Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera, and Diarrhoea Remedy for all stomach and bowel troubles," says O. W. Wakefield of Columbus, Ga. "This remedy cured two severe cases of cholera morbus in my family and I have recommended and sold hundreds of bottles of it to my customers to their entire satisfaction. It affords a quick and sure cure in a pleasant form. No family should be without it. I keep it in my house at all times. For sale by

THE REPUBLICAN CONVENTION

The Republican State Convention held at Charleston elected a ticket of new men, not rewarding a single State official with a nomination. For Governor A. B. White was nominated by acclamation. For Auditor, Arnold C. Sherr, of Mineral County, was nominated over James K. Hall, of Ohio. For Treasurer, Peter Silman, of Kanawha, received the nomination. For Attorney General Romeo Freer, the popular idol, was nominated, to heal the hurt caused by Mr Elkins sternly turning him down for Governor. For Superintendent of Free Schools, T. C. Miller, a University professor. For Supreme Court, Judges Henry Brannon, a present incumbent, recently forever lost to the Democratic party, and A. M. Poffenbarger.

HIGHEST PRICE IN NINE YEARS.

The people are being robbed by by the Sugar Trust. The news of the latest advance explains how a merchant may demand 7½c for sugar in Marlinton and make nothing off the transaction. The American Sugar Company's game is not to "crush competition," but to so control the market as to make it highly profitable for the smaller refineries to come in with them. We clip the following from the Cincinnatti Post:

The American Sugar Refining Company advanced the price of refined sugar yesterday (July 9) 10 points, which makes the price of granulated sugar 6c net. It is the highest price that has been asked for nine years. Independent companies immediately followed suit.

The American Company has put the price up half a dozen times within the past month or two, and the independent companies have always followed. This strengthens the belief that a thorough understanding between them has been reached, and the impression prevails that yesterday's advance will not be the last.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in the curative powers of Hall's Catarrh Cure that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for testimonials.

LIQUOR LICENSE.

Editor Pocahontas Times:

Dear Sir,—I am not a resident of Pocahontas County, but I am an interested reader of the Pocahontas Times, and as such I can not help congratulating you on the stand you take for "Liquor License" in your issue of July 9th.

I am a total abstainer myself in practice, and would be a Prohibitionist in principle if I considered it practicable, but I do not.

There is no doubt about it men who want whiskey will get it, and if they can't get it legally, they will illegally; if they can't get good whiskey they will take bad, but there are a great many very good people who do not appreciate this, and also a great many who realize it but who have not got moral courage enough to come out before the public in favor of the licensed saloon, which is the only possible way to break up the disagreeable speakeasies.

I should like to see your plan adopted not only in Pocahontas, but in Greenbrier. From a financial point of view it would be vastly more economical, for with licensed saloons the county would have the benefit of the income derived from the licenses, and at the same time be relieved of the tremendous expense of trying to run down the speakeasies, for it would be sufficiently to the interest of the saloon keepers to get rid of such places to make it worth while for them to break them up without calling on the county officials except for occasional assistance.

From a moral standpoint it would also be far better, for the reasons mentioned in your last issue. Yours truly,

R. CARY MONTAGUE.

From all that we can gather about the Chinese troubles, it seems to be confessed that the Powers have underestimated the ability of the Chinamen for war and their intense prejudice against foreigners. Those in authority have been misled in their estimates of Chinese valor by the result of the China-Japanese war, and have rushed up privates for war and gone into hostilities recklessly and blindly for more commercial purposes really. The home feeling China for the Chinese, means more for the Chinamen than for any other people on earth, unless it be the Englishmen. With the Chinese the principle implied means both patriotism and religion. The people trust is being fixed by frantic appeals to expel the foreigners not only for attempting to seize their homes, but for introducing among the great Chinese an element of infidelity. With the Chinese Boxers and Hooters are both supported by the foreigners. Every good Buddhist is expected to kneel three hours daily, knock his head upon the ground thrice and pray earnestly that sudden cruel death may overtake all foreigners. While hoping for the best it will be wise to be prepared to hear of things that will stagger humanity beyond the direst dreams of Paul Kruger.

The provision bill of Kansas City for the week of the National Democratic Convention points a moral to the effect that people can live on enthusiasm alone. It seems that enthusiasm could not satisfy a felt want that required for its satisfaction one thousand cattle, two thousand hogs, two thousand sheep and five thousand, four hundred bushels of potatoes, for these were among the few items of the bill of fare for that memorable week, to say nothing of the things to drink.

GREEN BANK.

Very dry and cool nights, but hot through the day.

S. T. Ferguson had his driving horse to die in Green Bank last Wednesday.

W. J. Yeager was in town last week with his wagons, moving to his new home in Travelers Repose.

Mrs C. O Arbogast and daughter Queen of Fields, La., are visiting in this community at this time.

Oh yes, don't forget the festival at this place next Saturday, July 21st.

Wilber Scott of Alvon, W. Va., was the guest of A. K Dysard last Friday night. He was on his way to Durbin.

The telephone wire is extended to Durbin, and we hope it will soon be completed to Huttonsville so we can get messages through without so much trouble.

Will some one please give the names of the nominees in Green Bank District for Justices, so we will know who to vote for?

The memorial of Elsie Riley will be preached at Arbovale church next Sunday at 11 o'clock by Rev Pullin.

Preaching at Green Bank Sunday evening at 8 by Rev McNeel.

Still its dry and dusty, and no sign of rain. Corn drying and twisting up.

We would suggest that the bicycle riders have Saturday to practice riding instead of Sunday, in Green Bank, and not break the Sabbath by such sport. It has a bad influence on the young and rising generation. What do you think, boys?

From an interesting letter written by Mrs Caroline Tallman, Boone, Iowa, we learn that she is a native of our county, a daughter of the late Jacob and Elizabeth Warwick, born and reared near Green Bank, and upon her marriage September 12, 1844, to Geo. Ponge Tallman, son of Boone Tallman, migrated to Indiana, and afterwards to Iowa.

The Marlinton Baseball Club will hold a meeting Thursday evening at 7 to elect a captain and manager, and transact other business. The Academy team is expected to play ball in Marlinton next Saturday at 2 o'clock, but definite arrangements have not yet been made. The club would like to arrange a series of games with any team in the county.

Greenbrier Presbytery met in Ronceverte lately to consider Rev Nickel's resignation of the pastorate of Mills and Hillsdale churches in Monroe. Presbytery, by a vote of four to four refused to accept Mr Nickel's resignation, and he will remain pastor of said churches unless the Marlinton and Huntersville churches further prosecute its call before a future meeting of Presbytery.

Money is plentiful in Pocahontas this year owing to the sales of timber, and many a man is selling off his surplus trees to pay up his outstanding indebtedness. These same trees were once regarded as candidates for the log heap. In spite of the amount of timber that has been bought all the smaller trees are in the hands of men who have bought to sell, and the small manufacturer with the sawmill has did yet appeared upon the scene.

The question of licensed saloons at the county seat town of Pocahontas is stirring up a great deal of excitement, and it is right that it should be so. Out of all this discussion some good may come. The quasi-saloon business in the various towns has been tolerated full long in this county, and an aroused public sentiment may effect some sort of suppression of that evil.

Died, near Green Hill, Monday evening, July 16, 1900, after two weeks severe illness Mrs Mary Sharp, wife of John Sharp, aged about seventy - four years. The deceased was the oldest daughter of the late William Johnson of Greenbrier Valley, Pocahontas County. For more than fifty years she has been a professional Christian in the gift of the M. E. church South. She was a pre-emin. consistent woman and was devoted to her home and church and died as she lived, in peace by her family and neighbors.

It is enough to put a move on the man born tired to hear the blended sounds of saw, hammer, teams, band practicing,—the hum of industry so much in evidence in and around Marlinton.

Assistant Attorney General Ashford is in Pocahontas this week to be present at the taking of the depositions in the cases of the war claims demanded by the estates of the late Colonel Paul McNeel and John W. Warwick.

The Huntersville and Marlinton boulevard is forging along and will be ready for use in time for expansionists to come and celebrate the opening of the railway, when the steam whistle will break the silence of the ages past, and possibly the band will play, and some chin music be on tap also.

Preaching at Mount Vernon 4th Sabbath of July (22d); lecture at Dunmore Wednesday, July 25th; preaching at Driftwood the 5th Sabbath, July 29th, 11 a. m.; lecture at Clover Lick Chapel Sunday night July 29th; Preaching at Linwood first Sabbath in August, 11 o'clock. —W. T. Price.

Last week we referred to S. J. Payne as a contractor when it should have read S. J. Payne one of the creditors of Cogan, Noble & House. Owing to the fact that Mr Payne has been charged with being connected with the firm as a partner, the slip of the pen was unfortunate, for this paper has nothing to do with any such controversies, especially as he denies emphatically being connected with the firm in any way except as a creditor.

Armstrong & Cumberland Pardoned.

After years of perseverance Alex Armstrong and Frank Cumberland, sent to the penitentiary for eighteen and fifteen years respectively, have secured their pardons. The crime of which they were convicted was the robbing of Capt A. M. Edgar in January, 1894. They were able to prove an alibi by witnesses from Marietta. The whole case hung on the question of whether Armstrong was in West Virginia in January 1894. A number of men both white and colored swore that he was here and fixed the date by the robbery of Captain Edgar.

Soon after the robbery Armstrong was suspected and as there had been a series of robberies all bearing the same general marks, it was thought that he would return. In about a year Armstrong was seen coming back to his native county and word was sent on ahead. That day he was questioned and denied his identity. He and Cumberland were arrested and found to be heavily armed, and had a bottle of gunpowder and vaseolene, supposed to be for the purpose of disguising their faces. The explanation they gave was that they had come to Pocahontas to play cards with the lumbermen, an excuse so flimsy that it does not need to be exposed.

It is a significant fact that since then there has not been a single robbery in Pocahontas. We fear there has been a serious miscarriage of justice in granting this pardon, such as is responsible for much of the lynching in the South. We venture to say that if Armstrong were to come back into Pocahontas his life would not be worth purchasing. We speak from the actual state of the feeling here in regard to the matter.

Snake-Bitten.

Irvine Wilfong was bitten by some poisonous reptile or insect, presumably a copperhead, under very peculiar circumstances last Thursday night. He had been stacking wheat at Moff Waugh's on the river, and went to bed about 9 o'clock. His slumbers were disturbed by fleas, which, he says, were numerous and ferocious. About 11 o'clock he awoke with a fiery pain in his leg, which rapidly mounted to his body and head. Upon examination two pinpoint wounds were found on his leg below the knee, such as would be made by a snake. The leg was by this time much swollen and giving great pain. It was hard to believe that a snake could have been in the bed, and none was found, neither spider or other creature but the snake to be the only explanation of the case.

In spite of all that could be done Mr Wilfong grew worse during the night and in the morning started for his home a few miles distant. Before he reached his own home and after near his father's house, the Hon Sam Wilfong, he was quite unconscious and became delirious. In Frost was called in, and while suffering a great deal of pain for several days, he is now thought to be out of danger.

Water Works.

No town or community ever needed water works more than the town of Marlinton. And no town could secure a supply of the purest and best of water at a cheaper rate. There are a number of springs at a distance of from one to four miles, which could be piped into town solely by the force of specific gravity, at a cost not exceeding what many a private citizen of moderate means has expended to bring a supply of water to his home. In less than a mile of the court-house there are rapids in Knapps Creek which would furnish water as pure and sweet as could be desired in sufficient quantity to supply a city of ten thousand people.

It has been the expressed intention of Col. McGraw, who is by far the largest property owner of this town, to forward a movement to supply the town with good water, so we feel sure that he as a tax payer will approve of any practicable means to accomplish this object.

It is at present impracticable to furnish this water either by private subscription or direct taxation, but it could be very easily done by issuing bonds.

Let the council pass an ordinance submitting the question to the voters of the town. The election could be held in two weeks. If three-fifths of the voters favor the issuance of such bonds they could be sold at a six-percent rate, or less. The law provides that they shall not be sold at less than par value. By this means we could have water in this town which would make it in a business way and remove the only obstacle to its speedy growth and development. Why should we wait until we have a scourge of fever before we do what will ultimately have to be done?

By acting at once we can now have the benefit of the money it will take to erect the windmill which the county court has decided to ornament the court house square with, which, if in any kin to the kind we see on farms, will mainly distinguish itself by getting out of order. It is the intention of the court to pump the water out of the court house well which is so impregnated with iron that it will be unsuitable for its purpose. The new bank building is arranged to be supplied by a compressed air arrangement which could also be saved, making it a good customer of the water works.

Every property owner knows that his property will be greatly enhanced by water works, and we apprehend no serious objection on their part to bonding the town for the sake of health, cleanliness and convenience.

Camp Burned.

Marvin Grove Camp, Monroe County, was burned a few days ago, the entire camp wit the exception of a few tents destroyed. A new circular tabernacle, with a seating capacity of 2,000 was erected last year and many improvements made. These all were burned. This is the second burning of Marvin Grove within a few years The fire was incendiary, but we are not informed as to any suspicions. Of course this renders any meeting impossible this year, and it is possible the camp will never be rebuilt.—Ronceverte News.

His Awful Experience.

"Here," said one of two travelers who were whiling away the time in the waiting room of a lonesome railway station, looking up from his newspaper, "is the account of an explorer who spent a night in a pit with a savage Numidian lion. Imagine, if you can, the horrors of such an experience."

"I can," replied the other traveller, promptly. "for I was recently forced to pass a night in a double room in a village hotel with a life insurance agent, who realizing that all flesh is grass, was determined to make hay, not only while the sun shone but by moonlight as well, and a loud voiced man who had once had the pleasure of shaking hands with Admiral Dewey, and I was unable to forget it."

White Man Turned Yellow.

Great consternation was felt by the friends of M. A. Hogarty of Lexington Ky., when they saw him turning yellow. His skin slowly changed color, also his eyes, and he suffered terribly. His malady was yellow jaundice. He was treated by the best doctors but without benefit Then he was advised to try Electric Bitters, the wonderful stomach and liver remedy, and he writes: "After taking two bottles I was wholly cured." It trirl proves its matchless merit for stomach, liver and kidney troubles. Onl- 50c.

EXTRACTS from LOCKSLEY HALL.

Love took up the glass of Time, and turned it in his glowing hands;
Every moment, lightly shaken, ran itself in golden sands.
Love took up the harp of Life, and smote on all the chords with might;
Smote the chord of Self, that, trembling passed in music out of sight.

For I dipt into the future, far as human eye could see,
Saw the Vision of the world, and all the wonder that would be;
Saw the heavens fill with commerce, Argosies of magic sails,
Pilots of the purple twilight, dropping down with costly bales.

Heard the heavens fill with shouting, and there rained a ghastly dew
From the nations' airy navies grappling in the central blue;
For along the world-wide whisper of the south wind rushing warm,
With the standards of the peoples plunging through the thunder-storm;

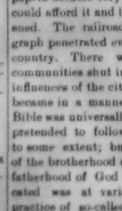

Till the war-drum throbbed no longer, and the battle flags were furled
In the Parliament of men, the Federation of the world.
There the common sense of most shall hold a fretful realm in awe,
And the kindly earth shall slumber lapt in universal law.

THE WORDS OF A PROPHET.

"They have Moses and the Prophets: if they hear not them neither will they be persuaded tho one rose from the dead."—Parable of the Rich Man and Lazarus.

[We have in hand an interesting Manuscript which will be printed in two or more chapters or parts, and which has never heretofore been published.]—Editor.

E now come to the beginning of the twentieth century, but to fully understand the events transpiring in the first part of that century we must consider the causes which led up to them. We therefore review part of the history of the nineteenth century.

Learning became general; all classes could and did read; the newspapers became very cheap, all men could afford it and became enlightened. The railroad and the telegraph penetrated every part of the country. There were no rural communities shut in from the evil influences of the cities,—all classes became in a manner urban. The Bible was universally read. All men pretended to follow its teaching to some extent; but the teaching of the brotherhood of man and the fatherhood of God therein inculcated was at variance with the practice of so-called Christianity.

The great civil war of secession had been fought. The North was for years dominant in the nation's politics. The Republican party triumphed in almost every national election, and its doctrine of protection became the policy of the nation.

This policy was a form of socialism, which by means of a prohibitive tariff kept out foreign competition in certain lines of manufacture. This led to the investment of capital in those lines to such an extent that those industries would soon have fallen to their natural productive capacity. But to crush out competition those who were engaged in the protected industries inaugurated a form of socialism, called trusts, which crushed out competition and regulated wages and controlled the prices of both raw and manufactured materials.

These conditions naturally led all other classes into combinations. To such an extent did organization go that finally there was no place for a man who did not belong to some combination or other.

But the trusts absorbed such an enormous amount of the increased wealth of the community that men of other classes began to ask if Protectionism can make some beneficiaries productive why can it not make all so? And if partial remedies be a good thing, why not comprehensive remedies a good thing? Why is not that which is good for part good for all? Men on an individual bounty-swallowing is then as a class.

These were the times of organization in every department of life. The organization of the wolf for the purpose of preying upon the other inhabitants of the forest. Wise men foresaw the great evil about to follow, but no man had power to stop it.

The natural result followed.

Man's selfish, grasping nature became intensified a thousandfold. All that was selfish and selfish became fully developed. But all was covered by that thin veneer of sham and pretence called the civilization of the nineteenth century.

Even the members of the churches—not satisfied with being members of the body of Christ—became members of various so-called religious societies, nominated by various names.

Some of the so-called churches (for in those days there were churches, THE TRUE CHURCH being lost sight of) promulgated the theory that their members should give each other the preference in trade and employment.

The churches became temples of fashion in which a few women and children occupied the pews to show their newest clothes; while in many cases the Rev. Dr. Pharisee occupied the pulpit and strove with labored effort to reconcile the grasping, groveling spirit of the times with the lofty, unselfish teaching of THE MASTER.

He often spake of the two classes of men: the good, to which he and a few of his supporters belong; the evil embracing all other men, for whose benefit he preached the fearful sorrows of the damned to frighten them into the narrow way.

But men thought little and cared less for what he said. They had no time to devote to such things. "A new Almighty God" had arisen in the earth. Men worshipped gold. Irreligion and dishonor became common with all classes; not that men were positively and outbreakingly wicked, but they treated religion with entire indifference, and when gold and honor came together honor had to stand aside.

These were the conditions with which the new century opened.

The Republican party was in power and had been commissioned by the people to carry on for four more years the operations of government. Gold was the standard of value for everything; all other standards had been debased.

The natural result of these conditions followed.

The twentieth century opened with a series of poor crops, which resulted in what is known as hard times, which set the classes gnawing afresh at each other's vitals. The great conservative agricultural class was ground between the upper and the nether millstone of organized capital and organized labor. The cornerstone of society was broken, the whole superstructure began to crumble.

All the labor unions of the nation became organized into one vast labor trust. All the capital of the country became organized into one vast financial trust.

A great general strike was ordered throughout the United States. Traffic of all kinds was stopped. Every industry was paralyzed.

A test case was brought before the United States Courts, which enjoined the strikers against continuance of the strike, ordering the leaders to declare the strike off as being contrary to the interstate commerce and postal laws of the nation.

The leaders refused to obey the mandate of the court, and President McKinley ordered out the troops to enforce the order.

The President and Secretary of War expected some resistance, but were not prepared for the storm which followed. Men were drilled and armed not the army at every point.

The President in above communicated his fulness to the national Capitol and there disgusted the nation. No longer had he due this than those vast armies of workers, who called themselves Unionists, advanced upon the Capital.

The local and State authorities were everywhere in disorder, and few of them able to do anything for the protection of life or property. However, some little semblance of government remained in some of the Southern States where the negro labor was controlled by the white men to a large extent.

The Governor of Virginia was able even to assemble a little army at Staunton in the Valley, of twenty thousand men, mostly Valley men.

The Governor himself was a Valley man. Educated at the Virginia Military Institute; descended from a long line of liberty loving patriots.

His father and grandfather had fallen in the war of secession.

His mother was a woman of wonderful will power, which had been used for the good of her fellow men. She had nursed the sick and wounded Confederate soldiers, and once when the artery of a wounded man's arm became ruptured she grasped the arm with her naked hand and staunched the flow of blood for twelve hours until a surgeon was secured who cut down and tied up the broken vessel. So long had her will power been exerted upon the muscles that they refused to relax, and her hand had to be taken loose.

She lived after the war with and for her son and poured into his boyish ears the story of his people. She told him of the Bruce, and how his own fathers had stood with him for the redemption of his land. She spake to him of Wallace and all the Scottish chiefs; of the adventures of his pioneer ancestors with the Indians. Of how one of his fathers had been the first to light the lamp of civilization beyond the mountains, and how that lamp had since diffused the rays of knowledge abroad.

She infused into his nature the genius of his people. She taught him the chief end of man is to glorify God and enjoy him forever—that God is a spirit, infinite, eternal, and unchangable in all his attributes. To this Being she and the child bowed down in humble prayer each day.

Allan Carlyle was the last of the Covenanters. He was forty-two years old when the great civil war of 1903 broke out.

Something about Irrigation.

There are six Rocky Mountain States, Colorado, Idaho, Montana, Nebraska, Utah and Wyoming, where the farmers have to depend more upon irrigation than rainfall for success in their agricultural undertakings.

In Nebraska and Wyoming water commissioners are appointed to receive all applications and settle all controversies as to water rights and privileges, but in the other four States there is a great deal of litigation in the courts about these matters.

When a citizens rights are once settled he regards himself as far more sure of regular crops than in the "humid States," where there is always such liability to drouths or excessive rainfalls. The irrigator claims that he has the exact degree of moisture he may need just when he wants it and at no other time—always too on tap.

Cure for Cholera Infantum—Never Known to Fail.

During last May an infant child of our neighbor was suffering from cholera infantum. The doctors had given up all hopes of recovery. I took a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera, and Diarrhoea Remedy to the house, telling them I felt sure it would do good if used according to directions. In two days time the child had fully recovered. The child is now vigorous and healthy. I have recommended this medicine frequently and have never known it to fail.—MRS CURTIS BAKER, Bookwalter, Ohio. Sold by

H. R Echols, Marlinton, Barlow and Moore, Edray; Amos Barlow, Huntersville; D. T. McNeel, nuckeye.

In her prolonged reign of more than sixty years Victoria, the Queen of England, it is believed, never received a higher compliment than the one intended by the Siamese Ambassador when he expressed himself in this way: "One cannot fail to be struck with the aspect of the august Queen of England, or fail to observe that she must be of pure descent from a race of goodly and warlike Kings of the earth, in that her eyes, com plexion and bearing are those of a beautiful and majestic white elephant."

The Best Remedy for Stomach and Bowel Troubles.

"I have been in the drug business for twenty years and have sold most all of the progrietary medicines of any note. Among the entire list I have never found anything to equal Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera, and Diarrhoea Remedy for all stomach and bowel troubles," says O. W. Wakefield of Columbus, Ga. "This remedy cured two severe cases of cholera morbus in my family and I have recommended and sold hundreds of bottles of it to my customers to their entire satisfaction. It affords a quick and sure cure in a pleasant form. No family should be without it. I keep it in my house at all times. For sale by

Many thousands have been restored to health and happiness by the use of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. If afflicted with any throat or lung trouble, give it a trial for it is certain to prove beneficial. Coughs that have resisted all other treatment for years, have yielded to this remedy and perfect health been restored. Cases that seemed hopeless, that the climate of famous health resorts failed to benefit, have been permanently cured by its use. Bear in mind that every bottle is warranted and if it does not prove beneficial the money will be refunded to you. For sale by

THE TEMPLE OF NATURE.

Talk not of temples—there is one
Built without hands, to mankind given;
Its lamps are the meridian sun,
And all the stars of heaven;
Its walls are the cerulean sky;
Its floor the earth so green and fair;
The dome its vast immensity—
All Nature worships there!

The Alps arrayed in stainless snow,
The Andean ranges yet unrod,
At sunrise and at sunset glow
Like altar-fires to God.
A thousand fierce volcanoes blaze,
As if with hallowed victims rare;
And thunder fills its voice in praise—
All Nature worships there!

The Ocean heaves resistlessly,
And pours his glittering treasures forth;
His waves—the priesthood of the sea—
Kneel on the shell-pearled earth,
And there emit a hollow sound,
As if they murmurred praise and prayer:
On every side 'tis holy ground—
All Nature worships there! . . .

The cedar and the mountain pine,
The willow on the fountain's brim,
The tulip and the eglantine,
In reverence bow to Him:
The song-birds pour their sweetest lays
From tower and tree and middle air;
The rushing river murmurs praise—
All Nature worships there!"

THE WORDS OF A PROPHET.

II.

As noticed, the Unionists advanced in three columns upon the national capital. Two of these columns united and awaited the approach of the third from the south west at Harper's Ferry. The force from the south-west was advancing along the lines of the Chesapeake and Ohio railroad. The President had ordered the Governor of West Virginia to stop their course; but he, supposing the strength to lie with them, had met them with open arms and rendered them every assistance.

Carlyle had gone to Washington and urged the President to attack the forces at Harper's Ferry before the reinforcements should meet them. The President agreed to do so; made Carlyle a major general; and ordered him to keep the southwestern column at bay until himself could defeat their other unionist forces.

Carlyle therefore hastened to Staunton and moved his little army as rapidly as possible to the summit of the Alleghany mountains. There finding the enemy was waiting yet at Charleston to bring up his rear Carlyle advanced to the passes of New River.

These narrow passes were eminently adapted to the operations of a small force against a larger one.

The Unionists were astonished when they found that Carlyle had come upon them with one-tenth of their number. They were forced to drive him from his position to join their comrades. Accordingly on the 15th day of July, 1903, the Unionists forces made the attack. Time after time they assailed the Virginians by front and flank and as often were repulsed. But Carlyle and his little army were being worn out by the chaos and confusion incident, the watching, and the want of necessary time to take sleep and food.

For three days they held out. At daylight on the morning of the fourth day as the Unionist army made an assault at daybreak they found no resistance in their front; and pushed on up stream two or three miles where they saw and charged the retreating rear guard of the Virginians. The whole Unionist force was now in pursuit, but failed to overtake any great force of the Virginians as they had gone about ten miles when they met what they supposed at first to be cavalry but what proved to be horses, riderless horses which stopped for nothing, but crashed into the head of the Unionist columns. Carlyle, not being able to use his cavalry in the rugged country, had sent men to the front, each to tie to his horse's tail and turn him loose with the others headed for the enemy, while the soldiers followed on foot.

As we have said the terrified animals rushed into the head of the Unionist column, disorganizing it. The Virginians charged behind the horses and disorganization became retreat. At that moment one thousand picked men with two hundred and fifty students from the Military Institute fell upon the disorganized flank from a defile of the mountain which had hidden them. Retreat now became rout; panic seized the advance, which wheeled upon their followers, trampling them down if they were not swift and strong enough to trample others. Some took to the wood, some to the water, some kept the railroad track, while thousands in helpless terror surrendered. They were utterly routed and dispirited.

But Carlyle's force was too small to pursue his victory. He had, indeed, scarce enough to take care of the vast number of prisoners.

On the same day of the route,—that is the 18th of July,—the forces of Unionists and, as they were afterwards called, Imperialists fought a battle near Harper's Ferry which was a drawn one. The Imperialists withdrew within the defences of Washington City, while the Unionists withdrew into Pennsylvania.

The Imperialists, who represented the capitalist side of the controversy, were sore pressed for supplies, all the great grain fields of the west being held by the Unionists. The Imperialists were now willing to make many concessions, but in vain. Municipal law is a kind of natural religion, whose function it is to teach men justice. The capitalists of the country had long disobeyed the spirit of that teaching while trying to enforce its precepts upon others. The result was now that all men disobeyed and disrespected the teacher.

The cry amongst the Unionist forces was some for Socialism and some for Communism; some for anarchy, and all for down with aristocracy and plutocracy.

The Imperialists, as they saw their fortunes melt away under the destructive hand of popular revolution, stood aghast, helpless, stunned. They had made Wealth a god. Now in the time of their trouble that God had made to himself wings and flown away in a cloud of smoke through the air.

The President recalled Carlyle to Washington and gave into his hand the command of the imperial forces. He sent part of the forces to take the place of his Virginians in guarding the south-west. He brought up his Virginians to help him to form an army for the defence of the national Capital. When his army was in proper condition he advanced into Pennsylvania, where the Unionists were encamped near and almost upon the old battlefield of Gettysburg.

Carlyle's success had brought to the Imperial cause the help of many of the Southern States, who thought some semblence of law and order with servitude would be better than anarchy, and they seemed reduced to a choice between the two. Carlyle therefore had at his command on the 15th day of October a considerable force, altho inferior in numbers to the Unionist forces. He advanced to within about ten miles of Gettysburg where he fortified an impregnable position which he left garrisoned. On the twentieth of October he advanced upon the enemy.

Dehn, who commanded the Unionists, had ordered the issues of the former battle and took possession of the height which Pickett had tried in vain to take from Meade. Carlyle's left faced this height. The battle began on the twenty first day of October at seven for an advance all along the Imperial lines.

Carlyle's left sung gave way and fell back to disorder upon the left below position. The Unionists pursued tremendous cut in disorder after the fleeing Imperialists. Carlyle held firm with his right, which was the main body of his army, the fleeing left being only a small detachment. When the Unionists were stretched out over the whole ten miles the fortified position held their front while Carlyle with his main body fell with crushing force upon their left flank. They were defeated with immense loss.

Debs found that it depended somewhat upon the man who held Cemetary height whether he were victorious or not; and, above all, that he had before him one of the ablest soldiers of his time, or of any other time. The unionist armies, while immense in numbers, were sorely lacking in discipline; and more so in the want of a leader who was capable of formulating and carrying out any extensive plan of battle or campaign.

Carlyle, at the head of the imperial forces led them on to one victory after another until the spirit of the Unionists east of the Rocky Mountains was broken. West of the Mountains they still held their own and set their governments in each State of every fanciful form that a wild imagination could invent.

However, when the Unionist party had been subdued in the east the President and members of Congress met in the City of Washington and there declared the constitution to have been subverted by force and the need of a new and stronger form of government. The sentiment of almost all was expressed by the Ex-President, who was selected as first Emperor of America by the powers assembled. He said in substance:

"Acute men have long seen that some more fully developed form of government was needed in this country to curb the growing insolence of the laboring classes. My distinguished friend from Ohio at the time of my last nomination for the presidency, declared that the need of the times was for a man who was 'broad and liberal enough to keep abreast of the rapid evolution of nations while keeping to the policy which contributes most to the best interest of our country.' Unfortunately for us and our unhappy country we did not grasp the full gravity of the situation in time and form a stronger government upon the ruins of the primitive republic."

(To be Continued.)

THE CHINESE SITUATION.

The Chinese minister at Washington received a communication, dated June 29, claiming to be the Chinese explation of the present troubles.

In the provinces of Chi Li and Shang Tung there arose a band of rebellious subjects whose habit was to practice boxing and fencing, and the organization increased with marvelous rapidity. In the meantime lawless persons were heard proclaiming as they paraded the more obscure streets, "Down with Christianity." Under such circumstances as these, "as an extraordinary mark of courtesy beyond the the requirements of international intercourse," the foreign Powers were kindly permitted to bring into Pekin guards for their legations. Now according to Chinese reports these guards behaved very badly, stirring up trouble in the streets of the city. The Chinese became provoked and began to kill the christian converts.

The Powers then tried to reinforce the legation guards, but met defeat by the insurgents between Tien Tsin and Pekin and could not advance. The Chinese Government was willing to suppress the insurgents, but feared that active measures might make them worse. The Government advised the foreign ministers to retire to Tien Tsin temporarily, but they refused. Just at this time the German minister was murdered by a mob, and it became evident that the other foreign ministers could not reach Tien Tsin in safety. So the Chinese Government issued orders for their protection to Pekin. The bombardment of the Take it unless as an unmixed for act of aggression on the part of the Powers.

The reader will please remember American ships took no part in this bombardment though in the neighborhood at the time. Up to the last advances the Chinese Government as represented at Washton reiterates the desire to protect legations and suppress insurgents. At the time of this writing it appears certain that the legations have been massacred and the allied troops have suffered severe reverses at Tien Tsin.

It looks as if the allies will accord the Japanese the honor of leading the invading army, and our high strung American braves may be expected to do deeds of heroic valor under the orders of a Japanese mulatto.

An article by the Rev Dr Fleming, in the Lynchburg News, convincingly shows that the terrible anti-foreign phrensy now convulsing the Chinese Empire is mainly due to the manner Great Britain has been treating China the past thirty or forty years. All this too in the interest of commercialism. Nations as well as individuals are bound to realize sooner or later this fact—they that will be rich fall into temptation and a snare and hurtful and foolish lusts which drown men in destruction and perdition. For the love of money is the root of all evil; which while some covet after, they have erred from the faith and pierced themselves through with many sorrows.

Faith in the Golden Rule—doing unto others as ye would that men should do unto you—is the faith that the love of money leads nations to err from. David Harum's rule for horse trading seems to be the one most in evidence just now in national deaings: "Do to the other fellow as the other fellow would do to you, and see that you do it first."

Thomas a Kempis.

But few uninspired writers have been more generally read or have had a wider influence on the moral and religious character of the recent centuries than Thomas a Kempis. These are some of the pertinent truths he illustrated and fervently recommended to be stored in the memory and made use of in daily life by those whose prayer may be "give us this day our daily bread."

Remember always thy end, and that time lost never returns. Without care and diligence thou shalt never get virtue.

If thou begin to wax lukewarm it will begin to be evil with thee.

But if thou give thyself to fervor of spirit thou shalt find much peace, and feel less labor, through the assistance of the God's grace and the love of virtue.

The fervent and diligent man is prepared for all things.

It is harker work to resist vices and passions than to toil in bodily labor.

He that avoideth not small faults by little and little falleth into greater.

Thou will always rejoice in the evening if thou spend the day profitably.

A Minister's Good Work.

"I had a severe attack of bilious colic, got a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, took two doses and entirely relieved," says Rev A. A. Powers, of Emporia, Kans. "My neighbor across the street, had been sick for over a week, had two or three bottles of medicine from the doctor. He used them two or three days without relief, then called in another doctor who treated him for some days and gave him no relief, so the neighbor told me. I went over to see him next morning. He said his bowels were in an awful fix, that the first it was almost bloody flux. I asked him if he had tried Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and he said 'No.' I went home and brought him my bottle and gave him one dose and told him to take another dose in fifteen or twenty minutes if he did not feel relief, but he took no more and was entirely cured. I think it the best medicine on earth." For sale by

A QUESTION OF SUPREME IMPORTANCE.

It becomes our younger men, who are about to get control of the voting constituency or law making power of our government, by their influence as lawyers and members of our courts, from county courts to the Supreme Bench, to give very special, exhaustive study to a question that has been recently sprung and is in a measure to be decided by the issues of the pending Presidential election.

As matters now are no one is ever dreamed of as qualified to be a judge unless be be a lawyer and has become distinguished in the practice of law, unless it be in the case of County Courts. And in this case it seems to be agreed by common consent that in everything a county court does a lawyer is somewhere in it. A lawyer, it seems to be taken for granted, may be always looked for in the county court woodpile—unless granting liquor license be an exception.

The stupendous fact is becoming more and more apparent that the judiciary department,—the courts,—of our government is constantly increasing in power as it limits the power of the other departments, the executive and legislative, while there is no means provided for to review and revise its own power. Hence there is more truth than poetry in what one of the foremost orators of the day says: the judges are the priests in the temple of liberty, while the lawyers are the acolytes that guard the sanctuary.

Now this supreme importance of the judiciary came into evidence as it has never done before in the history of our United States as it did in the recent discussions of the Senate on the Porto Rico policy. It was claimed in that debate that the Supreme Court could settle the question, which depends on the idea conveyed by the phrase "ex proprio vigore."

Now let such a claim be made good, or allowed to the Supreme Court, and that court should decide that the Constitution of the United States extended of its own vigor into the far off territory of the United States, then both parties, Republican and Democratic, would be as anxious to get rid of Porto Rico and the Philippines as one party is anxious to get rid of them now.

On the other hand, should the Supreme Court decide that the Constitution of the United States does not of its own vigor control the government of acquired territories, then we may annex South American States and impose upon them a strong, despotic, tyrannical government while enjoying a republic ourselves. Congress could then move the seat of government into some newly acquired territory outside the limits of these republican states, governed despotically, and thus take itself out of the sphere of the constitution that created it, and what could the people do about it.

If you have a baby in the house you will wish to know the best way to check any unusual looseness of the bowels so common in small children. O. P. M. Holiday, of Deming, Ind., who has an eleven month's old baby says: "Through the months of July and August our baby was teething and took a running off of the bowels and sickness of the stomach. His bowels would move five to eight times a day. I had a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy in the house and gave him four drops in a teaspoonful of water and he got better at once."

The Boer's Abhorance of War.

One of the many military attaches who accompany the Boer forces for the purpose of observation would probably sum up all these weaknesses in a single phrase—lack of discipline. This comment would be true, and is certainly comprehensive, but it would fall something short of expressing the many shadings of character and point of view that constitute the Boer on commando. The Boer admittedly occupies a unique niche in civilization. His political and social life furnish a broad field for study and conjecture, and constitute a puzzle the Western mind has yet to solve to its satisfaction. If the Boer in civil life is a puzzle, the Boer in war is a being beyond the ken of ordinary mortals.

The Boer detests, hates, loathes war. He will not fight unless driven to it. Before he will take the field he will endure coertion up to any point short of undisguised assault upon the thing he holds dearest of all things on earth—his political independence. To say man who has watched the Boer in war any accusation which fastens on him the responsibility for the commencement of hostilities falls to the ground as absolutely preposterous. There is not a man, from the Commandant-General down, who does not daily pray for peace. There is not a man who is not heartily sick of fighting and the hardships of laager life, and who would readily purchase the privilege to again enjoy the comfort and quiet of home with any concession that would leave him his liberty.

He would prefer not to fight and freely admits it. He professes no military knowledge or ability. He thinks rather meanly than otherwise of himself as a fighting man. He regards fighting as morally wrong, except when it cannot possibly be avoided, and holds himself bound not to provoke useless bloodshed.—Scribner's Magazine.

The Wisdom of Stephen Crane.

There was a death of an American occuring early in June at Baden Weiler, Black Forest, Germany, that was a source of sincere sorrow to thousands of readers of modern fictitious literature, when Stephen Crane died at the age of thirty years. He was with the American army in Cuba as war correspondent, and contracted a lingering but fatal illness from exposure. At the age of twenty years he wrote this piece of poetry regarded by some high in literary circles as a remarkable scrap of wisdom. If asked where the wisdom comes in, we give it up.

"There was a land where lived no violets.
A Traveller at once demanded 'Why?'
The people told him:
Once the violets of this place spake thus,
'Until some woman freely gives her lover
To another woman
We will fight in bloody scuffle!'
Sadly the people added:
"There are no violets here."

It Saved His Baby.

"My baby was terribly sick with diarrhoea, we were unable to cure him with the doctor's assistance and as a last resort we tried Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy," says J. H. ROADS BY TAXATION.

The alternate road law will be voted upon this fall, and there is every prospect of its being tried by the people of this county. A petition was presented at the July county court to have it submitted in Edray district, and petitions are being circulated now to have it submitted in the whole county. The law is not very clear as to what the effect will be if submitted both ways at the same election.

The roads of the county are in such a fearful state of repair that the people are anxious to try anything to give them better roads. Also the time has come when the lines of travel will be greatly changed owing to the building of the railroad. A number of roads to the railroad have already been demanded, and the county has a lot of expensive roads to build right away.

The building of roads by taxation has worked well in Highland County, that county having roads that are smooth and well kept. It seems to be done by a little mending the whole year round. If a drain begins to show in the road, bad it is remedied at once, and such a stitch in time saves nine. We saw some men at work cleaning out the side ditches. They would with their shovels separate the dirt from the stones. The loose pieces of rock they would throw away from the road and the dirt into the road. The result is there are no loose stones in the roads of that county to interfere with the traveling public. A system operated like that of Highland County would be of inestimable benefit to this county. Anyway, it seems that we are about to try the system; and may we have competent men to see that the money is properly expended.

LICENSE.

Mr. Editor: About the only argument used in favor of granting license seems to be that people will have drunk, or that it will break up illicit selling, or that it will afford a revenue. Now if a majority of our people want to drink, or think that the revenue derived from this source will compensate the consequent evil and expense, well and good, they can have it. In this free country the majority must rule. Hence we must be governed by the sentiment why not before as well as other issues?

Fairly speaking as to the price for the privilege of a saloon, I think it is about right. If the people are lukewarm about it, why it may be the minority will rule.

Make this public opinion healthy you have the best of arguments. Science and experience teach that alcohol as a beverage is only harmful—a debasement to the brain and all the tissues of the body. And in the struggle for success, which is daily growing more difficult, the best equipped in brain and brawn are at a premium. There is always occupation waiting for such, no matter how hard the times, and none for the debased man.

Let us get at the definition of "debase." Webster says:

1st—To reduce from a higher to a lower state in quality or respectibility. The drunkard debases himself and his character. Intemperance and slebauchery debase men almost to a level with beasts.

2d—To reduce or lower in quality, purity, or value.

3d—To lower, or degrade, to make mean or despicable.

This being the nature of the case, whether with success or not, our faces should be turned in the direction of temperance and purity. We can only hope to benefit the rising generation. If the young men and maidens only knew what danger, what sorrow, shame, what misery, what lifelong agony lurked right now around them,—in genteel or perfumed guise,—in the cup or in a kiss. They surely would heed. These things might come on us simply if we be passive or receptive, but isn't it strange that any people would bring them in upon themselves—"for a few pieces of silver," a "birthright for a mess of pottage."

THE LIQUOR LICENSE.

Mr Editor: Will you allow me space in your valuable paper to a part in the question of to-day, a question that naturally interests every citizen, whether he be a law abiding citizen or not. Now let me ask this question of Mr Montague: Does he want to see Pocahontas County brought down to a level with other parts of the country in morals and crime.

Where can be the benefit of license. We license a saloon that makes a man drunk; we pay per cent and licenses to prosecute the drunken man to jail; we go, the officers of the court high fees to try the prisoner; we pay a big salary to a judge to sentence him, and if he commits crime, we pay the expense of a penitentiary to shut him up in for years. We have to take care of the helpless ones either by private donation or by the public fund. But we can not save the immortal soul sent ruthlessly into eternity through the influence of strong drink.

If the law will not stop the increased spendthrift, neither will it suppress the saloon. I say give us clean officials, and see the difference. Then, if a man loves rum, it is hard for him to starve his wife. Not wishing to take up too much of your valuable space I will close for this time, hoping Pocahontas will never have a licensed saloon.

A Study of Roosevelt.

Mrs Gertrude Atherton's character study of Roosevelt is sharp and lively. She says among other things:

"He belongs to an old and established family, and if there is anything in breeding he should have a clean, well-cut face, with a high brow and a refinement of nostril and chin. Instead, his face is almost primal, as the faces of remote and nameless Roosevelts must have been before civilization began its work."

And again:

"Is it this reversion to a primal type in appearance that has persuaded Roosevelt that he, and he alone, is the incarnation of the primal virtues? Or is there war within him between the rugged qualities of the savage and the superimpositions of civilization?

"He has the brute virtue of physical courage to a surpassing degree, and a gift for leadership which, were he uneducated, might make him a really great man in a savage country.

"There is no one so clamorously bluffed by Roosevelt as Roosevelt himself. It is almost unfair to call him a fraud and a fakir; he is merely the most signal instance in the world today of the ill-knit forces of the elemental and super civilized man."—Selected.

"One trouble with many young men who start out in business is they try to do too many things at once," says Hetty Green. "The result is they don't know as much as they ought to about one thing, and they naturally fail. The trouble with young men who work on salaries is that they are always afraid of doing more than they're paid for. They don't enter into their work with the right spirit. To go on and be appreciated a young man must do more than he is paid to do. When he does something that his employer has not thought of, he shows that he is valuable. Men are always willing to pay good salaries to people who will think for them. The man who only carries out the thoughts and ideas of an other other is nothing more than a tool. Men who can be relied upon are always in demand. The scarcest thing in the world to-day is a thoroughly reliable man.

Mr Roosevelt is evidently getting excited in expounding the doctrinal ideals of the republican party. In a recent speech he denounced the Democrats of this country as those who "stand for lawlessness and disorder, dishonesty and dishonor, for license and disorder at home and cowardly shrinking from duty abroad." That is certainly remarkable language to use in reference to his six or seven million, possibly eight million, worthy opponents who will not cast their votes for his party or policy next fall, and who are so honest in their convictions as himself.

NEW HOPE, VA.

July with us has been extremely hot and dry. Several persons were overcome by heat.

We were the glad recipients of a lovely rain yesterday evening and last night. It was accompanied by a terrific thunder storm.

Plenty of sickness and several deaths in Augusta County, especially among little children.

Mrs Dave Smith, a daughter of Adam Nottingham, of Pocahontas, died last Sunday night at the home of her sister Mrs T. H. Myers, near Annex, after a very painful illness. She was buried at Asbury Chapel.

Miss Fannie Dieahl fell from a Cherry tree June 27 and broke her neck, causing instant death.

Claud Goodwin was killed on his engine near Staunton last Saturday, by the breaking of something.

A young man near Cave Station fell from a cherry tree and broke his back. He is now lying in a very critical condition with no hopes of his recovery.

The fever is raging in the neighborhood of Mt Sydney.

The new Church at Jenninger Gap was dedicated July 7 by Rev J. W. Canter. A very able dedicatory sermon was preached by Rev F. J. Prettyman of Staunton.

W. B. Crawford's barn was struck by lightning last Thursday evening and completely destroyed by fire. A fine horse was burned.

Chas. Morris, a desperate character, was lodged in jail in Staunton to answer the charge of murder.—Spectator.

We extend our sympathy to the sadly bereaved family of Jeff Houchin.

We are sorry that the large town of Frost cannot secure a spot large enough for a postoffice.

In a recent issue of The Times we read of the extended visit of Rev W. T. Price to Virginia. We had hoped to have had the pleasur*e of seeing him among his friends in* this part, but we were disappointed as we read of his return home some days ago. We will hope to have him attend the dedication of the Presbyterian church that is being built in New Hope. The dedication will be this fall.

We feel sorry that we have not read any thing from the good people of Pocahontas about the relief fund for the starving of India. Several thousand dollars has been sent from Virginia, and we pray that the good work may go on.

Threshing is the order of the day and the whistle of the steam thresher is heard in every direction.

The wheat crop is fine this season. But we fear the wheat crop is injured by the dry weather. Hay harvesting is over with us. The hay crop was rather light this season.

We are glad to see the name of Dr J. P. Moomaw in The Times. We wish him much happiness in his declining years and heaven a*fter death, as we wish of all of God's* creation. LITTLE ME.

What most people want is some thing mild and gentle when in need of a physic. Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets fill the bill to a dot. They are easy to take and pleasant in effect. For sale at the Marlinton Drugstore.

DR. MILES' NERVE PLASTER, 25c. and BOILS, THEN WEAK BACKS. At druggists, only 25.

On July 18 a returned medical missionary, Dr Marie [illegible] who has just closed a seven years term of service of the Medical Missionary Board of China, spoke in a meeting at Indianapolis of her stay in China. In giving an account of her experiences in China and of the riots she had witnessed she said that what is now going on would appear to the masses of the Chinese people as the fulfilment of a prophecy made 500 years ago, and the fulfilment was now due, and in her opinion it was this legend that was moving the Chinese to action. This superstition as explained by Huslep was that five yang (sheep) would come to divide up China, but a tsong (bear) would come forth and devour them. "Sheep" also means foreigners and "bear" means a general. Being interpreted the prophecy means that five foreign nations would attempt to divide China and that a general would arise and deliver the country, and 1900 was the year for its fulfilment.

THE CHURCH, OBJECTS.

The First Presbyterian Church
Will Not Accept Rev. H. W.
McLaughlin's Resignation.

From the Hampton (Va.) News.

A few weeks ago Rev H. W. McLaughlin, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, of this city, received a call to one of the Presbyterian churches in West Virginia. Mr McLaughlin through a sense of duty expressed his willingness to accept this call and felt constrained to tender his resignation to his congregation in this city. Mr McLaughlin said that he was prompted in doing this by considerations that seemed him that the field in West Virginia was one of great usefulness for work for the Master, but at the same time it was with great reluctance indeed that he made up his mind to leave Hapnton.

Last Sunday his resignation was tendered to the session of the church. The session, however, are not willing that Mr McLaughlin shall leave, and are putting forth every effort to retain their popular pastor. Yesterday an appeal was drawn up which will be presented next week to Norfolk Presbytery, praying that it will deem it not fit that Mr McLaughlin leave the church. The paper, which was carefully prepared and drawn up in a strong manner, was signed by a committee appointed by the men's meeting last Monday night, which was made up of the following: A. R. Thompson, J. F. Lacross, and Carroll Garnett.

The members hope that this preliminary hearing will have weight with the fathers sufficient to keep them from being deprived of their pastor.

Resolutions of Respect.

Planing Mill Burned.

J. A. Sharp's planing mill was burned at noon Monday. The mill had been running during the forenoon, and Mr Sharp closed the mill and went to dinner. Shortly after the building was seen to be completely afire, precluding all hope of saving anything. A spark from the engine was the cause, and in ten minutes after the fire was discovered the building was in ashes, and the expensive machinery completely ruined, with the possible exception of the engine which may be repaired. The loss includes the planing machine, carpenter tools, a wagon standing near the building, a considerable quantity of lumber, and a portable engine with trucks for same almost all new, completely ruined. The lowest estimate places the loss at $1000.

Prevented a Tragedy.

Timely information given Mrs George Long, of New Streitville, Ohio, saved two lives. A frightful cough had long kept her awake at night. She had tried many remedies and doctors but steadily grew worse until urged to try Dr King's New Discovery. One bottle wholly cured her; and she writes, this marvelous medicine also saved Mr Long of a severe attack of pneumonia. Such cures are a positive proof of its power to cure all throat, chest and lung troubles. Only 50c and $1. Guaranteed.

EAST FROST.

Grass harvesting is the order of the day.

Dr O. J. Campbell is in town, operating on the mouth organs.

M. C. Dilley and Henry Briscoe was off to Millboro last week for Dilley and Harper.

Mumps are striking people in the face in our town. If some people are not careful something else is liable to strike them in the same place.

Last week's correspondent said the dance at J. B. Sharp's was a success. He must have had swimming in his head, or had his mind loaded down with wheat. There was no dance at all, except in some people peoples' minds.

Quite a number of our people attended preaching at Buzzard church last Sunday.

J. B. Sharp has the mumps.

Our new Bargain Store is rapidly gaining ground and will soon take the lead.

If this place ever gets a postoffice it will be located on the far end of East Street.

Dr Jordon is kept quite busy overseeing the work on his dwelling house.

S. R. Hogsett, of Browns Creek, was up trading at Dilley's Bargain Store last Saturday. East street is the place to get bargains.

W. B. Sharp was at Marlinton last week attending to a law case. Much success to him.

The mayor was not on duty a part of last week.

The trustees of the Frost church should have a meeting and see what repairs it needs.

Wheat seems to be the leading article of trade in our town.

A. L. Dilley got in a nice line of goods Saturday and is giving the best bargains in town. He has a big auction at R. D. Rymel's, on Top of Alleghany, Saturday, Aug. 4, and a concert that night.

How the Graphophone is Used at the United States Capitol by the Official Reporters.

From the Philadelphia Post.

By appointment of the Speaker, an additional official stenographer will soon be added to the staff of the House of Representatives, making the number eight in all.

The casual observer, looking down upon a debate in the House from a vantage point in one of the galleries, might be puzzled for some time to discover any evidence of reporting in progress. He would see nobody writing at the so-called "reporters' table," which as a matter of fact is practically not used at all for such purposes by the official stenographers. After a bit, however, the stranger may notice that whoever may be speaking at any length, there is always to be perceived a man standing or sitting with notebook in hand not far away. This man, indeed, is one of the reporters, who for the time being is taking down everything that is said on the floor.

The task which the reporter is engaged in performing is one of the most difficult imaginable. Remarks are interjected by members here and there; there are frequent interruptions, and to a person unfamiliar with such scenes it is a veritable Babel. But the shorthand man must not miss a word, and the best he can do is to keep near the Congressman who has the recognition of the Speaker.

The strain is very great, but fortunately it only lasts for a few minutes, the official scribe limiting himself to one thousand words which represent a page of the Congressional Record. He knows just about how many leaves of his note book are required to make his stint, and the moment he completes it he holds up his hand, another reporter, conveniently near, taking up the thread where he drops it. Having finished his thousand words, Number One hastens down stairs to a room on a floor below which is set aside for the exclusive use of the stenographers. There he seats himself before a GRAPHOPHONE and dictates into the "stuff" just recorded in his notes. Soon as he is through, an amanuensis transcribes it from the cylinders into clean print on a typewriter.

Meanwhile Number Two's place on the floor of the house has been taken by a third man who picks up the thread of the discourse as soon as Number Two has finished. Then Number two goes down stairs and dictates his thousand words into a graphophone, and in this way the business steadily proceeds the reporters succeeding each other in regular order. As fast as the matter is dictated from the notes it is converted into typescript, and thus the whole of it is ready for the printer within a few minutes after the close of the day's session. An assistant puts all of the copy together in proper order, and hands it to a messenger who carries it on his bicycle to the Government Printing Office, four blocks away.

One department of the Government Printing Office, as large as the composing room of a big newspaper, is devoted exclusively to the Congressional Record. Indeed, the Record is "set up" and sent to press just like any newspaper, being delivered every morning to about nine thousand subscribers. Each representative in Congress gets twenty-two copies daily, while a Senator is entitled to forty-two. Anyone may subscribe, the price being a dollar and fifty cents a month; but the publication is not directly profitable to Uncle Sam, inasmuch as it costs $125,000 yearly.

LAND FOR SALE.

I WILL on the 16th of October, 1900, the first day of Circuit Court, in front of the Court House, sell publicly (if not sold privately before that time) the property formerly belonging to my deceased brother, J. W. Smith, consisting of 35 acres of land lying on both sides of Greenbrier River, at flat road, 15 acres of which is good bottom land, the rest timber land. Also a good fencing and land with cookstove in good repair. Same can be seen in the county.

"THE CONFEDERATE VETERAN."

Low Club Rates Given With the Periodicals Named.

The growth of the Confederate Veteran, published by S. A. Cunningham, of Nashville, Tenn., is the most able testimonial of its merit. Starting in January, 1893, with a subscription list of 1,000, it has grown to 15,000 in January, 1900, and the publication has been enlarged from 16 to 32 pages. The contributions for the Veteran will be increased at this office. It is now the organ of the Confederate Veterans, and is published in the Confederate interest.

Who Came Out Ahead?

Young Mrs Torkins had gazed intently at her husband while he talked for twenty minutes without stopping.

"Now," said he, "do you think you understand how things were at Philadelphia during the convention?"

"Pefectly, Charley, dear. After hearing what you say and reading all the papers I could find it is as clear as day. Mr Roosevelt didn't want to be Vice-President, and Mr Platt wanted him to. Mr Hanna wanted him to be Vice-President until he said no, and then he said he shouldn't have it. And it was a great victory for Mr Hanna, because he wanted Mr Roosevelt in the first place; and it's a great victory for Mr Platt, because Mr Roosevelt was forced to take it after he had said 'no'; and it was a great victory for Mr Roosevelt, because without saying so he wanted it all the time. But to tell you the honest truth, Charley, dear," she added, as she passed her hand over her brow, "I can't tell which really got the best of it, Mr Hanna or Mr Platt. But I have always thought from the first that William McRosenfeld will make a lovely President."—Washington Star.

TESTIMONY.

Rev E. O. GUERRANT, D. D., Kentucky

"A good female school is a public blessing, and among many noble institutions I do not know a better one than the one presided over by Rev R. L Telford at Lewisburg, W. Va. It is Christian, Biblical, thorough, and attractive—making not only finished scholars, but lovely Christian characters. It is good enough to educate my own daughter, and I take pleasure in recommending it to my friends."

Dr J. M. POYNTZ, of Richmond, Ky.

"Rarely indeed does one have the opportunity of placing their daughter in so good an institution of learning as the one presided over by Rev. R. L Telford at Lewisburg. Anyway, it has been good enough for me. My daughter has been cared for as if she had been a member of the family."

J. J. ECHOLS, Esq., of West Virginia.

"I have been a patron of the Lewisburg Female Institute for the last six years, and I believe that under the present management it is the very best Female School in the two Virginias. If I had a dozen daughters I would want them all educated there."

Rev M. L. LACY, D. D., of West Virginia.

"I honestly believe it is the best school of which I have any knowledge."

Hon JOHN W. McCREERY, of the State Senate, West Virginia.

"I regard the school as one of the best in the country."

THE HILLS.

Consider the large heavenward hills, their ease,
Their genial age, their wisdom: more and more
I lift mine eyes unto the hills, who bore
Of old their brunt of battles, and have peace.
These are the scars were ground across their knees,
When the earth shuddered, and the ice came on:
And the hills heaved, and shouted, and made moan
For the hot fire that bit their arteries.
Gentle and strong, old veterans of wars,
Now humble with each flower and wov-en nest,
Friends of the sun and moon and morning stars;
Patient of tiny hopes and griefs con-fessed,
My councillors—at—unwritten-law ye are,
Teachers of lore and laughter, labor and rest.

—Arthur Colton, in New York Independent.

THE WORDS OF A PROPHET.

III.

THE States were abolished and in their stead were erected principalities of which the prince was ruler.

He who had shown his ability to have and to hold most wealth was to be prince of his respective principality, which bore the name of the original State from whose territory it had been erected.

No sooner had the terms of the new government been proclaimed than there was the wildest, most criminal contest ever known. All those who would most certainly have been the occupiers of the highest positions were murdered within a few days, one after another by agents of their rivals. In many instances two men assassinated by the emissaries of each other within a few hours, neither ever living to hear of the downfall of the other.

Carlyle was shocked, astonished, mortified, at the turn which affairs had taken. As commander of the army he moved the Virginia troops to Lynchburg. He had become infatuated with the beauty of Miss Astorbilt of New York, and the determination of the government to bestow upon him the title and wealth of a prince of Virginia had caused her to look with favor upon his suit.

Carlyle went to Richmond and there sent for his affianced bride to meet him, as the duties of his office forbade his coming to her. When she was come he unfolded to her his intention to do all in his power to overthrow the monarchy and re-establish the liberties of the people.

She, on her part, did all she could to dissuade him. She stormed, she plead, she threatened; but all in vain. He remained firm. She then apparently acquiesced in his opinions and agreed to help him in his schemes. But on pretense of returning to Washington to enlist help for his cause, she went to inform the Emperor of his plans.

This astute man, whom no man could deceive, was entirely deceived by this treacherous young woman.

The government was alarmed. They determined to capture Carlyle at all hazards. He was now at Lynchburg with about twenty-five thousand Virginia troops. The Emperor sent an immense force to Richmond, and another up the Valley of Virginia, while he ordered certain troops stationed in the North to move northward and encompass his little force at Lynchburg.

Almost before Carlyle knew it he was encompassed on three sides by superior forces. He made a dash to the right skirting along the Blue Ridge Mountains until he came to the Tye River, the valley of which he entered and proceeded to pass into the Valley by a notch now gone called the Rockfish Pass. When he reached the summit he found the valley below held by tens of thousands of Imperial troops, while his rear was pressed by his pursuers. Flight in all directions was cut off.

He called up his men and said to them: "Men, soldiers, comrades, brothers: we stand here this day encompassed by overwhelming odds of our enemies. What the issue will be the great Dispenser of events alone can tell. We stand here in the cradle of liberty to triumph or to die for the rights of man and the honor of our God. If we turn our eyes to the west we behold the land to which Washington looked in the gloomiest hour of revolution as a last sure refuge for independence. To the east is spread out the soil which produced Washington and Jefferson, and Henry, and all the brilliant galaxy of Virginia's Revolutionary patriots. Shall we this day prove unworthy of such illustrious descent. Let every man who is willing to die for liberty or live for his country step forward five paces; all others will be permitted in peace to separate themselves from our company and to go without molestation whither they will."

Every man stepped forth. Carlyle then told them he would not wait for the enemy to come to attack him, but would fall upon them himself; "And," said he, "I do not despair of victory, as I look up to the God of Battles, and remember that half of those who are our enemies to-day are willing to join any party which is for the time successful."

Accordingly when night was come he descended the narrow, crooked valley of the Tye River and fell with impetuous fury upon the Imperialists, thousands of whom laid down their arms and refused to fight their old commander. All things conspired to give Carlyle a victory, and nearly all surrendered, more than half of them to become soldiers under Carlyle, their old commander.

Carlyle therefore turned about to fight the Imperialists in the Valley, but they fled from him without a battle, many deserting to join his forces. He therefore held his ground against them in the Valley and awaited for the arrival of forces of unionists from the West, where they had risen undes the leadership of W. J. Bryan. That great man at the breaking out of war had done all that mortal man could do to avert hostilities, and when he could do no more he refused to accept office from either side; went into solitude to hide himself from evils which he could not avert.

But when news came of how the triumphant Imperialists had overthrown the constitution and set up a plutocratic monarchy, he exclaimed: "Of two evils choose the less; from the ashes of anarchy may spring up liberty. Under the stone of imperialism nothing can ever grow." He girded on his sword and went forth successfully to fight the battles of the people, showing in the field all those abilities which had distinguished him on the rostrum.

When he and Carlyle joined forces they formed an irresistable power. By the spring of 1904 something like order was restored in certain sections of the country. In May of that year the weather became very hot and dry. The two great leaders were striving to bring some order out of the general chaos, when agents of the Imperialists perpetrated crimes hitherto unparalleled in the history of the world. They deliberately poured cultures of the germs of yellow fever and of Asiatic cholera into the water supply of every city of the United States, while rats inoculated with the bubonic plague were turned loose all over the country. Such a panic as followed and such an epidemic of death were never before known in any land. Men and women died by the thousand by day and by night the cities were deserted by the people, who carried the pestilence to every nook and corner of the land, where it raged without intermission until frost.

W. J. Bryan died of cholera on the twenty-fifth day of May, and three days later Carlyle fell by the hand of an assassin. There was now no one left who had integrity or ability sufficient to guide, or influence sufficient to curb the wild schemes of the radical element.

One week later the mob executed the ex-Emperor McKinley and the venerable ex-President Cleveland for complicity in the enormous crimes of the times, although there was no evidence to prove or even suspect either of them of guilt. Lawless and leaderless man was gone mad for blood, so that if any escaped the pestilence it was only to fall by the mob; and if they escaped the mob it was to fall by famine.

Pestilence, famine, and murder swept in great waves across the land. Unburied carcasses of men women and children lined the highway and filled the air of the whole land with their putrescent stench. Desolation and destruction were on every hand—only the strongest survived. Childhood and old age vanished from the earth, and with them Innocence and Wisdom. All that would burn was put to the torch; all that had life was put to the sword. For property there was no security; for life only in brute strength. Man was degraded and woman debauched.

The hellish propensities of the race, accumulated for six thousand years, had broken forth in one final, exhaustive suicidal frenzy of nations) insanity. All things of love and beauty and honor were departed. Earth became a hell. The true selfish character of man's nature had asserted itself without reserve or pretense, and the race lay helpless and bleeding from self-inflicted wounds in every vein, upon the point of self extermination.

As when the sun is hidden, darkness follows and we have physical night; so man had hidden himself from the great Source of mental and moral energy, and a night of mental and moral darkness so thick it might be felt had enveloped the race, and the evil beasts of passion, prejudice, and ignorance crept forth in that darkness to kill and to destroy.

Humanity was a rudderless, pilotless, steamless, sailless hulk, driven by the hurricanes of evil passions upon the shores of Time.

Sportmen's Finds.

From Forest and Stream.

While Alexander Lewis and his two sons were hunting in the vicinity of Temple, Ind., the dogs treed something in a hollow tree The hunters came up, got their guns ready, and found the unknown animal to be an infant but two or three days old, and still alive. The child had evidently been abandoned to its fate. Mr Lewis carried the little one to his home, and there is every prospect that it will be successfully reared.

In Yazoo County, Miss., a party killed a deer that had a human skull impaled on a prong of his horn, supposed to be that of a negro. The prong had entered the cavity occupied in life by the eye, and had grown up around the bone showing the skull had not been put on recently. There are various conjectures as to how it got there, but the most prevalent opinion is that the animal was wounded and brought to bay by the negro, and had killed the latter in the conflict which caused the prong entering the eye and piercing the brain. The body on the deer showed signs of wounds. He was about as large as a two-year-old calf.

If you have a baby in the house you will wish to know the best way to check any unusual looseness of the bowels or summer complaint in small children. Dr. C. F. M. Holiday, of Dearing, Ind., says: "I have used Chamberlain's old baby saye: "Through the months of July and August our baby was troubled and took a running off of the bowels and sickness of the stomach. The bowels would come too frequently and I gave her Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy in the house and gave two four drops to a teaspoonful of water and he got better at once.

NOTES BY THE WAY.

For the first time that I was ever present at an annual meeting of the alumni of Washington and Lee University I was in my place June 19, 1900. The meeting was presided over by R. H. Fleming, D. D., one of many pupils of the Monterey High and Low School, at the close of the war between the States. Dr Fleming's name is familiar as a home word to the readers of this paper, and he needs no introduction. As Artemus Ward would have said, "it made me feel kinder curious" to see there in the chief seat an alumnus who was not born when I matriculated. He proposed a scheme for building a Science Hall, as a counterpart to the Tucker Jurisprudence Hall, dedicated that day under such interesting auspices. His scheme was cordially approved by some fine speeches and adopted by a unanimous vote. So the next time I attend an annual meeting I hope it may be the day when Science Hall shall have materialized in Rockbridge limestone, and dedicated to its illustrious mission and I celebrate the occasion with a schooner of lemonade and a Lexington cigar, along with hundreds of other alumni and friends of the University.

During one of the June days of my recent outing, a lady had me notice what her paper had to say about a prevailing fad, and a favorite one with the more intelligent and influential opposers of the Bible, about its being a cruel book. This opinion is bolstered up by referring to the extermination of the Canaanites by God's command; the lives of David and Joshua who are represented as men high in favor with the God of the Bible. Hence it is concluded the Bible favors or connives at laceration, manslaughter, and even massacre in very repulsive forms. The God of the Bible does not talk or act as a father that pities his children, and more ready to bestow favors than earthly parents are to give good gifts to their children, and hence it can not be a good book to live by on the part of all who would love to see peace on earth and good will among men.

In the same paper there was a very convincing exposure of the fallacy of such an opinion about the Bible. Our Savior's criterion. By their fruits ye shall know them was used, and it serves the purpose most effectively. Grapes are never to be looked for on thorns, nor figs on thistles; and so let it be examined whether the Bible is a cruel book from the influence it has on the characters of those who love and read it. In exposing this fallacy the writer went on to remark that many of his readers had acquaintances who had been Bible readers for years and endeavored live by Bible teachings, and no special tendency to cruelty had been noticed in their actions. The writer himself had never heard a devout Bible reader say, "I have been reading about the bloody extermination of the Canaanites, and my reading of the Bible impresses me with the idea that it is my manifest duty, and ought to be my disposition to cut, slash, pound, murder, and knock to pieces every body and every piece of property I can lay my hands on."

Nor has any one observed that when a friend becomes an earnest, diligent Bible reader that such a one shows any special disposition to massacre, murder, or manslaughter. Moreover it remains as one of the most stubborn of facts that where an institution of mercy is established and supported it is extensively, and kept going mainly by Bible loving people.

Soldiers of the late war, of recent and pending wars, are familiar with this fact, that it was Christian men and women who were quickly to their relief on the firing line, at the risk of their own lives, or to the hospital bound as wounds, knelt down by the dying to pray for departing souls and plead for love and mercy on behalf of fathers and mothers.

Now it seems to me, the writer goes on to say, that when a smart man can make a rose-leaf cut and stab like a bowie knife, form ice with the beams of the summer sun or poison himself with honey gathered from white clover bloom, then he might talk about getting something out of the Bible to justify cruelty, and not before, for one would be about as sensible as the other.

One of the pleasant episodes not readily forgotten was the ride into the country on the afternoon of commencement day, June 20, 1900 The handsome rig was voluntarily provided by a friend for my special accommodation towards speeding the parting guest on his homeward way. The driver, a very pleasant and communicative colored youth, was an enthusiast on the subject of local option. Though so young, still he had seen enough with his "own eyes that local option was the right thing for the good of his own people, as well as the white people too. Before local option many of his colored friends from the country upon coming to town would spend their money at the saloon, splurge around, get into a fuss of some sort, and leave town with wounds, bruises, dirty, bloody, ragged, old hats and clothes. Since local option times they spend their money for something useful, and now they go home of an evening with new hats new blue overalls, and they look like something respectable.

Having heard and read a good deal about college and institute yells, and as the yells had not been much in evidence during commencement days, I ventured to get his idea of what college and cadet yells were like.

"Well, mister, when the students or cadets yell at their best they just roar like lions.

"And just to explain to you my idea, or what I mean, I will tell you what I once heard about how a darkey talked to his old Kentucky master.

"It seems the master had fixed himself up very particular one morning to go somewhere, and when fixed up he asked his darkey how he looked.

"'Well, Marster, you looks as bold as a lion!'

"'You don't say so; well that is good. Where did you ever see a lion, you black rascal?'

"'Why marster, I seed an heard one many a time at old Colonel Buckner's stable.'

"'You did, did you? you good-for nothing scamp. That beast was not a lion.'

"'Well, master, you must 'scuse me, for you looks just like him!'"

There are more Notes to follow in their turn, if the printer does not tire of them. —W. T. P.

"Help! Help!" In a panic the passengers rushed to the side of the ship and gazed helplessly at those struggling in the waves. It was, indeed, a perilous situation. What was to be done? There seemed to be no rope at hand, and there was trouble in lowering the lifeboat, and, as is usually the case some of the sailors could swim. At this instant a man of commanding presence pushed through the crowd and struck an attitude, close to the rail. The drowning ones recognized him as a famous political orator, and their spirits rose. "Fellow citizens," he began, "we face a crisis!" The next moment a cry of joy went up. For the people in the water were hanging on his words, in which position they continued till the boats were lowered. The gift of oratory is truly blessed.—Harper's Bazaar.

Story of a Slave.

To be bound hand and foot for years by the chains of disease is the worst form of slavery. George H. Protection to Missionaries Fatal.

An interview with an Italian missionary, who was for many years in China, has been going the rounds of the press, arousing much discussion. One of the questions addressed to the missionary was whether he considered the missionaries in any way to blame for the present outbreak. "They are in a certain way responsible," he replied, "but very indirectly. There was a time in which they were held in great consideration—esteemed and almost loved by every Chinese. For instance, in Pekin itself a monument was raised in a public square to a missionary, Father Matteo Ricci, who was called by the natives 'Great One of China.' At that time the missionaries had not behind them the protection of the Powers.

"The knot of the question is that the missionaries should not be protected. They should be, and should remain, really men of sacrifice. With protection they lose this attribute, because before they died as martys, and now because they are Europeans. The protection of the Powers consists in this, that the affronts to missionaries serve to their Governments as pretexts to put a foot into China. For instance, after the incident of Monsignor Anzer and the murder of three missionaries, Germany stepped into Chefoo. And so naturally the Chinese hate the missionaries, as they now reason that they are not religious teachers, but spies with the mission to prepare the ground for the coming of the 'foreign devils.' It is my opinion that only the patient, slow, and peaceful work of the missionaries, abandoned absolutely to themselves, can bring forth that immense land from barbarism But now all is undone, or worse, and must be begun again in more discouraging circumstances."

Girl Babies.

An Omaha woman bought for $10 a guarantee from the spirit world that her next child would be a boy. When the child arrived it proved to be twins and girls. Instead of congratulating herself on the superior good sense and generosity of the spirits the woman had the intermediary in the transaction thrown into jail.

There are many women who have this prejudice against girl babies, and an amazing prejudice it is, whether the matter be looked at from the sentimental or the practical standpoint.

After the first few years of helpless and drooling infancy a boy is as a rule of no use to his mother, no companion for her, and a source of increasing anxiety. Just as he attains to years of discretion he marries and thenceforth belongs to his wife's family. The girl, on the other hand, is a pleasure to her mother in infancy, a companion in girlhood, and a comfort and support in old age.

A woman who has a boy baby makes an investment for the benefit of some other woman's old age. A woman who has a girl baby makes an investment for herself. For when the daughter marries, the mother has secured a home and a bread-winner.

The more girl babies a woman has the larger is her insurance against loneliness and, poverty in the evening of her life.—(New York World.

Prevented a Tragedy.

Timely information given Mrs George Long, of New Straitsville, Ohio, saved two lives. A frightful cough had long kept her awake at night. She had tried many remedies and doctors but steadily grew worse until urged to try Dr King's New Discovery. A Presidential election is not a campaign in which the friends of their country are fighting a desperate battle against its foes; it is a great debate in which men of different temperament take different views, and the truth is elucidated by the discussion. If in this great debate we respect our opponents' opinions they will respect ours; if we attribute their judgment to evil motives we will suffer under a similar imputation. Let us not forget that we are all Americans; that every Presidential election is a crisis; that somebody is always seriously disappointed at the result, and yet that somehow the country has still remained free."

POCAHONTAS COUNTY ROADS.

It is likely this county will adopt some system of making and keeping up roads by taxation, and that case it will behoove every citizen to see that the money so made available is intelligently applied. The "Alternate Road Law" of West Virginia provides in a general way that sufficient funds be raised to construct and maintain in suitable grade by equitable taxation. It is apparent that in a thickly settled community expenditures that would provide good roads for all interested would be hopelessly inadequate in another community where much longer roads would be required to reach and accommodate a given number of people and valuation of property, making intow excessive. It may also happen that the road commissioners for some county may develop a greater genius for economical road building than others.

The true solution of the problem is for each county to adopt some system of road building applicable to its outside needs. We think Pocahontas County should try the system which is operated successfully in Bath and Highland counties, where the conditions are about the same as in this county, in population and by of the land. This law, known as the "Jones Law," was passed by the legislature of Virginia exclusively for the benefit of Bath and Highland Counties. It was drawn by Mr. C. F. Jones of Highland county. We do not know for positive fact of the law, but is reasonably understood, and "the proof of the pudding is said to know them." The features of the roads are let to about ten miles to contractors who accurately survey and mark out how the road is to be made—outlines all the work, and a bond sufficient to insure the faithful performance of the contract is required. The contractor is paid in installments as the work progresses, and the last payment is not made until the road has been accepted by the commissioners as completed according to the specifications. The contractor is required to keep the road in repair for a term of years after the completion of the work, and is paid for this service out of the annual road fund. The commissioners are required to keep a strict account of the cost of each mile of road, and a full statement of the whole work is published annually. The law provides that the commissioners may, when needed in keeping the roads high in the centre the natural tendency of the drainage is to keep open and deepen the side ditches.

Of course we advocate building permanent stone roads in level and sandy places; and road builders ought to know that a steam roller is a prerequisite in building Macadam road, the stones being well settled and rolled with a light covering of earth and that well rolled, instead of the ruinous process of traveling over the loose stones until in the course of time they are worn down.

A dance was given in the ball room of the Temporary Court house. Some who were not bidden were cast into outer darkness.

The Lawn Party at Academy next Saturday is sure to be a very enjoyable and successful affair. Miss Anna Wallace is managing the enterprise. It will be held in the Kinnison Grove, one of the most beautiful pieces of woodland in the county.

The ladies of Huntersville will hold a festival on the evening of Wednesday, August 15th. There will be the usual attractions on such occasions, and the proceeds are to be used for a very worthy purpose, the repair of the Methodist church building.

The Presbyterian churches at Marlinton and Huntersville, after meeting for that purpose Sunday, decided to renew their call to Rev G. W. Nichol of Monroe. The matter will come before the general meeting of Presbytery in September.

NOTICE.—Dr A. L. Austin, Dentist, will be in Marlinton at Hotel Mann on August 13th and 14th, and at Academy on the 15th, 16th, and 17th at Moore's Hotel. Don't miss this opportunity to have your teeth put in good condition.

Work was temporarily stopped by J. J. Strang & Co. on the railway grading, pending an investigation as to whether a receiver should be appointed to take charge of their affairs. There seems to be no need to take this step. The men have been paid off and work will be resumed in a few days.

ARBOVALE.

Miss Maud Arbogast was visiting in this town last Thursday.

Mrs Burner of Elkins is visiting at her brother's, J. D. Kerr.

The people in this community would like to know what has become of the District Singing Association. We think it must have gone up the spout.

Mr Editor, We notice that your Frost correspondent says that they want to get the postoffice on East Street. We think they had better get the street first and then give it a name.

We notice your Travelers Rest correspondent wants to know how office the work is reversed as mentioned in the Bible. We would say it is mentioned something low down a dozen times.

Mr Editor, we notice in your valuable paper that there are some people who want to become the editors. But we are glad that we have such honorable men who will not grind license. There are some people who say that we might as well speak because as they will spell it anyhow; but just the time soon come when there shall not be a school or spellers left in the old county of Pocahontas. We want to hear what others have to say about this question.

I remain,

MRS P. D. YEAGER.

Died at her home Thursday night Mrs Peter D. Yeager of Travellers Repose, of heart trouble. Mrs Yeager was 64 years old, loving wife, a kind mother, and the community has lost a friend and neighbor. She was buried Saturday on the old Camp Bartow battle ground and beautiful summit overlooking her old home. A large crowd of sympathizing friends followed her to her last resting place. The pall bearers were Messrs J. R. Warwick, W. H. Hull, J. D. Kerr, Jack Spencer, J. D. Wilmouth, B. Burner. There were six honorary pall bearers. Funeral services conducted by Rev J. W. McNeel. Mrs Yeager was the mother of six children C. A Yeager, W. J. Yeager, Mrs C. E. Pritchard, Mrs Harper McLaughlin, Mrs Allie Flenner, and Miss Gertie Yeager.

Dragged by a Mule.

Benjamin Hark, a Jew from Philadelphia, has been working for H. Nathan on Williams River and incidentally rusticating in the mountains for his health. Friday he started to the bay field riding a mule and carrying a pitchfork. By accident he prodded the mule with the fork, which caused it to run away, throwing Mr Hark and dragging him by the stirrup several hundred yards down a mountain over rocky ground. All his clothes were about torn off, and there was scarcely a whole piece of skin the size of a dollar on his back from his head to his heels.

Dr Price dressed up the injured man as well as possible. The gravity of the situation was relieved by the patient remarking that he had come to the mountains for his health and had gained twenty four pounds in the past month only to lose it all in a few minutes.

Upper Pocahontas.

S. B. Hanna returned from Norfolk last Friday and reports that the pastoral relation between the Hampton church and Rev H. W. McLaughlin was dissolved and he was dismissed to Greenbrier Presbytery. Mr McLaughlin will probably begin his pastoral work in upper Pocahontas in October. The news has been received with much enthusiasm by all parties.

The recent rains have improved the crop prospects very much, and the promise now is for an unusual yield of corn. This crop means bread and meat in plenty. The hay crop was somewhat improved, but a gooddeal of mown grass was damaged about Glade Hill and Dunmore.

Dennis Williams has been on the egineer corps about a year and is an enthusiast in the business and may devote his life's work to that calling.

Uriah Hovener, the veteran farmer and grazier of upper Pocahontas, far advanced in the seventies, is industriously passing his hale and robust old age in moving things with his usual vim. His herds of all ages number about three hundred head at the present time. He carried about two hundred through the past winter.

Dunmore, like sweet Auburn of which a famous poet sings, is the ornament of a very attractive mountain valley, with its two nice churches, two stores and a number of tasteful residence. The water to run the Dunmore mills is mainly supplied by lithia springs of immense volume, welling up from the hidden and wonderful laboratories far beneath the green and flowery surface. A very large flag presented by a Mr Lindsay, of Delaware, furls to every passing breeze. Citizens took it in hand and raised it on a pole 70 feet in height. The flag is 8 by 12 and is a fine specimen of Old Glory.

Dunmore is the home of Capt. C. B. Sweeker, a valued correspondent of The Times.

It may be true in description
That truth is stranger than fiction,
But it sometimes appears, in troth,
What Sweeker writes is stranger than both.

One of the phases of Pocahontas home life is the fact that nearly every family is doing its own house keeping work. This seems to be owing very largely to the inability to procure domestic help, so few females appear willing to do housework. While this may be hard yet the training will be the very thing for the rising generation of our young people. Mrs Julia Ward Howe, author of the Battle Hymn of the Republic, did some of her best lyric work when she wrote this about washing day. It is copied for The Times to brighten the washing days, whether Mondays or Saturdays. All things considered, Tuesday is preferable as the washing day.

The clothes line is a rosary
Of household help and care;
Each little saint the mother loves,
Is represented there.

And when across her garden plot
She walks with thoughtful heed,
I should not wonder if she told
Each garment for a bead.

For Celia's scarlet stockings hang Beside Amelia's skirt;
And Bilbo's breeches which of late
Were sadly smeared with dirt.

Yon kerchief small wiped bitter tears
For ill success at school;
This pinafore was torn in strife
Twixt Fred and little Jule.

A stranger passing, I salute
The household in its wear,
And smile to think how near of kin
Are logs and toil and prayer.

LOBELIA.

Putting up meadows about over.

John Clowser and wife will start to Gilmer County tomorrow by the Cherry River road.

W. B. Hill is in from Cherry River where he has been working for the Cherry River Boom and Lumber Company for three months, building road, erecting camps, estimating timber, and prospecting for coal. He says the Company has the finest body of timber in the State of West Virginia; also elegant coal fields hidden under it. They have 65,000 acres, all in one body; have bought mill rites of all kinds at the forks of Cherry River containing several hundred acres of level land.

The engineer corps is coming up Cherry River at this time locating the road. The B. & O. will have this road completed to the forks of Cherry within forty days according to contract.

The boys of W. B. Hill's corps have all kinds of camp life, as the camper loves his mountain home. They have the speckled beauties to eat in most every way they desire from raw to hard fried. As to other kinds of wild game he does not care to mention, he being an elegant hunter.

Whoop up the taxation road law and hog law and kick all the gates off the public roads from the Atlantic to the Pacific, and good Democratic friends look to your own interests and not Jennings Bryan's interest.

We will give more news the next time.

McChesney, deceased, Lewis Thompson, deceased, and the unknown heirs of Elizabeth Preston, deceased, ..... Defendants.

The object of this suit is to ascertain the amount of taxes interests, and costs on the several tracts in the bill and proceedings mentioned, one of which is a tract or parcel of land containing 44 acres, situated in Pocahontas County, West Virginia, on the west side of Greenbrier River, in the Levels District, for the non-payment of taxes thereon, assessed in the name of H. M. Moffett, and to subject the same to sale for the benefit of the School Fund.

This day came the plaintiff by its attorneys, and on their motion, and it appearing by affidavit filed, that the unknown heirs of Sallie G. McChesney, deceased, Lewis Thompson, deceased, Wm Thompson, and the unknown heirs of Elizabeth Preston, deceased, are non-residents of this state, it is ordered that they do appear here within one month after the date of the first publication of this order and do what is necessary to protect their interest in this suit.

A SUMMER MORNING.

With quickened step
Brown night retires: young day pours in apace,
And opens all the lawny prospects wide.
The dripping rock, the mountain's misty top
Swell on the sight, and brighten with the dawn.
Blue, through the dusk, the smoking currents shine;
And from the bladed field the fearful hare
Limps awkward: while along the forest glade
The wild-deer trip, and often turning gaze
At early passenger. Music awakes
The native voice of undissembled joy:
And thick around the woodland hymns arise.
Thompson.

FROM MY NOTE-BOOK.

"Home again" from a visit to the Sweet Spring Valley in Monroe County. It was a seventy-five miles ride along the main thoroughfare, and we made it ten miles longer on our way back coming by the way of Rader's Valley, Maysville, and Frost's Hill to visit some friends.

The trip was a pleasant and we hope profitable one, tho the weather the most of the time was very warm. We left Edray on Thursday, July 19, and returned in two weeks about the same time in the day, real glad indeed to get home again and find all right there on our return.

The weather having been dry for some time, the dust was very disagreeable. Muttering thunder and flying clouds indicated rain as we started out in a cloud of dust on our journey. Rain seemed to fall in every direction only where we were. With the exception of a little delay at Buckeye and Mill Point, we stopped no place till we reached the comfortable home of H. N. Hannah at Renick's Valley. Here nightfall and the rain overtook us.

Having a good night's rest, we were on the road again early next morning to get in company with Rev R. H. Clark and Miss Lora Gray, who came from Loverige on their way to a quarterly meeting at Cokesburg in Monroe County.

At Falling Spring we met the Ballenger Family Show. So far as we are concerned, we close this and the like of it at with the gypsies and all other things of like character. We think people in this world ought to make an honest living.

We lunched at Frankford and made the acquaintance of a Mr Russel, one of Frankford's prominent merchants, and renewed old acquaintance with Rev Brother Richardson, of the M. E. Church.

We hurried on through Lewisburg and made a short call in Roncevecte, and hastened to Charles Hogsett's residence in Monroe, to be well cared for during our second night on our way. Approaching the above place we got in a thunder storm with a little rain At this stage of things we were selfish enough to hope that refreshing showers had already reached our own little patch at Edray, and from what we have since learned a good rain fell at Edray the evening we left home, and our friends were troubled for fear we were out in it.

Early on Saturday we started in haste to get to Caldwell in time for eleven o'clock preaching. As preachers were plentiful at this quarterly the Elder only did the preaching on Sunday. Rev Brother, a young man just entering the work preached Saturday morning. The writer talked for awhile Saturday evening. The quarterly occasion passed off very well. It must have been a success. The meeting of old friends and acquaintances was very interesting.

After spending ten days in this vicinity we were obliged to return home without having visited but a few of the people. Those who go on visits of this kind know about how we get along in these matters. We left in haste for home, after spending two sabbaths at this place. On the second sabbath we had the pleasure of hearing Rev C. W. Ball preach. Brother Ball has been recently appointed by the M. E. Church to the Monroe charge. He comes from Arlington Heights near Washington City. We hope he will do well on his new field.

On our homeward trip we had intended to stop at Bungers Mill in Greenbrier and spend a night with Uncle David and Aunt Ann Hedrick, an aged couple we have known for some time in that section. My wife and children, however, being very anxious to reach a sister of my wife the first night on our way homeward, we hurried on and reached Rader's Valley about dark, both tired and hungry, feeling that our faithful horse was even worse off than we. Supper was ready, tho our friends did not know of our coming that evening. Here we stopped two nights and a day, with C. A. Wickline and his good family.

Mr Wickline has recently bought a farm in this section. He is well pleased with his present situation. He has a good farm and is doing well.

Here in Rader's Valley we find something of Fort Donnally and hear of the colored man Dick Pointer, who saved the fort from the Indians one occasion when they made a desperate effort to take it. There has been a post-office established recently at a Mr Fulwider's, near the site of the old Fort, named Dick Pointer.

Leaving Rader's Valley, Mr Wickline, after having taken the best of care of us while with him, accompanied us a piece on the way to show us a new but more direct route homeward.

LUCY RANDOLPH FLEMING.

Mrs Lucy R. Fleming, beloved wife of Rev R. H. Fleming, died at the home of Mr Jared A. Jones in Highland County, Virginia, on 31st of July, 1900.

Lucy Fleming was the youngest daughter of Mr H. W. and Mrs D. P. Randolph and was born in 1846 at what was then called Williamsburg, but since a part of Brooklyn, New York. From earliest years she evinced a fine order of intellect, and took great delight in books and literary pursuits; joined to this a most ardent and loving disposition and great candor and sincerity of spirit, word and action; she was likewise gently kind in her dealings, mindful of others every way, and tenderly sympathetic.

She was very young when her father and family moved South and settled two miles from Richmond, Va. He main schooling was at a female seminary in Southern Virginia, where she made rapid improvement in studies, always most diligent in scholastic duties, and at the early period of nine years finding recreation in the works of the English Shakespeare and other standard writers. Ever a frail and delicate child, her stay at this school was interrupted by illhealth, and returning home she entered the excellent school conducted by Rev Philip B. Price in Richmond, boarding in his family through the school days of the week. Great friendship existed between the teacher and pupil, which was strengthened and deepened for life when under Mr Price's pastorate Lucy made a public profession of religion and united with the 3d Presbyterian Church of Richmond. Native thought, constant reading of the best authors, and especially long practice in original composition brought their utmost advantages, and finally made her name familiar in the public press for prose and poetry.

Lucy Randolph was married to Rev Robert H. Fleming, and one child, their daughter Mary, blessed this union. Mrs Fleming, with moderate duties on her hands, continued to write extensively articles of fragmentary nature, to which was added a beautiful poem in hooklet form reviewed, and a book of some size edited twice, its name on the present catalog of S. S. literature and none better than of its kind, viz. "Alice Williams." The Summer at Home." Other works she had given hours of study to writing, a work most congenial to her, and many a book turned off as an act and business and business word work to be done, but a premium of "her" duties hindered and for a few years past her general health has gradually declined. Her responsibilities as a wife and mother were ever sacred and the pleasure of hearing her energy of character, and when down such her capacity to rise and resume the race of life with the foremost runners.

Mrs Fleming followed her husband to his successive ministerial charges at Franklin, W. Va., Woodstock, Va., Washington City, and lastly as for many years Lynchburg, Va. One of her privileges and pleasures was to visit the old country across the seas, accompanying her husband who went officially as ministerial delegate. She deeply enjoyed England and Scotland, altho suffering much in body from the ocean journey and the weakness of fatigue; but day after day found her still pursuing the quest of those famed lands, the scenes of which she had often dreamed.

About the middle of July, the Fleming family, father, mother, and daughter, left Lynchburg for a respite among the mountains of Highland County, and proceeded to the home of Mr Jared A. Jones, closely related to them, and there Mrs Fleming was prostrated by sickness: great weakness fell upon her, but there were rallying times when with characteristic energy and self-forgetfulness she looked forward to "a long rest" in that sweet green land, and even further traveling across the main Alleghanies. It was not to be.

On Wednesday the 25th Lucy seemed much stronger and cheerful; she sewed a little and may have walked that day in the field of new-mown hay, but there was an apparent difficulty of speech in her who was wont to speak so fluently and well. After family worship bidding the room full of kind friends "good night," she lightly declined the usual help of her husband in ascending the stairs. But at 10 o'clock on retiring clasped both hands to the back of her neck and exclaimed, "O, such a pain!" Dr F. went to her at once. "Now my back!" she uttered: applying remedies with gentle rubbing, she said, "it is better"; but soon added "I can not move my side!" and these were her last words. A stroke of paralysis had fallen. God had laid Hus high heavily on His child, silently intimating that her life work was finished and in a few days she might enter into rest.

The few days of silent unconsciousness on her part and ceaseless effort of her husband, child, and many kind friends, dragged on, the day and then the night with no material change until Tuesday, the 31st of July, To o'clock p. m., when Lucy Randolph Fleming breathed her last and passed from things temporal to things eternal, from earthly scenes to heavenly, from languishing weakness to strength and glory, and dying in the Lord shall we not call her blessed?

The form, most calm and beautiful, was tenderly committed to the dust on Thursday, August 3d, beside the Fleming dead, with a simple service by Rev Mr Tillery, a Methodist minister; selected scripture, prayer and hymn: the sweet flowers that loving hands had brought and arranged seemed a real part of the service and helped to raise our thoughts from the dust of sorrow and bereavement to the riches of glory our dear Lucy had attained in the Father's house.

As descriptive of a small place this proverbial expression is often used: "There is not room enough to swing a cat." Charles G. Leland, an expert in tracing origin of this proverb to a superstition prevalent in Transylvania, where it is said that when a runaway cat is recovered she must be swung three times around to attach her to the dwelling. The same thing is to be done to a stolen cat if the party would keep it from returning home.

THE WASHINGTON MONUMENT

The readers of the Times are all familiar with the name and the picture of Washington's monument and I dare say every school "red" in Pocahontas knows how high it is, but some who have not visited the monument in person might be entertained by a brief description of this gigantic granite pile. It stands on a slight elevation near the north bank of the Potomac and is surrounded by a sort of park containing about ten acres. It is famous not alone because of its being erected in memory of Washington, but it is the highest stone structure in the world.

The base covers an area of 3025 square feet and from there tapers gradually until the apex seems lost among the clouds. There is no attempt at exterior adornment, but in harmony with the man in whose memory it was builded it rears itself upward, unassuming but mighty. Five hundred, fifty-five feet is not a great distance when measured along a highway, but when it is measured towards heaven it goes a long way.

As one enters the monument the most welcome and certainly the most appealing thing to be seen is a large notice forbidding the guides and other attaches of the monument to receive money from a visitor under any circumstances. The mind at rest as to how you are to procure lodging for the night is thus settled satisfactory by the saving of thirteen cents, and the visitor is haunted by no bony handed ghost asking some thing for value not received. You then prepare to take the elevator or the winding stair as you please; for my part I went up via the elevator.

The "iron basket" will carry about twenty persons but in order to accomodate so many it is necessary to "back up," as the guide expressed it, until every inch of standing room is occupied. About this time a timid woman from South Carolina remarks that the ropes don't look stout enough to carry so many people, and with this cheering frazzle of a thought to entertain you the elevator starts. You would like to go back and walk up the stair, but can't do it.

The trip by elevator occupies about 8 minutes. As you pass up by the three and four hundred marks, and are not near the top yet, there is a sort of hilarity seizes you. The thought of rushing into the afterword accompanied by a lot of iron bars, total strangers and elevators is thrilling, especially so as your visit would be made with out time for formal announcement, or even the striking of an attitude suited to a visitor in a strange land.

A stranger must be careful not to fall backwards from the window in the top of the monument. He must not throw marbles or hickory nuts either, because by throwing a big healthy chew of tobacco from the top he is likely to stave in the beinpen of his best friend, or, worse yet, might swat the jaw loose from some fashionable lady from New York.

This is not all that might be said of the monument, but is all the editor might care to publish. If I write again it will be concerning the Congressional Library.

LUKE MADONE.

The Power of Prayer.

One of the most novel and curious actions at law we have some action in some time originated not long ago in Stroudsburg, Pa. Among the residents of that city is the Rev E. E. Dixon, who, in a public prayer, invoked the divine vengeance upon a brewery that had been erected in that town. In his prayer the Rev Dixon, after calling down curses upon the whiskey and brewery and its proprietors, according to newspaper reports, apparently urged God to strike it with lightning. Sure enough, not long afterward, during a violent thunder storm, a bolt from heaven struck and partially wrecked the building. Damages for sixteen hundred were brought suit for damages against Mr Dixon, claiming that through his intercession and appeals the divine wrath had been brought down upon their property. The clergyman in his answer, it is understood, puts forth the claim that he should not be held responsible for an act of divine providence, and this is the novel question with which the court will be compelled wrestle. Such a plea would seem to indicate a woeful lack of faith in the power of prayer, yet perhaps it was the only plea he was able to make under the circumstances. The trial of this novel suit, if it ever comes to trial, ought to prove decidedly interesting. The Bible tells us that all that one needs in order to have his prayers answered is faith. Did the Rev Dixon possess it, and was that faith potential in calling down the divine vengeance upon the brewry referred to, or was its destruction so soon after the prayer a mere coincident—one of those strange correspondences with which the busy world is filled? Here is a question which is calculated to cause the average juryman's hair to turn gray.—Albany Law Journal.

Prevented a Tragedy.

Timely information given Mrs George Long, of New Straitsville, Ohio, saved two lives. A frightful cough had long kept her awake at night. She had tried many remedies and doctors but steadily grew worse until urged to try Dr King's New Discovery. One bottle wholly cured her; and she writes, this marvelous medicine also cured Mr Long of a severe attack of pneumonia. Such cures are a positive proof of its power to cure all throat, chest and lung troubles. Only 50c and $1. Guaranteed.

"Ma, how do wars begin?"

"Well, suppose the English hauled down the American flag, and that the American—"

Here Tommy's father intervened

"My dear," said he, "the English would not—"

"Excuse me, they would—"

"Now, dear, whoever heard of such a thing?"

"Pray do not interrupt!"

"But you are giving Tommy a wrong idea!"

"I'm not, sir."

"You are, madam."

"Don't call me madam! I won't allow you!"

"I'll call you what I choose!"

Sparing of Her Remedy.

There is at least one woman in Kenwood who believes thoroughly in the efficacy of prayer. About a year ago her husband engaged in a business venture that looked rather uncertain. But his wife had strong faith that it would turn out well.

"Go ahead, John," she said, "and let us put our trust in the Lord. I pray every night that we may have no reason to regret the risk we are taking."

The affair seemed to turn out pretty well from the start. Handsome dividends were paid all thro' the summer and during the winter and great joy was in the home of this man and the shrner of his fortunes.

But there came a turn about a month ago. The business ceased to pay, and since then the losses have been increasing every day. Nothing was said about it on the fireside ground—which so much so much happiness had centered during the last year during the last year until the other day, when it was suggested by the worried husband that it would be well to cut down expenses. Questions followed as a matter of course, and then it had to be confessed that the business was not going well.

"Dear me!" exclaimed the distressed woman, when all the truth had been rested to her, "I must begin praying again tonight!"—Chicago Times-Herald.

DIED.

On the morning of July 20, 1900, Mr W. O. Dorsey departed this life after a lingering illness from that dread disease, consumption.

Mr Dorsey was born and reared in Jackson county, this State. At the age of 19 he entered the free schools of his county as a teacher, having fully prepred himself for the profession. He taught two terms and then left the State and for eleven years his whereabouts was unknown to his friends at home. At the end of this time he returned home a physical wreck, having contracted the disease which caused his death. His brother R. E Dorsey cared for him from that time until his death with all the affection of brother. He was with him for several weeks previous to his death, and every care and need was attend to. When he found that no medical aid could prolong his brothers life he sat by his bedside and spared no effort to make the end as painless as possible.

About the 15th of May, 1900, Mr Dorsey came to the home of Charles Slaven, at Durbin, hoping to be benefitted by the mountain air. He remained there until his death. He had formed a previous friendship with mr Slaven in his travels, and this friendship never diminished during his stay here.

Mr Dorsey was of a very congenial disposition and made many warm friends during his stay here. This community mourns the loss of a true friend and extends its warmest sympathy to the relatives of the deceased. His body was taken to Ripley, W. Va., where his parents now live for interment.

R. E Dorsey wishes to extend his thanks to the people of Durbin for the kindness shown his brother, and especially to Charles Slaven and family for the interest taken in his brothers comfort and welfare during his stay with them.

T. Rose, C B. Grimes, J. B. Grimes, Sarah Jane McNeill, Lucy M. Nottingham, Mary F. Overholt, Virginia C. Burner, John T. McGraw, Pinn Marshall, Cecil Marshall, Mary Holt, Lucy Holt, George H. Moffett, Rachel McChesney, Margaret Hall, Joseph Simmons, George Simmons, Sr., Robert Simmons, Warwick Simmons, H. S. Galford, Lydia Overholt, George Simmons, Jr., Susie Simmons, Lucy Simmons, Mary Sheets, Lottie Hill, Russia Simmons, Dosia Simmons, and Levi Simmons, and argument of counsel. Upon consideration whereof, it is therefore adjudged, ordered and decreed that this cause be, and the same is hereby referred to S. B. Scott, Jr., one of the commissioners of this court, to enquire into and make report to a future term of the court, in the following matters and things concerning the lands alleged in the bill to be forfeited as waste and unappropriated, to-wit:

A tract of 30 acres forfeited in the name of J. T. Rose.

A tract of 48 acres forfeited in the name of Allen Grimes.

A tract of 80 acres forfeited in the name of Virginia C. Burner.

A tract of 777 acres forfeited in the name of Marshall & McGraw.

A tract of 44 acres on Greenbrier River between the lands of Isaac McNeel and Abe Rankin, and forfeited in the name of H. M. Moffett.

A tract of 40 acres lying on Wood's Run, and adjoining lands of John M. Geiger, Uriah Hevener and others.

A tract of 20 acres of waste and unappropriated land adjoining T. A. Bradley and others.

A tract of about 200 acres adjoining J. T. Hogsett and others, waste and unappropriated.

A tract of of 50 acres waste and unappropriated lands adjoining lands of Charles Morrison.

A tract of 35 acres adjoining Robert Webster and others.

First—For what year or years said tracts or any of them have been forfeited for non-payment of taxes due thereon, and whether any of said tracts have become forfeited to the State of West Virginia for the non-payment of taxes due thereon, and subject to be sold for the benefit of the School Fund.

Second—The amount of taxes, interest, damages and costs due thereon, or on any of said tracts, and unpaid.

Third—Whether the location of said tracts are ascertainable, and if so, their actual location.

Fourth—In whom the title to said lands is now vested, by forfeiture or otherwise, and who, if any one, is entitled to redeem.

Fifth—Such other matters and things as said Commissioner may deem pertinent, and any of the parties in interest may require.

And it is further ordered that said commissioner, before proceeding to execute this decree, shall give notice to the parties interested and all unknown owners and claimants of said lands of the time and place, when and where he will proceed to execute this decree, by advertising in the "Pocahontas Times," a newspaper published in Pocahontas County, for four successive weeks.

Trustee's Sale.

By virtue of a deed of trust made on the 9th day of January, 1900, between P. F. Cogan and J. E. M. Hanchel, partners trading and doing business under the firm name and style of Cogan & Hanchel, to the undersigned trustees to secure the payment of a certain negotiable note in the sum of $415.00 due the Pocahontas Bank, a corporation, and the said note having been paid by S. J. Payne and the said Pocahontas Bank having assigned to him its rights under the said deed of trust, on the 8th day of February, 1900, and having been directed so to do by the said S. J. Payne, the undersigned trustees will on Saturday,

September 1, 1900,

at the front door of the Court House of Pocahontas County, West Virginia, between the hours of 10 a. m. and 4 p. m., proceed to sell by way of public auction to the highest bidder the following personal property, to-wit:

Eighty barrels of cement, four derricks and fixtures, and all tools and working materials belonging to the said Cogan & Hanchel conveyed by said deed of trust, the whole comprising a bridge building and quarry outfit in use and situated along the line of the Greenbrier Railway in said county. Said deed of trust is of record in the office of the Clerk of the County Court of Pocahontas County, in Trust Deed Book No. 1, at page 162.

A true abstract of said order.
J. H. PATTERSON, Clerk.

One of the popular phrases of the period is one designating a prevalent phrase of religious effort as "Rocking-chair Christianity." It seems to be a popular kind of religious profession from the fact it is very comfortable and restful at home and elsewhere to occupy an easy chair. Some one has gone so far as to say that there are in the churches lots upon lots of Christians who are happily seated in easy chairs and keep up a constant movement, but no advance is made, but this religious movement is just forward and backward over the same lines. Some rock more rapidly than others, but it is no help to others. They are rocking themselves to and fro, but the cause of Christ is not helped forward by them. Christian duty has a "go" in it. Work is a great idea of the christian life, and co-operation, not competition, is the great law of christian effort, and hence it follows that the genuine Christians work together with God.

TESTIMONY.

Rev E. O. GUERRANT, D. D., Kentucky

"A good female school is a public blessing, and among many noble institutions I do not know a better one than the one presided over by Rev R. L. Telford at Lewisburg, W. Va. It is Christian, Biblical, thorough, and attractive—making not only finished scholars, but lovely Christian characters. It is good enough to educate my own daughter, and I take pleasure in commending it to my friends."

Dr J. M POYNTZ, of Richmond, Ky.

"Rarely indeed does one have the opportunity of placing their daughters in so good an institution of learning as the one presided over by Rev R. L. Telford at Lewisburg. Anyway, it has been good enough for me. My daughter has been cared for as if she had been a member of the family."

J. J ECHOLS, Esq., of West Virginia.

"I have been a patron of the Lewisburg Female Institute for the last six years, and I believe that under the present management it is the very best Female School in the two Virginias. If I had a dozen daughters I would want them all educated there."

Rev M. L. LACY, D. D., of West Virginia.

"I honestly believe it is the best school of which I have any knowledge."

Hon JOHN W. McCREERY, of the State Senate, West Virginia.

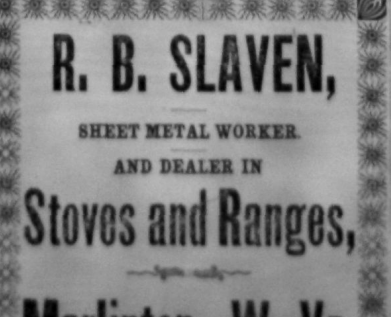

"I regard the school as one of the best in the country."

KEEP YOUR CREDIT GOOD.

There is nothing that helps a fellow out so much
As keeping his credit good.
He need not be looking for someone to touch
If only his credit is good.
He may even be busted, possess not a red,
But he is sure of a supper and also a bed,
And some sort of shelter over his head
If only his credit is good.

He may even mix up in social affairs,
If only his credit is good;
Say patronize theatres, lectures, and fairs,
If only his credit is good.
He may dress like a duke in the finest of clothes,
And wear patent leathers and stripes
silk hose,
And exhale odorous perfumes where-ever he goes,
If only his credit is good.

The butcher and baker will wait for their pay
From the fellow whose credit is good
And the grocer will furnish provisions all day
To the duffer whose credit is good.
The landlord is never in need of his rent,
And the tailor will trust him to any extent,
And for him new fashions and patterns
invent,
If only his credit is good.

But I somewhere have learned that there's only one way
Of keeping his credit good
And that is by strolling in some day
And paying those to whom his credit is gold.
I notice hard cash and nothing else goes
With those who provide shelter, victuals, and clothes,
And bottles whose contents I need not disclose
To you fellows whose credit is good.
—[William H. Preston.

THE REAL BRYAN.

Now, the truth of the matter is that Mr Bryan is not a demagogue. He is absolutely honest, which a demagogue is not. He is passionately sincere, which a demagogue is not. He is absolutely brave, which a demagogue is not. When Bryan came to Nebraska a dozen years ago, his town, his Congressional district, and his State were overwhelmingly Republican. A demagogue would have joined the majority party. Bryan took up the cause of tariff reform, and fought a losing fight. When he became convinced that free silver was right, he preached it in his Congressional district with his party organization and the odds of battle against him. He ran for the United States Senate in 1894 with his party's State convention endorsement. If he had trimmed a little on free silver, the Cleveland Gold Democrats might have turned the scale in his favor. But he didn't trim; he lost. When Bryan left the volunteer army of the United States in 1898, his party had been opposing the ratification of the peace treaty with Spain. Bryan opposed his party and favored the ratification of the treaty. A dishonest man would have gloried in fighting the treaty. To-day silver sentiment is dying in the West. Bryan would not lose an electoral vote by abandoning silver. He would gain thousands of franchisers in the East by such a course. But because he believes that the free coinage of silver is right, will honest men not desert him from his stand.

Above everything else, Bryan is personally what may be called a clean man. He is a member of the Presbyterian church, but he does not add to his other faults the "vice of piety." His home life is that of the average well bred American—simple, affectionate, entertaining. He takes his wife into partnership in all his interests. She is his only confidant and his final adviser. In the town of Lincoln, which does not agree with him politically and will not vote for him, Bryan bears the reputation of a straightforward, honorable man, whose word is good and whose debts are paid when they fall due. In the discussion of politics Bryan is not a demagogue. He has never descended to them. He indeed himself uses his honors to lead politics instead of accepting them as the creature. Read him in Western politics begin at the bottom—run for county attorney or the legislature, are graduated into a judicial nomination, and ascend to Congress at the close of their political lives. Bryan, having framed his life after the models of the old school, began at the top.

Bryan shows his greatest personal strength in the fact that he is today, as he has ever been, without a political machine. Other men in American politics stand or fall for reasons outside of their personality. Mr David Hill, for instance, is a geographical location. Mr McKinley is a kind of syndicate. Roosevelt stands for an ideal of civic righteousness. Mr Croker is an impudent appetite. Quay is a system of wireless telegraphy. But Bryan is Bryan, and Bryan is his prophet. More power for good or evil rests under Bryan's black slouch hat than under any other single head piece in America.—[McClures.

THOUGHTS OF A PARSON.

From the Southern Churchman.

An artery was supposed to conduct air; hence its name. But we now know it is blood that it conducts.

I do not know anything which more wonderfully vindicates nature and its Creator for order and design. I saw a physician the other day dissipate by gentle pressure a deposit of chyle on a man's hand, and it set me thinking how marvelous is the human frame and how great a God is our God.

When I learned the structure of the artery, the argument from design was not the less, but all the more cogent. The structure is very complicated, yet how each factor contemplates a wise and beneficient purpose. The three layers—outer, inner, and middle—insure strength. All this lined with a soft, delicate material, and smooth to allow the unimpeded flow of the blood. Then the whole placed in a strong tissue to sheath and protect it. How careful the hand of nature—the Great Mind of the universe must have guided it.

Cut an artery, and one would think death would follow from bleeding. But nature has provided against this. The walls of a vein collapse, but those of the artery act otherwise. The orifice contracts, a clot of blood forms inside and another outside, and fatal hemorrhage is prevented. Then the edges of the wound begin the usual deposit of lymph, and all is well. Compress the ends of a severed artery by ligature, two of the layers curl inwardly and the tissues soon heal. The whole action of an artery seems to be that of no intelligent being, instead of that of senseless flesh and blood. A great Being must have arranged for all this—nature only his handmaid.

But these arteries branch; the branches supply blood, as smaller streams do water to land, only in the reverse order, the river receives tributaries, the artery throws them off. Another thing of the artery now is that, after supplying a sufficient acreage, it again becomes branchless, flows a distance in that condition, and when it reaches territory that needs irrigation again breaks out into rivulets, and once more supplies the dry region roundabout. Is there not the eye and the finger of a Great Mind in all this, my friend of the doubting school? Chance is too poor a name for so much order and design; let us call it by a better.

I have learned a great deal about these wonderful things, but shall not just yet set up to practice surgery! I have heard other lecturers, on anatomy; they all learn more in a state of genial exhilaration. Astronomy does the same. I think the sovereign alone ought to convert all scientists. How indebted things must be right times a day. I had a lecture on Comparative Physiology, and found myself wondering at the intense and diversified ingenuity the human soul goes into God's design in the production of sense and its gratification.

Hold up H. H. Echols, Marlinton; Bruce & Hamrick, Edray; A. Barlow, Hosterville; D. T. McNeel, Buckeye, W. Va.

"Boy," said the wealthy man, beaming with gratitude, "you have done me a great service, and I am going to reward you." "Oh, thank you, sir!" gasped the small boy. "Here is this small case," continued the millionaire, "in the first dollar I ever made. You may look at it. And here is a recent copy of The Claptrap Magazine, which contains my article telling how I made it. Read it and may heaven bless you!"—Catholic Standard and Times.

It will look very wise in me, and one likes to be thought that. Well the hard word is "Anastomose." This means to inosculate, to join mouths, to kiss—now you understand.

The artery breaks up into small ones, and these farther on unite again, and so one vast system, all working in harmony, is formed. The rivulets flow into each other, and all back again, finally, into the parent trunk. Wonderful, is it not? Could accident have brought all this about? Is God a Father of confusion, or of wisdom and adaptation?

At every large joint there is "what we call" general anastomosing, in order that the elbow or knee, for instance, may be sure to get all the blood it requires. If the parent artery be obstructed, the little ones of the family take upon themselves to grow up fast and support the others, much as lads and lassies sometimes do if the head of the family gets disabled by age or infirmity. Is there no hand of God in this wise provision? See one of these small vessels, only a subordinate branch, remember, enlarging, growing twice as fast as it would have done but for the injury to the main branch, and in this way beautifully and sufficiently compensating for the harm and loss sustained by the body, whose servant it is. All this may have "just happened," but I think not, and you and I, I hope, agree. Let us leave doubt to the doubters. The vein and the artery and the blood, all this shall teach us better things.

And not only all this, but after a time only a few of the little baby arteries which came to the rescue and grew up fast, and helped the cause so well, remain in their enlarged condition; the rest of them subside, and only those which most resemble the original and main one, stay of the size they have gained—all this to avoid overdoing and being in the way of each other. The artery seems, on the whole, to have a great deal of good judgment, and if it and I together have taught my young readers a lesson I am glad to have taken one for my text. R. W. L.

A Minister's Good Work.

"I had a severe attack of bilious colic, got a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, took two doses and entirely cured," says Rev A. A. Powers, of Emporia, Kan. "My neighbor across the street had been sick for over a week, had two or three bottles of medicine from the doctor. He used them two or three days without relief, then called in another doctor who treated him for some days and gave him no relief, so discouraged him. I went over to see him next morning. He said his bowels were in an awful fix, that that it was almost bloody flux. I asked him if he had tried Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and he said 'No.' I went home and brought him my bottle and gave him one dose; told him to take another dose in fifteen or twenty minutes if he did not find relief, but he took no more and was entirely cured. I think it the best medicine I have ever tried."

THE CONGRESSIONAL LIBRARY.

Among the many interesting things to be seen in Washington perhaps nothing is more interesting than the Congressional Library, especially if the visitor be a lover of art rather than of history. The name "Congressional" might imply that the library was for the exclusive benefit of Congress, but such is not the case. It is true that Government officials have some privileges not accorded to the general unpolished freckled public, but the library is free. Any one can read its books or admire its beauties.

Certainly there are a few regulations as to how a visitor is to conduct himself. You are not expected to break the nose and ears off the statue of St. Paul and carry them away as a relic. It is not considered as being good form to spit against the finest paintings unless you are using the best brands of tobacco,—but to my story.

The first effort made by the government to establish a library was in 1800, when the Congress at Philadelphia appropriated $5000 for the purchase of books. When they were secured the west front of the old Capitol building was made to serve as a store room. In 1814 Admiral Cockburn of England and some companions came up the Potomac on a picnic and stopped over at Washington. As usual on such outings the crowd became hilarious, and in spite of the one-armed policeman who guarded the Capitol they scattered the books about the floors, and at Cockburn's order "Light up!" the match was applied, and when the blaze died out America had no library, and only one corner of a Capitol.

After the "War of '12," the Government bought Jefferson's library at Monticello, and with this as a nucleous begun a new collection. This was kept in the West front of the new Capitol, but as the library grew it became necessary to store them in the basement. In 1886 the attics and woodsheds were filled; then Uncle Sammy built his books a new house.

The building was properly begun in 1888 and was fidished in 1897. It stands directly east from the Capitol about one-fourth mile, and on account of the Capitol's immense size and height the Library is made to appear smaller than it really is. It cost $6,360,000, covers nearly four acres of ground, and has a floor space of eight acres.

In form it is a rectangle. The design is taken from the Italian Renaissance,—that is derived from the architecture of the fourteenth century, when the neglected models of Greece and Rome were revived and combined. The building is fireproof, being built entirely of granite, marble, brick, and steel, and is the largest library building in the world. For beauty of design and elegance of finish it probably has no equal in existance. It impresses not with its size, but with its beauty.

The structure is surmounted by a great golden dome, not golden figuratively but literally, as the dome is covered with gold leaf of 23 caret fineness. This might seem extravagant, as the dome has a surface of at least one thousand square feet; but it is said that $3000 worth of gold was beaten so as to cover this area. As you approach from the west the sun-glittering dome and the massive but delicate outlines of the architectural triumph impress one as being grand, but the impression made by the outward appearance fails to prepare the visitor for the scene within.

As you ascend the flights of marble steps towards the entrance pavilion, Hinton Perry's Fountain as it is called will attract you. This fountain is in a semi-circle with a radius and diameter of 35 and 70 feet, and represents the court of Neptune the sea god, with a background of granite surrounding so as to form a representation of a sea-horse cliff. The colossal figure of the main sea god sits supported by his mount. On either side is a Triton blowing a conch to summon the sea monster to their sovereign. In front are two enraged sea horses ridden by nude nymths, while a dozen sea inhabitants, turtles, serpents, &c., pour streams of water from their mouths upon the granite figures. The entire group is in bronze executed by Hinton Perry at a cost of $40,000 dollars.

The principal ornamentation on the outside apart from the general magnificence of design is a series of thirty-three sculptured heads, set as keystones over the arching front windows, representing the thirty-three principal races of mankind. Also a set of nine heads placed over the entrance doors, representing Demosthenes, Goethe, Franklin, Emerson, Irving, McCauley, Hawthorne, Scott, and Dante. The heads are by Boyd and Elliot, the busts by Adams, Hartley, and Rockstuhl.

The entrance doors, cast bronze by McMonnies and Warner, are three in number, each with a height and wid h of fourteen and seven and one-half feet, and a weight of nearly four tons. The design of the doors represent human progress: first, Tradition; second, Writing; last of all, Printing.

This article is now too long and the interior of the building can not be described until next week.

It is with feelings of sincere regret that it becomes our duty to record the death of one of our prominent young citizens, D. Taylor McNeill, Commissioner of the Federal Court, merchant, and postmaster at Beckeye. This sad event occurred Wednesday morning, 15 instant, aged about thirty years. He was the Republican nominee for the legislature in 1898, served as a clerk on a Senatorial committee last session, and was an enthusiastic member of the Masonic fraternity and from early youth a professing christian in the pale of the M. P. Church.

On August 15 the allied forces led by Gen Yen Magechi, a noted Japanese officer, entered Pekin and found the ministers all safe, with two weeks provisions on hand. The rescue of the ministers relieves the United States from further responsibility for armed intervence. The Queen Dowager and Prince Tuan had fled the city. There is no indication of the Powers withdrawing troops and the rescue is no certain indication of peace as matters now stand.

The Pocahontas Development Co. J. L. Hechmer, general manager and secretary of the Pocahontas Development Company, was in Marlinton last week and transacted quite a lot of business in regard to the town property.

The Pocahontas Bank purchased the building in which it is doing business and the adjoining lot at $2000. This permanently locates both of our county banks on the same block, which together with the proximity of the depot and numerous stores already established makes that the business part of the town.

W. A. Bratton purchased the house in which he lives and two adjoining lots, and contemplates extensive improvements.

The lots near the court house are considered the most desirable for residences, and it is destined that this section of the town will contain most of the better class of dwellings. Hubert Echols bought a lot in this section and has let a house to contract to W. J. Killingsworth, to be finished by December 1. C. A. Yeager is also building in this section.

Smith & Whiting bought a number of lots above the bank block and will erect lumber and coal yards at once. They improved about a half-mile of Camden Avenue leading to their property.

O. A. Vesay, the engineer who laid out the town in 1891, was here and laid out a number of very desirable lots on the brow of the hill back of the court house. Also some lots across the creek from B. M. Yeager's which are to be sold cheap. About forty corner stones have been quarried to mark different corners throughout the town.

Mrs Hassett, daughter of Mr John Shanklin, of Penn., is out on a visit.

Jim Rock spent Sunday at home

Work is progressing finely at the new town of Cass. The telephone line will be completed to that town from Green Bank.

The protracted meeting at Wesley Chapel is still in progress.

Wagon loads of people are off to Cheat Mountain for black berries.

Over 200 petitioners have signed the paper to bring the road tax question to a vote in the Green Bank and Huntersville Districts this fall. It will carry by a vote of 2 to 1.

Auctioneer Swecker has a wagon load of shoes and some other goods placed in his hands for sale, which will be sold at auction in the near future at Green Bank. Look out for his notice.

Where is old Mrs Pooh? Has she broken her neck on some of the road bridges. MR POOH.

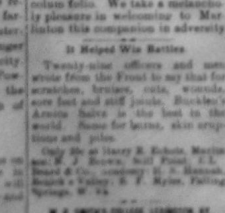

The laws of health require that the bowels move once each day and one of the penalties for violating this law is piles. Keep your bowels regular by taking a dose of Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets when necessary and you will never have that severe punishment inflicted upon you. Price 25c at H. H. New Newspaper.

C. A. Monroe Meadows has been here for the past week making arrangements to start a Republican weekly newspaper at this place by the name of The Marlinton Messenger. He expects to get out the first issue about the first of next month. The paper is to be a six-column folio. We take a melancholy pleasure in welcoming to Marlinton this companion in adversity.

It Helped Win Battles

Twenty-nine officers and men wrote from the Front to say that for scratches, bruises, cuts, wounds, sore feet and stiff joints, Bucklen's Arnica Salve is the best in the world. Sores for burns, skin eruptions and piles. Only 25c at Harry R. Echols, Marlinton; W. J. Brown, Still Point; J. L. Beard & Co., Academy; R. S. Hannah, Beard's Valley; S. F. Ryder, Falling Spring. W. ONOTO.

Good morning Mr Editor! It is nice and cool just now and if you will listen to me a few moments I will tell you some of the news of of our section of country. No doubt you know where Onoto is located but some of your many readers may not. This thriving place is situated on a little rise between Stony Creek and the Big Spring one mile and a half from Edray. Onoto is booming since we have gotten a mail route, three saw mills almost in sight and more coming, one planer and two grist mills, but as we are not directly on the R. R. line we don't expect any machine shops to be built here for some time.

C. F. Gay expects to complete his lumber job in the near future. John Duffield is pushing for him.

S. P Sheets expects to move his sawmill soon. He is a good sawyer and a nice man. He does honest work.

Walter Curry has a crew of men at work on his cutting contract from Jackson & Doyle, and he is hustling things lively.

Jackson & Doyle are going to build fence for a business as soon as Doyle gets able to work. He had the misfortune to get his knee badly sprained some time ago.

There is a movement on foot to fence the cemetery at N. S. Duffield's. Those who have friends and relatives buried there will please meet there on Saturday, August 25 at 2 p. m., in order to dress up the graves and to appoint a committee to take charge of fencing. If the interest manifested is not sufficient, the whole cemetery will not be fenced. Surely you have not forgotten the loved ones whose dust lies here. Come and help us locate and dress up their graves.

General Coxey still sits on the lumber pile and grins. He is a jolly old fellow.

Well, Mr Editor, the day is getting too hot for me. I must go to the shade. Good by.

RAZORBACK.

We have a very interesting Sunday school at Hamlin Chapel.

Rev Callison preached a good sermon at Hamlin last Sundny.

The sick are all better at this writing.

Misses Birdie Baxter, Georgia Baxter, Theo. D. Moore attended the Teachers Institute at Huntersville.

Forest Malcomb of Savannah, Greenbrier county, is in this part.

Asa Barlow and Adam Baxter have gone to Addison to use the water.

Miss Mamie Silva has returned to her home near Mill Point accompanied by her sister Mrs Anderson Barlow and little son Glenn James White and wife of Laurel Creek are visiting Mr Peck, Lobelia.

Miss Ada White of Mill Point called to see her sister, Mamie one day last week.

Yours truly,

GLADE HILL.

Keep an eye on the gobbler.

H. F. Arbogast is still in the ring.

Rev McNeil is holding a series of meetings at Wesley Chapel with good success. May the good work go on.

Miss Bessie Patterson, who has been in Highland for some time, has returned to her home. Her many friends are glad to have her among them once more.

We presume that Mike has a head on him like a cow pumpkin.

We agree with Susan that the mayor of that big town of Frost may bloom soon, but we fear he will be like the rose—some hand will pluck him for a bouquet.

Miss Emma McNeil is the guest of F. S. Moore at this writing.

Dr Jordon was in to see Wash Hoover one day last week.

Hay making is a thing of the past.

Ira Buzzard is doing a rushing business; may his pathway be strewn with flowers.

E. S. Moore made a flying trip to the lower end of the county last week.

A good many of our people have been out to Cheat for black berries.

Dilley & Eagle were hulling grain in this part last week.

William is out to Huttonsville for H. Moore this week.

Wash will leave for parts unknown in the near future.

50c. and $1.00; all druggists.

EAST FROST.

Dr J. B. Lockridge is our leading physician in this vicinity.

Wheat has declined in price since the new crop has begun to come on the market

Pat Gay, of Elk, was in town last week, trading horses.

Don't forget to come to A. L. Dilley's big auction, Saturday August 25, 1900.

They say that the mayor of this town will bloom some of these times among the people. We don't think—he was nipped in the bud.

Some people do not understand why A. L. Dilley sells so cheap. He buys for cash, sells for cash and is not going on borrowed capital.

Mike is all right but he won't do. They say he has a head—but there are others.

Price Moore went to the Hot Springs for Dilley and Harper.

Eagle & Dilley were operating their threshing machine in this part last week.

We don't think the lower end of town need to be scared if the east end boom should burst, as brainless things never sink

East Street has gor the post office with O. B. Sharp post master The post office will be kept at his home in East Street. Hurrah for our side!

The Frost correspondent last week said that the bargain store will soon lead under ground. If such be the case it is not by borrowed capital, with a big display, that in the end will lead some poor man to the same place.

Be careful Susan, the Lion is king of beasts.

Judging from appearances, the lower end of town has been dead for some time. LION.

BIG SUIT.

Ex-Congressman C. P. Dorr, of Webster county filed a suit in Parkersburg on the 13th for $25,000 damage against ex-United States Senator Johnson N. Camden. Dorr claims that the Senator owes him $13,000 for services performed during the litigation over the Dewing tract of land, which was in controversy for years and asks the rest for damage. Senator Camden denies owing Dorr anything.

PLEASE TAKE NOTICE.

I have a good many accounts out that have been running from the beginning of the year 1899. All parties that have such accounts with me will please come in and settle before the 15th of October, as after that time all that is not settled will be put in the hands of the collectors.

Yours very truly,

TESTIMONY.

Rev E. O. GUERRANT, D. D., Kentucky

"A good female school is a public blessing, and among many noble institutions I do not know a better one than the one presided over by Rev. R. L. Telford at Lewisburg, W. Va. It is Christian, Biblical, thorough, and attractive—making not only finished scholars, but lovely Christian characters. It is good enough to educate my own daughter, and I take pleasure in commending it to my friends."

Dr J. M. POYNTZ, of Richmond, Ky.

"Rarely indeed does one have the opportunity of placing their daughters so well as in the institution of learning on the one presided over by Rev. R. L. Telford at Lewisburg. Anyway, it has been good enough for me. My daughter has been cared for as if she had been a member of the family."

J. J. ECHOLS, Esq., of West Virginia.

"I have been a patron of the Lewisburg Female Institute for the last six years, and I believe that under the present management it is the very best Female School in the two Virginias. If I had a dozen daughters I would want them all educated there."

Rev M. L. LACY, D. D., of West Virginia.

"I honestly believe it is the best school of which I have any knowledge."

Hon JOHN W. McCREERY, of the State Senate, West Virginia.

"I regard the school as one of the best in the country."

A PANACEA.

The politician, ever bland,
Eve long will take you by the hand
And seek to give a true reply
To all your questions as they fly.
When explanations you demand
Of how to regulate the land
To make it bloom from sea to sea,
This is his answer, "Vote for me."

If you would know a way to stop
All kinds of damage to a crop;
If some protection you desire
Against tornadoes, floods and fire;
If you, in short, would banish all
The ills man met at Adam's fall,
And live in sweet unchanging glee,
This is the answer, "Vote for me."

NOTES BY THE WAY.

For the pleasure of many of my worthy readers who remember Rev Houston Hamilton, who passed several years of his early ministry in our county, it gratifies me to be able to say that I met him during commencement exercises, and answered it quiries about his Pocahontas friends. His eldest son McChesney was at the Washington and Lee University, far advanced in his studies and has a fine record for diligence and proficiency as a student. Mr Hamilton has been successful in his ministerial vocation, holds the position as chairman of the Presbyterial Home Mission Committee, and a like position on the Synodical Commission of Evangelization. Prominent and responsible positions in the work of Lexington Presbytery and Synod of Virginia.

In a former communication something was said about a popular fad concerning the Bible being a cruel book. At sometime during the outing my attention was called to another fad that seems to be much in vogue to the prejudice of the Bible. A fad too that was started or rather revived and countenanced by friends of the higher criticism, so called; namely, that the Bible is an impure book. When some "yaller dog" of the preaching kind or of some other profession or calling goes wrong it is oftentimes most vehemently charged that the Bible they went by is an impure book. Nevertheless when search is challenged to show cases where people have been thus ruined by the Bible, what does it all come to, after fair and careful efforts in that direction? If the Bible be an impure book there must be victims and honesty requires that they be found and pointed out. The good old fathers, now believed to be in heaven, read the bible more than any other book will any one say this reading made bad men of them? How about the sainted mothers, whose weary hands are folded at rest; they loved the Bible more than any other book—did their reading make them bad women? The charming, lovely christian girl, now gone to be with her Redeemer, had her Bible among her most highly prized keepsakes and hundreds of texts are marked—did that have a tendency to ruin her? Not one instance can be successfully charged to the Bible, though there are more Bibles in the world than all other books by a thousand fold still no one can be found that was ruined, soul and body by the Bible. On the contrary however by common consent it is agreed that wherever the Bible has the most influence the family institution is most respected and genuine purity most prevalent.

In former years Col Warwick Cameron, late of Rockbridge, near Lexington, was well known in our county, but few persons indeed better known. Quite a large portion of his immense land holdings was in Pocahontas where he spent much of his time, attending to his business interests, and was a public spirited non-resident. Upon one occasion during the fair it was he was waiting at the Lexington Hotel to hear from his colored stallion some. When the stage arrived a soldier in stepping out, had his gun to go off accidentally and the Cameron was so mortally injured that he died in a few minutes. During my recent outing or perhaps I had better say hiking to Rockbridge, it was my pleasure to meet Billy, or Billy of his grandchildren. The girls largely exceed the boys in number, and all seem ambitious to be self-reliant and useful. Quite a number are popular teachers in schools, and all seem emulous of being accomplished young persons, and move in the best social circles wherever they may be. One of Col. Cameron's daughters is Mrs Tom S. White at the old Cameron homestead, near Lexington. Mr White, a leading, prosperous merchant of Lexington, is the youngest son of the late Rev Dr Wm. S. White, of reverend memory, whom Dr T. D. Preston, himself a peerless man, truthfully eulogised as one of the noblest of his kind at a Synodical memorial service. About the beginning of his business career Tom White was an enthusiastic Buena Vista boomer. While the boom was on he passed almost daily between Lexington and Buena Vista in a turnout that may have been the envy of some and the admiration of all. One morning while business was about reaching flood tide his horse broke away from the hitching post at Buena Vista, and with headlong speed wrecked the vehicle and it looked too as if the horse would break his own neck. Some one rushed to Mr White's office to tell him what had happened. "Oh, well just let that horse go. I am now making a horse per minute," was the nonchalant response, and the lot dealing went on as if nothing had happened. Col. Cameron's eldest and only surviving son, Dr John H. Cameron, is a retired physician, broken in health, and resides at Goshen, Va., surrounded by his pleasant devoted family.

With this article the writer concludes the wayside notes. It has been so pleasant to write them that he feels tempted to continue them by drawing on his imagination for material. He almost envies Josiah Allan's wife who can stay in her cosy quarters and in the meanwhile travel around the world and have a good time, but as I am not mentally built that way I must stop right here. Sportsmen's Finds.

Party of Afton, Ill., sportsmen were cruising up the Illinois River last spring on a hunting trip when one dropped a deer's foot horn handle Bowie knife overboard in 20 feet of water. The loser visiting Grafton, a local fisherman's headquarters in the early summer was surprised to see a resident complacently whittling a stick with his knife. He proceeded to claim it, and identified it as his property by the initials graven on the handle. Well partner, responded the present holder, I s'pose you may be telling the truth but I cut this here carver outen the pouch of a 40-pound channel catfish that I took in my net in May, and I reckon it ought to be worth a reward. The reward was paid and the Alton man carries his knife again, claiming that ever since its recovery it has added virtues as a mascot.—Forest and Stream.

SIR WILFRID LAWSON AND THE WAR.

In the House of Commons on Wednesday, July 25, Sir Wilfrid Lawson believed that the time had now arrived for the country, so to speak, to take stock and find out what the real advantage of this war policy had been. In doing that we must look at the origin of the war. As far as he could see, the only reason why we interfered with the Transvaal was because it considered it badly governed. We alleged that the franchise in that country wanted arranging, that its rulers were corrupt, and that the Outlanders were governed by an oligarchy. The last reason troubled us most tremendously. Mr Kruger, after all, was only and was carrying out a tory policy in South Africa. Why the Tory Government of this country could not stand Tory principles in South Africa he never could make out. (Hear, hear.) It seems extraordinary to him that we should set ourselves to settle these abuses. We talked about corruption in South Africa, but we seemed to forget that most of our time had been spent in giving public money to private individuals. (Opposition cheers.) Then as to the complaint of an oligarchy in South Africa, altho they professed to be legislators in that House the whole power was in the Upper Chamber. The Boers were attached to all the

A TYPICAL TORY,

ABUSES IN THE TRANSVAAL

just as honorable members opposite were attached to abuses in this country. He believed that if a set of foreigners were to come over here and sly they were going to put an end to the House of Lords there would not be a Radical or Democrat or Socialist who would not resist them the death, however much he might dislike the House of Lords. (Opposition laughter and cheers.) There was a great love of freedom, and a nation would rather be badly governed by itself than have foreigners to govern it. (Hear, hear.) The Boer army of not more than 50,000 men had been able to resist our army of 220,000. If

MILITARY GLORY

was anything more than a delusion and a snare then he thought all the people with the men who on the side of the weak had been fighting against the strong, the oppressed against the oppressor, the freeman against the tyrant. (Opposition cheers.) He supposed our policy was originally for defence, but now it was for extermination. That was the way our brave foes were spoken of in the press of this country. (Hear, hear.) How was it our people were rejoicing in the attempt to deprive these people of their independence? Some people of this country held to the view, "Our country, right or wrong," but he for one did not believe in it. The same people believed that

THIS COUNTRY MUST BE BACKED UP

whether it was doing the right thing or not. He knew that was the opinion of the man in the pulpit, the man in the street, the men in the newspaper office, and the men in the House of Commons. Many of his friends had adopted the same doctrine and said much as they hated war they must see this thing through. (Hear, hear, and laughter.) That doctrine was as false as it could be, and it struck at the root of all national religion, and all honor, truth and morality. This idea which he had illustrated was leading to the crushing out of the independence of the South African Republics. The Orange Free State had already been blotted out; he believed it was now called the Orange River Colony. The policy that had been adopted by this country was

THE POLICY OF THE PRESIDENT,

the Sidsteer, the burglar and the Boxer. (Laughter and cheers.) We had lost our position and prestige in the world in consequence. (Opposition cheers and ministerial cries of "No.") Then why was it we could not send anyone to China. (Oh, oh.) We could not do it. No one, he believed, had done more to bring about the present war than the right hon. gentleman the colonial Secretary. (Opposition cheers.) That right hon. gentleman stood out head and shoulders above his colleagues as he stood out head and shoulders above the Opposition. He might be a magnificent Colonial Secretary in the future but he was a most unfortunate one in the past. They were not to take any notice of the speeches of the Secretary for War. The man at the Colonial department

The Sensational Theatre.

The two great plagues which threaten American society to-day are the sensational press and the sensational theatre. These institutions are conducted upon the same principle, or lack of principle, and upon the same general lines. The theory upon which they act is that the great bulk of the public, the mass from which they draw the greater part of their revenue, is not only incapable of appreciating what is intellectual, instructive, wholesome, or inspiring in the printed page or in the drama, but is addicted naturally to what is morbid, abnormal, audacious, startling, or unclean, and will pay handsomely for the gratification of a depraved appetite. In other words, the scheme is to make money by pandering to vice, at the cost of the wholesale demoralization of the youth who are to be the backbone of the American nation of the future.

The policy is not only diabolical but fatuous. That it has proved temporarily successful can not be disputed. Journals which outrage truth, common sense, and decency still circulate by the million, and fortunes have been made by the villainous exploitation of wholly worthless and abominable plays. But evils of this kind, in the long run, were their own remedy. There is not, perhaps, any reason for expecting a sudden or speedy revival of public morality, but, sooner or later, dishes reeking of one particular spice pall upon the palate, and in most cases satistion is followed by disgust. The sensational newspaper, which is permitted to publish the most revolting details of the police court, can not exist for a wider variety of horror and impurity than the theatre, which, luckily, can not, for obvious reasons exceed certain limits, and is thus condemned to a damnable iteration which must, in time, become tiresome. These limits have been reached, or, at all events, very nearly reached, and already there are indications that more vulgarity, which is no longer a novelty, is losing its power to attract the crowd. In ninety-nine cases out of a hundred, the motive that fills the benches at a notoriously coarse play is curiosity, and when this has once been satisfied, or disappointed, as it is apt to be, it ceases to exist and can not easily be revived. For this reason, an epidemic of stage indecency such as that with which we have recently been afflicted, is seldom of long duration. Moreover, the theatres responsible for it will not readily rid themselves of the contamination. When they revert to the cleaner drama, they will find that that they have fallen lower in the scale of respectability and have alienated their former patrons without securing others to fill their places.—[Century.

Prevented a Tradgedy.

Timely information given Mrs George Long, of New Straitsville, Ohio, saved two lives. A frightful cough had long kept her awake at night. She had tried many remedies and doctors all steadily grew worse until urged to try Dr King's New Discovery. One bottle wholly cured her; and she writes, this marvelous medicine also cured Mr Long of a severe attack of pneumonia. FOLKLORE GLEANINGS.

Our pioneer ancestors were people of excellent ideas and some of their best philosophy appears in laconic expressions. An old Pocahontas philosopher seemed fond of giving this advice seventy-five years ago, which he had picked up somewhere, even if he had not formulated it himself.

Love towards many, trust in few, and always guard your secret.

Those who have been put to inconvenience by book borrowers, to say nothing about newspaper beats appreciate the pith of some homely rhymes that frequently were written on the first blank leaf or pasted on the cover.

Do not steal this book, my honest friend,
Or I fear the gallows will be your end.
God will say in the Judgment Day,
Where is that book you stole away?
You will say, I do not know,
And the Judge will say, Go down below.

From what we can learn about the pioneer babies, their parents were not very happy over children who could talk before learning to walk and run, being so very smart. In these times of mental precocity such children would be greatly admired as giving promise of becoming men and women able to keep up with the progressiveness of the outgoing and incoming centuries. Among the old people there was this melancholy voticination concerning such children as we would be proud of and happy over nowadays:

The child that talks before it goes,
Will have sorrow, pain, and woes.

There was a mystic significance attached to this that does not appear on the surface. Its deeper meaning was this, that if people let their ideas get too far ahead of what they may be able to perform, and get into places they are not fit for, sorrow, pain, and woe will be their portion sooner or later.

A Minister's Good Work.

"I had a severe attack of bilious colic, got a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, took two doses and entirely cured," says Rev A. A. Powers, of Emporia, Kan. "My neighbor across the street had been sick for over a week, had two or three bottles of medicine from the doctor. He used them two or three days without relief, then called in another doctor who treated him for some days and gave him no relief, so discharged him. I went over to see him next morning. He said his bowels were in an awful fix, that that it was almost bloody flux. I asked him if he had tried Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and he said 'No.' I went home and brought him my bottle and gave him one dose; told him to take another dose in fifteen or twenty minutes if he did not find relief, but he took no more and was entirely cured. I think it is the best medicine I have ever tried."

DEMOCRATIC COMMITTEE.

The County Committee met last Friday, and, after attending to routine business, made the following order: Ordered that the following sub-committees be appointed for the several voting precincts in the county:

Travelers Repose—R. B. Kerr, Amos Gillespie, W. J. Yeager.

Green Bank—S. B. Hannah, W. H. Hall, J. L. Hudson.

Dunmore—H. M. Moore, Dan Taylor, Kemp Sweeney.

Frost—G. M. Jordon, J. C. Harper, J. H. Lantz.

Hunterville—J. H. Doyle, C. L. Moore, Howard Barlow.

Marlinton—T. S. McNeel, S. B. Scott, Jr., W. B. King.

Linwood—A. C. L. Gatewood, J. C. Price, W. H. Brady.

Mill Point—C. M. Wallace, Isaac McNeel, Mathews Ruckman.

Academy—R. W. Hill, Dr. H. W. McNeel, T. A. Sydenstricker.

Labelle—T. A. Bradley, J. B. Grimes and A. C. Young.

The first named in the chairman. These sub-committees are expected to organize clubs, arrange for regular meetings once a week, supply speakers regular meetings, and in every respect see that the interests of the Democratic party are kept alive and advanced in their respective precincts.

It is enforced that the sub-committees organize and hold the first meeting of the Democratic clubs at their respective voting places September 8, at 7 o'clock p. m. It is suggested that the chairman of each of these sub-committees supply the club at its first meeting and each meeting thereafter with the best available speaker to address the persons assembled on the topics of the campaign.

Adjourned to meet Friday, September 7, at 1 p. m., at Court House.

There are fourteen anarchists under arrest at the detention prison of the bureau of immigration New York. They came from Italy and are charged with a conspiracy to assassinate the President. They have been arrested singly or in pairs from incoming steamers for the last ten days. It is said that lots were cast in Naples a short time ago, designating eleven Italians and three Austrians to murder the President. They were to strike individual blows at the President at the same time.

One of the questions of the hour is whether Holt did White up in joint debate or vice-versa. One would think that there is to be no rest until this is decided. We should have an umpire at all these jamborees to score points and award the laurel wreath.

The Democratic party is preparing to go into power just as every party has been so elevated. Not for any merit of its own, but because of the innate rotteness and monumental failures of the opposing party.

"OUR PLAIN DUTY."

The duty here referred to is what pertains to that portion of our citizenship who would love to see our county remain faithful to its sustained reputation in temperance circles as an anti-license county. After a controversy extending over fifty years, the people of Rockbridge County have declared for local option. During much of that time a very large proportion of the whiskies and brandies consumed by our Pocahontas people was manufactured in Rockbridge and in the limits of the district just gone dry.

Bath, Alleghany, and Augusta will be refuges for the manufacturers of whiskey, and unusual facilities will be offered to our people to supply themselves with their products soon as the railroad opens up.

The "plain duty" is just this: encourage the court to insist upon anti-license, and then see that the existing laws be enforced just as they stand on the pages of the Code. It would just astonish many of our readers to examine the Code and see how stringent and severe the penalties therein provided.

It Saved His Baby.

"My baby was terribly sick with diarrhoea, we were unable to cure him with the doctor's assistance and as a last resort we tried Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy," says J. H. Doak, of Williams, Ore. I am happy to say it gave him immediate relief and a complete cure. For sale by Elkins says that the Democratic party have given up hope of carrying the State, but are concentrating their efforts to gain the legislature and elect county tickets If he is right in this regard the hope department should be notified that it has very little to do with the counting and casting of votes.

WANTED.

Everybody to read and an agent in every town to sell the new West Virginia edition of The Pittsburg Dispatch containing interesting local news from the entire West Virginia field. Read what your neighbors are doing and get a metropolitan newspaper at the same time.

NEW HOPE

Well, Mr Editor: We are having extremely hot and dry weather and we are anxiously waiting and longing for a nice rain.

Since our last writing the hand of the death angel has been in our midst cutting down old and young. Mrs Elizabeth Clark and Miss Elizabeth Collins and infant son of John Drumheller were the latest victims near us.

Rev J. H. Waugh, D. D., died at his home in Harrisonburg August 10th in the 87th year of his age. He was at one time Presiding Elder of the Lewisburg District.

Infant twin children of Jacob Early departed this life within one week of each other.

There is a great deal of sickness among the little ones, and we often wonder why the afflicting hand of Providence rests so heavily upon the innocent and helpless.

The writer attended the very sad funeral of William L. Powell, July 23. He had been to see his sweetheart and left her home about 11 o'clock, and was drowned in Middle River about one half mile from her home. It was a very sad warning for all to be ready, for "in the hour we think not the Son of Man cometh."

Farmers are trying to plow for their fall crops, but it is so dry that it is very difficult.

We wish the good people of old Pocahontas would gather a few gallons of the nice blackberries that grow on the mountains and devote the price thereof for the benefit of the starving in India. Just think how terribly sad for a little girl to be sold for 75 cents to keep it from starvation, as many are sold. God arouse the good people of every land and country to do something, be it ever so small, for their relief.

Rev J. H. Vandevender preached in the new Presbyterian church at New Hope last Sunday night to a very good congregation.

Lawn parties in every community are being held for the benefit of churches and India relief funds.

The writer has been on the sick list for some time and requests the prayers of God's people that grace may be given for this and all of earth's trials. God bless the dear people of Pocahontas.

LITTLE ME.

If you have a baby in the house you will wish to know the best way to check any unusual looseness of the bowels so common in small children. O. P. M. Holiday, of Deming, Ind., who has an eleven month's old baby says: "Through the months of July and August our baby was teething and took a running off of the bowels and sickness of the stomach. His bowels would move five to eight times a day. I had a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy in the house and gave him four drops in a teaspoonful of water and he got better at once.

COMMISSIONER'S SALE.

Pursuant to a decree of the Circuit Court of Pocahontas County, West Virginia, made in a cause therein pending on the 21st day of June, 1900, in the chancery cause of John A. Gum vs G. W. Waid and others, the undersigned special commissioners will on the first day of the circuit court of said county, at the front door of the court house of said county, proceed to sell at public auction to the highest bidder the life interest of the said G. W. Waid in a tract of sixty acres more or less, situated on the North Fork of Anthony's Creek in said county, it being the same land of which Mary Wade died seized and possessed. The land is that upon which the said G. W. Waid now resides, and comprises a valuable farm having on it good improvable land and suitable buildings.

Tuesday, October 2, 1900,

Terms of Sale—So much cash in hand as will pay costs of suit and expenses of sale, and the residue up on a credit of six months, the purchaser executing his bond with good personal security, the title to be retained as ultimate security.

H. S. RUCKER,
ANDREW PRICE,
Special Commissioners.

I, J. H. Patterson, clerk of the circuit court of Pocahontas County, do certify that Andrew Price, one of the special commissioners named above, has given bond as required by said decree.

Singing and preaching services at Brown's Creek were well attended Sabbath afternoon. "Choice Selections," a music book issued by Rosebush, Kieffer & Co., Dayton, Va., was used. For the purpose intended no better book is on the market.

Wm. H. Reversomb died near Letcher, Bath County, August 9, 1900, nearly 76 years of age, after a lingering illness. For more than a half century he has been a prominent citizen, sheriff, member of the legislature and prosperous farmer The local press gives this testimony: "Bath County contained no gentleman more honorable and upright, and none of its citizens have been of more service to the county than he." His wife, a daughter of the late Major Beirne survives him. G. A. Reversomb, commonwealth attorney for Alleghany County, is his son.

An interesting personal letter has been received from Alvin E. Ewing, Grand Rapids, Michigan. Mr Ewing desires information about William Ewing and James Ewing and "Indian" John Ewing the father of Wm. Ewing. The two first named formerly resided near Marlinton. A. E. Ewing is a descendant of Thomas McNeel of Virginia and is the desirous of all the information he can gather about the families of Buckeye. He is the secretary of the Ewing Genealogical Association of Michigan. The last meeting of this society was held a week or so ago in Kingsley county, Michigan.

Roads by Taxation.

There will be petitions presented to have the alternate system of keeping roads in repair submitted by the county and by several of the districts by their own particular district. If it carries in the Levels district at all it will be by the district. What then if the rest of the county would vote in the county as a whole. To save confusion and litigation it were better to have each district have it submitted by the district.

We have always heretofore opposed this law, owing to the fact that it generally takes two dollars of public money to do one dollars work, and because there is too much tax levied already. Everything is taxed directly. We are keeping a vast army of officials to do nothing.

But whether it is advisable or not to work the roads of the county by taxation the fact remains that the roads of the county have suffered so and are in such a bad state of repair that this county has eventually decided to try a change and will probably have a big levy next year.

As near as we have been able to judge the amount generally expended by a district on its roads under this system ranges very close to its public school tax.

The Lumber Industry.

The lumber camps seem to be getting fairly under way near Driscol and Huntersville. Dennings Camp No. 3 is on B. F. Fleshman's land near Driscol. F Lester is clerking; post office, Driscol.

Jake Cary's, Camp No 2, is near Friel's; J. H. Doyle clerking; post office, Huntersville.

James Watson is running a cutting crew in the vicinity of Camp No 2.

Smith & Whiting, Camp No 1, is located at the fording of Douthards Creek, near Driscol, in charge of Robert Mason. J. Willis Baxter is clerking; post office, Driscol.

There has been quite a number of casualities at Camp No 1 during the past fortnight. Howard McElwee got a leg broken working on the slide. His place was taken by Romsey Cackley and he was likewise injured by having a limb fractured.

Attached to Camp No 1, Lonnie Perkins, of Locust, and Lawrence Powell, of Ronceverte, teamsters, are also disabled with broken legs. This surpasses all previous records.

Col Dan O'Connel is anxiously waiting for a tide in the River, as the paper mill at Covington is about through with the material taken down last spring.

Isaac Barlow has the beef contract for the logging camps this season. He has just completed a well appointed slaughter shop. He can have the beef on the wagon in thirty minutes after the animal is bled.

Coal & Iron Railway Company to the Mercantile Trust and Deposit Company, of Baltimore, Trustee. To secure the holders of bonds, to be issued in denominations of $1000 each. That part of the railroad from Elkins to the Forks of Greenbrier River is conveyed.

The deed consists of 19 pages of closely printed matter. It is signed by H. G. Davis, president of the Coal & Iron Railway. It bears $500 in revenue stamps.

Shooting Affray.

Last Sunday Clinton Mann and Porter Mann, brothers, were walking down the grade opposite the Levels when they met two Italian laborers Carlos Nickols and George Raffi. The Italians had been to the tunnel and were evidently full of whiskey. They spoke to the Mann brother in broken English, inviting them to take a drink they think. They refused and were passing by when Nickols drew a pistol, shooting Porter Mann in the back, the lodging in his body inflicting a dangerous and possible fatal wound.

Clinton Mann then with almost incredible swiftness got stones and though the Italians fired on him a number of times he caused them to run.

The Italians were arrested Monday afternoon, being found to the house at Wash Spencer's, where they boarded.

They were given a preliminary hearing, at which the prisoners denied having any pistols though some of their witnesses who were in hearing stated that a number of shots were fired. They were committed to jail at this place Tuesday.

COMMISSIONER'S SALE.

Pursuant to a decree of sale rendered in the chancery cause of J. Ella Cameron vs Janie M. Cameron and others pending in the Circuit Court of Pocahontas County, West Virginia, at the October Term 1899, the undersigned special commissioner will on

Tuesday, October 4, 1900,

at the front door of the court house of Pocahontas county proceed to sell at public auction to the highest bidder the tract of 297 acres of land on Dry Branch of Elk River in Pocahontas County, West Virginia, it being the same land conveyed by George H. Cameron to W. A. Bratton, Trustee, by deed dated September 13, 1895, and of record in the clerk's office of the county court of Pocahontas County, in deed book No 26, page 225, to which deed reference is here made for a more particular description of said land. Said tract is situated in a fine grazing section of Pocahontas County and has on it fine grass land, the balance being finely timbered, the whole constituting a very desirable property.

Terms of Sale: Cash.

W. A. BRATTON, Special Commissioner.

I, J. H. Patterson, Clerk of the Circuit Court of Pocahontas County do certify that W. A. Bratton, the special commissioner above named, has executed bond as required by said decree.

WHAT HE WANTS.

Man wants but little here below, and that's just what he gets.
And he collars mighty little of that, unless he watches his nets;
So I going to ask the President that will be by-and-bye,
Or a little Civil Service sib that I've glimpsed with my eye.

I'd like to serve my country, in lands beyond the sea,
For a place in the Diplomatic Corps will just about fit me:
I know I'm the man—I admit it—I do not hesitate—
Just calculated to adorn a first-class consulate.

I don't care where they send me: Italy, France, or Spain,
To Germany's fey mountains or Egypt's golden plain,
I only make one condition one's as good as a few—
I want a place with plenty of space and nothing at all to do.

TRUE EDUCATION.

One of the cheering features of the present era is the awakening on the subject of what constitutes a real education.

More than forty years ago Herbert Spencer asked this common sense question: "What knowledge is of most worth?" Had it been a clap of thunder from a cloudless sky it could not have been more startling to the educational world in its influences. This plain reasonable question and its implication dismayed the scholars and teachers of that period in England and the United States. It seems that previously to the appearance of this question but few or none of the leading educators had ever entertained the idea that any knowledge had any worth whatever, the value of higher education being mainly that of class distinction, merely making out of its possessor as a person above the common people. The Proper Thing to do for an education was prescribed by Traditional Authority, which was the highest authority known by the average Englishman and his counterpart, the average American. The authority that has bestowed and retains preference for the blessings of royalty, of nobility and of ecclesiasticism.

Mr Spencer in defiance of this seemingly impregnable power of traditional authority insisted that knowledge may have intrinsic power. That it was a delusive snare to value higher education merely for the purpose of wearing its badges. One the pass badge conveying social prestige merely, the other the honor badge guaranteeing intellectual precedence as no one could wear the honor badge without the severest competitive contests. Whether these severe struggles on the part of the first honor students secured anything of value for themselves or for any one else but few persons seemed to have given themselves any concern to inquire. In their opinion the honor of wrangling was its own reward.

It is hard to realize what courage it required for Mr Spencer to persevere in the question: "What knowledge is of most worth." For the question implied that the value of some knowledge is greater than the knowledge of some other.

It was moreover implied as life is short and vital forces limited useful knowledge should have preference over the less useful, the real over the conventional, the effective over the ornamental.

By common consent it now seems to be agreed as social function or set is so important as education, the acquisition of knowledge, for to the schools of the present the history, present, social and political, of the future is in a large part vitally entrusted. Come specific as good living as democratic as good schools, and no nation is for long as nations or citizens.

To answer the question quoted from reformer L. What knowledge is of most worth? Mr Spencer classified as the order of their importance the leading kinds of knowledge that make up human life and attempted from this

First—Those activities which by securing the preservation of life directly minister to self-preservation.

Second—Those activities which by securing the necessities of life indirectly minister to self-preservation.

Third—Those activities which have for their end the rearing and discipline of offspring.

Fourth—Those activities which are involved in the maintenance of proper social and political relations.

Fifth—Those miscellaneous activities which make up the leisure part of life, devoted to the gratification of the tastes and feelings.

This arrangement is something like the right order of subordination that the activities that make up human life hold to each other. As to the first it is manifest that without personal sanity and safety there can be no care exercised for others.

Moreover it is evident that the development of the family precedes that of the government or state. Then too it must appear that the performance of personal, individual duties has, or ought to have, the first claim over the enjoyment of art and the pursuit of the pleasures of leisure. Then again it is evident that "acquirement of any kind has two values,—value as knowledge and value as discipline," and both of these values must be considered in estimating their final influence on conduct.

The writer would like to devote an article to each of these kinds of activities, for the readers of this paper, so to put them in line with educational reforms now evolving and enable the younger people to have some idea of the kind of knowledge most needed by them in their respective spheres of effort in working out a success in life. —W. T. P.

He Owes His Life to the Forethought of a Companion.

While on camping trip in Webster county Mr. S. L. Stump of Normantown, W. Va had a severe attack of bloody flux. He says I firmly believe that I owe my life to the fore thought of one of the company who had taken along a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy." Moral—Procure a bottle of this remedy before leaving home. It cannot be obtained when on a hunting, fishing or prospecting trip. Neither can it be obtained while on board the cars or steam ship, and at such times and places it is mostly likely to be needed. The safe way is to have it with you. Thousands of travelers never leave home on a journey without it.

THE CONGRESSIONAL LIBRARY.

[CONCLUDED.]

In the article last week an attempt was made at giving a brief history of the Library, as well as a short description of the exterior of the building, and it was the intention then to conclude by giving a description of the various apartments of the interior in detail, but an attempt at writing has proven this impossible on account of the great length of the article necessary.

Descriptions of such a building, written by those who are versed in everything pertaining to art, are failures because the many little things clustered around as ornaments to the central designs must be omitted, and as I am neither art critic nor writer, my effort will come far short of a description of the Library.

As the names of the different paintings alone would fill an ordinary newspaper, it is evident that nothing can be mentioned except the things of chief interest to a vis tor. The reader will remember that he has approached the building from the west, so that when we pass through the bronze doors where we stopped last week, we find ourselves in the north is on the left, south on the right, and directly in front is east. The West Front which we have entered is divided into five great rooms; the entrance hall first, beyond it the staircase hall, while flanking at the three sides are the North, East, and South Corridors.

As the entrance hall is where the visitor usually receives his first impressions of the Library's grandeur it will be taken first. It is *built almost entirely from snow-*white Italian marble and has a height of about seventy-five feet. The arched ceiling is in stucco, that is small squares of marble or other materials painted in a variety of shades are set in a sort of plaster paste and then smoothed down and finished with some glis*tening composition resembling* varnish. This stucco work is trimmed and interlaced with gold, making a very beautiful combination of colors. The flooring is of Italian marble cut in various shapes and drawn together with bands of brown Tennessee marble and yellow mosaic. The only distinction I could detect between "stucco" and "mosaic" is that "stucco" applies to the ceiling only. This may not agree with authority, but so far as I could see there is no difference, unless it be that "mosaic" is the more smoothly finished. The principal work of art in this room is by Herbert Adams, and is a representation in marble of two Minervas, one of War, the other of Peace. These figures are about three feet in height, and from their position against the eastern wall are the first things to confront a visitor upon entering the building. From this hall you will enter the Stair Case Hall.

The sculptures and floor designs are the principal ornaments of *this hall. The floor is set in geo*metrical figures made from marble of various hues, and exactly in the centre a great brass sun is imbedded, while surrounding it at a distance are set the signs of the zodiac, also in polished brass.

The sculptural decoration of this room was allotted to Phillip Martiny, and its execution does not detract from his fame. From the numerous carvings, his staircase figures might be selected, not on account of heroic size, but because of the intricacy of design and delicate finish.

Beginning with the bridal stork at the foot of the stairs on either side, he follows along the railing with a series of figures representing ladies engaged in the various pursuits of life, and are shown to number. The ceiling of the hall is in harmony with the richness of the decorations, being finished in gold and azure, together with some paintings by F. C. Martin, representing seasons carrying fruits, several instruments and the and brushes, and so forth. By giving proper attention the visitor can easily determine the occupation or phase of life for which each genius is the representative.

The Corridors

are in keeping with the general grandeur, but space forbids mention of anything except the greatest of a number of paintings in each corridor. In the north corridor "The Family," by Pierce, is a masterpiece, but in the southern corridor Walker has matched it with his painting "Lyric Poetry." There are dozens of minor but not less elegant paintings by the same artists, carrying out the idea introduced by the larger painting.

In the eastern corridor John Alexander has executed six paintings under one title, "The Evolution of the Book." The first picture shows a group of primeval men standing by the seashore. They have just finished building a little monu*ment or cairn of stone.* The student is left with his imagination to fix the time and circumstances. Perhaps it was in the dawning of human history when these nude ancestors poured down from the Hindoo Koosh, and as the sun was setting this band of pioneers into an unpeopled world came down to and for the first time beheld the ocean. Filled with awe they gazed awhile and then fell to work building the heap of stones as a monument to their achievement and as a message to the future.

Following up with equally expressive paintings, the series is finished by "The Printing Press," showing Guttenburg reading the first proof taken from the first printing press. As you gaze at the works they seem to fade and instead of a painting you see the history of a world.

In trying to glean something akin to an impression as to the general appearance of a hall in which paintings are used as dec*orations, the reader must not sup*pose that those works of art, valued at many thousand dollars, are hung in a frame like a map of Cuba, but must consider them as being a part of the wall. They are high enough to be beyond reach, and are either painted on the walls, or the canvas is pasted with such nicety as to be beyond detection. Both methods are used in fixing such works as a permanent part of a building's decoration. In the Library, generally the canvas is attached to the wall, while in the Capitol the painting was done on the wall itself. Space will not admit of further description of the smaller rooms, and in concluding the and the Rotunda will be taken up. This apartment is exactly in the centre of the building and is directly under the dome. The rooms described are simply approaches to the Reading Room, and the en*tire building may be said to be* built with the one purpose of ornamenting this single apartment. It is here that the entire scheme of architecture, sculpture, and painting is brought together and climaxed.

The Reading Room is octagonal and from floor to centre of dome is about one hundred seventy-five feet. The Rotunda structure is supported by eight great pillars. These pillars are made from marble brought from Numidia, Africa, and are forty five feet high. Numidia marble is mottled in yellow and red and imparts a gorgeous and rich appearance to the Rotunda. These pillars are screened with a set of fringe work from green, brown, and mottled marble.

At the top of the first set of piers a gallery is made to project over the reading room so that that a visitor can walk around the entire circuit and admire the work without disturbing those who may be reading at the room below.

From the floor to the bottom of top of dome is a cluster of all Sciences of America's great gifts of intelligence and patriotism combined. Nowhere in the world is there to be found such a collection of statuary as can be seen at the top of the pillars in the best conception. This consists of twenty five figures and statues. Eight figures representing the avenues of progress; sixteen statues representing those who are re*cognized as leaders along each* avenue. By the number of statues being double that of the figures, each figures is accompanied by two statues. The figures are flanked by the statues, one on either side and slightly lower. They are arranged as follows: Commerce, Columbus and Fulton; History, Herodotus and Gibbon; Art, Angelo and Bethoven; Philosophy, Plato and Bacon; Poetry, Homer and Shakespeare; Law, Solon and Kent; Science, Newton and Joseph Henry. To any one who knows anything of history, the relation of the statues to the figures above is very apparent.

Above this famous gallery are a number of paintings by Blashfield. As the dome is the centre of the entire scheme it is to be supposed that the art display is varied and of rare execution. To describe in detail is impossible.

The lighting of the Rotunda is an object. By day, light is received through the tinted windows in the dome, but at night when the lights are turned on as when the scene is most glittering. The stucco ceilings are set with large golden flowets in the centre of which is placed an electric light. In one cluster are more than three hundred lights and in the rotunda alone the electric lights equal forty thousand candle power. There *are halls and corridors by the doz*en, all rich in painting and sculpture, that are not mentioned, but we will leave them and take up the Book Stacks.

When a great number of books *are brought together in one build*ing it is necessary that they be arranged so as to allow each book to be within easy reach. Were they not so arranged it would be impossible to secure a book for reference when wanted. With the reading room in the centre, the book stacks, three in number, loaf out to the north, east, and south. Each stack is about one hundred and ten feet in length, with a height and width of sixty five and forty-five feet. This space is pat*titioned with bookcases, with just* space enough between the cases to permit the attendants to walk along the tiers and secure the books. The stacks are also divided by floors, seven in number, which puts every book in reach of any one who wishes to get it. The space thus secured for the storing of books amounts to several acres.

In a separate apartment, where visitors may examine, is a collection of books famous for age and associations. Among them may be seen Washington's family Bible a copy of the first edition of Shakespeare, the original of the famous Lancaster Treaty, showing the Indian Totem's signature, the Articles of Confederation between the thirteen Colonies, and many thousand other very valuable, and to an American very sacred things. This collection alone would interest a visitor an entire day, as the many curiosities could not be examined in less than that time.

Trusting that in the articles on the Congressional Library I have interested some reader of the Times, I am, very truly

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy a Great Favorite

The soothing and healing properties of this remedy, its pleasant taste and prompt and permanent cures have made it a great favorite with people everywhere. It is especially prized by mothers of small children for colds, croup and whooping cough as it always affords quick relief, and as it contains no opium or other harmful drug, it may be given as confidently to babe as to an adult.

Life in the West.

Iowa is certainly the place for "the man with the hoe" or that other implement of which the hoe was the ancestor—the two-horse cultivator; for the day is long past with most other implements for which man himself furnished the motive power. Even the vegetable garden is planted out in the field where the farmer can run through it with his corn plow. Everything here is done with the object of compassing the greatest possible amount of everything that comes in the line of farm product, and one has an object lesson continually in view of what Herbert Spencer meant by "high pressure in life" in America; for the rush begins just as early in the spring as conditions will admit, and continues, Sundays often not excepted, until far into December. The farmer will often be out picking corn while the stars are shining, and come in by the same light with all his chores to do after night, and chores like the other business of the farm is a big thing.

"Though we might sit by our lamp at home and read the figures representing the annual crop of small grain in Iowa, yet mere figures give little idea, and one needs to ride over the country and see the vast stretch of land sewed to *barley and oats, and hear the cease*less click, click of the reapers to realize much about it.

"It would be interesting if it were possible to get something like a correct estimate of the barley *raised every year in the Mississip*pi Valley, but though the quantity is so great it is of little real use, for almost every bushel of it, except what the farmer keeps for seed, goes to the breweries.

"Barley ripens perhaps ten days earlier than oats, and threshing begins almost as soon as the binder gets through. Stacking is getting to be a thing of the past, and when the big traction engine, with the big separator in tow, pulls into a grain field the great hay racks which are used in getting the sheaves to the thresher come thronging from every direction. There has been two, and part of the time three, of these threshers, with a capacity of four to five thousand bushels a day, within a radius of not more than eight miles since the 16th of July and the oats crop is mostly in the straw yet.

"One cannot live long in Iowa without learning the great importance of the horse for the farmer spends the greater part of his waking moments with the lines in his hands. Nobody walks here, few ride on horseback, and driving a single horse is much less common than in Randolph. Everywhere the horse is the farmer's inseparable companion. It would seem that they must fare hard indeed, but as a matter of fact their appearance is in keeping with other things here, and teams that have scarcely been idle since the first of March look sleek and contented as one could wish to see. Though always busy, horses are not pressed to the best of their strength, as is too often the case, so that horses which their owners would tell you have been at hard work all summer scarcely show a mark of the harness.

"The weather has been quite warm here for more than two weeks, so hot that it makes one long for the cucumbers of Egypt, or of not the cucumbers the shady slopes and cool river banks of old Randolph.

"If this is not of sufficient interest for publication I would take it as a kindness if the editor would just say that some interesting correspondence was crowded out."

Cured of Chronic Diarrhoea After Thirty Years of Suffering.

"I suffered for thirty years with diarrhoea and dysentery. I was most of the time confined to my bed. I was treated by the best physicians in Memphis, Tenn., as well as by physicians at Cass, Miss. I had spent as much as I had gotten, and all hopes of recovery. I was so broken in flesh the effect of the disease that I could do no kind of labor. I read of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, and concluded to take it. I am pleased to say that the result was that I was entirely cured after taking a few bottles. I am now a well man and can do a hard day's work. I can recommend this remedy to all who suffer as I did." For sale by H. R. Echols, Marlinton; Barlow and Moore, Fitray; Alex Barlow, Huntersville; D. T. McNeel, Buckeye; S. F. Hyer, Falling Springs, W. Va.

For many years physicians considered the cause of an appendicitis attack a mystery, but of late it is generally understood that the trouble is caused by the retention in the appendix of undigested matter which ferments and produces inflammation. Foods that are slow of digestion, such as meats, should be eaten sparingly by those subject to appendicitis, and fruits and vegetables that are laxative in their effect should be freely used. Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets are especially valuable in cases of appendicitis, as they promote easy digestion and a mild laxative effect. For sale by H. R. The paper upon which this issue is printed was made from Pocahontas spruce by the West Virginia Pulp and Paper Company at its mills at Covington, Va. The paper was presented to this newspaper by Junior Moore, Attorney for the Company. The quality of the paper is much better than that used by newspapers, being that used for fine books and magazines. This company manufactures only high grade papers.

The general census returns promise to be very interesting because of the surprising things likely to be revealed. One item is the fact that the Calico States is the only country in the world that has three cities of more than a million people each. Those cities are New York, Philadelphia and Chicago. Chicago now ranks next to London, Paris, Berlin, Vienna, Paris and St. Petersburg have such a million or more each.

MARLIOG ON, W. VA.

AN ADDRESS

To the Voters of West Virginia.

Four years ago the Democratic party, after giving the State a quarter of a century of wise, able and honest administration, met defeat at the polls, and the whole machinery of the State government was placed in the hands of the Republicans. The causes leading up to this change were various. A general spirit of discontent, brought about by the financial crisis which followed the administration of President Harrison, pervaded many circles all over the country, and brought about the feeling that change might in some way be beneficial. The people had forgotten the shameful record of Republicanism in West Virginia, or else thought the Republicans of the present day were more worthy of trust than were those of '56 to '71. Working upon these feelings and making the most binding promises of honesty and fairness, a sentiment was brought about which, aided by the stupendous frauds at the polls, enabled the Republicans to elect the first administration it had elected in the State since 1863. Again a State election is approaching, and again the two parties stand face to face before the people, inviting their trust and asking their suffrages. This time, however, the Republicans cannot base their claims for support upon promises easily broken, but must stand or fall by the record which for the last four years they have been writing in the affairs of the State. And against this record of four years the Democratic party places its record of 25 years, and asks the honest voter to examine both and choose fairly between the two. Having stood the test of the most searching examination throughout numerous campaigns, making up the history of the State's progress and prosperity for more than a generation, when every act was open to the closest scrutiny, until it is so familiar to the voter as the story of his own business, the record of the Democratic party needs no discussion here, and we turn to the acts and deeds of the last four years to find if it has worthily discharged the obligations which it undertook with the people, and if it is worthy, to be continued in their confidence and perpetuated in power.

The Usurpation of Power.

The usurpation by the Republican party of power not given by the Constitution has been so bold and unscrupulous as to startle those who believe in constitutional government. It has, for the purpose of securing control of the Legislature, unseated Democrats who were legally elected, suspended others whose rights to seats were as indisputable as to be beyond attack, putting in their places Republicans who were not entitled thereto, and keeping in Republicans who had forfeited their rights as members. In 1896, H. W. Shaffer, Democrat, and H. C. Getzendanner, Republican, were opposing candidates for the Senate from the Tri-county district. When the votes were counted it was found that Shaffer had received 88 more votes than Getzendanner. Getzendanner gave notice of contest, but took no evidence to establish his claim to the seat and the certificate of election was given to Shaffer. When the Legislature met, in January, 1897, Shaffer was sworn in and took the seat. Then appeared Getzendanner with a petition which set his allegations and asking to claim to the seat. The petition was presented on Saturday, January 16, and on that day referred to the committee on privileges and elections, with instructions to report as soon as possible. On Wednesday, January 20, four days later, the committee made two reports, the Republican majority reporting without any evidence before them, Getzendanner, the Democratic minority in favor of allowing Shaffer to hold the seat to which he had been elected by the people.

A Thin Pretext.

The pretext upon which the Republican members advised the unseating of Shaffer was that he had received 88 votes cast upon the ballots of the National Democratic party, which, they claimed, should not have been counted for him. The minority report showed that the 88 National Democratic votes were legally cast for Shaffer, and that they were properly counted for him. Mr. Shaffer has been made the nominee of the National Democratic party by means of the nominating papers required by law, signed by the proper proportion of voters, and duly filed with the clerk of the Circuit Court of Jefferson county, who properly notified the clerks of the Circuit Courts of Berkeley and Morgan counties. Acting upon this notice the commissioners printed the name of Mr. Shaffer upon the National Democratic ballots as the law requires. There was no attack made upon the right of any man who cast his vote for Shaffer to vote in the election, the entire case for Getzendanner resting upon Shaffer's right to have counted for him the votes cast for him upon the National Democratic ballots. The same day upon which the reports were made to the senate Mr. Farr, a Republican member, moved that the report of the majority, with the accompanying resolution to seat Getzendanner, be taken up for immediate consideration. He was afraid to give Senators time to think the matter over for fear there would be found enough honest men on the Republican side to prevent the outrage recommended by the Republican majority of the committee from being consummated. But the dose was too nauseous for even the strong Republican stomach, and three Republicans, Senators Fast, Gramm and Young, voting with the five Democrats present and voting, the motion failed to receive two-thirds of those present and voting, and the resolution had to go over one day under the rules. The next day, however, the infamy reached consummation, and the resolution to turn out the Democratic Senator who had been elected and to put in the Republican who had not been elected was adopted. Senator Gramm, who had voted against immediate consideration, had been stiffened up in the meantime, and voted with the majority to perpetuate the wrong. Senator Fast, desiring to have the appearance of decency, though lacking the courage to earn it, dodged the roll call and did not vote. Senator U. G. Young, the one Republican who stood firm for the right, and refused to prostitute his honor for the sake of gaining a partisan advantage, both voted and spoke against the resolution. But even with the large majority which the Republicans had in the Senate, the leaders were afraid to let the matter be discussed fully in the Senate and they invoked the aid of the previous question to cut off debate, forcing their infamous action through in silence and in shame.

More About Getzendanner.

But the Senate of West Virginia was not through using Mr. Getzendanner as an instrument of outrage upon the people when it got him seated in 1897. In 1898 the war with Spain came on, and Mr. Getzendanner accepted a commission as captain of volunteers in a West Virginia regiment. There is no law in force in the United States of the State that is more plain or unmistakable than that no member of the Legislature shall, while he is still a member, hold any other lucrative office under the State or National government. Knowing this to be the law, when the two years of 1898 came around, the Democrats of the Thirteenth senatorial district nominated and elected Mr. Wm. Campbell to succeed Getzendanner in the body to which he had been elevated by fraud, and from which he had resigned by the act of accepting a captaincy in the army. But when Mr. Campbell appeared at the bar of the Senate, in January, 1899, and asked to be sworn in, he found Getzendanner there claiming the seat, and he found a Republican majority there ready to declare Getzendanner entitled to it. Getzendanner's job as a soldier having run out, he concluded he would return to his ancient calling of statesman, and having been seated in the first instance without the formality of a previous election, he decided this time to not even go through the motions. If his Republican brethren could make him a member when he had a minority vote in 1897, they could just as well make him a member in 1899 without his having any vote at all. And so they did, Mr. Campbell, duly elected and accredited, being kept out, and Mr. Getzendanner, never elected and never accredited, being again put in.

Also Pierson.

E. G. Pierson was elected to the Senate from the Ninth Senatorial district in 1896, and in 1898 accepted a lieutenancy in the army. Mr. A. J. Stephenson was elected to succeed him, but as Pierson's army job expired before the Senate met in 1899, he also decided to go back to the legislative business, and, as in the case of Getzendanner, the Senate decided that a resignation did not count in the case of a Republican whose vote was needed in the election of a United States Senator, and Mr. Pierson was also declared entitled to his seat.

It is respectfully submitted to the people that if such acts as these are allowed to go unrebuked the day of constitutional government in West Virginia has passed away, and the holding of elections is a farce that may well be done away with. A people who think themselves free, and who are yet deprived of their liberties, are suffering the most dangerous kind of slavery, for before they can be aroused to the point of throwing off the yoke of oppression they must first be awakened to a realization of the fact that they are wearing such a yoke. How are they to govern themselves if their votes when cast are not to be counted? How are they to determine who are constitutional officers except by the Constitution? And of what value is the Constitution in determining such things if its plain provisions are to be deliberately set aside at the will and to suit the pleasure of the Republican party? Getzendanner, having been twice allowed to usurp a seat in the Senate to which he was not entitled, may well think himself entitled to sit in the next Senate on the strength of the claim that having once held the seat, and having no desire to give it up, nobody has a right to take it away from him. The fact that the term for which he claimed the seat in the first instance has ended, need cut no figure with Getzendanner, and probably will not, if by the force of fraud and the grace of the Secretary of State the prima facie majority in the next Senate is with the Republicans. All he will need to do will be to appear at the bar of the Senate and say that he wants to be perpetuated in the possession of the seat into which he was put by fraud and in which he kept by force, and a subservient Republican majority, if the majority, by any incalculable misfortune, or miscounting, should be on that side, will readily grant him his request. A Republican majority can refuse Getzendanner nothing that he asks, and the records of the Senate show that he is not at all backward about asking. Thus, though Getzendanner is not a candidate for election (he could not be for re-election) we will most likely see him at the Capitol next winter ready to offer himself for membership in case the Republican Secretary of State succeeds in manufacturing a prima facie Republican majority.

The Outrages of 1899.

After the revolutionary proceedings of 1897 the outrages of the session of 1899 easily followed. Finding that the Democrats had elected to the House a majority large enough to overcome on joint ballot the Republican majority in the Senate, and with a view to contest the election of a United States senator, the Republican secretary of state, who Charters were issued yesterday to is also the chairman of the Republican State executive committee, put on the roll of members of the House, which it is his duty to make out, the names of a number of Republicans who were not elected, in place of the names of Democrats who were elected, in the hope of making up a false majority, and thus securing to his party friends the control of that body. The Republican Governor also took a hand, going so far as to wire to a defeated Republican candidate in Marion county to be sure to make a contest, as it was necessary for the success of the party, and assuring him that the expense would not fall upon him, but would be borne by somebody else. When the Legislature assembled it was found that the Republicans still lacked enough votes to control the joint assembly, and they immediately set about hatching up a scheme by which the desired majority could be secured.

The Kidd Case.

Among the newly-elected senators was Hon. R. F. Kidd, of the Fourth district, a Democrat, and in casting about for some Democrat of whom to make a victim, the Republican eye fell upon him as a good subject. Not that they did not like Mr. Kidd, or that they thought his title to a seat less strong than that of any other newly-elected Democrat, but just that they needed a seat held by some Democrat, and happened to think of him. So his election was attacked, he was thrown out, after being sworn in and seated, and one Morris, a resident of the Fourth district, indeed, but having no other claim to the seat, was seated in his place. This took place on January 23, 1899; on January 25, 1899, the election for United States senator was held and N. B. Scott, Republican machine candidate, was declared elected; on February 7, 1899, Senator Kidd was allowed to resume his seat, without being sworn in again, and he drew his pay as a senator from the first day of the session to its close. No evidence was taken in his case during the time of his suspension, and no Republican raised an objection against his being seated. The United States Senator had been elected meantime, and the urgent need for a Republican majority having passed, the Republicans were pleased to return for the time being to the path of decency.

The Dent-Brohard Case.

In 1898 W. R. D. Dent and H. F. Brohard were candidates for the House of Delegates in Taylor county, the former a Democrat, the ..... a Republican. The returns made by the election officers showed that Mr. Brohard received a majority of 81 votes, but before the result was declared by the commissioners Dent demanded a recount, which, being accorded him, showed that he had received 37 more votes than Brohard. There was a vacancy in the board of commissioners of the county, leaving but two members, and these members caused the record of the recount to be spread upon the record book, and a certificate to be issued to Dent, which one of the commissioners signed. The other commissioner refused to sign the record or to sign Dent's certificate, but at a later day, at the instance and direction of A. B. White, Republican candidate for Governor, had the record made up according to the returns of the precinct election officers, and caused a certificate to be issued to Brohard, which he signed. Both certificates were sent to the secretary of state, who, being a Republican, and chairman of the State executive committee, placed Brohard's name upon the roll of members of the House. Dent instituted contest proceedings, and the House, having a Democratic majority, decided that neither claimant having a certificate properly signed by two commissioners, neither had a prima facie right to the seat, and sent a committee to make a recount of the ballots, and determine who had the legal title. The committee went to Grafton, recounted the ballots, and found that Dent had a majority of 34. The report, together with a resolution to seat Dent, was made to the House on January 24, and the House could easily have proceeded to pass the resolution and seat Dent in time to make his vote available in the election of a United States Senator. But the Republican managers, seeing that the Democrats would have a majority on joint ballot unless some action could be taken to stop them, had become desperate, and freely gave it out that they would expel Democrats from the Senate until they secured a majority on joint ballot, if they had to turn out every Democrat in that body. In addition to that the threat was made that the military would be called out, and the attorney general threatened that the capitol would be made to flow in blood if the Republican rule or ruin crowd was not allowed to have its way. To save the State from the disgrace of having martial law declared, or having other trouble that would cause loss of life, the Democrats entered into an agreement whereby the Dent case in the House, as well as the Kidd case in the Senate, should be held up, and both seats left vacant until after the election of the United States senator. With these two Democratic votes thus disposed of, and with the two other illegal votes in the Senate—those of Getzendanner and Pierson, whose acceptance of commissions in the army had vacated their seats in the Senate according to law—the Republicans were enabled to secure an apparent majority for their candidate for United States senator, whereupon, the urgent necessity for a Republican majority on joint ballot having passed, Kidd and Dent took their seats without further opposition.

Recorded Facts.

These things are facts taken from the record, and plainly show the desperate lengths to which the Republicans of this State will go to carry out their ends and aims. If Kidd and Dent were not elected fairly enough to entitled them to vote for a United States senator they were not elected fairly enough to entitle them to vote on any other proposition that came before the Legislature, and the fact that they were allowed to hold their seats without opposition after the election for United States senator had been held is proof positive that the Republicans knew they were fairly elected and only adopted the bulldozing methods they did in order to secure one more senator in the Congress of the United States who would be willing to obey the bosses and serve the trusts. A party that will resort to such methods to continue itself in power is not fit to be trusted with the control of public business, and we call upon all true patriots to assist in hurling the Republicans from the place they have usurped and the power they have abused.

Usurpation of Power by the Secretary.

The action of the Republican Secretary of State, by appointment of Governor Geo. W. Atkinson, should be remembered by the people. He, without authority of the law, at the Legislature of 1899 ,placed names on the roll of the House of Delegates who had no certificate of election, and omitted therefrom others who had certificates regular and legal, thus making up a roll of the membership of that House to suit his own partisan purposes, and to enable the election of a United States Senator by persons not elected to the Legislature or holding any legal evidence thereof, and permitting persons to vote therefor who were not elected.

Such action on the part of a high official, acting under oath, was arbitrary, revolutionary and subversive of constitutional government.

If such methods are to be tolerated any Secretary of State could make up a roll of the membership of the House of Delegates, who could organize, transact business, make laws, and elect United States senators without having received a vote at the polls.

A statute should be passed, authorized under the Constitution, specifically making such usurpations punishable under the criminal statutes of the State.

How the Republicans Rob One Another.

As being of a piece with their methods in turning out Democratic legislators who were elected, and putting in Republicans who were not, attention is called to the manner in which the dominant Republican faction has acted with regard to the weaker one in primary elections in which the question of factional supremacy was at stake. In Kanawha county, at the primary election held on the 16th of May, 1899, such methods were employed by those in whose hands the machinery of the party had been placed as to render them odious in the minds of honest men of all parties. Even the Governor of the State so far forgot the dignity of his high office as to allow himself to indulge his natural instincts for low and dirty politics, and to get down in the mire and filth of a personal scramble for votes. Acting as a commissioner at one of the voting places, he so conducted himself in the effort to secure votes for his son-in-law, ring candidate for prosecuting attorney, as to render himself a fit object for the contempt of decency, abasing himself to the point of keeping watch upon the ballots of the purchasable voters, and signalling to his pals outside the poll whom to pay for votes rightly cast. So open and shameless was the self prostitution of the man who occupies the office of Chief executive of the State that it was a surprise even to those who knew him. When these primaries were over and the vote was announced it was found one candidate of the Governor and his fellow machinists had received a majority of but 12 in a total vote of almost 7,000, and the defeated candidate and his friends asked for a recount. To this the Governor and his faction replied by—burning the ballots. There is said to be a species of honor among thieves that keeps them from robbing one another. What word will describe the class of men among whom even the honor of thieves has no place?

The Fayette County Case.

In Fayette county the anti-ring Republicans, knowing full well the danger of allowing the ring to have entire control of the ballot boxes, went to a circuit judge and secured a writ of injunction to prevent the destruction of the ballots pending a satisfactory count. Notwithstanding which precautions, however, the ring succeeded in counting out Moss, colored, candidate for assessor, and all the other colored men on the ticket.

With these things set out plainly before their eyes, showing the absolute perfidy of the Republican leaders of the State in everything they undertake, we cannot believe it possible that the people will longer trust them to manage the government.

Infamous Advice.

As another instance of the disgraceful means employed by the Republicans in the effort to perpetuate themselves in power, the advice given a number of colored voters who appealed to the Governor and Secretary of State to have their duty made plain is cited. At a meeting which took place in the executive office at the State Capitol during the summer of 1898, both the Governor and the Secretary of State (who is also chairman of the Republican executive committee) advised their colored friends to accept bribes if offered by Democrats, and to commit perjury for the sake of getting them, declaring that it would be all right if they then voted the Republican ticket. What a riot of crime has this Republican administration brought about, when bribery and perjury are justified by high officials, and the men who thus speak are still admitted to the society of decent people, and gain rather than lose standing in the councils of their party.

Wasteful and Extravagant.

In the expenditure of the money wrung from the people by the tax gatherers, the Republican party has been wasteful and extravagant. So prodigal have they been, indeed, that the appropriations for the fiscal years ending September 30, 1899, and September 30, 1900, respectively, exceed the appropriations for the fiscal years ending September 30, 1893, and September 30, 1894, by $500,000.00, an increase of more than 40 per cent in six years. The legitimate increase on account of increase in population could not have been more than 10 per cent., or $150,000.00, leaving $350,000.00 that can be charged to no account but that of extravagance. The people are paying $350,000.00 a year more for Republican than they would be called on to pay for Democratic government. The increase is found to be in all departments of the government, showing that the tendency to waste is not confined to one Republican office holder, or a few, but is general throughout the party.

Governor's Civil Contingent Fund.

Up to the time when G. W. Atkinson was made Governor the appropriation for the Governor's civil contingent fund was $10,000 for each year, and out of that he had to pay charges for the extradition of criminals from other States. For 1899 and 1900 the appropriation made was $11,000 for each year, and in addition the sum of $2,000 was appropriated for each year to pay for the extradition of criminals, making the appropriation for the two years $26,000, as against $20,000 for two years of Democratic administration. Special attention is called to this item of increase for the reason that the civil contingent fund is entirely under the control of the Governor, and Governor Atkinson, in spite of these facts, which are undoubtedly known to him, has dwelt largely upon the economy of his administration as compared with those of his Democratic predecessors. However, the reason for this overgrown contingent fund is plain to those who have not forgotten the carnous jaunt upon which Governor Atkinson took his military staff, the members of which, arrayed in all the pride, pomp and circumstance of glorious war, were taken to the dedication of Grant's tomb in New York city at the cost of the State, the expenses of the trip being paid out of the civil contingent fund of the Governor. If the people of West Virginia want to have their hard earnings wrung from them by taxation to be squandered upon military jaunts and staff carousals, the Republican party is the one to do it for them. That is not the Democratic way.

Republican Extravagance in county Affairs.

To show further the national tendency of Republican machine politicians to waste and extravagance in public affairs, attention is directed to the counties of McDowell, Kanawha, Fayette, Monongalia and Preston. Here for many years the Republicans have been so overwhelmingly in the majority as to allow the methods of the machine to prevail, and the consequence has been that the people are struggling under a tremendously heavy load of taxation, while in most of them great county debts have been piled up for the people to pay, and corruption among officials has run riot to the disgrace of the public service and the shame of the party.

In pleasing contrast with this showing is that of the fine old counties of Jefferson, Greenbrier, Hampshire and Hardy. Here for more than 20 years the Democrats have had majorities so large that rings and cliques could have been formed for the control of county affairs and the spoliation of the people with the natural sequence of high taxes and the corrupt expenditure of the public funds. But in these counties we find taxes low, roads, bridges and other public improvements well kept up, and no breath of scandal to tarnish the reputations of the men whom the people have trusted with the management of their business.

Everywhere Republican machine rule means high taxes, waste and extravagance, with their attendant corruption, and their unfailing scandal; Democratic administration everywhere stands for low taxation, honesty and economy in the handling and expenditure of public funds, and a clean, wholesome management of public affairs.

It is for the voters of the various counties to examine these records and make choice between the two parties making them.

Penitentiary Management.

It was the policy of the Democratic party, as shown by the acts of the men it elected to office, to conduct the State penitentiary in such a way as to make it as nearly self-sustaining as possible, and at the same time bring the labor of the inmates into competition with the free labor of the State as little as possible. The Republicans claim to have relieved the taxpayers of a large part of the burden of expense in the matter of running the penitentiary, yet we find that the expense of conducting this institution three years under Republican rule has been $65,835.49, as against $50,000 for three years of Democratic administration. In addition to increasing the cost, the Republicans have adopted a policy with regard to the penitentiary management little short of infamous. A contract with the Federal Government was secured through the good offices of Senator Elkins, by which the Federal convicts from Virginia, Maryland and the District of Columbia are sent to the West Virginia penitentiary, there to be kept at so much per day. In addition to a small profit made from the board of not to different manufacturing concerns that run their shops with these prisoners the State hires them out, and makes another profit from their toil. But this not only brings the labor of honest citizens outside the prison walls into competition with cheap convict labor, but it is the means whereby a large portion of the honest dues of mankind is turned out in the State to make their home in the prisons towns and pay upon the honest people of the different communities. Even dead of these are made found in the children of the law, and the cost of the criminal prosecutions of which they are the cause usually overbalances the small profit, if actually benefit, that has been made off their keep and work. But leaving aside the question of cost entailed by the convicts set at liberty in this State, owing by the slave matter of living them used by contractors to break down the price of labor, no profit counted in money could ever compensate for the accumulation among our people of such vices as are characteristic of the majority of the Federal convicts. Such prison management is the worst that could be adopted, and with the Democratic party restored to power, it will be discontinued as soon as possible.

Abuse of the Pardoning Power.

In connection with the flagrant violation of the rights of the people with regard to the infliction upon the citizens of so many criminals from other States, attention is also called to the gross abuse by a Republican Governor of the pardoning power. During the first three years of Governor Mac-Corkle's administration of pardons were issued and 19 fully remitted by the Executive. During the first three years of Republican administration 164 pardons were issued, and fines were remitted in 53 cases. A total of 66 under a Democratic Governor against a total of 197 under a Republican Governor, for a corresponding period of time. Not only does the Republican party evince a desire to fill the State up with the criminal of scouring of other localities, but it seems also determined that those who outrage the laws of the State shall not suffer the consequences of their guilty. Unless this is done with the hope of swelling the Republican vote in the State, the object of it is hidden.

The Walker Case.

This Republican Governor Bowers has not always been so ready to make use of the power to pardon those against whom verdicts of guilty have been rendered in the courts. A year or so ago a negro named Walker was convicted of murder in the criminal court of Fayette county and sentenced to be hanged. His attorneys appealed to the Governor to commute his sentence to life imprisonment, and produced evidence that was thoroughly convinced the executive that it was a proper case for the interference that he promised them that after the Board of pardons had considered the case it it did not make a recommendation for commutation he would grant it anyway. Resting upon the pledged word of the Governor, the attorneys assured the family of the unfortunate man that his life was safe and took no further steps in the matter. The pardon board met, and no recommendation for executive clemency was made. But the pledged word of friends and attorneys left their faith in the word of the Governor, and felt secure. The first intimation they had of the Governor's intention to violate his pledge they got from the public prints in the account of the death of Walker by hanging at the State penitentiary. No matter how deserving of death Walker may have been, to give his attorneys the assurances that the Governor gave, and then allow him to do without further notice to them, was an act of perfidy that could be accomplished in this day of civilization and enlightenment only by a machine politician. If all the victim been a white man, or even an influential negro, the disgraceful stain had never been placed upon the record of West Virginia; but being poor and without influence, and a negro, he was lulled into a feeling of security by a perfidious promise, and sent to the scaffold with as little compunction as though he had been a beast. And, be it said to the eternal infamy of the Governor who allowed him to go to the scaffold, he was, in that Governor's mind, not a fit subject for such extreme punishment. If it was carelessness on the part of the Governor it was criminal; if his act was intentional, it was murder.

The Ruin of the University.

When the Republicans took charge of the State government in 1897, they found a university of high character with an able faculty, a continually increasing number of students, a high degree of study and a constantly rising reputation among the educational institutions of the country. In three years it has been thrown from the lofty pedestal upon which it had been placed by the labors of Democratic administrations and is to-day a reproach to the cause of educational reform and liberality, increasingly pauper in income, the change being largely due to seeking schools and music classes, the roll of students enrolled from the university counties, and the only ones in which it is situated, and padded out with the names of the teachers and employees of ordinary character to be found among the great colleges of the land, it has declined. This has been the inevitable result of carrying into the management of the university the same machine methods by which the Republican machine party of this State broke down the State normals, and which will in the end, if persisted in, bring the State university to the same condition until it is taken from the hands of the Republican party, and given into the hands of the Democratic party, with whom other State institutions, and the keeping of a party that will discard political machine methods in its management, and conduct its affairs with an eye single to placing it upon the high plane occupied by the greatest colleges and universities of the country.

The Asylum Scandal.

Among the State institutions in the efficient management of which the Democrats for twenty-five years took special pride, and which under their care had been placed in the front rank of like institutions in the country was the hospital for the insane, at Weston. Here the people of the State had erected a magnificent building, and had fitted it up in a manner that reflected credit alike upon their enterprise and their humane feelings. For twenty-five years, under various Democratic administrations, the ablest physicians and executive officers were employed to conduct its affairs and to care for the unfortunate members of society of whose affliction rendered their treatment at such a retreat necessary; for twenty-five years it bore the character of the model of its kind. In three years under Republican control behold the change. Its management has been such as to call down upon those in control the severest condemnation of the people of all parties, and to disgrace forever the party responsible for it. The trial of the superintendent, a year ago, upon charges seriously affecting the reputation of the management, developed beyond dispute the fact that acts of gross immorality had been committed within its walls by those who should have kept themselves free from even the suspicion of wrong doing. With the Democratic party restored to power, this asylum will return, with all the other State institutions, to a clean, wholesome, efficient, economical management, thus re-establishing it in the respect and confidence of the people.

Mining Laws Rendered Ineffective.

The thousands of miners whose daily toil in the bowels of the earth adds so much to the annual income of the State have a right to demand of the law making power proper statutory provisions for insuring their safety, and of the administrative power such official acts as will make the law effective. The Republican party is not administering the mining laws in such a way as to surround the miners with the safeguards to which they are entitled. The mine inspectors provided for by law are appointed and kept in office and draw the salary that goes with the position held—but their work is far from satisfactory to those in whose interest they are supposed to have been clothed with official power. The facts brought out as a result of the terrible disaster at the Red Ash mine on the 6th of March, 1900, show not only that the law in regard to the inspection of mines is not obeyed by the officers created for the special duty of enforcing it, but that failure to carry out its provisions is fraught with fearful danger to the lives of the miners and great expense and trouble to the operators. The law requires mines to be inspected once in every three months, but it was four months from the time the Red Ash mine was last inspected to the time of the explosion, which caused the death of 46 human beings. And all the post-mortem efforts of the inspectors to find out the cause of the disaster cannot wipe away the fact that if that mine had been properly inspected at the time the law required it to be done, those 46 lives might have been saved. The government of the State of West Virginia should be returned to the hands of the Democratic party, which regards the welfare of the humblest miner who toils for his daily bread as it does that of the greatest capitalist or the richest man within the borders of the State.

A Word About Colonization.

We wish to call the attention of our friends everywhere to the necessity of preventing the Republican leaders from carrying out their intention of having a vast number of illegal votes cast in the coming election. Four years ago the vote of West Virginia showed a majority for McKinley and the whole State ticket because of the stupendous frauds enacted at the polls, most of them being the casting of votes by narrow shipped into the various counties a few days before the election with no other purpose than to assist in swelling the Republican vote. The scheme worked so successfully then that they have determined to try it again, and this time on a much larger scale.

Already the movement of the negroes has begun, and from Hinton, Charleston, Marion, McDowell, Fayette and other Republican localities colonies of the kind that offered such an excuse in 1896 for three and three and half years in the penitentiary for those who do cast such illegal votes, as well as those who procure them to be cast, in spite of the precautions taken to prevent it. This is a matter of the gravest importance and should be attended to at once. In every county the good citizens should keep account of such negroes as move into their neighborhood from now on to the day of election, and should be on hand at the polls to challenge all such as have suspicion attaching to them, and to prevent from voting all those who are not entitled to vote under the law. Do not neglect this. It is important. It may be vital.

Conclusion.

With an abiding faith in the people of the state of West Virginia, in their disposition to do right themselves and to require that others do right by them; their desire for good government, and the faithful and economical administration of public affairs; their devotion to those principles which will best protect and perpetuate to them equal rights, and a government in strict compliance with the Constitution, both Federal and State; their belief that a public official is a public servant, whose duty it is to consider the interests of the people before his own personal glorification and aggrandizement, and in their determination that the ballot box in West Virginia shall be used as the medium for the expression of the will of those who are legally qualified voters of the State, and none other.

We earnestly and cordially invite all those entitled to vote in this State on the 6th day of November, 1900, regardless of past political faith or affiliation, to join with us in a determined effort to hurl from power in this State a party whose administration in the past four years has been marked only by incompetency, its extravagance, and its scandals, and restore the reins of government to the hands of the party that for more than a quarter of a century administered its affairs with ability, economy and decency, and whose record in the past is a safe guarantee for its fidelity in the future.

THE STATE DEMOCRATIC EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE OF WEST VIRGINIA.

"A SOLDIER ON HIS BACK."

(Charleston Gazette.)

In many of the governments of Europe where large standing armies are maintained, and imperial authority is backed up by military force, every farmer, laborer and business man is represented as having "a soldier on his back." This means that there are about as many soldiers who do nothing toward producing their own support, and have to be fed and clothed by those who work or are engaged in business at home, as there are men at home producing that support. Armies produce nothing but misery and devastation. On the contrary they consume and destroy. The food they eat and the clothes they wear must be made by those who are producing, who, in addition to their own support and that of their families, must contribute the support of one soldier. This burden is imposed by either direct or indirect taxation. It is usually done by indirect taxation in order to conceal the amount of the burden. It is adroitly added to the cost of living and collected on the installment plan, thus making the frugal and producing citizen an unconscious contributor to a system of militarism against which he has the strongest antipathy. The soldier paid during a year aggregates an enormous sum, and if it has been all massed at one time, would have produced a rebellion. Down to within a late period this government has not maintained a large, standing army. Therefore the people have not been burdened down with the enormous cost of supporting it. Of late the tendency of the republican party is to follow the example of the European monarchies, and take on a modified spirit of militarism. Already has the regular army been increased four-fold, and it is to be made still larger. If the Philippines prove to be islands, as the republican party intends, the policy toward the entire world will be compelled to have a large army. Unless this spirit of militarism is checked and rebuked, it will only be a question of time, and a short time at that, when every farmer, laborer and business man in this country will "have a soldier on his back."

The Threat of Militarism.

The army is the impersonation of force. It does not reason. It executes. It does not reason. It shoots. Militarism is the very antithesis of Democracy. In any army the commander orders, the soldier obeys; in a republic, mandates issue from the sovereign people and the public servant is governed. Can any one doubt the demoralizing effect which following such force, even when the force is justified by necessity? We could afford it when it was a people's defiance upon the people by cultivating the ideas that all the work of war must be done by professional soldiers.

Our example is inspiration. Our example already has been an inspiration to millions. Because our forefathers fought for liberty, others have fought for liberty. Because our Declaration of Independence has been promulgated, other Declarations of Independence have been promulgated.

Not only have we set an example, but in the establishment of the Monroe doctrine we have been able to give to small republics a protection of which the greatest republic in history, the Nation's population, wealth and influence increases, its power to do good will increase, but to accomplish this end it must remain true to its principles, and not descend to the levels of empires and monarchies.

W. J. BRYAN.

WHY BRYAN WILL WIN.

(Syracuse Telegram.)

What chance has Bryan of being elected? Naturally the editor of a Democratic newspaper will say that he has a great chance, whether he really thinks so or not. That is his business.

Upon this occasion we will mention some classes of people whom we believe will vote for Bryan this year. If you doubt it, ask some of them.

Ask the drummer who he will vote for. A vast number of them have lost their positions because of combinations which permit of one traveling man doing the work of several.

McKinley prosperity has hurt them.

He will tell you that he voted for McKinley four years ago. He is going to vote for Bryan this year.

He can tell you why, too. He CAN talk. The same brain and tongue that make him a good drummer make him a good Bryan worker.

The drummer is not only going to vote for Bryan. That is not his speed. He is going to work for him. He is scattered all through this big country, and he will come pretty near equaling the McKinley campaign orators in number.

The drummer is going to be quite a factor in the campaign this fall.

Ask the man who keeps the cigar store who he is going to vote for. He voted for McKinley last time.

He is going to vote for Bryan. He has to buy his goods from the tobacco Trust. He can't make any money. The trust gobbled the profits of the business.

The cigar stand is a great place for political discussions. Men congregate there and talk about men, conditions and issues. The keeper of the store is looked up to as a man pretty well posted. He has much influence in the discussions. His views of Bryan and trusts are certain to set his friends thinking.

Ask the grocer who he is going to vote for. Or the man who keeps the little hardware store. Ask any of the store keepers who are pinched by the trust.

You will find that very few of them intend to vote against Mr. Bryan.

The small dealer who was driven out of business by the gobbling trusts, or who is so squeezed by the rapacious monstrosities that he makes but a scanty living will tell you that he is going to vote against Mr. McKinley.

Ask any of the men who have been thrown out of employment by the trusts who they are going to vote for.

They are going to vote for Bryan. They will tell you that they are very sorry that they voted for McKinley four years ago.

The extraordinary growth and boldness of the trusts during the past four years will make them believe that all elected were for robbery. These gigantic combinations have gulped on the small dealer, thrown vast numbers of people out of employment, and the majority of those are heeding the bugaboo.

When men are in danger of losing safety, and when in suffering for wants relief.

Mr. McKinley has had a chance to act and shelve the people from these grievous and criminal wrongs, but he has failed to do so.

His administration has been a trust administration. It has been dead to the cry of greed and criminal combination. It has backed off all kinds of capitalistic schemes to bleed the people.

The trusts are against Mr. Bryan. All the trusts are opposed to him. They will use all their power to defeat him.

The last is one of the best things that can happen to favor of Mr. Bryan.

THE TRUSTS ARE AGAINST MR. BRYAN.

One of the worst things that can be done to injure a business is to have the trusts with which it deals declare that they are opposed to it.

THE TRUSTS ARE FOR MR. MCKINLEY.

And the TRUSTS are only one issue in the campaign.

The people are most interested in the trusts.

Don't you think it looks good for Bryan on the front seat?

Aitgeld Answers Roosevelt.

Roosevelt—When, through the great West beyond the Mississippi was acquired, which through the instrumentality of Florida was added to the new provinces, with populations, were governed and exactly on the theory of the republic and the like.

Altgeld—When we acquired what we acquired did the treaties provide that territory should be the citizens of the public and inhabitants of the new territory should become citizens of the republic and the inhabitants of the territory which the administration proposes to govern toward the Philippines is opposite of that adopted by Jackson and by later Democratic administrations in the acquisition of territory.

A BUSINESS ADMINISTRATION.

(Charleston Gazette.)

President McKinley made a gift to England of a strip 25 miles wide and 100 long which includes a portion of valuable gold field of the Rand. He did this because England the gold. He then paid Spain for two small islands of a group, which were overlooked by the peace commissioners when they framed the Philippine treaty, and which were of no value to possess no particular value. He did this because he needs the money. Hanna, that this is going to be a administration, and now it is being verified. It is the business principles to give away the territory at home and lose territory abroad of a value that the country is voluntarily "pulls down the flag" and makes an investment in a larger army abroad. It is "business" in fact for "Broadway and the Coffin Trusts.

PROSPERITY WAVE RECEDING.

(Charleston Gazette.)

Dun's Review for last week, and which reflects the business conditions of trade that a decline a chill creep up the backs of a political prophet. The reports made by publications for the last two weeks have all shown the ebb of the prosperity wave here and the tide has already begun. The amount of business done in the first six months of this year are far below known for the same period last year. The large decline in the demand and price of iron has been felt in all sections of the country, and the bottom is not yet reached. The result is that the furnaces have closed down, throwing hundreds of laborers out of work. Many of the iron mills have closed, and others are reducing their force. The Fall River cotton mills have closed and several of the mills in Maine have shut down, and others are running upon short capacity. This condition of things will continue until a settlement is effected with labor on a reduction of wages. There is also a decline in the boot and shoe trade, sales so far this year are 10 per cent of what they were in the same period of last year and 20 per cent of what they were in the first part of last year. Business for this year in the boot and shoe trade is not so large as they were for the corresponding period of either of the four years of Cleveland's administration. All the conditions point to the fact that the prosperity which has been in the land is nothing more than a natural reaction that follows periods of depression and distress. The conditions are similar to those that prevailed in the country during Cleveland's election, the inevitable reaction and reaction being apparent then as now. The prosperity has again run its course and already the reaction set in. It is bound to come, by the nature of things, to some extent, of what is expected. President Cleveland's election, the inevitable reaction and reaction being apparent then as now. The prosperity has again run its course and already the reaction set in. It is bound to come, by the nature of things, to some extent, of what is expected. President Bryan should be elected it is charged up against his administration as the one in 1892 was charged against President Cleveland.

THEY ARE NOT VOTERS.

(Charleston Gazette.)

Some of the Republican papers of the State are trying to create the impression that the recent large influx of colored miners in the various counties where the railroad work are in progress will admit that several thousand of them have been brought into the State that they will vote for the Republican ticket. But they cannot. They have not been brought here for political purposes. It has been discovered that many of them were brought there as voters. The miners engaged in this work have been in the State long enough to establish a residence, and it is apparent that several thousand of them will have been in the State for the period of time required by the law to entitle them to vote at the election. It will be the duty of the Democratic leaders in the various counties where these miners are employed to see that they are not allowed to vote. Any attempt to colonize them for the purpose of voting will be a crime against the ballot, and should be punished to the full extent of the law. Democratic leaders should be on the alert to prevent the perpetration of this crime. Let it be understood that any attempt to colonize voters will not have been in the State long enough to entitle them to vote, and that they will be challenged on the day of election, and the Republican leaders will be held responsible for the act of their colonization agents. Democratic leaders should see to it that the miners who have been in the State long enough to entitle them to vote are not prevented from voting by the colonization agents of the Republican party.

A Native of Pocahontas.

J. K. B. Wooddell is the proprietor of of one of Pennsboro's largest retail general merchanding stores. He is a native of Pocahontas County, this State, and came to Pennsboro about ten years ago, when he engaged in his present business, which he has managed with remarkable success. He has built up a handsome business and enjoys as large a patronage as any merchant of the kind in Ritchie County. During the past year his sales amounted to over $10,000, and this year that amount will be considerably increased. His business occupies two large store rooms in the K. of P. building. A large force of clerks is necessary to serve his large and increasing trade. Mr Woodddell has speculated some in oil and holds some very valuable interests. He is now a member of the town council, and there is a general demand on the part of Democrats and Republicans to have him accept the Democratic nomination for Sheriff of his county. Mr Woodddell is part of the backbone of Pennsboro's business makeup. [State Journal.

Water Supply.

As to the question so vitally important as a water supply for Marlinton the writer of this paragraph is decidedly of the opinion that special notice should be taken of a group of springs a mile and a quarter west of the bridge. These springs rise near the home of Wm. E. Johnson, and are so near that they could be easily turned into a common basin. The elevation of this basin would be nearly two hundred feet above the co rthouse therefore the water would run by gravity. A four inch pipe would not be more than large enough to carry off the water as it would flow into the proposed basin. The piping could be carried around the Johnson ridge overlooking west Marlinton more than half way up and that would abbreviate the distance from the bridge as measured by the roadway. The quality of the water cannot be surpassed by any known spring in the whole region contiguous. The writer has reason to be believe that the use of these springs could be had on very reasonable terms.

There is quite a rush this week to John Beverage's peach orchards on Clover Creek. We are told that Mr Beverage has a fine crop of peaches this year.

Dr Benjamin Adkison of Flatwoods, Braxton County, has just returned home from visiting his kindred and friends in this county. His wife and son in law were with him. Dr Adkison is a son of the late Abel Adkison of Buckeye.

Mrs A. R. Gay, Ass Barlow, and Adam Baxter have just returned from the Webster Springs. A. J. Smith also has been at the Springs. He will be home soon.

We are glad to see Miss Lena Moore, Mrs Ass Barlow, Prof. Barlow, and others who have been on the sick list for some time out again apparently well.

Mr and Mrs E. N. Wickline of Centennial, Monroe County, were guests at the Methodist parsonage from Friday evening till Monday. Mr Wickline is a brother of Mrs Atkinson.

Rev W. A. Sharp, wife, and Miss Loula Jordan spent last week on a visit to this section. Mr Sharp preached at Edray during his stay here to the delight of his many friends. They left for their home in Pendleton County last Saturday, but will stop over Sunday at Frost on the way.

Just as grand old Sol was hiding behind the western hills last Sunday evening, Mr Andrew Newton Taylor of this place and Miss Lelia C. Hess of Marlinton drove up in front of the Methodist parsonage and were united in the bonds of matrimony by Rev At kinson. After receiving a polite bow and a word of congratulation from the little company assembled to witness the ceremony, Mr and Mrs Taylor drove to their home at the Big Spring. We wish them well and hope that they will do well for both worlds.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only way to cure deafness and that is by constitutional remedies Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces. UP TO THE MINUTE

TRIALS OF A NEW YORK CREDIT MAN

Tricks Some Persons Use to Defraud Big Stores and Measures Taken for Their Prevention—People Who May Be Trusted—References.

Up to date is not high on the credit man of a big New York department store. He must be up to the minute. The tricks that were exciting him an hour ago are ancient history, pigeonholed in his memory. It's no use to be present unless it is with the trick which the level sewer after yesterday he knew to lay on him. He must be careful not to give credit to one who can't or will not pay. His endeavors are to accept any customer. He must not hurt their feelings. Above all Sarah Sol's mush of condition. It is his business to know. He came to his present position in the department of credit. It requires brains and the small per cent of loss which comes of it. There is a strictly no sentiment about the matter.

"Suppose a man who was known to be personally honorable, but in temporary straits, should ask you for credit?" was the question I put to the store. It must of the many new things the largest credit business in New York.

"He would not get it," was the answer. "Intention does not count for much. Ability to pay is the thing."

Less than one third of one per cent of the credits it extended.

The credit methods of the several large stores in New York are so substantially alike the only excuse for difference being in the degree of skill with which the various credit men deal people without offending them. First, there is the Retail Dealers' Protective Association, composed of most of the New York retailers, who do any credit business. For the benefit of its members this association has on front the to three 3 bold of ratings of bale credit seekers. The latest book contains more than thirty two thousand names, the entries being "good," "good enough," "fair," "poor," "bad," "worthless." The association also makes investigations for its members and undertakes the collection of accounts.

Supplementing this, each large store has a system of cards, on which are written the standing of every known New Yorker who is at all likely to ask for credit. For instance, a white card indicates that the person whose name it bears is worthy of credit. Memoranda of the extent of his credit and of any facts concerning him are recorded there. Should future information show that he is not to be trusted, his name is transferred to a red card, and the reasons recorded there. Should he at last turn out to be unworthy of credit, his name is placed on a blue card, and he is scouted from getting anything save for spot cash.

The credit man's assistants are constantly at work on these cards. They study all the daily news and every other source of possible information concerning the financial condition of New Yorkers. A birth may mean that the parents have an added expense, which makes it the harder for them to pay their way. A death may have lessened the earning power of a family. A marriage or a divorce may either increase or diminish a man's or woman's financial responsibility, according to the circumstances of the case.

If judgment is entered, if mortgages are given, if any bad or trouble comes to anybody whose name is carried in the credit department, note is made of it.

But the shrewdness of the credit man is not called into play when he has to deal with persons of whom he has no record; and this he came by scores every week.

"My first impressions are always best," said one of these keen men to me. "The first time I see a person I am on guard with all my faculties. The next time I may be influenced by something which would have to do no impression at first. I don't like to reverse my first impression that I did but not as a mistake one way or the other; and it is as bad for me to be influenced by a second person as to give it to an open mind.

"We don't care much for bank references," he added. "They are apt to be unreliable. I know I am often done in their name—that is, I am led to the belief by the person referred to that he is willing to sign credit investigations. They often find that they are not. Then we are caught in two days in this very forest I 650 trout, and most of this involves slaughter was prize winds.

"Credible people into three general classes. For example, the tradesmen of parties, store goods and the like are taken. A politician will readily recommend anybody who has a vote, or influence over one. And so he drags the list of unreliables and great with their consent. The vendor who recommends on his own account is a party sure to be disappointed at last.

"What general class do you regard as best to trust?"

"Army and navy people can have all the credit they want and no questions asked. Their standard of honesty is the highest, and any bill presented to them will get our attention."

The Vanderbilt Forest.

The Pisgah forest has cost Vanderbilt something like a quarter of a million of dollars, or $2,500 an acre. He has bought from great or small tracts as rapidly as possible, and now his rangers are the only denizens. There are five of them, all picked men of the mountains of fine physique, good riders and dead shots. One of them comes to meet the pilgrims and looks at their permit, which is a very important piece of paper. This forester, whose name is Keating, is a type of the rangers, good humored, tall and strong, well mounted, with repeating rifle slung on his back, saddle bags and revolver. To him these mountain wilds are like an open book, and upon him and his associates a great civil interest responsibility devolves. They must keep open the roads and trails, see that the boundary fence, 200 miles in length, is all right, keep out poachers, look after the game and fish, and always be on the alert for timber stealers. The poachers would come in near and far to catch the quail, or rather to kill them by exploding dynamite cartridges in the deep pools where the big fellows lurk; or to kill the deer, the greatest pleasure they are known popularly for the wild turkeys. At an almost incredible distance the trained ear of the ranger will hear the explosion of dynamite and he tracks the offender unerringly, even into other counties and more in Tennessee.

There are 265 miles of trails in the forest, the trails built along side each trout stream. There are 40 miles of road, passable for wagon. Trail and road are always kept in readiness against Mr Vanderbilt's coming. He is, as the rangers "tickle to come into time." There are mile and shooting paths, the latter 15 feet in width and cut out right and left from the roads. When deer are driven they must cross those paths, and by means of the latter shooting on the hunter see them in time to shoot.

The absence of noises other than those made by the streams is one of the most noted things. Rarely is a note of a bird heard, and seldomer still is any feathered thing seen. So perfect and so dense is the cover that a deer can be unseen only a few yards away. Numerous as the turkeys are, only one was flushed, and only a very few pheasants were seen. The sharp footmarks of the deer are constantly visible in the trails, and alongside the streams are the footprints of the wildcat. High overhead the golden eagle is seen soaring, and Ranger Kearns shows a mounted specimen which he killed with a revolver as it sat in a tree top 80 yards away.

Though Mr Vanderbilt is not a sportsman, but a student, as stated, all things are kept ready for him. His pleasure is the pleasure of others. On his last visit he only caught one trout, nor did he fire a gun. His wife was with him. She is a good horsewoman, and rode a pony up and down the steepest trails. Under protection native trout are rapidly restocking the streams without artificial propagation. In some of the streams rainbow trout from California have been placed, but these are not so satisfactory a fish. They rapidly lose their rich colors, and have to be quickly eaten to be palatable, while the trout of the healthy properly dressed keep well. In the old days, before there was protection, there was caught in two days

COMMISSIONER'S SALE.

Pursuant to a decree of sale rendered in the chancery cause of J. Edgar Gregory vs. Annie M. Gatewood and others pending in the Circuit Court of Pocahontas County, West Virginia, at the October Term 1899 the undersigned special commissioner will on at the front door of the court house of Pocahontas county proceed to rent at public auction to the highest bidder the tract of 326 acres of land on the Dry Branch of Elk River in Pocahontas County, West Virginia, it being the same land conveyed by George H. Cameron to W. A. Beatty, Trustee, by deed dated September 13, 1895, and of record in the clerk's office of the county court of Pocahontas County, in deed book No. 26, page 324, to which deed reference is here made for a more particular description of said land. Said tract is situated in a fine grazing section of Pocahontas County and is one of the finest grazing farms in this section. It is also well timbered, the whole constituting a very desirable property.

Tuesday, October 4, 1900,

Terms: Cash.

W. A. BEATTY,

TESTIMONY.

Rev E. O. GUERRANT, D. D., Kentucky

"A good female school is a public blessing, and among many noble institutions I do not know a better one than the one presided over by Rev R. L. Telford at Lewisburg, W. Va. It is Christian, Beautiful, Thorough, and attractive, making not only finished scholars, but lovely Christian characters. It is good enough to educate my own daughter, and I take pleasure in commending it to my friends."

Dr J. M. POYNTZ, of Richmond, Ky.

"Rarely indeed does one have the opportunity of placing their daughters in so good an institution as I have the pleasure of the one presided over by Rev R. L. Telford at Lewisburg. Anyway, it has been good enough for me. My daughter has been cared for as if she had been a sister of the family."

J. J. SCOTT, Esq., of West Virginia.

"I have been a patron of the Lewisburg Female Institute for the last six years, and I believe that under the present management it is the very best Female School in the two Virginias. If I had a dozen daughters I would want them all educated there."

Rev M. L. LEE, D. D., of West Virginia.

"I honestly believe it is the best school of which I have any knowledge."

Hon J. H. WILLEY, of the State Senate, West Virginia.

"I regard the school as one of the best in the country."

HOW TO PROPOSE.

First drop mamma, for you must be alone;
A man can't 'pop' before a chaperon;
Then choose a site,—the Yard is just the place,
Beneath the Chinese lanterns' magic blaze,—
Just if the band is playing "Rag-time Lou,"
And if the crowd all "rubbernеck" at you,
Then take her somewhere where the light is dim,
Take her to Beck, or even to the Gym.
When you have found a site, ask her to sit
With you, and watch the juicy June-bug die;
Or spring some other like poetic thought,
For by poetic words they oft are caught.
Recite to her some drip about the moon,
That great round orb that loveth those who spoon.
And speak of love, of ceaseless love galore,
(But do not speak of those you've loved before.)
Then cast a few deep breathings on the air,
Put on a look of seeming sad despair,
And cry aloud, "My college life is done,
I've got to face this cruel world alone,
Alone I have to face its fearful knocks
With none so poor to mend my holely socks."
And she, if she's the girl she ought to be,
She'll shyly mutter, "Well, what's wrong with me?"

THE LACEY BIRD LAW.

An Act to Enlarge the Powers of the Department of Agriculture, Prohibit the Transportation by Interstate Commerce of Game Killed in Violation of Local Laws, and for other Purposes.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the duties and powers of the Department of Agriculture are hereby enlarged so as to include the preservation, distribution, introduction, and restoration of game birds and other wild birds. The Secretary of Agriculture is hereby authorized to adopt such measures as may be necessary to carry out the purposes of this act and to purchase such game birds and other wild birds as may be required therefor, subject however to the laws of the various States and Territories. The object and purpose of this Act is to aid in the restoration of such birds in those parts of the United States adapted thereto, where the same have become scarce or extinct, and also to regulate the introduction of American or foreign birds or animals in localities where they have not heretofore existed.

The Secretary of Agriculture shall from time to time collect and publish useful information as to the propagation, uses, and preservation of such birds.

And the Secretary of Agriculture shall make and publish all needful rules and regulations for carrying out the purposes of this act, and shall expend for said purposes such sums as Congress may appropriate therefor.

Section 2. That it shall be unlawful for any person or persons to import into the United States any foreign wild animal or bird except under special permit from the United States Department of Agriculture: Provided, That nothing in this section shall restrict the importation of natural history specimens for museums or scientific collections, or the importation of certain cage birds, such as domesticated canaries, parrots, or such other species as the Secretary of Agriculture may designate.

The importation of the mongoose, the so-called "flying foxes" or fruit bats, the English sparrow, the starling, or such other birds or animals as the Secretary of Agriculture may from time to time declare injurious to the interest of agriculture or horticulture is hereby prohibited, and such species upon arrival at any of the ports of the United States shall be destroyed at the expense of the owner. The Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized to make regulations for carrying into effect the provisions of this section.

Section 3. That it shall be unlawful for any person or persons to deliver to any common carrier, or for any common carrier to transport from one State or Territory to another State or Territory any foreign animals or birds the importation of which is prohibited, or the dead bodies or parts thereof of any wild animals or birds, where such animals or birds have been killed in violation of the laws of the State, District, or Territory in which the same were killed: Provided that nothing herein shall prevent the transportation of any dead birds or animals killed during the season when the same may be lawfully captured, and the export of which is not prohibited by law in the State, Territory, or District in which the same are killed.

Section 4. That all packages containing such dead animals, birds, or parts thereof, when shipped by interstate commerce, as provided in section one of this act, shall be plainly and clearly marked, so that the name and address of the shipper and the nature of the contents may be readily ascertained on inspection of the outside of such packages. For each evasion or violation of this act the shipper shall, upon conviction, pay a fine of not exceeding two hundred dollars; and the carrier knowingly carrying or transporting the same shall, upon conviction, pay a fine of not exceeding two hundred dollars.

Section 5. That all dead bodies or parts thereof of any foreign game animals, or game or song birds, the importation of which is prohibited, or the dead bodies or parts thereof of any wild game animals, or game or song birds transported into any State or Territory, or remaining therein for use, consumption, sale, or storage therein, shall upon arrival in such State or Territory be subject to the operation and effect of the laws of such State or Territory enacted in the exercise of its police powers, to the same extent and in the same manner as though such animals or birds had been produced in such State or Territory, and shall not be exempt therefrom by reason of being introduced therein in original packages or otherwise. This act shall not prevent the importation, transportation, or sale of birds or bird plumage manufactured from the feathers of barnyard fowl.—Approved May 25, 1900.

TRUE EDUCATION.

Second Paper.

To minds liberally educated it seems self-evident that in the schools of the present the history, personal, social, and political of coming years is in a large part virtually written. Then, as a matter of course, no good thing is more desirable than good schools, and no reform as far reaching as reform in education. To answer the momentous question then, "What knowledge is of most worth," the leading kinds of activity that make up human life should be considered in the light of their relative importance. In the former paper these kinds of activity were given in the order of their importance.

It was there stated that those activities which directly minister to self preservation are first in the order of importance. This appears from the fact that without personal sanity and security there could be no care exercised for other activities to be considered in their turn.

Happily for the preservation of humanity that all important part of education which goes to secure direct preservation is in a great part already provided for. Nature seems to have taken much of this part of our education into her own hands as something too important and momentous to be left to human blundering. Taught by Nature the infant in the nurse's arms hides its face and cries at the sight of a stranger; the terror it manifests when it can walk at the sight of an unfamiliar dog, or the screams the child may utter as it runs to its mother at any startling sight or sound shows how nature is extending that branch of our education so essential to self-preservation.

As under Nature's tuition the child busies itself in knowledge subserving direct preservation: how to balance its body, how to control and guide its movements so as to avoid falls and collisons. Taught by Nature the child wants to find out what objects are hard and will hurt if struck; what things are heavy and will hurt if they fall upon the limbs; which things will bear the weight of the body and which will not; the pains inflicted by fire, by missiles, by sharp instuments—all this and other information needful for the avoidance of death or hurtful accidents, the child is ever learning from Nature's tuition. A few years later on Nature prompts the youthful energies to go out in running, climbing and jumping, in games of strength and games of skill. By all these actions the muscles are developed, the perceptions sharpened, and the judgement quickened, hence a preparation is acquired for the safe conduct of the body among surrounding objects and movements, and for meeting those greater dangers that occasionally occur in the lives of all persons.

Being thus, as it might be said, humanity so well cared for by Nature, this fundamental and so important part of our education needs comparatively little care from us. Our duty mainly will be to see that free scope is had for gaining this experience—that there shall be no such hindering of Nature as that by which well meaning but ill advised teachers may prevent the girls in their charge from the spontaneous physical activities they would indulge in, and so render these girls comparatively incapable of taking care of themselves in circumstances of peril and in the vicissitudes of industrial drudgery.

Let it be noticed moreover that this by no means is all that is comprehended in the education that prepares for direct self preservation. Besides guarding the body against mechanical damage or disease thus, the body so fearfully and wonderfully formed has to be guarded against injury from other causes—against the disease and death that follow violations of physiologic law.

"Our lives consist of a thousand springs.
And does if one be gone,
Strange that a harp with a thousand strings
Can keep in tune so long."

For the right kind and complete living it is needful not only that bodies, and children of life should be warded off but also that there should be escaped the incapacities and the slow annihilation which unwise habits entail.

Let it ever be remembered that without health and energy the industrial, the parental, the social, and all other activities become more or less impossible, hence it is clear that this secondary kind of direct self preservation is only less important than the primary kind, and so that knowledge tending to secure such self preservation should rank very high in the scale of true worth. And here too Nature offers to give her valuable instructions, and in some measure furnishes proper guidance, and by our various physical sensations and desires Nature has insured a tolerable conformity to the chief requirements. Fortunately for us in our human needs want of food, great heat, extreme cold, produce promptings to self-preservation too peremptory to be disregarded. And should men habitually obey these and all similar promptings when less strong comparatively few evils would arise.

If fatigue of body or brain in every case followed by due rest, if oppression produced by a close atmosphere always led to ventilation if there were no eating without hunger or drinking without thirst, then would the system be but seldom out of working order. But so profound an ignorance is there of the laws of life that men do not even know that their sensations are their natural guides, and trustworthy guides, too, when not rendered morbid by long continued disobedience, as in the opium or alcoholic habit, or gluttony. So it comes about that while it was Nature's intention to provide sufficient efficient safeguards to health lack of knowledge makes those safeguards in a great measure useless.

Should any one have doubts about the importance of knowing the fundamental principles of physiology as a means of complete living, let such look around and notice how many persons in middle life or later life that are really in good health.

It is only occasionally that one meets an example of vigorous health continued to old age, while almost every day we may observe instances of acute disorder, chronic ailment, general debility, premature decrepitude. And when the question is put, scarcely is there one who has not in the course of his life brought upon himself illnesses which a little knowledge would have saved him from. Here is a case of heart disease occasioned by rheumatic fever that followed reckless exposure, and there a case of eyesight injured for life by overstudy. Now we hear of an incurable injury that followed some silly feat of strength and again of a constitution that has never recovered from the effects of work needlessly undertaken; while on all sides we may see the perpetual minor ailments which accompany feebleness. Without dwelling on the needless pain, the weariness, the gloom, the waste of time and money thus entailed, let us only consider how greatly ill health hinders the discharge of all duties—makes business often impossible and always more difficult; produces an irritability fatal to the right management of children; puts the functions of citizenship out of the question, and makes amusement a bore. It is thus made clear that physical sins—partly inherited and partly our own—which bring about this ill health takes more from the sum of human happiness than any one else, and to a mournful extent make our lives failures and burdens instead of benefactions and pleasures.

Then moreover it comes about that through the accumulation of small injuries that constitutions are commonly undermined and breakdown before their time. It is sad to notice how much the average actual duration falls below the possible duration to see how immense is the loss. The possible duration is seventy years, the average less than thirty five—more than one half of life thrown away. Hence it must be that practical knowledge of physiological truths which is of more worth, and a comprehension of its general bearings on daily conduct is an all essential part of a rational education. And we rest in the opinion, that as vigorous health and accompanying high spirits are larger elements of happiness than any other things tangible, whatever is teaching how to maintain good health and spirits is a teaching that yields in true worth to no other whatever.

It seems strange that such an opinion needs expression, or that such an opinion must be defended against serious objections, yet the writer has himself had to do so, and meeting such objections is a part of such a proposition. The refined people who would ridicule such an opinion, that it is a matter of first importance in the education of our citizenship for every scholar be taught the location of the Eustachian tubes, the actions of the spinal cord, the normal rate of pulsation and how the lungs are inflated; these same people are anxious that their young people should be well up in the fables and superstitions of two thousand years ago. They do not seem to care or to insist that their sons and daughters should be specially taught any thing practical about the structure and use of their own bodies. How wonderful the influence of established routine when it would make the ornamental override the useful in our education.

"A sound mind in a sound body" is regarded as one of the wisest sayings ever formulated, and defined as the greatest good esential to making a success of life, and whatever knowledge bears on that attainment is to be rated of the most worth. —W. T. P.

Endured Death's Agonies.

Only a roaring fire enabled J. M Garrettson of San Auntonio Tex; to breathe when attacked by Asthma, which he suffered for years. He writes his misery was often so great that it seemed he endured the agonies of death; but Dr King's New Discovery for Consumption wholly cured him. This marvelous medicine is the only known cure for asthma as well as consumption, coughs, colds, all throat, chest and lung trouble. Price 50c and $1

The late Jay Gould was held in high reputation for his sagacious business forecasts. It has come to light that he regarded the price of iron as a financial barometer that indicated the rising or falling of prices in other commodities of staple importance. With the rise in the price of iron he arranged for other values to go up, and when iron became depressed he counted on the rest of the market to follow in staples. It is believed that his great success was mainly due to the use of this rule as he rarely found it to fail. Much interest is taken in this rule at present owing to the fact that in the past nine months iron has gone down from $25 to $17.50. Though this decline has been going on for nearly a year there has not been any notable decline in the prices of other staple products. So for the present it would seem that were the great financier alive there would be something to puzzle him for the prices in the staples seem to be going up.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy a Great Favorite

The soothing and healing properties of this remedy, its pleasant taste and prompt and permanent cures have made it a great favorite with people everywhere. It is especially prized by mothers of small children for colds croup and whooping cough as it always affords quick relief, and as it contains no opium or other harmful drug, it may be given as confidently to a baby as to an adult. The private citizen who was toiling at his usual daily task known as two men's work, was on the lookout for a man to cut some wood whereby his dinner could be cooked. He could cut wood, but a woodcutter could not abstract the title on which he was working, for he was a lawyer who had been trained to his work for years. Having failed, he had a cold dinner and suffered reproach from his wife. He made a feint of reading a newspaper, and as he did so he was informed by a worshipper of McKinley that there was not an unemployed man in the country. Nothing was said about the real problem of how to get the right men and employ him. He took small comfort from this, and wondered when the millennium arrived of what sort of a transcendent spirit he could secure to wait on him. He explained all this to his wife, and the deduction she drew was that McKinley was responsible for all the kind girls having good homes and steady employment, and that the Federal Government was combining against her to keep her from getting help in the kitchen.

The Democratic Executive Committee met last Friday at the court house to attend to routine business of the campaign. Hon E. I. Hoit, the county chairman, is giving his time and attention to the campaign in the county and the prospects are that we will hand over our little offering to the party in the State our usual snug majority. We may have to be content with strangers voting in this county this year owing to the presence of a large number of negroes and others on the public works here, but the Democratic party at least will have representatives on the commission to hold elections at the various precincts, who will require strict proof of residency on the part of any stranger who may try to vote.

Judge C. P. Moore, of Covington Virginia, will address the citizens of Pocahontas County as follows:

Marlinton,	October 2,	1 p. m.
Durbin,	"	3, 8 p. m.
Green Bank	"	4, 2 p. m.
Dunmore,	"	4, 8 p. m.
Huntersville,	"	5, 2 p. m.
Edray,	"	5, 8 p. m.
Academy,	"	6, 8 p. m.

Judge Moore is a forcible campaigner, and should spend a week or ten days in the county and will give an opportunity to the leaders that every voter in the county should hear. Come out and hear the issues fairly discussed.

Chairman Dem. Ex. Committee.

HON. A. B. WHITE.

The Republican nominee for Governor spoke at this place last Friday to a fairly sized crowd of men of both parties. He made a very good impression, as a man who is big enough to be nominated for that office should. He railed at the Democratic party as might be expected, but in a much pleasanter manner than we had heard was his custom.

We were favored with a call at this printing office and he showed that he had been initiated into the mysteries of practical printing. He is a native of Ohio, and made money and fame in the newspaper business.

He said in part that we were about to be one of the best counties in the State, and that our railroad was to make us so, and that railroad was one of the benefits that naturally flow from that great fostering party to which he belonged.

He said further that the Democratic party was one of the experiments and that it never in fifty years grafted a single principle which had endured on the government. Later in his speech he did the party justice to say that the first thirty-two years of that period it never had the control of all the branches of the government.

We then took up the Wilson Tariff Law and its successor, the Dingley Bill. S. B. Elkins wrote five words in that platform for which a halo shines around his de voted. Those magic words were: "Two Dollars a Thousand on Lumber." The sentence seems to contain six words, but that is neither here nor there. Those words caused our railroad to be built.

We then spoke of cattle and sheep. Cattle were worth $10 more per head, and sheep had increased wonderfully in numbers and price so that he did not see how a sheep could be a Democrat. He thought he saw an opening there to tell the speaker that our people did not vote like sheep, and that we would oppose a Sixteenth Amendment to the Constitution giving sheep a right to vote.

West Virginia has 570,000 cattle to be shipped this year, valued at $14,000,000.

This State is first in the production of hardwood lumber, petroleum and natural gas, and second in the production of coal. This year we will mine 20,000,000 long tons of coal.

The business of the justice of the peace had on the other hand been nearly ruined by the McKinley Administration. That the just and unjust had prospered under the beneficent reign of McKinley, and that his Democratic friends were happy, prosperous, and sorry.

If Bryan was elected work would stop. We then had the sparkling men question and the speaker sung the song of how happy are we because the strong men of the nation are bending under the toil of the day in tattered clothes with a dinner pail full of coarse homely food, that the hated millionaire may scatter their earnings to the wind like rain. We are not pleased with the employed working man figure. They toil all day these hot days while their employer occupies his palace at the seashore. And the politicians are shouting from the stand that he should work and be thankful. No wonder that there is danger of the modern Sampson pulling down on his head the whole superstructure. What is there in the life of such a slave as would give us an incentive to live.

The questions of free silver and imperialism were taken up and very ably discussed. We were only 40 minutes by electricity from the Philippines. Therefore they were close enough to own. We thought that if, like Jupiter, we could govern by electricity this might be true. We had not asked the Esquimaux what sort of government they wanted, etc. He failed to mention the historal fact that in the treaty with Russia about the country of the Esquimaux they were given three years to sell out and leave the country if they so desired.

The speaker's anecdotes were oases in the dreary waste of facts, figures and statements. We will give the one on free silver, over which we Democrats have ceased to be thin skinned.

Jake Kemble was speaking in New Jersey on gold standard. A populist with an exaggerated mat of red whisker falling on his breast, interrupted him with a question:

"Do you mean to say that if this government, representing sixty-five billions of dollars worth of wealth, were to stamp silver a dollar, it would not be worth a dollar?" Kemble said: "I will answer that question by asking another. If the government were to hang a sign on those whiskers of yours and mark them 'Hay,' is there an ass in New Jersey which would eat them?"

DIED.

Mrs J. M. Cunningham.

The sympathies of Marlinton neighbors and a wide circle of relatives and friends in our county have been deeply exercised by the rather unexpected decease of Mrs Eola Cunningham, wife of Dr J. M. Cunningham, resident physician and surgeon, aged about 33 years. The immediate cause of her death is believed to have been blood poisoning, aggravated by chronic ailments. This sad occurrence took place Sabbath afternoon, September 9, 1900, at 3 o' clock.

Mrs Cunningham was the eldest daughter of Henry A. Yeager. In early youth she became a professing Christian and was fervent and diligent in her religious duties. Upon the death of her mother she came as near filling a mother's place to the younger children as was possible for one so young to do. So there is in a sense a two fold sorrow felt by her surviving brothers and sisters in their sad bereavement. The model daughter became a model wife and she was eminently a wife that did her husband good and not evil all the days of her life, by looking well to the ways of her household and eating not the bread of idleness, wise in counsel and the law of kindness almost to a fault on her tongue.

On the Sabbath before her death she attended church, morning and evening. In the morning service she heard of instances how faith in Christ had sustained two believing ladies in their lives and during their dying hours. One of these ladies had been a life-long friend. For reasons of a sweetly tender character, these words were fondly cherished by her and often dwelt upon in her solemn memories of the loved mother gone before:

I know that my Redeemer lives
And has prepared a place for me,
And crowns of victory he gives
To those who would his children be.

I know that Jesus soon will come,
I know the time will not be long,
'Till I shall reach my heavenly home,
And join the everlasting song.
For I am only waiting here
To hear the summons; "Child come home."

Mrs Cunningham is survived by her husband and one little daughter, her father and two sisters and two brothers. The sisters are Mrs S. B. Scott and Mrs McCandlish, of Marlinton; the brothers are Parish and Walter, in Wyoming.

When it pleases God to permit such bereavements to visit a family and community how impressively these words come to mind, used as her memorial text: "Oh that my head were waters and mine eyes a fountain of tears."—Jeremiah ix, 1. —W. T. P.

Rev Lorenzo Waugh.

Rev Lorenzo Waugh, reputed to be the oldest Methodist preacher in the world, died September 7th, 1900, last Friday, at Williams, California, in the depot just after alighting from a train. He was born in the Hills, six or eight miles northeast of Huntersville, in 1808, on the place now occupied by the Shrader Brothers, who are relatives. He had been in the ministry 68 years. Soon after going to California in 1852 he was presented with a half-section of land by General Vallejo. He made his home on this section after selling enough to make his circumstances comfortable. He was a strenuous temperance reformer and widely known throughout California as Father Waugh.

As to foreign affairs one is lost in amazement that tries to comprehend the present state of things so far as newspaper intelligence may be relied on. Until the diplomats have had time for interchange of notes there will be nothing aggressive done in China by the allied troops. The Boers are falling back to the hidden recesses of the mountains. They retain their big guns, and but few soldiers are lost. Many of the Porto Ricans and more of the Cubans seem to be in a fret about the locks, unions, and fresh pots of Spanish rule, as discontented they appear to be with their experiences of benevolent assimilation.

The following pointer for Bryan's election comes from the Addison bowling alley. Twenty ladies to settle a political discussion resorted to the bowling alley to test who should be president by a game of ten pins. The game ended with 402 points for Bryan and 322 for McKinley.

A survey was made for the water works to the Johnson Springs. There are three cold springs at this place as well as a number of smaller ones affording enough water springs to fill a four inch pipe. The distance from the corporation line is 4000 feet; from the Court house 6750. The elevation 280 feet above the floor.

A derrick fell down at Stephen Hole Run Bridge now being constructed by H. A. Yeager, Contractor. A rope had been badly spliced and gave way. There were a number of men under the derrick, but they all escaped injury with the exception of Ike Johnson. Mr. Johnson was seriously injured. A horse standing under the derrick was instantly killed.

Lacy Stamper and a man named Dunlap caught a couple of bears in a pen on Hughes Ridge a short time ago. Last week they found a two year old bear in the trap, which they attempted to bring to the Locust place, with the assistance of R. L. Galford and Charlie Gardner. After a lively tussle with the bear it died near Mrs Price's from becoming overheated.

NEGRO SHOT AT PITTS' CAMP.

John Settle Accidentally Shot in the Head by Ben Moyer at Maj L. Rankin's Camp at Durbin.

Special to the Times.

After breakfast on Wednesday morning, Sept. 5, John Settle walked into Ben Moyer's shack and says, "Good morning Ben, are you ready to go to work?" Ben said, "Yes, as soon as I lock my lunch box." Ben, from the evidence, was arranging his lunch box, and having a revolver in it was fooling with it. The revolver had only one load in it, and this, it seems, Ben did not know. While fooling with the pistol it was accidentally discharged, the ball striking John Settle in the forehead over the right eye and penetrating the brain.

Dr Nicholas, the camp physician, first examined the wound, and then called Dr Lambert from Durbin. The two doctors then examined the wound and pronounced it fatal.

In the meantime Ben got alarmed and ran off. Major Haukins sent for Justice Gillispie who, after examining John Settle on oath, issued a warrant for the arrest of Ben Moyer. Constable Barner that night arrested Ben and the next day brought him before the justice, when a preliminary trial was held. After hearing all the evidence on both sides it was clearly proven that it was a case of accidental shooting, and Ben Moyer was discharged.

Major Haukins has in his employ 150 men. It is remarkable how kind he is to the men in his employ. He is law abiding in all things, and saw that a thorough investigation was made in the shooting scrape in his camp.

Rev Nickle to Come to Marlinton

How To Gain Flesh

Persons have been known to gain a pound a day by taking an ounce of SCOTT'S EMULSION. It is strange, but it often happens.

Somehow the ounce produces the pound; it seems to start the digestive machinery going properly, so that the patient is able to digest and absorb his ordinary food, which he could not do before, and that is the way the gain is made.

A certain amount of flesh is necessary for health; if you have not got it you can get it by taking

CALLED HIS BLUFF.

The Church Was Benefitted Because of a Drummer's Quick Wit When a Liberal Offer Was Made.

"Know old Bonds, of course," said Smith with a grin. "He has the reputation of being one of the most liberal and public-spirited men in the city, and it has never cost him very much to be so considered. He has money to burn, but he know how to hold on to it and still create the impression that his pocketbook is always open to any good cause. He has a way of rising in public and agreeing to aid financially for a large amount the cause that is being considered at the time, and getting cheered to the echo for his liberality. But when the hurrah is over it is always discovered that Bonds has his money and the credit of being liberal, too.

"But his scheme failed to work the other day, and now he gets red in the face whenever the matter is mentioned. He paid the little town where he was born a visit the other day and attended service in the little church. It so happened that the church was badly in debt at the time and the day had been set apart to take up subscriptions to pay it. After the minister's earnest plea for funds to save the church everyone turned expectantly to Bonds to head the list. He arose and in his smooth and oily way said:

"'I will be most happy to contribute to such a good cause. I am informed that the debt is $2000. Now, I will be one of the two to pay the entire debt, thus leaving what may be subscribed outside of that to furnish the church.'

"Bonds sat down and beamed as the congregation cheered him. He knew full well that there was no one else in the town able to put up the other half, and after a frantic effort to find such a man the thing would die a natural death.

"But for once in his life he was fooled. As soon as the applause had died away a stranger arose and said he would be most happy to subscribe the other half.

"Bond's face was a study. The stranger came forward and said as he was leaving on the first train out they might as well settle the matter right there by drawing checks for the amount that they had agreed to give. Bonds was carried off his feet and left without the shadow of an excuse, so he made out his check for that amount.

"His check was, of course, on his bank here, and the church soon had the money, and one-half the debt was paid off at once. The stranger's check was on a distant bank, and finally came back marked 'no funds.'

"It was discovered later that the stranger was a drummer who, in a spirit of fun, had called Bonds' bluff. As the church had paid out the money that Bonds gave, I am afraid that he will have to grin and bear it."—Detroit Free Press.

He Owes His Life to the Forethought of a Companion.

While on camping trip in Webster county Mr. S. I. Stamp of Normantown, W Va had a severe attack of bloody flux. He says I firmly believe that I owe my life to the forethought of one of the company who had taken along a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy." Moral—Procure a bottle of this remedy before leaving home. It cannot be obtained when on a hunting, fishing or prospecting trip. Neither can it be obtained while on board the cars or steamship, and at such times and places it is mostly likely to be needed. The safe way is to have it with you. Thousands of travelers never leave home on a journey without it.

Sold by H. R. Echols, Marlinton, Barlow & Moore, Edray; A. Barlow, Huntersville; D. T. McNeel, Buckeye, W. Va.

She was attempting to feed an eight-months-old baby with some form of herring. "Do you think I don't know how to bring up children?" replied the indignant mother to a remonstrator, "why I 've buried ten."—Exchange.

The Bravery of a Woman.

Was grandly shown by Mrs John Bowling of Butler, Pa., in a three years struggle with a malignant stomach trouble that caused distressing attacks of nausea and indigestion. All remedies failed to relieve her until she tried Electric Bitters. After taking a few bottles she writes: "I am now wholly well and can eat anything. It is true a great bravery for the whole world, as I gained 53 pounds and look like a strong strapping girl." It's the great stomach, liver and kidney remedy. Only 50 cents. Sold by H. R. Echols, Marlinton, Barlow & Moore, Edray; A. Barlow, Huntersville; D. T. McNeel, Buckeye, W. Va.

There Were Risks.

They had come down from the mountains—man and wife—to have their tintypes taken by a traveling operator. The husband thought it well to have a fair understanding of the matter beforehand, and so he entered the gallery on wheels and asked:

"How much for two pictur's?"

"Fifty cents," was the reply.

"Will you take a prime coonskin in payment?'

"Yes."

"Will we look natural?"

"You will."

"And yo'll take all the risks?"

"What risks do you mean?"

"Waal, I hain't purty nor proud, but the old woman is, and yo'll hev to take a twist out of her nose and shorten up her chin a little, or she'll git right up arter seein' the pictur and light on you like a turkey on a tater bug. The last feller that was here only survived two days arter takin' her pirture, and I thought it only square to tell yo 'bout it."

The artist declined to take the risks, and the man picked up his coonskin and went out, saying:

"Can't blame yo, stranger. Can't blame yo a bit. Yo' don't want to be tore all to pieces and hev this wagin wrecked fur the sake of one coonskin. I'll git the ole woman seven yards of kiliker, and she'll hev to roll up her eyes at that and let the pictur' go."—M. Quad.

Cured of Chronic Diarrhoea After Thirty Years of Suffering.

"I suffered for thirty years with diarrhoea and thought I was past being cured," says John S. Hallowday, of French Camp, Miss. "I had spent so much that I had given up all hopes of recovery. I was so feeble from the effect of the diarrhoea that I could do no kind of labor, could not even travel, but by accident I was permitted to find a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, and after taking several bottles I am entirely cured of that trouble. I am so pleased with the result that I am anxious that it be in reach of all who suffer as I have."

COMMISSIONER'S SALE.

Pursuant to a decree of sale rendered in the chancery cause of J. Ella Cameron vs Janie M. Cameron and others pending in the Circuit Court of Pocahontas County, West Virginia, at the October Term 1899, the undersigned special commissioner will on

Tuesday, October 4, 1900,

at the front door of the court house of Pocahontas county proceed to sell at public auction to the highest bidder the tract of 297 acres of land on Dry Branch of Elk River in Pocahontas County, West Virginia, it being the same land conveyed by George H. Cameron to W. A. Bratton, Trustee, by deed dated September 13, 1895, and of record in the clerk's office of the county court of Pocahontas County, in deed book No 26, page 225, to which deed reference is here made for a more particular description of said land. Said tract is situated in a fine grazing section of Pocahontas County and has on it fine grass land, the balance being finely timbered, the whole constituting a very desirable property.

Terms of Sale: Cash.
W. A. BRATTON,
Special Commissioner.

I, J. H. Patterson, Clerk of the Circuit Court of Pocahontas County do certify that W. A. Bratton, the special commissioner above named, has executed bond as required by said decree.

Rev E. O. GUERRANT, D. D., Kentucky

"A good female school is a public blessing, and among many noble institutions I do not know a better one than the one presided over by Rev R. L. Telford at Lewisburg, W. Va. It is Christian, Biblical, thorough, and attractive—making not only finished scholars, but lovely Christian characters. It is good enough to educate my own daughter, and I take pleasure in commending it to my friends."

Dr J. M. POVNITZ, of Richmond, Ky.

"Rarely indeed does one have the opportunity of placing their daughters in so good an institution of learning as the one presided over by Rev. R. L. Telford at Lewisburg. Anyway, it has been good enough for me. My daughter has been cared for as if she had been a member of the family."

J. J ECHOLS, Esq., of West Virginia.

"I have been a patron of the Lewisburg Female Institute for the last six years, and I believe that under the present management it is the very best Female School in the two Virginias. If I had a dozen daughters I would want them all educated there."

Rev M. L. LACY, D. D., of West Virginia.

"I honestly believe it is the best school of which I have any knowledge."

SONG OF THE BANANA PFEL.

Like a bar of a beaten gold,
I gleam in the summer sun;
I am little, I know, but I think I can throw
The fellow who weighs a ton.
I send out no challenges bold,
at blow me no vaunting horn, ne foolish is he who standeth on me-
[illegible] [illegible] [illegible]
[illegible] [illegible] [illegible]
Like a [illegible] man
But when he chaw[illegible] [illegible] heel,
Like the stubble he fadeth away.
For I lift him high up in the AIR
With his heels where his head ought to be;
With a down coming crash he maketh his mash
And I know he's clean gone upon me.

Men laugh me to scorn on the stand,
Where I am quiet and humble and meek;
My talent is one, but the deeds I have done
Have made cellar gratings to creak.
I am a red-hot-American born;
And a Nihilist fearless I be;
Though the head wore a crown, I would pring it low down,
If he sets his proud heel upon me.

Justice.

There is a tale of a citizen of Taylor County of the name of Dilworthy, who is well known here. There is a stone in front of the court house at Grafton let in the pavement, on which is inscribed the word "Justice," which is supposed to have some remote connection with courts of law.

On one occasion Dilworthy had lost a case and as he left the court house he remarked that it was no wonder, for here was where justice was dead and buried.

Stumping a Book Agent.

At another time he had to cope with a book agent. "Don't you want to buy a history of the Civil War?" asked the agent.

"Was that there war when all of us neighbors was fighting each other; blood-kin fighting blood-kin?"

"Yes, of course."

"Well now, stranger," said Dilworthy dropping his voice, "I wish you wouldn't even mention that there time around here for I'm kinder ashamed of it, and I don't want my children to know that I ever fit in such a war."

"Well, then couldn't I sell you a copy of this book? It is a history of the Anglo-Saxon family."

"What, me buy a book about the Angling family? Old Bill Angling? I know too much about them Anglings now. I traded horses with old Bill Angling one time. No, sir, I don't buy no history of the Angling family."

"Well, if I can't sell you any book, let me sell you a receipt for making honey. You can make a superior article of honey for three cents a pound."

"What, me make honey, and take the business away from them little bees that I have known all my life! Them little bees used to sting me on the feet when I was a boy. No sir, I ain't that low down that I have to go and drive the bees out of the business."

The book agent went away and circulated a report the old man was crazy.

Campaign Goods.

We have a circular from a whiskey house in Covington, Kentucky. It is headed. "A Winner, for Politicians and Candidates running for Office."

It goes on and offers to put up 500 screw top, six ounce flasks for $100, and put thereon, "Vote for Blank, Candidate for Blank," and his photograph.

These bottles are handed around by the candidate, and the voters are supposed to encourage such an enterprising caadidate by voting for him.

Since the bull-bat has been identified as the night-hawk it has been suggested that people who might not in the least resent being called a night-hawk, might object to being called a bull-bat.

How to Be Photographed.

The other day a famous American photographer complained that he had won notority by playing the fool with his art. He had only to place his sitter, he told us, in an absurd light and get a dazzling ray upon the Adam's apple to win the adulation of American artistic circles. Philosophers say that the only things worth looking for are causes, and it might be worth the potographer's while to seek the cause of the fashion he condemns. It is, we take it, the revolt of people against the ordinary photo*graph,* where the sitter appears, in a rigid attitude, dressed in a new suit, with his head fresh from the hands of the shompooer. That is artistically bad, and it is vulgar; not in their anxiety to kill the custom photographers have flown to an equally absurd fashion—the fashion condemned by the American. The sensible photographer will try to dissuade his sitters from appearing in any striking garment and will coax them out of their insane desire to pose in an unnatural attitude. He will strive to make his photograph a picture and nothing looks so bad in a picture as new clothes and an "attitude." Especially is this the case with children. Parents are much too fond of sending their olive branches to the photographer's studio tricked out in the fashion of Little Lord Fauntleroy, instead of bidding them go thither in Holland jerkin, with their hair tumbled and their socks about their shoes. It is very rarely that one sees a photograph of children which suggests the charming naturalness of childhood, and the photograph of an adult which brings the living man before the eye is by no means common.—Ex

TRUE EDUCATION.

Third Paper.

The worthy reader of this series of articles on true education will please keep in mind that the great question under consideration is "What knowledge is of most worth?"

To answer or rightly decide a question so momentous in its bearing on the destiny of an individual —whose life, at best is brief and [illegible] limited, it is all im[illegible] have an understanding [illegible] useful knowledge is. With [illegible] properly determined, *then we should have the pref*erence over the less useful, the real to the [illegible] over the conventional, and the effective acquired in preference to the merely ornamental.

The leading kinds of activities that make up human life were arranged in the order of their estimated importance. The first in the order of importance are those activities that directly minister to or promote self - preservation. These activities were considered in the second paper. Now in this third paper the second class of activities will be disussed, namely: Those activities which by securing the necessities of life indirectly minister to self-preservation.

The importance of activities to secure the necessities need no discussion, for it is so self evident. It seems hardly worth while to insist on the value of that knowledge that aids indirect self-preservation by making it easier for any person to gain a livelihood, or as we often hear it said, "trying to make a living." The value of such knowledge is admitted by all, and there *are persons who go so far as to re*gard knowledge to be the sum and substance of any education that is worth having or working for.

Now what is strange about all this estimating instruction fitting young people for the business of life, of very high importance, even the most important of all kinds of instruction, yet comparatively few take the special pains to inquire what instruction will so qualify young people for making a living.

While it may be true to a degree that reading, writing, and arithmetic are taught with a duly intelligent appreciation of their uses, yet when this is said, nearly all has been said, so far as the object in view is concerned of teaching young people how to make a living. For it is to be regretted that so much of whatever else is taught in the schools has little or no bearing on the industrial activities now under consideration. While an immensity of information having a direct influence on the industrial activities is virtually passed *over as empty words, meaning*less and useless.

With few exceptions, all men are employed in producing, preparing, and distributing commodities, and success and efficiency in producing, preparing, and distributing commodities depends on the use of methods fitted to the re*spective natures of these commod*ities, and also on an adequate knowledge of their physical, chemical, or vital properties, as the case may call for; or in other words, success and efficiency depend on Science.

This order of knowledge, so grievously ignored in a former generation, and too much ignored, practically ignored in our present school courses, is the order of knowledge underlying the right and successful performances of all those processes by which civilized life is made at all possible.

Mathematics is the science of space, number, and force, and by it residences are reared, railway making is regulated from beginning to end, navigation accomplished, soils are drained, and manufactures are carried on of food, clothing, and implements and books. As the principles of mechanics are skillfully or ignorantly used for the important purposes just mentioned comes success or failure, whether individual or national. A nation is composed of individuals, the individuals come from the schools, and are simply what the schools make them. The engineer who misap*plies his formulas* for the strength of materials builds a bridge that breaks down. The manufacturer whose machinery is badly devised can not compete with another whose apparatus wastes less in friction and inertia. The ship-builder adhering to the old model is outsailed by one who could apply the mechanically justified wave-line principle. And as the ability of a nation to hold its own against other nations depends on *the skilled activities of individu*als we can see that on such knowledge may turn the national destiny. Great then must be the worth of mathematics.

Next to mathematics is physics. Joined to mathematics, phys ics has given the world the steam en*gine which does the work of mil*lions of laborers. That department of physics that deals with the laws of heat teacher how to economize fuel in our various industries; how to increase the output of smelting furnaces by the hot in place of the cold blast, how *to ventilate mines and prevent ex*plosions by the use of the safety lamp. Time and space would fail to enumerate all that physics has done in magnetism and electricity by the compass and electrotype. The telephone and telegraph have furnished an agency by which for the future mercantile transactions will be regulated, political intercourse carried on, and perhaps national quarrels will be often avoided.

Chemistry bears a very important part in the activities required in making a livelihood. The *bleacher, the dyer, the calico min*ter depend for their living on chemical processes that are well or ill done according as the operatives do or do not conform to chemical laws. The economical reduction of the precious and useful metals from their ores are in great measure *questions of chemistry, sugar*refining, gas making, gunpowder manufacture are operations all partly chemical. Moreover we are living in times when farming lands if successful and profitable must have chemical guidance and assistance. It is by the rules of chemistry that soils and manure are analyzed and their mutual adaptation ascertained; the use of gypsum or other substance for fixing amonia, the production of artificial fertilizers. All such are the benefits of chemistry, which it becomes the farmer to acquaint himself with. Be it in the lucifer match, or in disinfected sewage, or in photographs, in bread made without fermentation, or in perfumes extracted from refuse, it is seen that chemistry affects all our industries and by that consequence knowledge of it concerns every one who is directly or indirectly connected with our industries having a livelihood in view.

Biology, the science of life, has a very important bearing upon the processes of indirect self-preservation. Various biological truths have been empirically or unscientifically ascertained and acted upon by farmers while yet there has been no conception of them as sci*entific.* Such as that particular manures are suited to certain plants; that crops of a certain kind unfit the soil for other crops; that horses can not do good work on poor food, that such and such diseases of cattle and sheep are caused by such and such conditions. Now as these biological facts, scanty, indefinite, rudimentary tho they be, aid the farmer so essentially, what must be the value to him of such facts when they become positive, definite, and exhaustive. The contrast between scientific farming and guesswork farming, is become so marked that the time seems just upon us when success in farming will simply be impossible without a competent knowledge of animal and vegeta. ble physiology.

Another science bearing on industrial success is Sociology, or the science of society. Without being conscious of it perhaps, persons who daily look at the state of the money market, glance over the prices current, discuss the profits of crops of corn, cotton, sugar, wool, etc., weigh the chances of war, and from all these data decide on their business operations, are students of social science. It may be they are empirical and blundering students, still they are students who scan the prices of articles of their profits according as they do or do not reach right conclusions.

Now the end part of all this is found in the fact that in so much of our popular education of the to[illegible] and even some, school processes are conducted without any what most nearly concerns the business of life. Had it not been for the information that some in[illegible] and observing men acquired by self-directed studies of [illegible] or their education, acquired, had [illegible] been finished in the regular schools, our industries would have been badly hindered, if not destroyed. Some of these industries would never have existed had it not been for information accumulated outside the schools and spread by unofficial means.

It may be relied on as a self evident fact that as fast as productive processes become more scientific, which competition will most surely make them, and just as fast as joint stock or trust undertakings spread abroad as they certainly will in spite of everything to the contrary, so fast will scientific knowledge grow necessary to every one who endeavors to make a living. Many of our readers may be disposed to dispute this, that the increasing acquaintance with the laws of phenomena that has thro successive centuries enabled our people in England and American to subjugate nature to our needs, and in modern times gives our Pocahontas citizens comforts which a few centuries ago kings could not purchase is scarcely owing to any degree to the means and methods of instructing youth devised and recommended by traditional authority. The vital knowledge by which we have become what we are as a nation, and now underlies our national existence is a knowledge that had itself taught in nooks and hidden corners, *while the popular ordained agen*cies for teaching put in their time mumbling little else but dead formulas. —W. T. P.

A citizen who heard Hon A. B. White's address last Friday was asked his opinion. Mr White is an able man and his record as a citizen in all the relations of life assures one that our people may go farther and fare worse as to per*sonal character for a chief magis*trate. As to the speech, were his premises admitted the conclusions are irresistable. But the trouble is the whole address was elaborated on a basis of assertions, perversions, and mere assumptions, and thus he took for truisms what are things in controversy or dispute and thus begged the question from start to finish. Moreover the fact on which the speaker rang the changes, that Republicans and Democrats united in perfecting the imperialistic legislation complained of does not prove that it was morally right, constitutional, or for the greatest good of the greatest number. The Democrats profess to have seen their mistake, wishing to undo it through Mr Bryan, appeal to the American people for authority to do so. But if the American people approve the imperialistic legislation they have the privilege of keeping it effective by sustaining and keeping the administration in power by reelecting Mr McKinley, and it becomes all true Americans to accept the consequences peaceably and magnanimously until the voting time comes around again in due constitutional order.

He Owes His Life to the Forethought of a Companion.

While on camping trip in Webster county Mr. S. I. Stump of Normantown, W. Va had a severe attack of bloody flux. He says I firmly believe that I owe my life to the forethought of one of the company who had taken along a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy." Moral—Procure a bottle of this remedy before leaving home. It cannot be obtained when on a hunting, fishing or prospecting trip. Neither can it be obtained while on board the cars or steam ship, and at such times and places it is mostly likely to be needed. The safe way is to have it with you. Thousands of travelers never leave home on a journey without it.

The storm at Galveston exceeds anything of the kind that has ever occurred in the history of our people, excepting Johnstown where 10,000 people perished. The trouble seems to have originated in the West Indies, near Porto Rico, and regions ajacent. The track of the hurricane is estimated at one hundred miles in breadth. The loss of life has been estimated at 8,000 persons, and may be found much greater. Looters have been arrested with their pockets filled with human fingers cut off for the jewelry on them. A great many have been court marshaled and shot. The people of Marlinton experienced its expiring throes on Wednesday, the 12th, and to us the gale seemed simply terrific with its clouds of dust, and the way it blew away huts and shook the trees, and moaned high over head among the clouds.

Judge C. F. Moore, of Covington Virginia, will address the citizens of Pocahontas County as follows:

Marlinton, October 2, 1 p. m.
Durbin, " 2, 5 p. m.
Green Bank, " 4, 12 m.
Dunmore, " 4, 6 p. m.
Huntersville, " 5, 2 p. m.
Edray, " 5, 7 p. m.
Academy, " 6, 9 p. m.

Judge Moore is a humble servant, and eloquent speaker, and will give an exposition of the issues that every voter in the county should hear. Come out and hear the issue fairly discussed.

D. E. JOHNSTONE,
Democratic Com. Ex. Committee.

THE FULL DINNER PAIL.

The Republican politicians and trust magnates who have been preaching contentment to the workingman because he has a dinner pail full of wholesome food have found to their astonishment that a workingman may have other gods than his belly.

He may object to working for his board like the ox. When the Republican party freed the negro, the South argued that the negro did not want to be freed because he had a full dinner pail.

The workingman wants a home, a piano for his girls, schooling for his boys, and feels the injustice of the plan of salvation which causes him to make more for the man he is working for than he makes for himself and his loved ones.

Cadmus of today reads the papers and is educated. He is a wiser man than the philosophers of the ancients were. He is a man of intelligence and he can't be kept out of the proceeds of his labor much longer. At present, in the words of the poet, he is the toad beneath the harrow:

"The toad beneath the harrow knows
Exactly where each tooth point goes;
The butterfly upon the road
Teaches contentment to that toad."

THE VAGABONDS.

In the beginning God made man
Out of the wondering dust, men say;
And in the end his life shall be
A wandering wind and blown away

We are the vagabonds of time,
Willing to let the world go by,
With joy supreme, with heart sublime,
And valor in the kindling eye.

We have forgotten where we slept,
And guess not where we sleep tonight;
Whether among the lonely hills
In the pale streamer's ghostly light

We shall lie down and hear the frost
Walk in the dead leaves restlessly,
Or somewhere on the iron coast
Learn the oblivion of the sea.

It matters not. And yet I dream
Of dreams fulfilled and rest somewhere
Before this restless heart is stilled
And all its fancies blown to air.

Had I my will! . . . The sun burns down
And something plucks my garment's hem;
The robins in their faded brown
Would lure me to the South with them.

'Tis time for vagabonds to make
The nearest inn. Far on I hear
The voices of the northern hills
Gather the vagrants of the year.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy a Great Favorite

The soothing and healing properties of this remedy, its pleasant taste and prompt and permanent cures have made it a great favorite with people everywhere. It is especially prized by mothers of small children for colds croup and whooping cough as it always affords quick relief, and as it contains no opium or other harmful drug it may be given as confidently to a baby as to an adult.

After sleeping about one hundred nights over the question of acception tendered him for a second term, our President, William McKinley has written the longest letter of acceptance that has ever yet been placed before the american voting people. In looking over this letter of acceptance the reader disposes of silver, the currency, prosperity, taxation, merchant marine, Isthumian canal, trusts, civil service, Cuba and Porto Rico. The other three-fifths give what the President has to say about his Philippine management, from the Dewey affair to the moment of writing the letter in question, as to his acts and aims. It seems too plain for any careful reader to have any doubt about it that this three-fifth part of the letter is our President's defense of his Philippine policy, against what Mr Bryan's vigorous strictures expressed in his Indianapolis speech. Now all this looks very much as if our President recognizes the fact that in the minds of the voting people Imperialism is a vital issue which he and his adherents must meet fairly and squarely. This three-fifths part of the letter of our President makes Imperialism the paramount issue on his part, as it was made by Mr Bryan in his speech, so virtually both are appealing on Imperialism to the grandest jury in the world: the grand jury of American voters whose verdict will be handed in on election day in November.

Have you a sense of fullness in the region of your stomach after eating? If so you will be benefited by using Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets. They also cure belching and sour stomach. They regulate the bowels too. Price 25 cents Sold by Harry R. Echols.

DIED.

Frank Hogsett.

Died at his home on Browns Creek, September 3rd 1900. Age 20 years, 2 months and 2 days.

His ailment was brain fever. He was a young man highly esteemed for good character, and his death is sincerely lamented. He worked hard saved his money, and was a kind true hearted boy, beloved by all who knew him. He leaves a father, mother, two sisters and a large circle of friends to mourn their loss. How sad it was when the dear friends bent o'er the corpse to behold his face for the last time on earth. But why do they weep? we'll all follow soon.

Our friends on earth we meet with pleasure
While swift the moments fly,
Yet ever comes the tho't of sadness
That we must say good-bye.

* * * *

No parting word shall e'er be spoken
In that bright land of flowers,
But songs of joy and peace and gladness
Shall ever more be ours.

A FRIEND.

The old proverb "Much haste, great waste" seems emplified by a comparison of railway and army statistics. For instance, the British Army in South Africa numbering over two hundred thousand men; the number of railroad workers in the United States, is two hundred and twenty seven thousand five hundred and forty seven. The toral of killed and wounded in the English army in Africa from October 1899 to July 1900 is estimated at fifteen thousand; the number of railroad employes killed or wounded in the United States during the year ending June 30th 1899, was thirty seven thousand one hundred and thirty three. The killed were two thousand two hundred and ten; the wounded thirty four thousand nine hundred and twenty three Hence it appears that the ratio of death or injury in the railroad is more than twice as great as the army in active war fare. The railway employees are four and a half times as numerous as the Phillippine soldiers, and the casualities in the railroad service are twenty-three times as many in proportion to numbers. This is what the American people are paying for always being in a hurry to get from one place to another.

The Galveston hurricane has revived interest in an article published forty years ago in a Bavarian paper, written by an aged German hermit. Among several other things the article states that when the twentieth century opens great seismic disturbances would occur, which would cause the submersion of New York City and the western half of the city of Havana. Cuba would be broken in two, Florida and Lower California would suffer total extinction. Moreover earthquakes will raze buildings to the ground in almost every city in Europe and millions of lives and billions of dollars worth of property be lost.

COMMISSIONER'S SALE.

Pursuant to a decree of the Circuit Court of Pocahontas County, West Virginia, made in a cause therein pending on the 21st day of June, 1900, in the chancery cause of John A. Gum vs G. W. Waid and others, the undersigned special commissioners will on the first day of the circuit court of said county, at the front door of the court house of said county, proceed to sell at public auction to the highest bidder the life interest of the said G. W. Waid in a tract of sixty acres more or less, situated on the North Fork of Anthony's Creek in said county, it being the same land of which Mary Wade died seized and possessed. The land is that upon which the said G. W. Waid now resides, and comprises a valuable farm having on it good improvable land and suitable buildings.

Tuesday, October 2, 1900,

Terms of Sale—So much cash in hand as will pay costs of suit and expenses of sale, and the residue up on a credit of six months, the purchaser executing his bond with good personal security, the title to be retained as ultimate security.

H. S. RUCKER,
ANDREW PRICE,
Special Commissioners.

I, J. H. Patterson, clerk of the circuit court of Pocahontas County, do certify that Andrew Price, one of the special commissioners named above, has given bond as required by said decree.

The second Quarterly Conference for the Levelton Circuit is to be held at Academy next Saturday and Sunday, September 22-23. Rev J. S. Hutchinson, P. E., is expected to preach at least four sermons on that occasion.

W. J. WHITESELL.

An immense stationary engine is being placed to saw material for the Greenbrier Lumber Company's plant now in course of erection. Quite a number of lumbermen are cutting timber on the Marlin Mountain slopes, opposite Gay's and Gibson's.

There are plenty of people in this world who think they are wise because they can ask questions that no one but a fool can answer. For the next 30 days we will sell ten pounds of the best keg soda for 25c. Men's $15 and $16 suits for $9 and $10. Also many other great bargains. Yours for little money.

L. D. SHARP.

The Weather Station at Washington says that the windy and cooler weather beginning last Wednesday was caused by the great storm which had its origin in the Gulf and did such tremendous damage along the coast. The past summer has been the hottest in sixty three years according to the government records, 1897 having been the traditionally hottest summer.

Visiting Highland friends inform us that citizens of west Highland, north Pendleton and west Bath are looking to Dunlap and Cone as their most available points for railway facilities. Should there be a road opened up Gadlup Creek to Mill Gap then the mouth of Bolivar's Creek would be much or evidence with many of the citizens just referred to. We shall soon have a report for a new road will not be "pushed" by our Pocahontas readers.

Miss Anna Wallace is in Lewisburg.

J. C. Crowley of Cowen is visiting in Pocahontas.

Miss Elizabeth Magruder of Baltimore is again in Marlinton.

Walter and Paris Yeager, of Cheyenne, Wyoming, were in Marlinton a few days.

Ward Randolph, of Richmond, and Julian Arbuckle are visiting in Marlinton.

Andrew Price is out of town this week at Charleston and Grafton.

Miss Lillie Friel will teach the Brown's Mountain School, the current session.

Mrs W. A. Bratton is on a visit to her old Virginia home at Marshall, Fauquier Co.

Born to Mr and Mrs P. H. McNulty, near Meadow Dale Va., August 27th, a daughter.

Miss Myrtle Varner and Miss Vandervoort, of Linnwood, were visiting in Marlinton last week.

Miss Emma N. Warwick was in Marlinton last week. She will teach the Driscol School the ensuing session.

Ernest and Henry Slaven, from Meadow Dale, were the guests of Bernard Slaven several days last week.

Mr and Mrs Preston Clark and daughter Annie passed Marlinton Tuesday, on their return from a visit to Highland County Va.

Misses Lucy and Pearl Sharp were in Marlinton last week. Miss Lucy opened the Deuthered Creek school, Monday the seventeenth.

Misses Kate and Mattie Moore and Mrs Jane McCollum, accompanied by Mrs Simmons from Valley head, Randolph County, paid the Times office a visit last week.

Mrs James Burnsides, near Academy, and daughter Annie and son Lee passed Marlinton on their return from visiting relatives and friends, on Knapps Creek.

Miss Maggie Bratton, professional nurse, has returned to her home near Milldoro, after six weeks of professional duty in Marlinton. Miss Bratton's office is 1702 Arch Street, Philadelphia. She is holding herself on readiness to start for Galveston at a moments notice Miss Bratton is rapidly becoming eminent in her profession.

Considerable anxiety is felt about the fate of the Rev Dr Wm. N. Scott, pastor of a Galveston church, numbering six hundred members. Mrs Scott is a sister of the Rev C. H. Dobbs, of Greenbrier, and Dr Scott is a nephew of the brothers Archie and Howard Scott who were resident physicians at Huntersville some years since.

Messrs Wm. Gibson and Isaac McNeel were in Marlinton arranging for the grand jury, a few days since. Unless several parties, recently conspicuous by their absence, soon put in their appearance much of the business of the forth coming term will be speedily dispatched for the lack of testimony, and Scotch verdicts be in order—"guilty but not proven."

The attendance at Mrs Cunningham's burial last Thursday morning was quite large. There were twelve pall-bearers, and the remains were borne by them to the cemetery on Powell Hill, about a mile distant. The memorial sermon was from Jeremiah ix, 1. The services were conducted by Rev W. T. Price, assisted by Rev G. P. Moore.

The work of laying the railroad track has progressed until the trains are running near the mouth of Locust Creek. The farmers of the Levels will have their fertilizer delivered at Locust Creek this week. Some stock has been loaded at Falling Spring. So far no freight has been delivered on the new railroad except in quantities of carload lots. The question of when a regular train service will be put on the road is perplexing the citizens of the county. We are reliably informed that as soon as the track is pushed on as far as Marlinton regular trains will run. It is said that when the track was completed to Falling Spring the Company was willing to accede to the requests of the citizens for a regular train service, but that the engineer in charge of the track laying, to have a better opportunity for putting down the track in good order, prevailed upon the company not to encumber the line with regular traffic. Since leaving that point the track has not been laid any faster than the ballast was put in. We are informed that within a week from the time the track reaches Marlinton we will have regular trains.

Notice

There will be a meeting of the Republican Executive Committee of Pocahontas County held at the office of the chairman on Tuesday, October 2, first day of Circuit Court, at 2 p. m. Let every member be present as important business is to be transacted.

S. C. McNEIL,
Chairman.

The next sixty days you can get a No. 7 rock stove with 20 pieces, at Hevener's tin shop, for $12.50; No. 8 $14.00.

EDRAY.

We rejoice greatly because we had such a good rain last Saturday. The cool air to-day indicates frost in the near future.

There is an effort being made by some persons to get cans to put up their tomatoes before frost comes.

Our people are about done cutting corn. The crop is fair in this section.

John S. Moore will teach the Edray School; W. D. Sharp will teach the West Union School; Darius Moore at Pine Grove. Miss Leanna Baxter has already opened school at Laurel Creek, and we have not yet heard who will teach at the Draft.

The protracted meeting at West Union closed last Thursday night. It was attended with a fair measure of success.

George P. Moore and others extended the Clover Lick 'phone line from Edray to Marlinton not long since.

G. K. Gay made a trip to Buckhannon recently and brought his family with him to Edray on his return. We understand he will live here. We welcome them back to their former home.

We are pleased to see William Sharp getting under headway with his sawmill. We surely wish him and his success in this enterprise.

S. W. Barlow is grinding away in his new corn mill when he is not up on the hillside cutting corn

During the drouth our millers found it hard to get grinning done to do the people, but since the rain there is a revival in their business.

We are glad to know that Rev W. A. Sharp and R. E. L. Dale are with others recovering from a recent illness.

*Steps are being taken to ad*vance the work on the new church under consideration at W. Union. The prospect now seems good for a church—a thing much needed in that locality.

Wesley Duffield is very sick, and not expected to live. Rev G. P. Moore held religious services at Mr Duffield's residence Sunday afternoon. There were quite a number of persons in attendance.

John Beverage of Clover Creek has sold about 500 bushels of peaches in the last two weeks. Mr Beverage says he has 500 bushels of apples for sale, and then will have three hundred bushels for himself.

Mrs E. B. Stevens, Corresponding Secretary of the Baltimore Branch of the W. F. M. S. in the M. E. Church, spoke at Edray Church last Tuesday evening in the interest of her work and made a very good impression on the audience.

Cattle Market.

Catile are being taken up a little earlier than usual.

Thomas Callison's herd of 24 cattle were bought by Mike Thomas of the Valley of Virginia, who sold them to Hoover & Harrison. They were straight four year olds, and averaged 1600 lbs.

M. J. McNeel sold about fifty head of three year olds to Hoover & Harrison which averaged 1297 lbs.

T. A. Sydenstricker sold 38 straight three year olds to J. A. Argabright which averaged 1260 lbs.

An Honest Young Man.

George Duncan, ax man on the 7th residency near Buckeye, found a pocketbook containing $400.00 in cash, belonging to Anthony Aples, an Italian contractor. Duncan returned the pocketbook to the owner and refused to accept ten dollars reward.

TO TOBACCO CHEWERS.

We will sell ten hundred pounds of Double Tick, regular 10c plugs guaranteed to be as good or better than Early Bird, Schnapps or Old Crow, for 10c a plug. The above tobacco sale will begin next Saturday, at the Pocahontas Bargain House.

Over one hundred thousand coal miners in the anthracite region of Pennsylvania and elsewhere having found their dinner pails rather too scant are now on a strike, and the prospect is there may be a contest to the finish this time. A great deal of suffering is apprehended before a settlement is reached. Ten per cent increase in wages and twenty per cent increase in provisions or necessaries of living does not suit unless a person can live by making little and spending a heap, as we do it at Marlinton, that is to say the most of us.

For Sale.

I have for sale a good team, weight about fourteen hundred each. Also a new set of logger harness. Will sell cheap and on easy terms. Any one wanting to buy a team would do well to look at these horses before buying elsewhere.

HARRY T. GWINN.
Frost, W. Va.

Track laying is completed to within 17 miles of Marlinton. A half mile is laid and ballasted per day, so in about forty days we may expect the cars at Marlinton.

GREEN BANK.

Rev J. W. McNeil is having a very good meeting at this place. Up to Sunday night there were 8 conversions.

Rev Horner, of Timberville, Va., preached for Rev McNeil Sunday night. He is a good preacher.

There are several schools in Green Bank district wanting teachers. Call on or address the secretary of the school board.

J. H. Curry is on the sicklist at this time.

G. W. Kerr killed a large copperhead in his orchard some days ago.

Married, September 12, 1900, at the home of the bride's father, John Gragg, Joseph H. Kerr and Miss Mollie Gragg; Rev B. W. McLaughlin officiating. May happiness be ever theirs.

Cards are out for the marriage of L. J. R. Dysard and Miss Margaret Kerr. Also Dr L. Hunter Moomau and Miss Dora Cowger, September 19, at Arbovale, W. Va. We extend congratulations.

There was a cyclone here Monday morning. A fine rain Saturday, which was badly needed.

C. L. Burner and Miss Gertie Yeager were in town Friday.

SCOTT'S EMULSION

is a food medicine for the baby that is thin and not well nourished and for the mother whose milk does not nourish the baby.

It is equally good for the boy or girl who is thin and pale and not well nourished by their food; also for the anæmic or consumptive adult that is losing flesh and strength.

In fact, for all conditions of wasting, it is the food medicine that will nourish and build up the body and give new life and energy when all other means fail.

Should be taken in summer as well as winter.

Eastman Koda BROWN CAMER

One of the truest and most eloquent expressions ever made by that wonderful person Napoleon Bonaparte is the following. Speaking of the gospel as an unconditional appeal to every element and faculty of manhood, and asking nothing short of the throne of the heart, he said: "Across the chasm of eighteen hundred years Jesus Christ makes a demand which is beyond all others difficult to satisfy. He asks that for which a philosopher may often seek in vain at the hands of their friends, or a father of his children, or a bride of her spouse, or a man of his heart. He asks for the human heart. He will have it entirely to himself. He demands it unconditionally, and forthwith his demand is granted. Wonderful!"

BOB WHITE.

You are calling as sweetly to-day, Bob White,
As you were in the days gone by.
When the butterfly slept in the heat of the sun,
And the spider his lace on the haystack spun,
While a bare-footed reaper followed your flight
With his romping careless cry.

You are calling as sweetly to-day, Bob White,
As when stars of the evening sky
Shed their rays o'er two, on the country lane,
Who never will roam hand in hand again,
While the whippoowill sings through the tender light,
With a song like a yearning cry.

You are calling as sweetly to-day, Bob White,
As you may in the by and by,
When a calm steals over the hearts at last,
While the curtains of mist fall around the past,
And the songs of the summer day and night
That to some one are only a cry.

MOUNT VERNON.

America might boast of many spots made sacred by some association with our country's history, but none of these can ever hold the position in the hearts of the people that is held by Mt Vernon. Every one who reads is well acquainted with the history of this famous old plantation, but it is possible that something not mentioned by a historian may have been noted by a visitor, so this article will be written with a hope of interesting someone who reads it. Mt. Vernon is situated on the Virginia side of the Potomac a few miles from Washington City, and is easily reached from the Capital by boat or rail. The old plantation is truly rural with its woodland, cornfields and meadows. The location is an ideal one for a happy country home, and the tourist is impressed with the splendid views and general grandeur of the place even before he has visited the house and tombs, which are the chief points of interest to the stranger.

At one time the buildings were falling into decay and were even threatened with complete destruction by the owners, but a society was organized and the plantation purchased. Since that time the buildings have been repaired and the old fences rebuilt after the original plans, and Mt Vernon has again assumed the old fashioned garment of colonial aristocracy. The mansion, the outbuildings and immediate grounds are enclosed by a brick wall, and entrance is made through an old time gateway. As you pass through the gate and obtain the first view of the buildings and the famed oaks which surround the mansion, a feeling of reverence comes over you, and the building is approached with timid but expectant steps. No one welcomes you at the door, it is a privilege none have to invite you in at Mt. Vernon because the house is yours. All America contributed to the purchase, and the door stands open. The main building is of stone, with an adjoining kitchen and porch of wood. There are three stories; on the first are the sitting room and parlor. These rooms contain part of the original furniture, numerous portraits, the old library and numerous historic relics. Washington's old flintlock rifle and powder horn hang over the door, his swords are in a case against the wall. Among the collection of swords is one carried by him through West Virginia as he was on his way to Dollymore with Braddock. The old clock upon the mantle was not like "grandfather's clock," for instead of "stopping never to go again," it ticked away as merrily as ever. In a glass cabinet may be seen the key to the Bastile. This key was a present from LaFayette, and was given as token of humanity's overthrow.

On the second floor is Washington's private room, and in the room in which he died. The old bed stead, the mattress stood, the trunk and entire furniture is just as it was at his death. The visitor is not allowed in this room as some people would not hesitate to steal trinkets and break up the furniture in order to secure relics. Mrs Washington had a private chamber upon the third floor. She died in this chamber, and it is also forbidden to visitors, though you may stand at the open door and look inside the room.

Just down the hill next the river are the Washington tombs. He was first buried in a small unpretentious tomb, but as this decayed it was decided to remove the remains to another more spacious burying place. A large tomb was built, which was divided into two apartments. In the rear were placed about forty of the Washington relatives, while in the smaller apartment at the front were placed Washington and his wife. The coffins are enclosed in a marble sarcopagus, and are placed side by side. A large door made of metal bars permits the visitor to look in upon the sarcophagus in the front apartment, but you cannot see in the second apartment. Several years ago some vandal climbed over the door and entered the tomb. This incensed the surviving members of the Washington family, and they built a higher, stronger gate, and when it was locked threw the key overboard into the Potomac, so it is probable that if America retains strength to guard the sacred ashes, Judgment will find them where they now rest.

There are very many interesting things to be seen beside these mentioned. In the old loom house are the old looms, wheels and reels; at the carriage house you can see the old coach used by Washington. It is told that Washington was out driving in this coach. It is history that he was absent minded so he drove against a tree, with one of his horses on either side. He straightway got down from his coach and hied to a nearby house for a negro and ax, that the tree might be cut down. The old slave came with his ax, and after taking in the situation he told Washington that he would be glad to cut down the tree, but he added, "If I was Mistah Washington I would know enuf to back de hosses." Washington backed his horses and drove on.

The flower garden is kept as nearly as possible as it was originally, but there is only one plant living which was there at Washington's death, and that is a palm. A number of trees are living which were planted or set out by him. Among the others is a willow tree transplanted from Napoleon's grave at St Helena. There is also a coffee tree growing which was presented by Jefferson and set out by LaFayette.

Between Washington City and Mt Vernon are the Arlington Heights, but these furnish ample material for another article and will be described in the next article written by me. If the Editor still continues to publish my "losh" perhaps I shall have leisure to write something about the Corcoran Art Gallery, or National Museum or some other institution here.

Very truly,

Muscular Christianity.

An amusing illustration of the growing demand for athletic clergymen was recently given by a comedy outside, who, says the London Telegraph, received notice to quit because, though unexceptionable in other respects, he never doubted that "what his parish really needs is a good fast bowler, with a break from the off." No doubt the worthy vicar promised that no sermon could possibly upset the timing of a person capable of wheeling the small cricket ball against the neighboring beadle by his own present.

TRUE EDUCATION.

Fourth Paper.

In this series of articles, discussing the question "What knowledge is of most worth," it is our purpose in this paper to consider those activities which have for their end and aim the rearing and discipline of offspring.

It is assumed as self-evident that the development of the family precedes that of the government or state, and therefore before considering what activities may be involved in the maintenance of proper social and political relations. This consideration is reserved for another paper.

So then let it be clearly understood that in this fourth paper the third great division of human activities, "the rearing and discipline of offspring." For these activities, most wonderfully strange tho it seems, "traditional authority" has made no preparation whatever. If nothing remained of our higher class school books, recommended by tradition or scholastic authority, or some university examination papers of comparatively recent times, to be examined at some remote period by antiquarians, these antiquarians of the remote future would have something on their hands very curious, not to say highly puzzling, on discovering in these relics of an antiquity representing to a large degree the present state of education, and fully representing what to us is but a recent past state of higher education, nothing to indicate that the learners in the schools high or low were ever likely to become parents.

Mr Spencer draws on his imagination and fancies that he hears these antiquarians of the remote future reasoning in this way, to account for not finding anything indicating that the learners of such books and writers of such examination papers were ever likely or expected to become parents:

"This must have been the course of study intended for the young people that were to be celibates all their lives. We find in these relics of the antiquated schools elaborate preparation for many things, especially for reading the books of extinct nations and of co-existing nations (from which it seems clear that these English and American people had very little worth reading in their own tongue); but we find no reference whatever to the bringing up of children. These people could not have been so absurd as to omit all training for this gravest of all responsibilities. Evidently then this was the school course of their monastic orders, and recommended by traditional authority."

Now taking a serious view of this subject, it is certainly a most astonishing fact that little or no instruction is provided for in behalf of those who will hereafter be parents on the the treatment of offspring. On the treatment of offspring depend their lives and deaths, their moral welfare, or their moral ruin. It seems when one comes to reflect that the fate of a new generation should not be left to the chances of unreasoning custom, impulse, mere fancy, joined too it may be with the suggestions of ignorant nurses and the prejudiced counsels of grandmothers.

Should persons become merchants without any knowledge of arithmetic and book-keeping, all would exclaim at their folly and predict disastrous failures in business. Or if, before studying anatomy, young men and women should hang out their signs and set themselves up as surgical operators, all ought to wonder at their audacity and pity the patients that might fall into their hands or be left to their care.

But strange to say that even in this accursed and professionally highly civilized period of human consciousness, when persons who have graduated from the schools begin the difficult task of rearing children without ever having given a thought to the principles of physical, moral, and intellectual, that ought to guide them, carries with it a surprise at the errors we are apt for the innocent suffering victims.

To the many thousands that perish, not to use a word so harsh as killed, add the hundreds of thousands that survive with feeble constitutions; millions that grow up with constitutions not so strong as they should be, and we may form some little idea of the curse inflicted on their children by parents ignorant of the laws of life. Let us but consider that the treatment to which children are subjected is hourly telling upon them to their lifelong injury or benefit, and that there are a dozen or more ways of going wrong to one way of going right, and we will get some idea of the enormous mischief that may be inflicted by the thoughtless, haphazard system and methods so common in actual use.

If it seems well to the parents to let the little boy, in order to make him tough and robust, be clothed in some flimsy short dress and be allowed to run about with limbs reddened by cold, that treatment tells on his whole future life,—either in disease, or in stunted growth, or in deficient energy, or in a maturity less vigorous than it ought to have been, and as a consequence will never have the success and happiness in life that might have been his.

Should children be doomed to a monotonous dietary, or a dietary not sufficiently nutritious, their ultimate bodily powers and their efficiency as men and women will certainly be more or less diminished.

As a general rule parents themselves must be regarded as responsible for all the pain, the debility, the depression, and the misery endured by their children. They have the control of their offspring from hour to hour, and through the fault of those who reared them when they were children themselves, or through their own cruel carelessness neglected to inform themselves about those vital processes which they are unceasingly influencing by their commands and prohibitions. In sad ignorance of the simplest physiological laws, they may have been year-by year undermining the physical or bodily constitutions of their children, and have so inflicted disease and premature death upon their own sons and daughters; not only on them, but on their children's children.

Upon turning from physical training to moral training, one finds that ignorance equally great is likely to be in evidence, and injury in proportion inflicted on the moral nature.

Let us take a hasty view of the young mother and her nursery management. The important formative years of her life were passed in schools of high reputation, in which her memory was literally crammed with words and names and dates, while her reasoning faculties were not the slightest degree exercised by ideas being given her respecting the opening mind of childhood, and where her course of instruction did not in the least degree qualify her for thinking out methods of her own. The sweet girl graduate, relieved from regular school studies, may now pass intervening years in practicing music, in fancy work in novel reading, in party going. So far as any one knows to the contrary, no serious thought has yet been given to the grave and solemn responsibility of maternity, and but little if any of that solid intellectual culture obtained which would be some preparation for such responsibilities as motherhood implies. How solemn to meet her when an unfolding human character has been committed to her keeping and she finds herself profoundly ignorant of the phenomena with which she has to deal, undertaking to do that which can be done but imperfectly even with the aid of the profoundest knowledge. Lacking knowledge of moral mental phenomena, with their causes and consequences, such a mother's interference is frequently more mischievous than absolute passivity would have been. Deeds which she may think desirable to encourage she gets performed by threats and promises of something pretty, or by exciting a desire of applause, considering little what the inward motive may be so long as the outward conduct may be as she wants it, and thus developing hypocrisy, and fear, and selfishness, in place of good feeling.

Being thus without theoretic guidance, and quite incapable of guiding herself by tracing the mental processes going on in her children, the mother's life may be one of the most harassing and wearisome ones in the whole range of human duties, one often in the highest degree painful, and would be indeed generally intolerable were it not for the overwhelming tendency of the growing mind to assume the morale of the race, which tendency usually subordinates and counteracts all minor influences.

We rest in the opinion that some acquaintance with the first principles of psychology and the elementary truths of psychology is indispensable for the right bringing up of children.

Now just here we feel that we are in great risk of being ridiculed and laughed at for our serious pains in urging and asserting such views. And if it was proposed that an exhaustive and complete phychological knowledge should be obtained by all fathers and mothers, there might be good reason for ridicule. We merely insist that general principles only would be enough to learn, along with such illustrations as to make them practically understood. And these general principles can be taught—if not rationally, then dogmatically.

Nevertheless, be all this as it may, here are the simple facts,—these facts may be disputed but not refuted,—that the development of children in mind and body rigorously obey certain laws, that unless these laws are in some degree cooformed to, there must result serious physical and mental defects; and that only when they are completely conformed to can a perfect maturity be reached.

Now let our worthy readers consider then whether all who may one day be parents should not strive with some conscientious anxiety to learn what these laws are. —W. T. P.

He Owes His Life to the Forethought of a Companion.

While on camping trip in Webster county Mr. S. L. Stump of Normantown, W. Va had a severe attack of bloody flux. He says I firmly believe that I owe my life to the forethought of one of the company who had taken along a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy." Moral—Procure a bottle of this remedy before leaving home, it cannot be obtained when on a hunting, fishing or prospecting trip. Neither can it be obtained while on board the cars or steam ship, and at such times and places it is mostly likely to be needed. The safe way is to have it with you. Thousands of travelers never leave home on a journey without it.

A Hot, Little Planet.

The astronomer in charge of the Harvard Observatory, at Arequipa Peru, announces that in April last he succeeded in obtaining four photographs of the recently discovered planet Eros. This tiny orb—a veritable toy world, it might be called—is only about nine miles in diameter. One reason for the interest attaching to it is that it is the nearest to the earth, and nearest likewise to the sun, of all the minor planets. In 1894 it was on 15,000,000 miles away from us, a mere trifle of distance from an astronomical point of view, and next November it will approach within 28,000,000 miles.

There are about four hundred minor planets so far discoved, tho' doubtless many more, as yet unfound, exist. The first ones were located early in the present century, one of them being Vesta, which is, perhaps, the biggest of the whole lot, being about 240 miles in diameter. In area these baby sisters of the earth may be said to equal various States of the Union ranging from Rhode Island to some of the larger ones.

Eros, being nearest to the sun, must be warmer than any of the other minor planets—a fact that has a bearing upon the possibility that it may be inhabited. The question whether these words are occupied by any forms of life is extremely interesting, though likely to remain unanswered. So slight is the gravity power of a planet nine miles in diameter that an ordinary man of Eros would be able to hurl away a half-ton stone with such velocity that it never would come back out of the realms of space. The photographs taken at Arequipa were made by Dr Delisle Stewart.—[Exchange.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy a Great Favorite

The soothing and healing properties of this remedy, its pleasant taste and prompt and permanent cures have made it a great favorite with people everywhere. It is especially prized by mothers of small children for colds, croup and whooping cough, as it always affords quick relief, and as it contains no opium or other harmful drug it may be given as confidently to a baby as to an adult.

VACCINE FOR CATTLE.

Many head of yearling cattle die in this county every year of blackleg. The scientists at Washington have discovered that cattle may be protected from blackleg by inoculation with virus from cattle that have died of the disease, just as men are vaccinated to ward off smallpox. The vaccine, with instructions for use, is furnished free of charge on application. Cattle on infected ranges should be treated to help stamp out the disease. The following is taken from the agricultural report:

"The most important recent achievement by the Bureau of Animal Industry is the discovery and application of a prevention for that dreaded disease of cattle known as blackleg. This malady in some States of the Union destroys more cattle than all other causes combined; Texas, Kansas, Nebraska, Colorado, and the Dakotas suffer very severely. In fact, over a large part of the beef raising regions there is a loss of from ten to twenty per cent of yearling stock annually through this complaint. It appears suddenly in the shape of a black swelling usually on the hind quarter, and is invariably fatal.

"Having ascertained some time ago that the disease was caused by a bacterium, the Bureau set to work to prepare a vaccine which is obtained from animals which have died of the complaint. Four years ago fifty thousand doses of the stuff were sent out by way of experiment, and the results obtained were so remarkable that three hundred and fifty thousand doses were distributed in the following year in response to requests. In the third year five hundred thousand doses were given away, and in 1900 over one million will be sent out.

"How effective the vaccination is as a preventive of the malady may be judged from the statement, as made by cattlemen, that it has reduced their losses by blackleg to less than one-half of one per cent. The vaccine is furnished to infected ranges free of charge, and anybody may obtain it by addressing an application to Dr D. E. Salmon of the Department of Agriculture. Preference is given to applications made out on regular blanks, which may be gotten by anybody who asks for them.

"Blackleg is one of the most widespread of cattle diseases; it is even suspected that a malady which often causes great loss among the reindeer herds of Lapland, Siberia, and northern Russia is really this same complaint."

Cured of Chronic Diarrhoea After Thirty Years of Suffering.

"I suffered for thirty years with diarrhoea and thought I was past being cured," says John S. Hallowway, of French Camp, Miss. "I had spent so much that I had given up all hopes of recovery. I was so feeble from the effect of the diarrhoea that I could do no kind of labor, could not even travel, but by accident I was persuaded to find a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera Diarrhoea Remedy, and after taking several bottles I am entirely cured of that trouble. I am so pleased with the result that I am anxious that it be in reach of all who suffer as I have."

Nervelessness John Chinaman.

"Nervelessness" is, according to a German professor, the peculiar characteristic in virtue of which the Chinese may ultimately beat Europe in the struggle for existence. The Chinaman, he says, can write all day, stand in one position all day, groove, beat gold, carve ivory, do infinitely tedious jobs forever and ever and discover no more weariness and irritation than if he were a machine. This quality appears in early life. There are no restless, naughty boys in China. They are all supplingly good, and will plod at school without holidays or recreation of any kind. Sport or play—if we except cards and kite-flying—seems to John Chinaman waste of labor.—[London Daily Chronicle.

THE NEGRO'S ALLEGIANCE.

Everyone who has been in the South has noticed the close social relation that exists between the better class negro and the farmers and planters who represent the slave holding class of before the war, and has marked that while the negro worked and lived with this class he almost invariably voted with the Republican party. He had good reason to and it was recognized by his employer.

Of late years however time has changed the the standing of the parties considerably and the negroes have begun to divide their vote. This is as it should be for there is danger in one class being arrayed solidly against any other class.

A healthy state of affairs demands that there should be a natural difference of opinion among negroes as well as white men, and no man should belong to a party simply by reason of his color or previous condition of servitude.

Negroes have begun to think, and it is manifestly unjust that when they become Democrats the Republican partisan should cry bought.

If negroes have been bought, there was one Republican spellbinder in Fayette who was regularly sold last week. He was engaged in a joint discussion with a colored democrat in a section where the voters are principally negroes. The Democrat put this question to him: "Do you believe that the negro is the social equal of the white man; if so, would you object to seeing your sister married to a negro?"

The speaker considered for some time and made this answer: "I consider the negro equal to the white man, and I would be willing to see my sister married to a respectable colored man."

Then the negro replied: "I want to say to you that I have a sister, and her color is black, but I would rather see her dead than married to a white man."

It looks as if vigorous measures will be taken at once to resume business at Galveston and rebuild and reorganize the city on a grander scale than ever before. As a commercial centre Galveston is said to be a rival of Chicago, New York and Baltimore, and its possibilities are scarcely marvelous should the Isthmian Canal be constructed.

Dr Hunter McGuire, one of the most distinguished of Southern surgeons died in Richmond Sept 19. He was born at Winchester October 11, 1835. He is remembered as the surgeon who amputated Stonewall Jackson's wounded arm and attended him in his dying hours. To Dr McGuire is attributed the honor of establishing in the Federal and Confederate armies the humane practice of releasing all medical officers who may have been captured. The Baltimore Sun concludes an editorial notice in this manner: "After the close of the war Dr McGuire practiced his profession in Richmond where he was esteemed as one for charity and good deeds than for his great medical skill. He was loved as well as admired for his genial nature and his ready wit. He was broad minded, public spirited and a true friend. His work as a citizen, and he has gone."

RADIUM.

A New Chemical Which is Better Than the X-Ray.

Prof. George F. Barker, of the physical laboratory of the University of Pennsylvania, exhibited last week for the first time in America, the newly discovered chemical elem nt radium, which seems destined to create a great stir in the scientific world. Years ago Bequerel found that salts of the rare metal uranium possessed the power of throwing off a feeble and invisible radiance, like the X rays. Mme. Curie, in Paris, last year isolated from the Bohemian mineral pitchblend two other elements that behave in the same manner, but are far more active. One of them she called "polonium" and the other "radium." The latter is said to be 100,000 times as intense as uranium in its photographic effect.

Prof. Barker has been experimenting with all three of these elements and with the mineral pitchblend or uranite from which the two new elements are derived. He showed to the Bibliographical Club here this week a series of photographic plates on which impressions had been produced by these substances. His procedure has been as follows:

"A photographic plate was inclosed in black paper and then covered with yellow paper. After one whole day's exposure to the sunlight no effect was produced. This precaution proved the thoroughness of the protection. Then the various metals and salts were placed upon the paper-covered plate and they produced dark stains.

"In order to take photographs of objects such as a hand or foot these objects would be placed between the metal and the plate, and the result would be similar to those obtained by the X rays such substances as bone would show clearly through the flesh and surrounding tissue. A photograph can be taken by means of radium in half a minute.

"The importance of this discovery can hardly be overestimated. The wonderful results of the X rays now so useful in surgical diagnosis, can be duplicated by a method much cheaper. Moreover radium seems to suffer no diminution of energy or loss of weight during the process. In addition to producing an impression on the photographic plate, radium produces phosphorescence, and discharges electrified bodies. Thus it will be seen that it possesses all the qualities of the Roentgen rays.

"Radium apparently violates one of the fundamental laws of physics, namely, that of the conservation of energy. It does not derive its photographic power from the sunlight nor lose it by expenditure."—N. Y. Tribune.

BRIAR PIPES.

Signs by Which a Smoker Can Tell a Good One.

It is strange, and yet it is a fact, that the English workman is of no use in the manufacture of pipes. The most skillful artisans are either the Austrians or the French. The pipemakers are a very select, small body, and observe every precaution to prevent their trade being learned by outsiders. The workmen are clever and they can earn high wages.

Speaking of the cost of a pipe a successful manufacturer remarks: "When the blocks arrive over here they are at once sorted. Out of one gross of blocks I rarely ever get more than three or four pieces of wood for the ordinary everyday pipe. The remaining seven dozen pieces of wood are thrown into the furnace, and, I might mention help considerably to generate the necessary steam power for the machinery. Thus fully 90 per cent. of the material I purchase is of no use whatever, and it is this extraordinary amount of waste that causes the briar pipe to be so expensive.

The prevailing defect, I may mention by the way, is generally in the form of a crack in the wood. I used to sell these defective blocks of briar at a penny apiece, and have sent away as many as 40,000 condemned briars at a time, but now I burn them all. The briars were sent abroad and the cracks and flaws stopped with putty or some other composition and then steeped in a strong solution of permanganate of potash, which deeply colored the wood and made the defect invisible except on close inspection. All those briars you see of a very deep color have passed through the permanganate of potash bath, and you may rest assured that there is a defect somewhere—they would not be that color if it were not so, because natural briar is of a medium light hue.

"As to the average life of a briar pipe, you may take it for granted that a pipe will last you as many years as it costs you shillings. That is to say, if you pay six shillings for a pipe if you are a moderate smoker, it will last you for six years. The style of briar pipe that is mostly in demand is that with a bowl cut the straight way of the grain. This is not the most reliable kind of pipe, as the sudden expansion by the heat and contraction of the wood when you stop smoking cause it to split in a short time. The best pattern of briar is that with a bowl the grain of which is very mottled in appearance, or, as the trade call it, the 'bird's-eye grain.' This will never split."

Courting Oom Paul's Nieces.

The Boer girl of the country districts of the South African Republic "is able to go to town only once or twice a year, and then it is to attend the Nachtmaal, or communion, which is the chief festival of those deeply pious people," writes Howard C. Hillegas, of "The Boer Girl of South Africa," in the January Ladies' Home Journal. "The journey to the town is made in ox-teams, and may require a week's or a month's time, but it is at once an epoch in a Boer girl's life, especially if she is about sixteen, as she is supposed to have attained the matrimonial age. Then some tall, young Boer youth, whom she has met at former Nachtmaals, may summon enough courage to ask her whether he may call at her home and have an 'opzitt' of which is a sort of 'sitting' time before an 'offmaken.' If she can meet the young Boer will shortly afterward ride on horseback many miles to see the girls he has been told by others will prove that he is worthy of her love by words and talking with her from sunrise until long into the night. For two young lovers to arrive at this period of courtship is equivalent to announcing the engagement, and then the go-ascribe bride, begins preparations for the wedding.

COMMISSIONER'S SALE.

Pursuant to a decree of the Circuit Court of Pocahontas County, West Virginia, made in a cause therein pending on the 21st day of June, 1900, in the chancery cause of John A. Gum vs. G. W. Waid and others, the undersigned special commissioners will on the first day of the circuit court of said county, at the front door of the court house of said county, proceed to sell at public auction to the highest bidder the life interest of the said G. W. Waid in a tract of sixty acres more or less, situated on the North Fork of Anthony's Creek in said county, it being the same land of which Mary Wade died seized and possessed. The land is that upon which the said G. W. Waid now resides, and comprises a valuable farm having on it good improvable land and suitable buildings.

Tuesday, October 2, 1900,

Terms of Sale—So much cash in hand as will pay costs of suit and expenses of sale, and the residue up on a credit of six months, the purchaser executing his bond with good personal security, the title to be retained as ultimate security.

H. S. BUCKER,
ANDREW PRICE,
Special Commissioners

I, J. H. Patterson, clerk of the circuit court of Pocahontas County, do certify that Andrew Price, one of the special commissioners named above, has given bond as required by said decree.

J. H. PATTERSON, Clerk

Gov. Atkinson has issued proclamations for special elections on November 6, to select judges to fill vacancies in the first, second and the third judicial districts. The vacancies in the first and second districts are due to the deaths of Judges Paull and Hagans, and in the third to the resignation of Congressman Romeo H. Freer.

Had Seen Them Before.

At the Fairmont reunion Capt B. B. Dovener amused the large crowd with a good story.

He said since the war he had never heard a word between men who had fought on both sides. He told how Gen. James A. Walker of Virginia, a Confederate veteran had played a joke on him (the captain) on the California trip by the Wheeling gun boat party. A Santa Barbara they saw Comrade Ed. Hoyte, of the Eleventh West Virginia, who said he had been there three or four years. Then the captain introduced Gen Walker to Hoyt, and added, "Ed and I have met you before, General."

The general said, "I have no recollection, sir."

Then said the Captain, "Yes we have, General; we met at Winchester, at Cedar Creek, at Opequan and other places."

The general paused, then he turned the Captain and Hoyt around and carefully studied their backs. "Yes, sah," he said. "I recollect now. I have seen you before."

We Are Here

We are ready for Autumn. Maybe the sun has not crossed the line, but we have, and our store is an Autumn store to day, reflecting Fashion's gayest moods, which coupled with the fact that here are to be found Largest Stocks, Largest Assortments, many new ideas (which are shown only by us in this section) and lowest Prices, prices which others claim to meet (some with inferior qualities which are hard for you to detect). In justice, are those who are forced to "come down" entitled to your patronage?

To Stay and Defy

The people are our partners and the dividens are declared in every purchase, not witheld until you have purchased any certain amount and then given to you in some article of little value, with a make-believe that you are getting something for nothing, neither do we use any catching schemes, dickers or other illegitimate methods to mislead you.

Any House

In CLOTHING, like a great procession, some one must lead. We do not claim to be the "whole thing," but we are far in the lead. We lead in largest amount of stocks, best quality of goods, lowest cash prices, courteous treatment to our customers, and last, but by no means least, we have never disappointed you in giving you the Latest Styles. We won't do it now.

In West Virginia to

Look around and see our offerings in Men's, Youth and Childrens Suits and Overcoats. They will be much more appreciated. Our DRY GOOD DEPARTMENT is doing itself proud. Here you find one which would be a credit to a small city. We are showing many new ideas in weaves and colorings in Dress Goods which must be seen to be appreciated. We quote you prices on Muslins, Calicos, Ginghams, Shirtings, Jeans, Outings, Flannels, Linens, &c., which are unmatchable.

Meet Prices Quoted By Us

WHEN WE MENTION SHOES we strike a strong key in our business. Here are to be found all that can possibly conceive in newest styles and the ready-to-wear kind. Sure we are that we can please you, and can also fit you up with a first-class pair of substantial Boots if you need them.

MARRIED.

Wallace—Moffett.

Parkersburg W. Va., Sept 20.—
At ten o'clock yesterday morning at the home of Col. Geo. H. Moffett, his youngest daughter, Lillian Beal, was married by the Rev. S.
Scollay Moore D.D. to Mr Fred eric Wallace, a prominent young lawyer of Lewisburg W. Va. Miss Mary M. Moffett, sister of the bride, was the maid of honor, and Mr John Dice, of Lewisburg, was the groom's best man. Miss Virginia Snodgrass played Lohengrin's wedding march as the bridal party entered the handsomely decorated parlors. Behind the couple as they were arranged for the ceremony were two immense hearts made of white carnations, which were the principal feature of the decoration.
It was a pink and white wedding and that color scheme was carried out not only in the decorations but the gowns of the maid of honor and the young ladies who assisted at the wedding breakfast, which was given immediately after the cere- mony. At noon Mr and Mrs Wallace left for their home at Lewisburg.—Gazette.

The attendants were J. W. Yeager,
Miss Pearl Yeager, C. L. Burner,
Miss Minnie Curner, Clyde Beard,
Miss Gertie Yeager, Mac Kerr,
Miss B. Beard, Sandy Burner.
Miss Virgie Gillispie. The bride is a sister of the late Lieut. Robert
D. Kerr, of the United States Army. A dinner was served to relatives of the family. The happy couple left for a trip to the national capital.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only way to cure deafness and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces. We will give one hundred dollars for any case of Deafness caused by Catarrh, that cannot be cured by Halls Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

Alternate Road Law.

At a county court continued and held for the County of Pocahontas, at the Court-house thereof on Wednesday, the 27th day of June 1900.

A petition signed by G. D. Mc
Neil, J. O. Morrison and 63 other voters of the Edray District in this county, verified by proper affidavit praying that the "Alternate Road Law," enacted by the Legislature of West Virginia in 1891, be submitted to the vote of the people of said district at the next ensuing election, held throughout said district for its ratification or rejection, was this day presented to the Court. On consideration whereof, it is ordered that the prayer of the said petition be granted and it is further ordered that said "Alternate Road Law" enacted in 1891, be submitted to the voters of said Edray District for its ratification or rejection at the general election to be held through out said Edray District on the first Tuesday in November, 1900, that being the next ensuing election held throughout said District after the presentation of said petition. It is further ordered that the clerk of this court certify a copy of this order to the ballot commissioners of Pocahontas county, who shall cause to be printed upon the ballots used in voting at said election in said district, the words prescribed in section 56 of chapter 43 of the Code of West Virginia, 1891, and said clerk shall cause due publication to be made of this order in the Pocahontas Times, a weekly newspaper, published at Marlinton, in said district, at least once a week for four successive weeks prior to said election.

TESTIMONY.

Rev E. O. GUERRANT, D. D., Kentucky

"A good female school is a public blessing, and among many noble institutions I do not know a better one than the one presided over by Rev R. L. Telford at Lewisburg, W. Va. It is Christian, Biblical, thorough, and attractive—making not only finished scholars, but lovely Christian characters. It is good enough to educate my own daughter, and I take pleasure in commending it to my friends."

Dr J. M. POYATZ, of Richmond, Ky.

"Rarely indeed does one have the opportunity of placing their daughters in so good an institution of learning as the one presided over by Rev R. L. Telford at Lewisburg. Anyway, it has been good enough for me. My daughter has been cared for as if she had been a member of the family."

J. J. ECHOLS, Esq., of West Virginia.

"I have been a patron of the Lewisburg Female Institute for the last six years, and I believe that under the present management it is the very best Female School in the two Virginias. If I had a dozen daughters I would want them all educated there."

Rev M. L. LACY, D. D., of West Virginia.

"I honestly believe it is the best school of which I have any knowledge."

Hon JOHN W McCREERY, of the State Senate, West Virginia.

"I regard the school as one of the best in the country."

LOCATION—Old Virginia town. Best of society. High and healthy, 2,250 feet above the sea. Climate and mountain scenery unsurpassed.

IMPROVEMENTS—Seventeen thousand dollars expended during the last six years in buildings and improvements.

TRUTH SEEKING.

h not, O seeker after Truth, path with roses strewn will be;
friends shall smiling, stop thy hand,
d those thee by their sympathy.

words are eager as thine own by you shall find Truth more marvel than hold long cherished error flee, all bows the chains of creed that bind.

serve thy soul to meet rebuffs, lonely plod thy weary way;
ear the scorn and bitter words,
nd all that tries man's constancy.

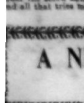

Truth is a bird of beauty rare
That never hath been by mortal caught;
And they that sings a noble song
But few can hear its heavenly note.

A dreamer may amid the throng
Above the clamor faintly hear
A few armed notes that thrill his soul,
And fill with melody his ear;

And, passing, may bid others pause
And listen, in the noise of strife,
But ah! the din of earth is great,
And all unheeding is the throng.

A NIGHT OF HORRORS.

By an Officer of the U. S. Secret Service.

TRAVELING the road from Hillsville to Golden, some years ago, I found myself overtaken by night in a lonely part of the route, with a howling storm coming up from the west that rendered the sky darker and gloomier at every step.

The horse I bestrode was a powerful animal, but had been ridden hard during the day and was exhibiting signs of great fatigue.

I was not in the best of humor. I had agreed to meet the Chief of Service at Golden, on the following morning, at a very early hour, and knew I would not get there. Add to this that I was supperless and worn down with the day's ride and it may be imagined that I was in no very amiable mood. The storm was approaching nearer every moment, and I was just despairing of shelter, when the horse shied suddenly to one side of the road, and I fell slick on him before with a violence that nearly unseated me; and the next moment my eyes were dazzled with a brilliant light, that seemed to have been instantaneously flashed out of the darkness.

"Halt, in the name of the law!" said a gruff voice; and I then observed a man standing in the middle of the road, holding a lantern in the left hand of which was a strong reflector, and a pistol in the right, which he leveled at my head.

"Halt, I say, here!" said a gruff voice; and I then observed a man standing in the middle of the road, holding a lantern, in the left hand of which was a strong reflector, and a pistol in the right, which he leveled at my head.

"Halt, I say, here!" said a gruff voice; and I then observed a man standing in the middle of the road, holding a lantern, in the left hand of which was a strong reflector, and a pistol in the right, which he leveled at my head. "Dismount, or I'll blow your brains out!" he added, in a tone of command that left no room for hesitation.

"Don't shoot, for heaven's sake!" I cried, as I dismounted. "What do you want of me?"

"Your money or your life!" he replied, coolly.

"Take the money, then, and let me go," I said, handing him my pocketbook, which contained about $100.

"Is that all you have?" he asked, as he took the pocketbook.

"Every cent," I replied.

"Then you may go," he said, returning the pocketbook. "I don't want your money. I'm after bigger game than that."

"Then why did you stop me?" I asked, considerably astonished.

"Because I thought you were somebody else," he replied.

"Well, I'm not, and I'm glad of it," I said, remounting my horse.

"You're in a hurry, I suppose?" he said, with a sneer.

"Yes, I am in a hurry," I replied, angrily.

"Then you'd better be off," he said, coolly.

"I'm going as fast as I can," I said, angrily.

"Then you'd better go faster

Negro Shot.

Monday three negroes came to town and acted disorderly. One of the trio carried a Winchester rifle which he discharged time and again in a reckless manner. Sergeant F. P. Anderson's attention was called to the disorderly conduct and was warned at the same time that the negro was dangerous and called on W. B. Mann as a guard.

He approached the negro and when he had gotten inside of the reach of his weapon he laid his hand on the rifle and said, "Consider yourself under arrest."

The negro swung in a mad circle and the gun with Anderson clinging to the muzzle and pointing it away from his body, the negro trying to bring it in range apparently.

Anderson called to Mann to shoot which the latter immediately did cutting the shirt on the sergeant's arm and inflicting a flesh wound in the arm of the negro. The next shot plowed a furrow in the negro's head. The negro was placed under arrest. He was shot in the elbow. Dr. Price attended him.

His two companions slank away and left town at once. On the Price Hill they met Uncle Tom an old negro who was also mildly fired with a pistol. It is unpleasant to contemplate such acts of bravado on the part of negro men, who when under the influence of liquor are dangerous nuisances of society.

Accident to R. K Burns.

Robert K. Burns of Academy, went with a four horse team to the Hot Springs for a load of cement, he started back Tuesday evening and having failed to get a place to stay all night was driving about eleven o'clock on the road on the spur just beyond Jackson's River. The night was very dark and the road extremely dangerous if approached too near the edge, as the bank is very precipitous for several hundred feet below the road.

He had with him Bob Rose who was walking in front carrying a lantern. At a place where the road made an in curve and it seems that the wagon and team went straight on the wagon was precipitated down the bank some of the barrels of cement going to the bottom of the hills.

Mr Burns was in the wreck and came out of it with a leg crushed just above the ankle. He was removed to Mrs W. D Price's where he now is. He suffered four fractures. Drs Criser and Page set the leg and he is now doing as well as could be expected. The team and wagon were not hurt. Going over the road is a danger that is ever present with wagoners in a mountainous country and the road between Marlinton and Millboro has many places marked by accidents of this sort.

Jacob McClure, of Albion, Noble County, Indiana, is here on business.

The Farmer's Institute meets at Academy next Wednesday and Thursday, October 10 and 11. Full program next week.

R. B. Farrier, Secretary of the Home Fire Insurance Co., of Lewisburg, is in the county inspecting risks and soliciting new insurance.

J. W. Hill, who is working on the Beard & Marlowe building, inflicted a very painful wound on his knee with a hatchet Monday morning requiring several stitches. Dr Friel attending surgeon.

Dr Myers, pharmacist for C. A. Gillespie at this place died last Thursday night after a short illness with typhoid fever. Where he leaves two children. The remains were taken to Davis for interment.

Amos Lange, aged about ten years, daughter of Mrs Mary Lange near Marlinton, had her arm broken at the elbow. She was in the act of mounting a horse; the animal shied, and she fell with such violence as to cause a bad fracture.

A five year old child of Elias Campbell, staying at J. R. Appleman's was kicked in the face by a colt, Wednesday, breaking a part of the upper jaw and knocking out four teeth. Dr Price rendered medical aid and reports a bad but not necessarily dangerous wound.

We learn from the Greenbrier Independent that Summers Dilley died at his home near Frankford Saturday, September 22, 1900, aged 49 years. Mr Dilley was a resident of Marlinton for a time and moved to Greenbrier about a year ago. He leaves a wife and six or seven children.

Col. O'Connor is locating a camp of two hundred men on Beaver Creek about midway from Hunterville, with a view to cutting six million feet of pulp wood. It will be the largest camp in the county. The supply stock of the railroad and road to Cotton on is not to be touched by the time it is used up the wood must be in operation to keep the mill busy for months ahead. Mr Kennett is now in the city.

DUNMORE.

Hugh P. McLaughlin was in town Sunday morning for a burial outfit for Mrs Jasper Dilley, who died at her home many Hunter yesday Saturday, September 29, aged 35. Mrs Dilley was a daughter of Perry Hogsett, and was a good woman, kind wife, and loving mother. She leaves a husband, six children and a host of friends to mourn her loss. Her disease was consumption.

John Shanklin says he will give $30 towards an iron fence around the Dunmore graveyard. All public spirited persons should contribute and have the fence put up.

There are about three hundred men at work at the new town of Cass.

And still they move: George Bambrick has moved to the A. M. Oliver house, and Washington Hoover has moved to Charles Nottingham's farm.

The renowned Frank Jackson spent part of last week in our town. He will insure your life, which is a good thing.

Vice-President Axtell and Messrs Pierce and Hankins were up to Dunbin last week.

John Shanklin has had a nice monument erected at his son's grave and has put a substantial iron fence around it. The monument was also erected to the Greeks who were killed at the same time that Mr Shanklin was.

Mr and Mrs Dick Beard is up on a visit.

Auctioneer Sweeker will make Mrs Harper's sale October 5.

It's a little strange indeed to see how some men will kick against high taxes and high prices and then go to the polls and vote for high tariff, trust, war taxes &c. If the Republican party had three cheers out of the way this fall, that is Bryan, Trust and War, McKinley would have a clean walk over.

We clip the following from a well known paper:

McKinley Coining Silver.

Wm. McKinley, the erstwhile apostle of free coinage, declares that the standard silver dollar is worth only 50 cents, that it is a half-cent dollar and one which it is a crime to palm off upon the people for 100 cents. And yet, while hypocritically holding up his hands in holy horror at the very thought of this dishonest dollar he coined and put into circulation 13,000,000 of them during the four months ending June 30, and since he has been in office he has coined and put into circulation more than 53,000,000 of these same dollars, and every dollar of them coined at the ratio of 16 to 1, where have been only two months since he was sworn in when the dollar was worth more than that ratio, and yet he is now trying to frighten the people by telling them that the menace of 16 to 1 hangs over them, threatening to destroy the splendid prosperity which has followed his induction into office. So it appears that this rabid gold standard administration is in debt, in a large measure, to the silver dollar what prosperity we have, and, knowing the fact, is grinding them out faster than was done under the reckless (?) administration of Hayes Garfield, Arthur and Cleveland, and nearly as fast as during the administration of Harrison. Our opinion on McKinley for an arrent hypocrisy. Mr. Pooh.

MARRIED.

Kerr—Grogg.

On September 12, at the home of the bride, Joseph Hill Kerr and Miss Mollie Jennette Grogg were united in marriage by the Rev. H. W. McLaughlin.

Mrs Kerr is the daughter of Mr and Mrs J. W. Grogg, near Arbovale, and is a highly esteemed by all who know her. Mr Kerr is the third son of Mr and Mrs J. W. Kerr, of Green Bank.

A supper at the home of the bride and a dinner at the home of the groom were served the bounty of this bountious land.

Walker—Robbins.

Married, at Hotel Wagner, in Huntersville, 7 o'clock, Thursday evening, October 27, by Rev W. T. Price, John Walker and Miss Susan Margaret Robbins, attended by Aaron Thomas and Miss Amey Simmons.

The bride is a daughter of the late Widow Robbins, of Mountain Grove, Va. The groom is a native of Indiana County, Pennsylvania, but has been a woodsman in Pocahontas campa the past sixteen years.

The occasion was largely attended a very enjoyable supper was partaken of by forty or fifty guests. The bride received some nice presents and the parties were heartily congratulated by many persons, and many kind wishes expressed.

Patterson—Baxter.

A very quiet society event transpired at high noon, September 26, at the residence of George Baxter, near Edray, when James Henry Patterson and Miss Alice B. F. Baxter were joined in holy matrimony; Wm. T. Price, officiating minister.

The bride is the second daughter of George Baxter, and for some years has been a highly esteemed and successful teacher of public schools. The groom is a son of J. H. Patterson, clerk of the Pocahontas Circuit court. He has undoubtions and skillful young workingman of Marlinton.

George Ashbridge presided at the organ with propriety. There were no attendants or ushers.

A feast in full and tastefully arranged dinner was served and enjoyed by about thirty persons, mostly members of the families and nearest relatives of the contracting parties. There was a reception that evening at the home of the groom in Marlinton. Many kind wishes attend these young people upon their auspicious marriage.

DIED.

Mrs Jasper Dilley.

Mrs Jasper Dilley died at her home near Mt Tabor about noon Saturday, September 29, after a lingering illness occasioned by pulmonary and other troubles. She was a daughter of W. Perry Hogsett on Browns Creek and was a person of great amiability and purity of character. Her decease is a very sad bereavement to her husband and a large family of small children, and a great loss to society.

Thus friend after friend departs;
Who has not lost a friend?
There is no union here of hearts,
But what must know an end.
Were this vain world our final rest
Living or dying none were blest.
—W. T. P.

Summers Dilley.

Died, at his home in Greenbrier County, near Frankford, September 22, 1900, Summers Dilley, aged 49 years. He was a man highly respected for his good character, and his death is sincerely lamented. He worked hard all his life and was a kind true hearted man, respected by all who knew him.

A precious one from us is gone,
A voice we loved is stilled.
A place is vacant in our home
Which never can be filled.

God in His wisdom has recalled
The boon his love had given,
And though the body slumbers now
The soul is safe in Heaven.

Handy Thoughts.

We would furnish our readers with a few pearls of thought that will beautify the characters of all, who may use them.

Never think what you can would not do; never do what you would not do again.

Walk if you can; ride if you must; crawl if you have to, but whatever you do, keep moving.

A man with more theology than he has religion, is like a boy wearing his grand-father's overcoat. Without good common sense, knowledge is a cripple, beauty an idiot and strength a lunatic.

Love of honor honeycombs the heart; love of wealth hardens the heart; love of pleasure rots the heart.

Impatience never benefits ourselves, never aids our friends, and never injures our enemies.

A good life full of idleness is as a good piece of cloth full of moth eaten holes, do you call such cloth, or such a life good?

Courage without politeness is rudeness; without caution foolishness; and courage without love cruelty.

It is a foolish young mouth that despises judgment and experience, and old age is still more foolish that despises hope and enthusiasm.

Never talk unless you say something.

Great things are easier to do than small things; hence it is that we see so many little people with big ways.

Life without love is about as much to the purpose as a table without food.

He, who has lost faith, has lost every thing worth living for.

A man's enemies throw bricks at him for looking at them; his friends throw bricks at him because he don't look at them. Hence the man that is never thrown at has neither friends nor enemies, and seems to count for little or nothing in this world.

Consumption

is, by no means, the dreadful disease it is thought to be—in the beginning.

It can always be stopped—in the beginning. The trouble is: you don't know you've got it; you don't believe it; you won't believe it—till you are forced to. Then it is dangerous.

Don't be afraid; but attend to it quick—you can do it yourself and at home.

Take Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil, and live carefully every way.

This is sound doctrine, whatever you may think or be told; and, if heeded, will save life.

If you have not tried it, send for free sample. Its agreeable taste will surprise you.

Alternate Road Law.

At a county court continued and held for the County of Pocahontas, at the Court-house thereof on Wednesday, the 27th day of June 1900.

A petition signed by G. D. McNeil, J. O Morrison and 69 other voters of the Edray District in this county, verified by proper affidavit, praying that the "Alternate Road Law," enacted by the Legislature of West Virginia in 1891, be submitted to the vote of the people of said district at the next ensuing election, held throughout said district for its ratification or rejection, was this day presented to the Court. On consideration whereof, it is ordered that the prayer of the said petition be granted, and it is further ordered that said "Alternate Road Law" enacted in 1891, be submitted to the voters of said Edray District for its ratification or rejection at the general election to be held through out said Edray District on the first Tuesday in November, 1900, that being the next ensuing election held throughout said district after the presentation of said petition. It is further ordered that the clerk of this court certify a copy of this order to the ballot commissioners of Pocahontas county, who shall cause to be printed on the ballots used in voting at said election in said district, the words prescribed in section 56 of chapter 43 of the Code of West Virginia, 1891, and said clerk shall cause due publication to be made of this order in the Pocahontas Times, a weekly newspaper, published at Marlinton, in said district, at least once a week for four successive weeks prior to said election.

Came near Dying.

"For three days and nights I suffered agony untold from an attack of cholera morbus brought on by eating cucumbers," says M. E. Low clerk of the district court, Centerville, Iowa. "I thought I would surely die, and tried a dozen different medicines but all to no purpose. I sent for a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and three doses relieved me entirely. I went to sleep and did not wake up for eight hours. On awakening a few hours ago I felt so gratified that the first work I do on going to the office is to write to the manufacturers of this remedy and offer them my grateful thanks and say 'God bless you for the splendid medicine you make.'" HIS EMINENT DIVINE'S SUNDAY DISCOURSE.

Subject: Children of a King—The Royal Home of Jesus, and the Sun, the Moon, the Stars and All Nature Are Its Heritage—Cross Its Heraldic Sign.

(Copyrighted, 1900.)

WASHINGTON, D. C.—In this discourse Dr. Talmage who, during his journey westward has seen the Alps and the Andes, the splendors, in passing through the Rocky Mountains, shows that there is no higher dignity nor more illustrious honor than those which the Christian has as a child of God; text, Judges viii., 18, "Each one resembled the children of a king."

Gideon and Ishmenia had been out to battle and when they came back they were asked what kind of people they had seen. The answer was that they looked like a royal appearance, "each one resembled the children of a king." That description of people in great victories figures are always why have this appearance. Indeed, 2,000 years ago Gideon and Ishmenia had a right to look like princes, for the Lord Almighty. Though now in exile, they shall yet come to their throne. Then all the kingdoms that stand for wealth, or patriotism, or intelligence. The name of Washington among us will ever wave resent patriotism. The family of idea of royal blood is the representation of letters. The family of Rothschilds is significant of wealth, the loss of $40,000,000 in 1848 putting them to the test of resilience, and within a few years they have hundred times $120,000,000. Napoleon, $200,000,000; and the strokes of their hand, $200,000,000, and the strokes of their pen, no one knows how much, when everything from the Irish Sea to the Dardanelles. They open their hand, and there is a famine; they shut their hand, and there is plenty. The Romanoffs of Russia, the Hohenzollerns of Germany, the Bourbons of France, the Stuarts and Guelphs of Great Britain are houses whose names are interwoven with the history of their respective nations symbolic of imperial authority.

But I propose to-day to consider a royal house rich and more extensive—the royal house of Jesus, of whom the whole family in heaven and on earth is named. We are born of royal parentage

Now he stopped to speculate on the future. He was in a terrible plight. He could never get back to the ledge, and he could not go forward. He must die in the cave. Then he thought of Nannie, and how she would look for him, and how she would wait and watch and pray. He must not die. He must get out. He would not give up. He would go on and on, and he would find the outlet. He would see the sun again, and the green trees, and the flowers, and Nannie. He would live for her sake.

Then he thought of his mother, and how she would grieve for him. He must live for her sake, too. He would get out of the cave, and he would go back to the farm, and he would be a good son to his mother, and he would be a good husband to Nannie, and he would be a good father to the children that would be born to them. He would be all that he could be to them, and he would make them happy. He would live for them.

Then he thought of his father, and how he had died in the poorhouse, and how he had disgraced his name, and how he had been a bad son to him. He would live for his father's sake, too. He would live to redeem the name of Hawkins. He would live to be a good man, and a good husband, and a good father, and a good son. He would live for all these reasons.

Then he thought of his self-reliance, and how he had always been able to take care of himself, and how he had always been able to get out of trouble. He would get out of this trouble, too. He would not give up. He would go on and on, and he would find the outlet. He would see the sun again, and the green trees, and the flowers, and Nannie. He would live for her sake

A. M. McLaughlin with his son Lee for two or three days made matters lively from Elk to Marlinton, weighing, selling and shifting sheep and cattle.

A fine land sale by the McClure heirs last Tuesday. Mss S. K. McClure bought the Moore place; Jos S. E. Baxter the White land, and I. L. Kershner the Droop Mountain place.

Clifford Harford, of Falling Springs, was severely injured by a falling tree at O'Connell's camp on Beaver Creek last Saturday. He was struck on the head. Dr Price of Marlinton attended him.

Col Tarr, Messrs Critcher, Jones Stephenson, McClure, McWhorter, Strader, E. B. Jones, Gilmer, Wallace and Van Sickler were the attorneys from neighboring counties in attendance at court.

Special Policemen were much in evidence during court, and as a result the hoosiers went home with their riders still cleaner, if anything. Complaints of "attention paid" but rarely heard, the inference being that its taste impressed upon acquaintance and not as much needed as at former sessions of the courts. One of the very amusing features of previous court times was sight of numerous horses moving at a trot while riders were seemingly going at a fast lopeing movement.

Lightner-Atkinson.

A pretty wedding and somewhat unexpected marriage occurred on west Marlinton, November, October 3, 1900 when Andrew Jackson Lightner and Miss Irene Atkinson appeared and were pronounced man and wife by Rev W. T. Price, while seated in their buggy.

The bride is a daughter of the late Enoch Atkinson, near Buckeye and needs introduction to none in this section. She is a niece of Henry Lightner, and is an interesting young working man. Their starting point for future married life was at the home of the bride and they will be at home to their friends at the home of the groom on Knapp's Creek.

Deering Prizes at Paris.

The Deering Harvester Co. received notification from abroad that it was awarded the grand prize as well as two gold and one silver medal at the Paris Exposition. These were the highest awards obtainable.

The six Deering exhibits excited much comment, not only from foreign and American visitors, but were inspected by President Loubet in person, who complimented James Deering upon the enterprise displayed by the great manufacturing company of which he is a member.

The Deering Harvester Company was designated by the French Government to make the retrospective exhibit of harvesting machinery showing the improvements in that line during the past century. This exhibit was the most complete ever attempted, and probably no one ever again will be willing to expend the amount of money and patience necessary to equal it.

In addition the Deering Harvester Co exhibited in the United States Annex a full line of the machines manufactured by it, as well as a separate exhibit of twine, showing the process of cultivating fibres and manufacturing them into this important staple.

A number of automatic metal working machines such as are employed by the Deering shops were exhibited. Some of these machines do the work of fifteen hands.

One of the features of the new factories now building on a mammoth corn harvester, illustrating the method of harvesting corn in Argentina.

The models of the Deering Harvester works, of which there were ten, were an unique and interesting. But one of these was installed in the Department of Civil Engineering.

Brave Rescue Rewarded.

R. E. Gwinnett, Cashier of the bank of Pocahontas, of this place, received a check for $50 from Andrew Carnegie, the Pittsburg Steel magnate, Tuesday morning. The check was in payment for the heroic act of Robert Kinnison, a boy employed by Mr. Gwinnett, in saving the life of Mr. Gwinnett's little son, Robert, who fell into the river at the footbridge on Saturday afternoon, September 15th. The boy was rewarded by Mr. Carnegie for his heroic act.—Bluefield Telegraph.

Alternate Road Law.

At a county court continued and held for the County of Pocahontas, at the Court-house thereof on Wednesday, the 27th day of June 1900.

A petition signed by G. D. McNeil, J. O. Morrison and 65 other voters of the Edray District in this county, verified by proper affidavit, praying that the "Alternate Road Law," enacted by the Legislature of West Virginia in 1891, be submitted to the vote of the people of said district at the next ensuing election, held throughout said district for its ratification or rejection, was this day presented to the Court. On consideration whereof, it is ordered that the prayer of the said petition be granted, and it is further ordered that said "Alternate Road Law," enacted in 1891, be submitted to the voters of said Edray District for its ratification or rejection at the general election to be held through out said Edray District on the first Tuesday in November, 1900, that being the next ensuing election held throughout said District after the presentation of said petition. It is further ordered that the clerk of this court certify a copy of this order to the ballot commissioners of Pocahontas county, who shall cause to be printed upon the ballots used in voting at said election in said district, the words prescribed in section 56 of chapter 43 of the Code of West Virginia, 1891, and said clerk shall cause due publication to be made of this order in the Pocahontas Times, a weekly newspaper, published at Marlinton, in said District, at least once a week for four successive weeks prior to said election.

Came near Dying.

"For three days and nights I suffered agony untold from an attack of cholera morbus brought on by eating cucumbers," says M. E. Low clerk of the district court, Centerville, Iowa. "I thought I would surely die, and tried a dozen different medicines but all to no purpose. I sent for a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and three doses relieved me entirely. I went to sleep and did not wake up for eight hours. On awakening a few hours ago I felt so gratified that the first work I do on going to the office is to write to the manufacturers of this remedy and offer them my grateful thanks and say God bless you for the splendid medicine you make." This remedy is for sale by

REV. DR. TALMAGE.

THE EMINENT DIVINE'S SUNDAY DISCOURSE.

Subject: The Garden of the King—Christ the Founder and Gardener—The Flowers and Fruits of Religious Devotion —The Beauty of Right Living.

[Copyright 1896.]

WASHINGTON, D. C.—This sermon Dr. Talmage sends from a bathing place in his journey through the valleys of Switzerland. It seems to have been prepared amid the bloom and aroma of a garden midsummer day. The text is found in Solomon's Song: "I am come into my garden."

The Bible is a great garden, and there is in it boldness rhythm and bold imagery and startling antithesis and rapturous lyric and sweet pastoral and instructive narrative and devotional psalm; thoughts expressed in style more solemn than that of Montgomery and Milton, more lofty than that of Milton, more terrible than that of Dante, more natural than that of Words worth, more pathetic than that of Thomas Pollok, more tender than that of Cowper, more sweet than that of Spenser. A great poem brings all the gems of the earth into its coronet, and it weaves the flowers of language into a chaplet whose odors and hues and harmonies are immortal. Everything this book touches it makes beautiful. Sin and death have cursed the world, but the Bible has come to open wide again the sunset throbbing door to the daughters of Nahor and Rebekah at the fountain, and Ruth, from the full pools of Heshbon up to the psalmist praising God with thousands of sheep on a thousand hills, and Job in the agony of Uzzen, Arctuvus and the Pleiades.

My text leads us into a scene of summer residence. The King of the land had a great many beautiful gardens. Charle magne added to his other glories the possession of the finest orchards in his realm. Shenstone, the poet, has writings have made but little impression on the world, but his garden, the Leasowes, will be immortal. To the natural advantages of that place was brought the perfection of art. Arbor and terrace and shaded pathway rustic bench and reservoir and urn and fountain and statue all their exquisiteness. And yew and hazel put forth their richest foliage. There was no life more diligent. no social enjoyment more genial than Shenstone, and all that diligence and genius can bring to the adornment of a home of one thousand were. He gave £300 for it; he sold it for £17,000. And yet I am to tell you to-day of a garden better than any I have mentioned. It is the garden spoken of in my text, the garden of the church, which belongs to Christ. He had text says so. He bought it. He planted it. He owns it, and he shall have it.

Walter Scott, in his outlay at Abbotsford, ruined his fortune, and now, in the great houses and gardens of those grounds you can almost think or imagine that you see the blood of the old man's broken heart. The ground that he had bought with gold he fined him. But I have to tell you that Christ's first garden was watered with the sweat and blood of the agonies of the beautiful garden of the church, of which my text speaks. Oh, how much it belongs to Christ! Every fragrant temple and reservoir and urn and fountain and statue belong to Christ. Every vine and tree and hazel put forth their richest foliage. There was no life more diligent, no social enjoyment more genial than that of Christ. And yet I am to tell you to-day of a greater garden than any I have mentioned. It is the garden spoken of in my text, the garden of the church, which belongs to Christ. He had text says so. He bought it. He planted it. He owns it, and he shall have it.

The heaven of your little ones will not be complete without the flowers of earth. All the kindnesses shown them by honor bells will not make them forget the flowers of their childhood, the radiant things that went out from your homes. I throw a kiss to the flowers that have blessed me. I have walked in the palace. The crippled child has a round foot now. A little lame child says, "Oh, I feel like I have a new leg." So my darling, you won't be lame in heaven. A little sick child says, "Shall I be sick in heaven?" And the mother says, "No, my dear, you won't be sick in heaven." A little blind child says, "Shall I be blind in heaven?" "No, my dear, you won't be blind in heaven. They are all well there.

I suppose that after a while some time times have high fences around them, and I cannot get in. I do not want to get in. My darling, you won't be lame in heaven. A little sick child says, "Shall I be sick in heaven?" And the mother says, "No, my dear, you won't be sick in heaven." A little blind child says, "Shall I be blind in heaven?" "No, my dear, you won't be blind in heaven. They are all well there.

TH FOUND OUT.

TON DONNELL.

"Your father? N-no,but I shall have good company. I will tell you all about it when I get home."

"I hope it will be good company," she amended, out in the hall. She went on down the stairs, trembling a little—Aunt Faith was a shy woman—but strong in her determination to "find out things."

Barry was waiting in the big, dim parlor. He came forward eagerly at the sound of her steps. The vision of old-fashioned Aunt Faith in the doorway occasioned a hasty retreat to his chair again.

"I—thought it was Miss Faith," he stumbled, apologetically.

"Well, it is," smiled Aunt Faith. "I'm Miss Faith. Have I kept you waiting long? I didn't mean to, but it takes old people a good while to dress, you know—or you don't know, but you will when it's your turn."

She had followed up his retreat and was holding out her hand to him. There was no possible chance for him to ignore it.

"How kind it was in you to come for me," she cried. "If you hadn't I should have missed the lecture, for my brother Richard is no good at all as an escort. Dear me; I should say not! When he gets buried in his three dailies, that's the end of him! Ought we to be starting? Then I'll have to ask you to button my glove. Faith II. buttoned the other. If she wasn't sick, I should ask you if you won't be willing for her to go with us."

Naughty Aunt Faith! If her conscience pricked, it did not keep her gray eyes from twinkling. She watched the boy covertly as he fumbled with her glove.

"Poor boy!" she thought. "I'm sorry for you!"

Barry Lincoln was sorry for himself. Little by little, as Aunt Faith's bright voice ran on, the puzzle of things had untangled itself. Now he understood. He remembered Faith's speaking of her namesake aunt. There were two Miss Faith Margaret Pyles, and this was the wrong one, standing here buttoning the glove buttoned.

"She's got the letter and thought it was for her. She expects to go to the lecture with me—she'll be disappointed!" His thoughts went along swiftly. "She's a little sort of old-fashioned, and she lived in the country. There aren't any lectures to go in the country. And besides, it would embarrass her dreadfully to find out she wasn't going. Well, Barry Lincoln, you've to 'et up by your chin, my boy! What are you going to do about it?"

He answered his own question promptly. To his mind there was only the one thing to do. He took out his watch.

"Yes, we ought to be starting," he said. "It's quite a long way to the hall."

They were going out of the house and through the vestibule. The steps outside were a little slippery, and Barry offered his arm, politely. That was Aunt Faith's first entry in the book of her remembrance, and she entered it on the credit side.

"Offered his arm instead of taking mine—good!" she thought.

"There's a red car coming. Shall we take it, Miss Faith?"

"Oh, no. Why not walk, if there's time? Did you think aunts were rather delicate? Well, that's another thing you'll find out when—"

"When it's my turn to be an aunt," laughed Barry, in spite of himself. Aunt Faith was little and Barry Lincoln wasn't. He was short-stop on the high school nine, and measured six feet and a-huge-five feet eleven. He tried to diminish his long stride to the measure of Aunt Faith's steps, but it was only occasionally he could bring himself to it. Aunt Faith's black silk bonnet bobbed up and down beside him cheerfully. Barry remembered his own mother all the way down the street—a pretty, dainty little woman.

"It's a little up-hill isn't it?" gasped Aunt Faith, gently. They spoke of other unessential matters after that.

J. S. McNeel, Exec. of W. L. McNeel, dec'd.
vs
Mary L. McNeel et als.

Pursuant to a decree of the Circuit Court of Pocahontas County, West Virginia, rendered on the 4th day of October, 1900, at the October term thereof, I will proceed at my office in the town of Marlinton, West Va., on the 3rd day of December, 1900, to take, state and report to court the following matters of account, to-wit:

First—What personal assets came or should have come into the hands of the plaintiff as executor of Wm. L. McNeel, and what disposition plaintiff has made of the same.

Second—What real estate or interest therein said Wm. L. McNeel owned at the time of his death, giving location, area and probable value.

Third—The persons entitled as devisees under the will of said Wm L. McNeel, and what each one is entitled to.

Fourth—The debts owing by Wm. L. McNeel at the time of his death, stating which ones, if any, were secured, in what manner, and giving amount and priority of each debt and to whom due.

Fifth—What lands if any owned by said Wm. L. McNeel are subject to the dower interest of Mary L. McNeel.

Sixth—Any other matter to be specially stated, deemed pertinent by the Commissioner or required by any party in interest.

At which time and place, you may attend. T. S. McNEEL,
Commissioner.

NOTICE TO CREDITORS.

To the creditors of Wm. L. McNeel, deceased:

In pursuance of a decree of the circuit court of Pocahontas County made in a cause therein pending, to subject the real estate of the said Wm. L. McNeel to the payment of his debts, you are notified to present your claims against the estate of the said Wm. L. McNeel for adjustment to T. S. McNeel, Commissioner, at his office in Marlinton on or before the 3rd day of December, 1900.

To Cure Lagrippe in Two Days

Take LAXATIVE BROMO QUININE TABLETS. All druggists refund the money if it fails to cure. E. W. Grove's signature on every box 25c.

It Happened in a Drug Store.

"One day last winter a ladie came to my drug store and asked for a bound of cough medicine that I did not have in stock," says Mr C. B. Brandin, the popular druggist of Ontario N. Y. "She was disappointed and wanted to know what cough preparation I could recommend. I said to her that I could freely recommend Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and that she could take a bottle of the remedy and after giving it a fair trial if she did not find it worth the money to bring back the bottle and I would refund the price paid. In the course of a day or two the lady came back in company with a friend in need of a cough medicine and advised her to buy a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. I consider that a very good recommendation for the remedy." The remedy owes its great popularity and extensive sale in a large measure to the personal recomendations of people who have been cured by its use.

Sold by H. R. Echols, Marlinton, Barlow & Moore, Edray; R. Bubbs, Huntersville, D. T. McNeel, Buckeye, W. Va.

For sprains, swellings and lame ness there is nothing so good as Chamberlain's Pain Balm. Try it.

Notice.

Sealed bids will be received by the undersigned at his office in the town of Marlinton, W. Va., until Monday, November 12, 1900, noon, for the construction of a pound of pubic road in Green Bank District, commencing at the foot of Little Mountain on Tory ground, the new road to run from there along the east base of Little Mountain to the Sutton Ford of Greenbrier river on the Huntersville road, to be laid out by R. H. Somers and J. W. Gibson, surveyor. Said road to be built accord ing to the specifications on file in the office of the Commissioner of Roads, chapter 8 section 14, and is to be completed by the 1st day of July, 1901. The county reserves the right to reject any or all bids. By order of the County Court.

HERE, THERE AND NOWHERE

For Men Only.

In most cities the searcher after truth will find that there are theatres where women do not go to make up the audience, though that is a fact that does not appear on the surface, but has to be found out by reason of that under current that is to be noticed in cities, which the papers do not tell about. There is one Pocahontas man who decided to go and see the place where women do not go in Washington, and he was so little shocked that he is likely to go again.

The theatre was a handsome building, the home of the vaudeville and burlesque it claimed; it cost fifteen cents. This prejudiced the man of the mountains in favor of the place to begin with. He found however that this admitted him to the privilege of becoming a gallery god alongside of a lot of youngsters who looked like they made their living hard. Seated on a hard form he was prepared for the worst that could happen.

The play began on the minute and it was apparent that if there was women lacking in the audience there were to be plenty on the stage. We were located among newsboys, and one of them was evidently an admirer of the leading lady, and had watched the show for days, and he interpreted it for a comparsita.

To begin with, perhaps we had better state, the mountaineer found that it was less shocking than the comic opera he had seen the evening before where all the ladies of the town attended, for fear that he may be accused of attending something low.

After some acrobatic feats some pictures were shown on the curtain to illustrate a song about an old man who in his young days had loved an actress. His daughter brought him a rose, and he told her how, when scandal had blackened the name of the girl, he had cast her off, and had stolen back to see the play and saw her wearing a faded rose he had given her. And when the picture showing the stricken girl in the last stages of consumption or something else threatening the rose as the emblem of her only hope for happiness—a picture to make the parent so weep—he is easily said to be his friend. "Did pictures worth a dime ever of admission."

And that describes the performance. As far as we could see the artiste appealed to the finer feelings of the audience as much as though the smell of the millionaire had pervaded the building, and that to an audience in which there were no women. A colored lady was stationed in the gallery when the play began, but she was evidently dispensed before the play was over.

Of course a great many of the performers seemed fatherless as a state, but that does not take from their appearing in public circles in the future, and if you go to the theatre at all you are sure to find some of all sorts of men and women to impress you that the world is only a stage, and that we are all players.

After the special feature came a play in which a very entrancing creature, known as the New York girl, goes to the races. There is a horse to enter which has odds of a thousand to one, or something of that sort, and she sees two poor men, a Jew and an Irishman standing by, and she puts a bet on the long shot in their favor. Mike, like our railroad hands, has more money than would think from the looks of him and he is so flattered by the attention of the beautiful lady that he puts up a big roll of bills on the hopeless chance, and the Jew who comes by his money naturally does the same. The result is that Kinley Mack, the long chance, wins, and the bobbies are rich.

All through the scenes there is the poetry of motion in the dancing, but nothing that could be objected to. The policeman who has been detailed to keep order at the performance pursues the peaceful avocation of taking tickets while the regular ticket collector worships at the shrine of the leading lady.

One surprise is given the people. A peanut man has been vending his wares in the gallery, when a soubrette comes out and sings a plaintive song and asks the audience to join in the chorus. There is no response to this with the exception of the peanut man who whistles the chorus in astonishing manner. The whistle carries one away and is the work of a real artist. It is introduced in such a charming manner that it makes a deep impress. To hear the boy who has been actually trying to sell you a pint of peanuts break out in that marvelously beautiful and piercing whistle is indeed an experience. After thus distinguishing himself the peanut man takes his place behind the curtain. In theatres as elsewhere it is evil to him who sees evil.

INDUCEMENTS TO CAPITAL

For years Pocahontas county has been trying to induce moneyed men to make investments in the county. It seems that they have gone a step too far from the following editorial from the Charleston Gazette:

"The attention of the Democrats of Pocahontas county is called to the fact that Senator Elkins is watching their monkey shines with great satisfaction. A Republican candidate in that county will get a shock if he has not already received it, to give him a "start."

In order to accuse a better car service and for more concentrated effort to meet the increased demand for coal at Fairmont, October 8, a conference of the principal mines of that region was formed, and the following officers elected: President, C. W. Watson; Vice-President, J. W. Clark (8 votes); Secretary, D. Boh; and Treasurer M. L. Hutchinson.

It is reported that Senator Davis and ex-Senator Camden, of West Virginia, have purchased the Kanawha & Michigan railroad, which runs from Charleston to Kenova, and will extend it to Gauley Bridge, Fayette county, and thence to Hinton, Summers county, where it will connect with the Virginian railroad. The road is now under the management of Receiver Ben Lilly, and is in a very bad condition. It is said that Davis and Camden will put it in first-class shape and operate it in connection with the Virginian road.

The Farmer's Institute.

A farmer's Institute was held at Academy on the 10th and 11th of October, 1900. President Atkinson and Institute Director Sullivan of the State Board of Agriculture were present and assisted in the management and took part in the discussions of the institute. Owing to the fact that a great many of the farmers near Academy are employed hauling ties for the construction of the railroad and in threshing there was a small attendance. A good program had been prepared and those present all taking an active part rendered the institute good. The best that has ever been held in the county.

By means of an institute farmers are brought in touch with each other, new methods of culture are discussed, it becomes a ways and means committee for the improvement of various lines of endeavor, and too much cannot be said since cannot be a success as meetings. Institutes should be organized all over the county and meetings held monthly, and every farmer of the county institute held with the assistance of the members of the Board of Agriculture should be the culmination of the year's work.

Unprovoked Assault.

One night last week Mack Lockridge employed in a lumber camp on Beaver Creek attended church. When church was over he with some companions was going home when Alfred Rider on horse back came by whooping in a most unseemly manner. Lockridge told him good naturedly to "keep it down." Rider sprang from his horse and made a murderous assault on Lockridge stabbing him in the back and cutting him in the hip in a horrible manner.

Rider escaped but is being pursued by officers and if caught will not be in an enviable position. Lockridge was brought to Marlinton where his wounds were attended by Dr. Cunningham. He is thought to be out of danger.

McCoy Malcomb.

McCoy Malcomb died at his home near Clover Lick last Wednesday, of cancer. Deceased was aged 65 and had resided in the county all his life. His wife was Miss Margaret Knapp, who survives him, among his children are Mrs. W. B. Johnson, Thomas Malcomb, John W. Malcomb and R. L. Malcomb. He was a Confederate soldier, Captain Marshall's Company, 19th Virginia Cavalry.

Patterson—Scales.

Mr Edward Patterson, one of Marlinton's steady young business men, and Miss Carrie Scales, of Mill Point were married at the home of Winfield Slaven, by Rev. W. J. Whitesell October 10. A fine dinner was served to about fifty guests. The happy couple are at the home of the groom's father Circuit Clerk J. H. Patterson. May good luck attend them.

Notice.

The undersigned have this day formed a partnership for the practice of law at Marlinton, West Virginia. Business entrusted to our care will receive prompt attention.

ANDREW PRICE,
G. H. A. KUNST.

September 24, 1900.

Without a sure foundation hope ceases to be a light house, and becomes a wandering meteor.

The surest way for a woman to catch a husband is not to try the surest way to catch a real bargain in a cape, cloak, &c, is here to buy it. The Economical Bargain House.

Everyone should take time by the forelock and be vaccinated. Cold weather is at hand and unless great precautions are taken we may expect another outbreak of smallpox. The expense to which the county was subjected last winter and the good fee which would result to this section at this time from a like scare should be sufficient motives if the danger to beauty and health is not.

The Marlinton Messenger by Meadows & Sharp is under way and we are found fault with for seems to do a fair, legitimate newspaper business. Mr Meadows is an old newspaper man who has been benefited by the waters of adversity and to a greater degree than the ups and downs of life and that is saying a good deal. We hope that he has found a haven of rest in Marlinton. Mr Sharp is starting as an attorney and is the Republican nominee for District attorney. We wish the pair success and live together in harmony, as the choice of Log Times.

I am saving good bye to the old stock of goods and now every part of the store house will be filled with new up to date goods. Watch next week's Economical Bargain House ad. Yours, &c. Economical Bargain House.

J. H. Curry says the meanest business he ever tried to do was to run a post office and money order business right, but he believes he has got it down, but the Postmaster has stood had him down for two years and may get down yet.

W. B. Hull has sold Postmaster Clark a mule and he says he is going to ride as the post office is getting a full horse load. Turn out boys and help Clark ride.

East Street, Frost.

Everything is lovely and the mail goes on.

Sowing wheat is the order of the day.

A. E. Spitzer and family are talking of moving from this place.

The mail route has started again It goes from here to Dunmore three times a week.

The protracted meeting still goes on at Mt Zion.

Hurrah for A. E. Dilley on East Street! He is carrying the order of the day.

R. F. Sharp is having a new porch put to his house.

H. T. Gwinn has bought a team of horses. Also a new buggy.

Several of our people attended court at Marlinton.

We are glad to learn that A. E. Spitzer is able to be out again.

W. B. Sharp was up at home last Saturday.

Some people say wheat sells well in the summer.

A good many of our people attended quarterly meeting Arbovale Sunday.

Ernest Sharp, who has been driving his father's team at camp, is at home.

Harry Grimes says he has gotten his legs broken so often that he can hardly get along.

DONT KICK.

Items from "The Hills."

This section was visited by fine rains last week, which were badly needed.

R. C. Shrader's drill has been in operation the past week, drilling wheat for the Hill farmers.

Rev Pal'in is holding a series of meetings at Mt Zion, with two conversions and five at the alter. We pray that the good work may continue and that sinners may see the error of their way and turn unto God and live.

Miss Blanch Hively, of Healing Springs, accompanied by Miss Bruce Gibson, were visiting their friends in the Hills last week.

Chalmer Shrader will leave this week for the railroad where he will be employed as a teamster.

Enoch says that McKinley will get his vote, as these four years have been a right prosperity to him, and his tobacco grew to perfection.

I. B. and G. H. Shrader will leave this week for the lumber camp.

Lloyd Hoed is repairing the Mt. Zion school house.

Hevener Dilley goes to Frost quite often to take music lessons of the organist.

Rev Bugal delivered one of the most inter-sting sermons at Bethel Sunday that the writer has had the pleasure to listen to for quite a while.

Miss Jasper Dilley died Saturday, about 12 o'clock. She leaves many sympathizing friends to mourn their loss. Sympathy is extended to the bereaved family.

Snoden Dilley is in this part visiting friends and relatives.

Extract from Decree.

This cause is referred to G. H. A. Kunst, one of the Commissioners in Chancery of this Court, to take, state and report to the next term of this court, the following matters of account:

First—A settlement of the accounts of H. A. Yeager, Special Receiver in this cause, showing his receipts and disbursements, and the amount in his hands subject to the order of the Circuit Court of Pocahontas County.

Second—The amount of indebtedness of the firm of Cogan, Noble & House, with the priorities, if any, of any of the debts or liabilities.

Third—To ascertain the amount of the assets of the said firm of Cogan, Noble and House.

Fourth—The amount of the liabilities and the assets of the firm of Noble and House.

Fifth—Any other matter to be specially stated, deemed pertinent by the Commissioner, or required by any party in interest to be stated.

The parties interested in the decree from which the foregoing is an extract will take notice that on the 2nd day of November, 1900, at my office in the town of Marlinton, W. Va., I shall proceed to execute the same, when and where they are required to attend with such books, papers, vouchers and evidence as will enable me to comply with the order of the court. Given under my hand this 8th day of October, 1900. G. H. A. KUNST, Commissioner.

Fiendish Attack.

An attack was lately made on C. F. Collier of Cherokee, Iowa, that nearly proved fatal. It came thro' his kidneys. His back got so lame that he could not stoop without great pain, nor sit in a chair with out being propped by pillows. No remedy helped him until he tried Electric Bitters which effected such a wonderful change that he writes he feels like a new man. This marvelous medicine cures backache and kidney trouble, purifies the blood and builds up your health. Only 50c. Sold by Harry B. Echols, Marlinton; N. J. Brown, Mill Point; E. L. Alternate Road Law.

At a county court continued and held for the County of Pocahontas, at the Court-house thereof on Wednesday, the 27th day of June 1900.

A petition signed by G. D. McNeil, J. O. Morrison and 63 other voters of the Edray District in this county, verified by proper affidavit, praying that the "Alternate Road Law," enacted by the Legislature of West Virginia in 1891, be submitted to the vote of the people of said district at the next ensuing election, held throughout said district for its ratification or rejection, was this day presented to the Court. On consideration whereof, it is ordered that the prayer of the said petition be granted, and it is further ordered that said "Alternate Road Law," enacted in 1891, be submitted to the voters of said Edray District for its ratification or rejection at the general election to be held throughout said Edray District on the first Tuesday in November, 1900, that being the next ensuing election held throughout said District after the presentation of said petition. It is further ordered that the Clerk of this Court certify a copy of this order to the board commissioners of Pocahontas county, who shall cause to be printed upon the ballots used in voting at said election in said district, the words prescribed in section 50 of chapter 43 of the Code of West Virginia, 1891, and said clerk shall cause due publication to be made of this order in the Pocahontas Times, a weekly newspaper, published at Marlinton, in said district, at least once a week for four successive weeks prior to said election.

Came near Dying.

"For three days and nights I suffered agony untold from an attack of cholera morbus brought on by eating cucumbers," says M. E. Low clerk of the district court, Centerville, Iowa. "I thought I would surely die, and tried a dozen different medicines but all to no purpose. I sent for a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and three doses relieved me entirely. I went to sleep and did not wake up for eight hours. On awakening a few hours ago I felt so gratified that the first work I do on going to the office is to write to the manufacturers of this remedy and offer them my grateful thanks and say 'God bless you for the splendid medicine you have made.'" This remedy is for sale by

H. R. Echols, Marlinton; Barlow and Moore, Edray; Amos Barlow, Huntersville; D. T. McNeel, Buckeye.

of challenge, and then with lowered horns charged upon the door-step. Abby closed the door still. Abby planned quickly and decided in search of some weapon of defense. The only thing at hand was a broom, and with this in her hand she advanced to the attack. Whereupon the cow retreated to the gate, and there stood pawing and bellowing. Why was she behaving so? Was she mad? Was she frightened? Abby thought of the old adage about the wrath of the meek, and wondered if perhaps the cow were not the meekest of animals, though she had always supposed that honor belonged to the lamb. Then she remembered that the cow was probably frightened at the strange surroundings, and that, if she were to be driven away, she must be driven away. So she began to shout and to wave the broom violently, and the cow, after a few moments of indecision, turned and trotted off down the road. Abby watched her out of sight, and then, with a sigh of relief, went back to the house.
"I'll be bound Mrs. Staples is out at her own yard and into the house," she said she'd have been likely to serve,
if she hadn't streaked it for the house, and even then, she was so nigh caught that the steer banged his head against the door after her."

"I heard Mrs. Staples telling that," Abby acknowledged briefly. "But there's no alfalfa field down round the schoolhouse, so there's nothing to tole them that way."

"No, but there's lots of fields on the way. Why, those children have to walk nearly two miles to school! Think of that!"

"I won't hurt 'em!" muttered Abby, rather sullenly.

Mrs. Fenton stifled a sigh that was almost a groan. "I hate to think you are selfish, Abby!" she said, slowly.
"But we all know that the folks round here got up a petition asking the county superintendent to form a new district, so the children wouldn't have to go so far, and he came out here and looked the ground over, and said he'd grant the petition if the folks could get an acre of land for school ground in a central location, and they couldn't, so the plan all fell through."

"Well, you don't need to tell me all that. I guess I knew it before," replied her daughter, ungraciously.

"I reckon that nobody knows about it better than you do, Abby, but if your grandpa had willed that forty to me instead of you, the schoolhouse would be standing over there in that little grove on the corner, just across the road—so handy!—instead of where it is. And the district was ready and willing to pay you a good price for the land, Abby."

"It's all out to alfalfa, and alfalfa's five dollars a ton," objected Abby.

"How much do you suppose is raised in that acre in the grove, anyway?"
queried Mrs. Fenton, sharply.

Abby did not reply, but after a time she said, slowly: "You think I'm selfish, don't you, ma?"

It was Mrs. Fenton's turn to reflect. Week in, week out, month in, month out, for five long years this girl beside her, with a face too old and hands too worn for her years, had borne the heavy burden of care for a household which comprised an invalid mother and rebellious, growing children. Perhaps she herself had not always done what she could to make the girl's burden lighter. And she resented her mother's willing the bit of land to Abby instead of to herself.

"No, you ain't selfish, Abby," she said, at last. "I reckon maybe you're contrary sometimes, though."

"I can," Abby admitted, candidly. "I'm just ugly that way. The mere sariously urges me the more set I get. Load, what's that?"

A sudden clatter in the kitchen had fallen to the floor with a resounding crash, the crash was followed by a splash, as of a miniature tidal wave, Abby, forthwith to the door, stifled a scream at what she saw.

"What is it, child?" demanded her mother, struggling to rise.

"Jer-sey bull," Abby commanded. "It's that old white cow of the Triangle Bar outfit."

"What?" Mrs. Fenton's face grew a shade paler. "Why, she's the most dangerous critter in the whole country. Can you see any more of 'em?"

"No; I reckon she's alone. I expect she got mixed up in the dust of the road. She's standing in the doorway yet," and with this explanation Abby began to water her arms. "Shoo, Whey! Get out of here, you contrary critter!"

The cow, with a low bellow of defiance, stood her ground. Mrs. Fenton, who had succeeded in setting up, looked fearfully at the cow. "She should take a notion to come in here, Abby!"

"She'd take a notion to go out again, I reckon," said Abby, grimly. She grasped a pail of feed and looked about for the brute's head. The cow acknowledged the compliment with a snort of defiance and pawed the ground with her fore-feet. Abby glanced quickly about in search of some weapon of defense. The only thing at hand was a pitchfork, and this she seized with her left hand. She advanced cautiously toward the cow, holding the pail of feed in front of her. "Why, I'm ashamed to be afraid of a cow!" she thought. She entered the big doorway and gave the pail a vigorous shake. The cow lowered her head and stared at the pail. Abby shook it again, and the cow, with a snort of disgust, turned and walked off down the road.

"I reckon I better go after her," said Abby, "or she'll be getting into the corn."

"I reckon you better not," said her mother, decidedly. "Let her go back to the Triangle Bar. She belongs there, and they'll be looking for her. Maybe they'll send over and get her."

"I'll be ashamed to go into school if I don't," said Abby, with a sigh. "I'll have to tell the children that I was afraid of a cow, and they'll laugh at me. Why, I'm afraid of a cow, and they'll laugh at me. Why, I'm afraid of a cow, and they'll laugh at me. Why, I'm

NAT FITZGERALD.

Col. Nat Ward Fitzgerald, the Poet of the Alleghanies, addressed an appreciative audience at the court house Thursday afternoon, speaking for two hours on Imperialism and Expansion. Eloquently and convincingly Col. Fitzgerald impressed upon his audience the dangers menacing our great republic, pointing out the steps slowly and insidiously being made toward an empire. Having shown the steps taken by this government to make the Filipino Republic the ally of the U. S. he then pointed out the traitorous conduct of the administration and comparing this country to France in our struggle for independence asked, what would have been Washington's answer to the demands of LaFayette, if Fr e had have pursued the policy pursued by the administration with the Filipino Republic and its leaders. Col. Fitzgerald in close entertained his audience by reciting some selections from his poems upon subjects pertinent in the present campaign.

MARRIED.

Townsend—Morrison.

On Wednesday afternoon at 4 o'clock at the residence of Hon. Wm. T. Beard, near Mill Point, Thomas Newton Lloyd Townsend and Miss Mary Minnie Morrison were united in marriage by W. T. Price.

The groom is a son of the late Thos. Townsend, near Driftwood, and is extensively engaged with Howard Bird in operating a steam thresher.

The bride is a much esteemed young person who has been a helper in Mr Beard's family for a number of years. Mrs Beard complimented the parties with a nice supper that was enjoyed by quite a number of the nearest friends and neighbors.

Patterson—Scales.

Married, at the home of the bride's sister, Mrs Vinton Slaven, near Mill Point, October 10, 1900, Edward B. Patterson, of Marlinton, to Miss Carrie B. Scales; Rev W. J. Whitesell officiating, and Misses Daisy Ruckman and Mary Gold McNeel acting as ushers. Quite a large company of invited guests were present, and the congratulations and good wishes were many. After the ceremony, which took place on the porch, the whole company enjoyed the bountiful repast served by Mrs Slaven.—A Marlinton boy has captured one of the best and most popular girls in the Mill Point neighborhood. In the afternoon the bridal party drove to Marlinton to spend the night with relatives of the groom.

Cochran—Silva.

An interesting society event transpired at Robert R. Silva's near Mill Point, at noon, October 17, 1900, when William G. Cochran and Miss Mamie J. Silva were united in the State of holy matrimony; Wm. T. Price, of Marlinton officiating.

The groom is the youngest son of the late Capt William Cochran, of Stony Creek, and is on industrious prosperous young farmer. The bride is the youngest daughter of Robert D. Silva, and is a highly respected young lady. Mrs Anderson Barlow and Mrs McKendree Hill are her sisters.

The attendants were Miss Ethel Sharp escorted by Cyzler Silva. A sumptuous and nicely spread dinner was served and enjoyed by thirty or forty persons, mostly relatives and nearest neighbors. A wide circle of relatives and friends sincerely wish these worthy young people all the happiness an auspicious marriage implies.

DRIFTWOOD.

Good morning, Mr Editor.

The rain falleth this morning as we are glad to see it as it is much needed.

C. F. Gay, the Cassie photographer, is in this part taking the people's pictures.

Rev Ben Wilfong delivered an interesting sermon here last Sunday, which was gladly listened to by a large crowd.

We would be glad if some of the leaders of music would give us a call.

The Cole Run school is progressing nicely under the care of Mr Hamilton.

The sour kraut which the school teacher has carried round lately, is caused, we suppose, by his gall getting drained.

The church is being rapidly finished and will soon be ready for dedication.

Miss Bettie McLaughlin was at home Sunday on a visit.

Spider still scares the girls and makes us nearly go mad.

David Beverage and family will soon be from Pocahontas.

Some of our people attended court last week and report a good time.

There is no oil got here now for the lamps, but under lakes in place. Watch the turkey—there seems to be a danger of losing their ears.

R. M. Griffin has sold his house to Sam Shiflett.

The most of the boys are going to camp meet.

The most of Mother Tucker's children and grandchildren were at her home Sunday and enjoyed a good dinner.

Mr. Editor, we will close for this time, hoping to see our letter in print.

J. S. McNeel, Exec. of W. L. McNeel, dec'd.
vs
Mary L. McNeel et als.

Pursuant to a decree of the Circuit Court of Pocahontas County, West Virginia, rendered on the 4th day of October, 1900, at the October term thereof, I will proceed at my office in the town of Marlinton West Va., on the 3rd day of December, 1900, to take, state and report to court the following matters of account, to-wit:

First—What personal assets came or should have come into the hands of the plaintiff as executor of Wm. L. McNeel, and what disposition plaintiff has made of the same.

Second—What real estate or interest therein said Wm. L. McNeel owned at the time of his death, giving location, area and probable value.

Third—The persons entitled as devisees under the will of said Wm L. McNeel, and what each one is entitled to.

Fourth—The debts owing by Wm. L. McNeel at the time of his death, stating which ones, if any, were secured, in what manner, and giving amount and priority of each debt and to whom due.

Fifth—What lands if any owned by said Wm. L. McNeel are subject to the dower interest of Mary L. McNeel.

Sixth—Any other matter to be specially stated, deemed pertinent by the Commissioner or required by any party in interest.

At which time and place you may attend. T. S. McNEEL,
Commissioner.

NOTICE TO CREDITORS.

To the Creditors of Wm. L. McNeel, deceased:

In pursuance of a decree of the circuit court of Pocahontas County made in a cause therein pending, to subject the real estate of the said Wm. L. McNeel to the payment of his debts, you are required to present your claims against the estate of the said Wm. L. McNeel for adjustment to T. S. McNeel, Commissioner, at his office in the said county, on or before the 3rd day of December, 1900.

ARBOVALE.

Hello, Mr Editor:

The protracted meeting is still going on at this place. There are only three seekers of religion as yet.

James Gillespie says he knows that Bryan will be elected, for the girl.

Forest Arbogast says the deers are getting a little leaner than they were.

Joe Sutton has been sick for the past week or two. Subsequent will parsue next.

Miss Trolle Sharp, of Frost, attending the meeting at this place.

Will Gum, of Wharton, was visiting at Bob Brown's last week.

Clyde Beard, of Travelers Repose, was in this part last week visiting old friends and relatives.

The Bradley and Pine Grove schools commenced last Monday. How many Bryan people will be farmer and how many Kentucky Democrats?

Forest Arbogast says the deers are getting a little leaner than they were.

Mrs Sarah Arbogast, of Travelers Repose, is visiting at her daughters, Mrs Rachel Arbogast.

Corn shucking and deer hunting seem to be the order of the day.

Uncle William Ervine, of Brown's Mountain, is with us again.

Milton and Wilbur Grogg were out to Huttonsville for goods for Mallow & Adamson.

Clyde Beard and Will Yeager of Traveler's Repose, killed two fine deer last Monday.

Bud Barner passed through town Friday with a load of men for Pitts and Hankins camp at Durbin.

Sandy Burner was in town several days last week.

Yours truly,
Mrs SWINEHAMMER.

It Happened in a Drug Store

"One day last winter a ladie came to my drug store and asked for a brand of cough medicine that I did not have in stock," says Mr C. R. Grandin, the popular druggist of Ontario N. Y. "She was disappointed and wanted to know what cough preperation I could recommend. I said to her that I could freely recommend Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and that she could take a bottle of the remedy and after giving it a fair triel if she did not find it worth the money to bring back the bottle and I would refund the price paid In the course of a day or two the lady came back in company with a friend in need of a cough medicine and advised her to buy a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. I consider that a very good recommendation for the remedy." The remedy owes its great popularity and extensive sale in a large measure to the personal recomendations of people who have been cured by its use.

Sold by H R. Echols, Marlinton, Barlow & Moore, Edray, A. Barlow Huntersville, D. T. McNeel, Buckeye, W. Va.

For sprains, swellings and lameness there is nothing so good as Chamberlain's Pain Balm. Try it.

Notice.

Sealed bids will be received by the undersigned at his office in the town of Marlinton, W. Va., until Monday, November 12, 1900, noon, for the construction of a piece of public road in Green Bank District, commencing at the foot of Little Mountain on Deer creek, thence running up said creek along the east base of Little Mountain to the Burner Ford of Greenbrier River on the location made by C. E. Austin, H. M. Moore and J. W. Oliver, viewers. Said road to be built according to the specifications required by the acts of the Legislature of West Virginia, chapter 84, section 48, and to be completed by the 1st day of May, 1901. The court reserves the right to reject any or all bids. By order of the County Court.

Rider Arrested.

Few breaches of the peace have so stirred the people of the county as the cutting of Mack Lockridge. The assailant Alfred Rider had made himself obnoxious with his acts of bravado, and when he became a fugitive on account of the affair, rewards both private and public were promised for his arrest.

The case was by tacit consent placed in the hands of F. P. Anderson, the efficient sergeant of the town of Marlinton. He hunted him out of the fastnesses of the Alleghany Mountains, twice coming up with him, once firing three times at him as he ran. Rider broke cover at length and tried to board the train, and was apprehended by C. D. Lam, the well known detective and marshal of the city of Covington. Rider was brought in by J. A. Sharp, deputy sheriff, and F. P. Anderson.

The reward to any be paid should be divided between Anderson and Lam. Anderson, because of the time and money spent on the trail, and Lam because he was fortunate enough to apprehend the fugitive.

Railroad Matters.

We have tried to find out when we could have a regular train service on the new railway but have received no information which can be considered official. We understand that President Stevens will be in Pocahontas over the new line this week and that construction work will be carried on this winter to finish the line to Cass, but that regular train service will only extend to Marlinton for a few months making this town the temporary terminus of the railroad. We trust that we will receive the train service shortly for the volume of business is such that it can hardly be managed by the wagons.

The freight agent at Boncevert a very accomodating official says that $1 the ton is the charge for carload lots to Marlinton. 15 tons to be the minumum to the car.

Thus if the car were to be run here with but one ton of freight in it it would cost $15 the price paid wagoners already. A jump from 72 cents the hundred to $1 the ton in freight is enough to make one to rejoice.

Sabina Atkinson.

A very pathetic event took place at the Pocohontas infirmary a few weeks since when Miss Sabina Atkinson entered into the rest that remains for the sorely afflicted She is remembered by many of our readers in The Levels as the very personification of vigorous health and physical powers of endurance and cheerfulness. In the last few years she was seized by a cancerous affection that first showed itself on her left shoulder. She went to the Johns Hopkins hospital and it was decided to amputate her arm near the shoulder joint. She became much better and for a good while experienced much relief and the tone of her general health much improved. After a time however the disease reappeared in a virulent form, but she delayed rather long for upon returning to the hospital the case was pronounced hopeless All that seemed proper to do was to furnish palliative teatment, and so she returned home to wait for death Soothed by palliatives and cheered by hopes of heaven, Sabina lingered calmly waiting for the supreme hour that she knew to be rapidly nearing. —W. T. P.

Mrs Nancy Kincaid.

Died, October 18, 1900, at her home at the mouth of Spring Creek, Greenbrier county, Mrs Nancy Kincaid, aged about 80 years. A. B. Kincaid, of Marlinton, is her son. Mrs Kincaid was a member of the Barger family who became a professing christian at 13 years of age, under Dr McIlhenney's ministry, and for 71 years was a fervent and consistent disciple of Christ, and now sleeps in peace, that blessed sleep from which no one ever wakes to weep.

Smallpox Scare.

Smallpox scare in in Upshur County caused the discharge of juries and witnesses of the October Term of Court. Court opened Monday and adjourned Tuesday.

E. E. Allen, of Charleston, for eight years auditor on the C & O. has formed a partnership with W. W. Tyree, of this place, and will put in a large stock of merchandise. Mr Allen will bring his family, consisting of his wife and seven children, to Hartford in a few days.

"All roads lead to Rome." All thoroughfares leading to Marlinton are passable and in fairly good condition. It has been determined to leave the barbecue to celebrate the opening of the first railroad engine to Marlinton on the 20 of the month the invitation is extended to all the citizens of this and adjoining counties. This will be the greatest day in the history of our little city and no effort will be spared in making it an enjoyable occasion.

Weiser Chapel, the new M. E. Church at Academy, the corner stone of which was laid August 4th, 1900, was dedicated Sunday. Rev. J. J. Perdomo, of Staunton, gave to the dedication sermon from the text, "The glory of this latter house shall be greater than of the former, saith the Lord of hosts: and in this place will I give peace, saith the Lord of hosts." Rev. Mr. Perdomo is the Portuguese preacher spoken of in the previous issue. A thousand people were present. It is estimated that $700 to $800 was collected and over $500 was subscribed. $900 was raised.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS:

AUTUMN MATERIALS.

Hentietias, Poplins Armures and Serge Among the Popular Fabrics.

Fashion architects agree that as fall as the fall fabrics are concerned woolens and velvet will usurp all the interest, with many handsome and elaborate effects in the latter that hardly deserve the name of woolen. Of course, there will be the usual demand for handsome black stuffs, and for this, henriettas, poplins, armures and serge will be most effective. Hen-rietias, both in black and colors, will be more favored than for many seasons past. An especially attractive wave in vicuna camel's hair will be stylish for those who prefer rough effects in dress goods. Rough knotted soft materials, in black, will also be to the fore to be made up into the rich plain, bright trimmed costumes that are so becoming, useful and in such good taste. Broadcloth will retain its hold on first place for handsome gowns and will be most seen in light gray tan and brown tints, for early wear and in black for winter.

In the novelty goods, raised crepons have the preference in the new Arabic and Saracenic figures that fashion most favors for patterns. For second best, everyday utility gowns, rough goods will be most worn, as looking well longest. Scotch mixtures, twills cloths, diagonals and cheviots are all the popular favorites in this class of goods. A new flannel, in narrow gray stripes similar to that so much worn to ring just now, will be much liked and will be exceedingly stylish for knock-about gowns.

All the old-time favorites are to be found among the showings of costume if last fall drew goods with possibly just some slight difference in goods, twill, mixtures and color from those of last season. Double-faced goods will be more a fad than ever, even promising to be used for jack-ets, and the long coats, predicted the rage for fall. Venetian cloth and another desirable woolen rather resembling the Venetian in general appearance, saith Victoria, are two of the materials, particularly in black, navy or Yale blue, that will prove a safe choice for your early fall gown.

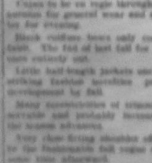

In silks the old stand-by, plain taffetas still heads the list with crepe de chines, peau de soie, and duchesse, in mode for dressier use. Among the more expensive kinds for evening wear, fancy silk gauze will be first choice. Brocade effects in all-over, stripes, dots and floral patterns comprise the designs. Their lightness and transparency, together with a rich effect, make these gauzes particularly desirable. The new fancy crepe de chines are way up price, but very beautiful. Crepe de chine brocbe and embroidered in openwork patterns on a crepe de chine foundation are the choicest kinds. Panne comes this fall in several new kinds, too, and will retain its favor increase, all its past season's favor.

A Chat About Lingerie.

Our grandmothers bought their lingerie with service as a first consideration, and had them made up in quantities to secure simple form. Women of to-day select their underwear for daintiness, rather than term of service. The new underlinen is beautiful in the extreme with the sheerest of materials for the foundation laces and embroideries combined in its composition. Much handwork is seen on the more costly pieces, while flat effects in patterns in the less expensive and elegant goods. Fit is the great consideration these days. The loose sacque like shapes ere while marking results made from the longest gored, a perfectly-fitting corset cover and chemise being now easily obtainable

The Latest Extravagances.

Momentlie de soie driving cloaks are the very latest extravagances. One of the latest models is composed of taffeta, stitched. The collars, cuffs and lapels are also of silk.

The latest negligees charming tea-gowns.

Stitched bands used to a firing extent as a gown garniture.

The pierasrowne, especially for house gowns, the gromhed mode.

Many rakes, real or simulated, noticeable on the latest models for fall.

The beaded bag prettier, in greater variety and more desirable than ever.

Beige a somber contrast that then ever, as the latter has been run into the ground.

The collarette still gotten still to be worn for both the fashion and all wisher to be loner.

Capes to be en vogue throughout the season for general wear and all winter for evening.

Black costume bows only common it light. The fad of last fall for colored ones entirely out.

Little half-length jackets one of the most desirable and possible garments development for fall.

Many manufacturers of trimming observable and probably increasing to the season advances.

Many of the fancy-flaring shoulder effects to the broadcloth full capes and full sleeves aforesaid.

The royal blue will a formidable it out of the current green. Velvet dots and stripes also favored.

A bell-shaped skirt preceding one of long skirt goes noticeable as years of the newer importations for fall.

Every reflection pointing to the adoption of quite large gimmp effects in all materials already extensively used.

Some jackets and waistcoats some garments that may for the making cords on the gore of evening wraps.

Bands of black or white velvet ribbon, three inches wide, are used to trim the edges of many of the new cloth jackets.

Some of the new fall jackets are cut with a deep point in front and back, and are finished with a narrow band of fur

REV. DR. TALMAGE.

THE EMINENT DIVINE'S SUNDAY DISCOURSE.

Subject: Nations Are Judged—God Rewards and Punishes Them on Earth—God's Judgments Likened to the Swift Decay of a Vision.

[Copyright 1895.]

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Dr. Talmage, in his journey westward through Europe, has recently visited some of the most historic events. He sends this sermon, in which he shows that nations are brought in this world, and that God rewards them for their virtues and punishes them for their crimes. The text is Isaiah xxviii, 20: "In the same day shall the Lord shave with a razor that is hired." "In the same day shall the Lord shave with a razor that is hired"—With one sharp sweep His word across Judea, and down on the pride and its power. In 1861 God shaved the American nation. We had allowed to grow Sabbath desecration and oppression and blasphemy and fraud and impurity and all sorts of evils, and the Lord took the sin and the North had its sins and the South had its sins and we had been warned again and again, and we did not heed. At length the sword of war cut from the St. Lawrence to the Gulf and from Atlantic seaboard to Pacific seaboard. The pride of the land was laid low cowards, but the heroes on both sides went down. And that which we took for the razor of our God was the sword. In 1865 again it went across the land, in 1861 again it went, and in 1865 again it went across the land, in 1864 again it went, and in 1865 again it went across the land, in 1865 again it went, and in 1865 again it went across the land, in 1865 again it went, and in 1865 again it went across the land, in 1865

Henry White.

Died Monday October 29, at his residence near Driscol, of the infirmities of advanced age, Mr Henry White aged about 80 years.

In his decease Pocahontas county is bereaved of one of the most loyal and substantial of citizens, and his family mourn the departure of a very excellent father. He was from early youth an adherent of the Lutheran Church enthusiastically attached to her forms of worship and doctrines."

His long life and personal influence were for industry, honesty, and patriotism. When tidings came of his death the first script are suggested to the writers mind was this, "Help Lord for the godly man ceaseth for the faithful fail from among the children of men." Ps. 12:1. and he is more than sorry that he should have been prevented from being with the bereaved sons and daughters in this sad time, of the death and burial of such a good father and personal friend.

"For three days and nights I suffered agony untold from an attack of cholera morbus brought on by eating cucumbers," says M. E. Lee clerk of the district court, Centerville, Iowa. "I thought I would surely die, and tried a dozen different medicines but all to no purpose. I sent for a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and three doses relieved me entirely. I regard it very highly and will take up for eight years. On account of a few hours ago I felt so grateful that the first work I do after going to the office is to write to the manufacturers of this remedy and offer them my grateful thanks and my kind hope for the success which I am sure it will receive." TO VOTERS.

Contributed.

A vote for McKinley is a vote against personal liberty. McKinley stands for imperialism and militarism.

A vote for O'Connell is a vote for Stephen B. Elkins and Mr Elkins is a representative of the trusts which are grinding the life out of the American laborers.

A vote for McKinley means a vote to perpetuate all the trusts combines and monopolies which have already gotten such powers over the government of the United States as to make it possible for them to dictate legislation and increase the standing army of American to such numbers as will strangle the voice of liberty and override the will of the people.

Republicans who voted in the Democratic primary election are honorably bound to support the county nominees. The fact that you voted in the Democratic primary was a pledge that you would stick to the ticket and any failure to do so is a violation of that pledge and a reflection on the most sacred thing you possess, personal honor.

To the Voters of Pocahontas County

Because of certain reports that have come to the Democratic Executive Committee of Pocahontas County in reference to its decision in the contest between H. A. Yeager and L. M. McClintic candidates in the primary election for member of House of Delegates, prominent among which is one that the committee did not recount the vote, we deem it advisable to make the following statement in order that the people may comprehend the action of the committee in this contest.

Every voter in the county knows that the race between the two candidates was very close resulting in a majority of two votes for McClintic upon the face of the returns as certified by the commissioners of election.

As required by the call the executive committee met at the court house to declare the result and issue certificates of election At this meeting the committee was notified by Mr Yeager that he desired a recount of the ballots cast. The committee very cheerfully complied with this demand, but having no quorum present adjourned to meet another day. There were present at the next meeting, eight out of eleven members composing the committee. The ballots were then opened in the presence of all the committee and the recount most carefully made, every ballot being separately inspected and counted. Only two questionable ballots were found, both of which after being carefully examined by each member of the committee were counted for Mr Yeager. The recount tallied exactly with the returns of the election commissioners except Split Rock precinct which showed 70 votes cast but only 69 ballots, the correction of which resulted in a loss of one for McClintic. The total footings of the precincts were then made, giving tfie nomination to Mr McClintic by a majority of one. After the result was declared Mr Yeager, through his attorney Mr Scott, asked that the committee take up the question of illegal voting, insisting that certain persons not entitled to a vote had been permitted by election commissioners to cast their ballots. This the committee refused to do for the sole reason that it had no power or authority to pass upon the legality of any vote cast. The law says, "that the executive committee shall be governed entirely by the rules laid down in the call for a primary election, and shall have no powers except as specifically stated in said call. The committee that issued the call for a primary specifically stated that in the event of a contest the executive committee should carefully recount all the ballots cast and declare the result therefrom.

This we did fairly and honestly as stated above and found the result precisely as the election commissioners return except the correction of one vote made in the Split Rock precinct Can any fair minded man ask more than we did? Our powers were explicitly defined and we obeyed to the letter and any statement made by any individual that the committee had any power to do this is what it is and that's false.

We agreed to stand or fall upon the record made by the election officers and not by the false statements of interested parties. The law makes it the duty of the executive committee to issue certificates of election to the person who receives the highest number of votes cast and we did so. We have the right to rest on the record made by the election officers and we do so with the full knowledge that we have done our duty.

It Happened in a Drug Store

"One day last winter a ladie came to my drug store and asked for a brand of cough medicine that I did not have in stock," says Mr C. R. Grandin, the popular druggist of Ontario N. Y. "She was disappointed and wanted to know what cough preparation I could recommend. I said to her that I could freely recommend Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and that she could take a bottle of the remedy and after giving it a fair trial if she did not find it worth the money to bring back the bottle and I would refund the price paid. In the course of a day or two the lady came back in company with a friend in need of a cough medicine and advised her to buy a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. I consider that a very good recommendation for the remedy." The remedy owes its great popularity and extensive sale in a large measure to the personal recommendations of people who have been cured by its use.

Sold by H. R. Echols, Marlinton, Barlow & Moore, Edray, A. Barlow Huntersville, D. T. McNeel, Buckeye, W. Va.

Notice.

Sealed bids will be received by the undersigned at my office in the town of Marlinton, W. Va., until Monday, November 12, 1900, noon, for the construction of a piece of gravel road in Green Bank District, commencing at the foot of Little Mountain on Deer Creek, and to run from there up and along the east base of Little Mountain to the Barrier Ford of Greenbrier River on the lands of Mrs. Mary Gay Gordon, H. M. Moore and J. W. Oliver, viewers. Said road to be built according to the specifications of Section 1 of the acts of the Legislature of West Virginia, chapter 38, acts of 1899, and to be not less than 15 feet wide in the clear. The court reserves the right to reject any or all bids. By order of the County Court.

...Fete Day in Marlinton.

While no special committee had been appointed to consult with the weather prophets in the selection of a day for the rally no more happy selection could have been made. Conveyances of all kinds commenced to arrive at an early hour and by noon an immense crowd had assembled, horses filling all the livery stables, alleys and side streets of the town. The ox-bad been roasting from an early hour and when the time had come when the Injin ate the wood chuck there were many mouths ready to devour him. The special train bringing the band from Rocky Point arrived about one o'clock. this attracted many people to the railroad and some of the smaller youngsters had their first ride. A parade was formed and the speaker of the day, Son N. C. McNeil was escorted to the speakers stand from which an appropriate address of welcome happy descriptions of the past and [illegible] ...ne by the jocial Senator. At the close of the speech Ye Knights of the tournament formed in gallant array marched to the course. The competitors for the saddle and honor of crowning a Queen of Love and Beauty were Messers Clark, McLaughlin, Dr Marshall, Galford King and Smith.

W. D. Clark won the first prize Will Clark owing to an infringment of the rules in carrying his lance was given second prize.

The football game was won by Marlinton by a score of 2–0 in one of the most stubbornly contested battles ever waged on the local gridiron. The addresses delivered at the coronation ball were most seitible for the occasion. "bright the lamps shown o'er fair women and brave men." Miss Daisy Mann was crowned queen. The dancing was continued until an early hour. So closed one of the most eventful days in Marlinton history. The crowd is estimated from 1200 to 2000. Good order was mantained and all committees and participants in the exercises are to be congratulated on the success of the occasion.

A KLONDIKE BRIDE.

She Will Take $20,000 to See the Paris Exposition.

"Here's $20,000 for vacation money, sister. Take your mother to Paris and have the best kind of a time. You know." That's the kind of a husband that James L. Hill, a Klondike miner, is, says a San Francisco correspondent of the New York World. Lucky Mrs. Hill went to Dawson City last fall to recuperate actually. She was then Miss Lillian Green. Going up the Yukon the boat on which she traveled was aground in the ice and totally wrecked near Selkirk. After undergoing the utmost hardships Miss Green and her fellow-voyagers managed to reach a camp where the crew of another wrecked steamer had found refuge. Standing before the camp-fire with her clothing frozen on the young woman gave a graphic account of her adventures that she conspicuously won the heart of Miner Hill, the owner of the camp and one of the richest men in the Klondike. "That's the girl for my money!" exclaimed Hill, and that very night he proposed marriage and was accepted. A week later the shipwrecked crews reached their destination at Dawson, where the Rev. Fr. Naylor pronounced a benediction on the union of the pretty little sister and the rugged miner. Mrs. Hill's health failed somewhat under the rigors of an Arctic winter, and ten days ago she came down to San Francisco in company of her husband and sister, with instructions from her husband to go to Paris and spend $10,000 and wire him when she wanted another penny. Besides this Mr. Hill gave his bride a wedding gift of $50,000. James L. Hill owns claim No. 17, on Eldorado creek, which has produced more than a million in nuggets and promises to yield half as much more this year.

KIEL CANAL.

So Far the Enterprise Comes Out with a Deficit.

The administration of the Kiel canal, Germany, has lately published a report for the year included between April 1, 1898, and March 31, 1899. The number of vessels which have passed through the canal during that period reached 22,818, of which 11,066 represent steam vessels and 14,811 sailing vessels, etc. The total tonnage is estimated at 3,117,840. These figures show an increase over the preceding year of 2,708 vessels and 648,000 tons. The receipts of the canal during the year amount to about $490,000, which is an increase of $50,000 or 20 per cent, says the Scientific American. As to the different nations using the canal, Germany naturally takes the lead with 87 per cent of the total number of vessels, and 68 per cent of the tonnage; England has about 5 per cent, which is an increase over the preceding year.

Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. THE EMINENT DIVINE'S SUNDAY DISCOURSE.

Subject: Christ's Character—Why Earthly Life Neglects With Resentful Examination—Trusting Self Instead of Him—Suffering and Many Sorrows Are Evidences of Sickness.

(Written for this paper.)

WASHINGTON, D. C.—In this sermon, which Dr. Talmage sends from Paris, he analyzes the character of the Saviour, but urges all Christians to exercise the qualities which were conspicuous in Christ's earthly life. The text is Hebrews xii., 3: "Now, if any man has not the spirit of Christ he is none of His."

There is nothing more desirable than a pleasant disposition. Without it we can not be happy ourselves, and the effect other wrecked steamer had found refuge. Standing before the camp-fire with her clothing freezing on the young woman gave a graphic account of her adventures that she conspicuously won the heart of Miner Hill, the owner of the camp and one of the richest men in the Klondike. "That's the girl for my money!" exclaimed Hill, and that very night he proposed marriage and was accepted. A week later the shipwrecked crews reached their destination at Dawson, where the Rev. Fr. Naylor pronounced a benediction on the union of the pretty little sister and the rugged miner. Mrs. Hill's health failed somewhat under the rigors of an Arctic winter, and ten days ago she came down to San Francisco in company of her husband and sister, with instructions from her husband to go to Paris and spend $10,000 and wire him when she wanted another penny. Besides this Mr. Hill gave his bride a wedding gift of $50,000. James L. Hall owns claim No. 17, on Eldorado creek, which has produced more than a million in nuggets and promises to yield half as much more this year.

KIEL CANAL.

So Far the Enterprise Comes Out with a Deficit.

The administration of the Kiel canal, Germany, has lately published a report for the year included between April 1, 1898, and March 31, 1899. The number of vessels which have passed through the canal during that period reached 22,818, of which 11,066 represent steam vessels and 14,811 sailing vessels, etc. The total tonnage is estimated at 3,117,840. These figures show an increase over the preceding year of 2,708 vessels and 648,000 tons. The receipts of the canal during the year amount to about $490,000, which is an increase of $50,000 or 20 per cent, says the Scientific American. As to the different nations using the canal, Germany naturally takes the lead with 87 per cent of the total number of vessels, and 68 per cent of the tonnage; England has about 5 per cent, which is an increase over the preceding year.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address

Myra says you're clean champion in one thing—elementary physics, wasn't it, Myra?"

This prattle wearied him. He liked Mrs. Parman, but she did make a fellow feel so embarrassed! And besides he fancied that Myra looked amused.

"Why didn't Mr. Owen come?" asked Mrs. Parman.

John related the day's mishap.

"Dear me," cried Mrs. Parman, "and nobody to help poor Maria! Myra, you're a big girl. Run home, dear, and get your things ready. Come along, John; we'll give you a warm supper before you start. Myra'll be the goodest company. We must ask Jacob to put it in."

Mrs. Parman and Myra. Myra nudged her mother, and smiled at John.

Myra was fifteen, but looked seventeen, with the grace and charm of a young lady. John was careless of girls in general, but—alas, for his heroism!—he was actually afraid of Myra Parman, who, although the gentlest, best-liked girl of the whole township, had mercilessly pricked the bubbles of his vanity. When, after many strenuous contests, he had risen to the dignity of champion wrestler of his age in school, and had lamed Bill Archer for a week with a hard backfall, Myra Parman had remarked: "If John Owen's brains were as strong as his legs, oh, my!"

Meaner and envious boys nicknamed him "Legs," when they dared. That was only one instance of the witty disparagements by which she irritated his youthful ambitions. John thought she kept special watch upon his foibles. A grown man would have been flattered by her notice of his faults, but John's wisdom-teeth were not yet grown.

He shook hands cordially with Mrs. Parman, and made Myra a bow which he intended to be dignified.

"Why, John Owen," said Mrs. Parman, "how you have grown! You're almost as tall as Myra. How's your mother? I'm just longing to see her! Did your father come? No? Tell him he doesn't bring Maria to visit me I shall scold. Why, John, you're growing to look a man! I do believe you'll be bigger'n your father. Teacher Trenty tells me you're one of his best pupils. John tried to demur against taking Myra. His mother would have to do without her, he was afraid she could not entertain company for some time.

"Company? Of course not! She needs work; that's why Myra goes. Myra will do most all her housework; she's a neat housekeeper. Myra has tact; she won't allow company to hinder work, though I suppose all the thousand things she'll call to see your father and Myra a dreadful hurt, too! Dear dear!"

John was appalled. A long lonely ride with Myra! Then Myra for two days at least! It was a dreadful prospect. He'd have to be on his best behavior all the time. He tried to decline again. He mentioned the distance, and feared Myra might get tired after dark, and said that Deacon Wall would not be ready to start him before noon.

Mrs. Parman wasn't timid. "Wolves and tramps! You should hear Eugene Parman talk about 'em up north, where he goes to look up timber lands. Myra is a big girl, and can drive. She is such a help to Aunt Maria! Run along

MONEY IN POLITICS.

Last week I was in one of the counties in the northwestern part of the State when I made the acquaintance of a gentleman from the headwaters of Pink Creek, whom we will call Asa Aimbridge. He was a tall, lank, sandy bearded man with streaks of gray in his whiskers. I saw him from the train on the depot platform in company of a gentleman who from his badge and little club like a bologna sausage was evidently the sergeant of the town. When the train stopped he watched my Pink Creek friend climb into the train with a critical eye, and then turned away with an indifferent air as though the task of personally conducting prominent citizens out of town was an every day job with him.

In the oil and coal regions the trains are crowded with the day travel, and there was not an empty seat for the Pink Creek man, as he came down the aisle of the car unsteadily and sat down by me. When the train started he took out a bottle of poison and absorbed a large quantity of it, and then turning an eye on me said: "My vote and my boys' vote and all the hands' vote is straight for McKinley and White, but we vote with the Democrats this year on the county ticket, and don't you fergit it!"

"Running the best men, are they?"

"No, it aint that. I aint got any use for a Democrat but the court house ring can't do me dirt all the time, I'll show 'em that!"

"What have they been doing to you?"

"They have been making a fool out of me. I've got their note for $2,000, and it aint worth a cent."

"Have none of them prospered enough to make their paper good?"

"No, it ain't that, it is just some fool lawyer's trap they've laid for me. I'll show it to you.

He produced a paper which read:

"We the undersigned jointly and severally promise to pay to Asa Aimbridge the sum of Two Thousand Dollars. The condition of this obligation is such that whereas the said Asa Aimbridge is a candidate for the office of Sheriff of —— County, and as such candidate has advanced the sum of Fifteen Hundred Dollars to be used in his campaign. If the said Asa Aimbridge should be elected to the said office of Sheriff then this obligation to be void, otherwise to remain in full force and effect."

It was signed by six men, who had executed their signatures and seals with a great deal of flourishing.

"Stranger, they say that there obligation aint worth the paper it is written on, and I contributed $1500 to that whiskey soaking, poker playing, crap shooting gang down at the county seat, and never one cent for it, besides getting the blind sights beat off of me in the primary.

"I didn't want to run for sheriff but they come at me so fair that I thought even if I got beat there would be $500 for me, and I paid 'em $1500 in money and never knew a hate better till today.

"I went down there today and asked one of them about it and he swore it was a forgery, and that he could not pay it without I brought suit on it and that's what the whole gang said.

"I kinder thought I see a lawyer from Harrison County at the hotel what I knowed and I asked him about it and he says to me: 'It aint worth a blue bean. It's against public policy and the courts wont let you sue on it.'

"Stranger, I was mad. I jumped up and just remarked that I'd take it out of somebody's hide, when he says kinder quiet, 'You'd better settle my bill before you go.' And how much might you charge for telling a poor man he has to be swindled?' he said. 'Fifty dollars, stranger that took the fight out of me and I went and got drunk, and the police run me out of town, and my wife it meet me at the station and I'll be drunk, and me a Sunday School Superintendent, and I've got a store to just keep it going."

And there the unfortunate returned to know how many votes he got. "Well, Squire, how many votes we got off?" and he would get off the train, give a wink and a nod and was waiting for the ... to come down and reclaim him.

PERSONAL REMINISCENCES.

The name of Margaret E. Sangster is familiar to the reading people of Pocahontas county, and to not a few of them she is a personal acquaintance having been with us some years since. To such, a short sketch of the early period of this distinguished writer may prove acceptable. In the field of prose and poetry Mrs Sangster stands unrivaled,—and the pure, elevating, healthful tone of her writing is acknowledged far and wide. The present generation of young people who read, that is, who delight to read, can scarcely take up a paper or periodical without meeting something from her pen. And one matter has struck me forcibly, and is if all things must pleasing to Margaret Sangster herself, and that is the warm affection with which many young people speak of her; knowing her, if not personally, through her writings, as well as ill,—and this is true, that they possess a real friend in her.

I proceed to say that Margaret Munson, as she was then, entered the Abadie's Collegiate Institute in Brooklyn, N. Y. where I was already a pupil, when she was not much over twelve years of age, I suppose. A tall, thin girl, dressed at the time in deep mourning for a beloved young brother whose name was David. A child myself but somewhat older than Margaret I was struck at once with her sweetness of countenance and gentleness of manner, also her pleasant voice that had the sound of music in it: our desks were put by some kind teacher, side by side, and help toward a friendship that was never to end.

Margaret was good scholar then and just lived in the element of books. I was often in her delightful christian home and shared the friendship and confidence of Mrs Munson, a lovely woman. And there was Isabella, a younger sister who went to Heaven years ago. This moment I can see Mrs Munson's bowed head at the dining table in absence of her husband, asking such a reverent, sweet and long blessing that impressed my soul profoundly. Margaret grew up in that well ordered household, her mother deeply realizing the literary promise of this fair young daughter, of whom, she told me that Margaret composed poetry at the age of four years.

A few flitting years of school to gether, greatly enjoyed,—those wonderful original compositions that Margaret wrote and were read aloud in class each week, ahead of us all in this respect; our mutual recitations, our after school walks, all, all and then our paths, Margaret's and mine, div ded; but in spirit we have kept in touch ever since and still walk hand in hand, as in our girl-hood, tho' distance of space marks us far apart!

It Happened in a Drug Store.

"One day last winter a ladie came to my drug store and asked for a brand of cough medicine that I did not have in stock," says Mr C. R. Grandin, the popular druggist of Ontario N. Y. "She was disappointed and wanted to know what cough preparation I could recommend. I said we had one that could freely recommend Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and that she could take a bottle of the remedy and after giving it a fair trial if she did not find it worth the money to bring back the bottle and I would refund the price paid. In the course of a day or two the lady came back in company with a friend in need of a cough medicine and advised her to buy a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. I consider that a very good recommendation for this remedy." The remedy owes its great popularity and extensive sale in a large measure to the personal recommendations of people who have been cured by its use.

THE PEOPLE'S STORE,

[WHERE THE PEOPLE GO]

WHY? Because to trade at Headquarters is Money Saved (Money Earned.

Our Shoe and Dress Goods Departments

Wish to speak for Themselves.

Shoes! Say, we are full up, in fact we are Too Many Shoes! to suit the amount of space allotted to us. For style and fit we are unsurpassable. The prices marked on us are so VERY LOW that we some times feel we may be similar to many on sale by many of our imitators, SHODDY; but our wearing qualities will convince you that we ARE NOT.

Dress-Goods Say, we are complete and are PROUD of it. Among us you will find all the fashionable weaves and colorings now found in all

Up-to-date Lines

Come in and look us over and ob-ain a sample from us for comparison.

We mark all our goods in plain figures; therefore you will have no fear of us baiting you on one item and then making it up on another as many merchants do. Neither do we use any illegitimate methods such as offering you premiums with a make believe that you are getting something for nothing.

☞ Your money will be cheerfully refunded if goods are not SATISFACTORY.

YOURS TO PLEASE,

The Big Department Store,

...The Construction Work.

The new railroad will reach Leatherbark before winter sets in. It will be completely ballasted to Marlinton, 51 miles, and the balance, 35 miles, will remain unfinished, a running surface only being the object at present enabling freight to be hauled. The superintendent of construction was enabled to ballast it well and cheaply by the simple method of using the sand stone displaced by the grading work. In many places the homely way of picking up loose rock and placing them on hand cars to be distributed along the line was adopted with complete success, so that the road will be speedily ballasted at something like 25 per cent of the cost of ballasting where extensive is not regarded. The ballasting by this means will cost less than a thousand dollars per mile.

There are three locomotives on the work N. 728 on the divi... on Whitescreek to Beard...dine; No 334 to Marlinton, and No 84 from Marlinton up. These trains deliver freight by the carload lot and handle the construction material. They do not make connection and it is well they do not for they would be loaded with passengers. For there are many who would ride in a box car for nothing rather than pay large sums of money to enter the easy riding Pullman car. The train crews treat the "hoboes" well, but the public generally should not expect for some weeks yet to ride on these trains. In about a month regular trains will be put on and until that time the public should not expect transportation. You may get to Marlinton from Ronceverte in four hours or it may take four days by rail for the trains are run as need ed and not for the trampers accommodation.

The telegraph line is being put in. A big water tank has been erected near the mouth of Anthony's Creek. The track crossed the second crossing of the Greenbrier Tuesday. Over 1100 men are at work for Captain Frazier, laying track and ballasting.

Miss Grace Carey.

Died, at Huntersville, W. Va., November 2, 1900, Miss Annie Grace Carey, eldest daughter of Jacob O. and Mrs Nancy H. Carey, aged 17 years, 8 months and 12 days.

The place of her nativity was Frostburg, Maryland, and was brought to Pocahontas County when she was about a year old. Her illness was typhoid fever of malignant form baffling all avaiable medical attentions and assiduous ecertions to overcome. Her personal attractions, sprightly manners and endowments of mind and heart rendered her popular and interesting with all her acquaintances. Grace's dream of life, her desires and aims were to be like the nicest and best young people of our society. She was blessed with parents who sympathized with her wishes and attempted all in their power to help and encourage their daughter in her aspirations. They spared neither pains nor expense to afford their daughter opportunities to make the best of herself in developing mind and heart. Pecuniary means earned in years of diligent industry and wise economy were lavished upon their daughter, and the results were satisfactory and very gratifying.

Last session she was a pupil of Dr Telford's school in Lewisburg and attracted the notice of her teachers and fellow pupils by her successful diligence in her studies and becoming deportment. Grace took special interest in her religious concerns during a series of evangelistic meetings in Lewisburg while at school gave very satisfactory evidence of having given her heart to Christ and joined the Lewisburg Presbyterian Church. Truly there is something very sorrowful in the way that what promised to be such a beautiful and useful life should close so soon and so sadly.

It moves our deepest sympathies as we reflect how the hopes, desires and aims of her worthy parents have been to all human appearances blighted and destroyed.

The love of her many friends was touchingly displayed by the profuse and appropriate floral tributes laid upon the grave, such as not to be often witnessed anywhere. This burial scene was very impressive as Mrs Sumpter's words, united at the close of the memorial services in the church.

Might never wind of sickness
Or breath of frost unkind.
Might never aught to hawk or maul
Our best of beauty find.

So pearing, to the Master
Reached forth his wounded hand.
Behold He said, it shall be safe
Where saints and angels stand.

In some rare garden blooming
This plant of life shall grow.
There none can be forlorn dear
Such blest of heavenly love

I see the storms or cannot
All frail your faith must be.
If even with your brother flowers
Your hearts will not agree.

Our garden place is lonely
Though flowers grow the wild.
But our lord is watching fragrants
Upon the Master of God.

So our dear Well lost or caused
And nothing else but loss!
Oh! I shall know our flower

Mrs Fern

Hon. H. A. Yeager was in our neighborhood several days last week.

Miss Otie Cackley is visiting here.

Mrs George W. Arbogast is quite ill.

John Shanklin and family moved monday to near Beverly where Mr Shanklin has another railroad contract.

Most of the boys have come home to vote.

Captain was in town delivering stock.

Rev Snapp has returned to Dunsmore.

Undertaker Sweeker was in Huntersville Sunday with a hearse south for Miss Grace Carey who died Friday night, aged 17 years. Miss Grace was one of the finest young ladies in our county. She was beloved by all who knew her. A very large crowd attended her funeral.

Don't forget the tax list sections 5 in Arbogast, Saturday, No. 6 in Marlinton, Saturday, November 10 and Saturday, November 24. All come out.

MILL POINT.

We have had a nice fall with a few light frosts as yet.

Miss Lillie Pyles is off to the Johns Hopkins Hospital, Baltimore. We hope she will be back soon, enjoying the best of health.

The abutments and pier of the Greenbrier River R. R. bridge is completed after so long a time but the back money is not settled yet.

I. B. Smith has about quit grinding on the mill, but he has customers yet.

Samour Gladwell takes off his hat and bows to the ladies—it's a gal.

Moody Pyles is at Dan O'Connel's camp again this fall.

We can hear the locomotive whistle most any time now. We used to have to go out of our county to hear it.

Rev Sampson, an engineer, delivered a fine sermon Sunday at the Riverside school house. We wish he would be with us often.

Grass.

DRIFTWOOD.

Hello Mr Editor!

We still have warm weather, all seem to enjoy the autumn.

Corn huskings and merry go-vonders are on the go now.

R. M. Griffin was badly hurt a few days since but is better now.

The people are getting lonesome about their road between Stony Bottom and Dunmore. We would all like to get to the polls without going around by Jacobi.

The interment of Cass last one of their men, but found him the next week sitting with his best girl.

We are glad to see the hands on the grade leave before they get all the turkeys and chickens.

Good bear hunters are needed in Cheat Mountain as the bears make a visit here once and while and get a sheep.

Samuel Sheets passed through this place Thursday.

Two months of the Driftwood school is gone and the teacher will be glad to teach a second school.

How long must a teacher be in the district before he can vote in the district in which he teaches.

Daisy.

Highland Items.

News very scarce.

The farmers are very busy getting their corn cribbed.

Rev Howard Wade is no better.

Horace Herold and child who have been very ill are convalescent.

Garber and Sutton are out in W Va. selling buggies and fine horses.

Mrs Susan Terry of Pinkney Va has returned home after an extended visit to her children on Knapps Creek.

Rev Huronemus is having a very successful meeting at Fair View.

Misses Lillie and Lucy Sutton were shoping in Monterey Saturday.

Mrs Elihu Gum and friends have returned from a two weeks visit in Lewis County W. Va.

Rev R. H. Clark passed through here enrout for home, preached a very able sermon at Green Hill church Sunday night.

Mrs Dolly Ralston and son spent several days at the home of her father near Green Bank.

C. W. Gum has commenced work on his dwelling house.

We admit we are in the back ground as far as a railroad is concerned, yet we are not discouraged for Nov 6 will ensure us of a bright future.

Theodore.

YELK.

Talking politics is the order of the day.

James Gibson, Jr., and nearly all his family have been on the sick list.

Ellis Sharp had a new buggy stolen last Friday night. He is on the lookout for it, and we hope he will catch the bold thief. The thief took a pair of harness from Reed Hannah, but missed the collar, so he stole one from Robert Gibson.

We have not been able to get a teacher for this school this year. We hope a good teacher will come this way.

Patty Gay has gone back to Elkins where he is running a livery stable. We wish him success.

We think our friend L. D. Sharp is the cheapest merchant on the county. His store is crowded with people nearly all the time. Last week he was selling evaporated pears 6c, peaches 6c, rice 5c, granulated sugar 7c, and on all the goods we viewed we found him lower than other merchants.

Mr Patterson was on Elk look ing after the sheep business.

Uncle.

NOTICE.

All persons are hereby notified that my wife, Jane Geiger, has no authority from me to trust sell or dispose of in any way of any property owned by me, or on my place in Stony Bottom or on Elk Run, in Pocahontas County, W. Va. Virginia.

All persons are also notified not to credit the said Jane Geiger on my account as I shall not pay a cent for any debts on the account after this date.

Big Mining Contract.

The largest contract ever let by a mining company in the state of Colorado for the delivery of ore to reduction works or smelters was made last week by the Portland, Colo., mine at Cripple Creek whereby a contract with the Independence mine management for the delivery of the tons of ore per day from that mine was entered into for a period of five years. The work of breaking ore at the mine for 1,200 per day, the terms of the contract agreed to by the management of the Portland mine. Outside of the immense tonnage of the contract in the matter of the ore tonnage which it involves for the whole period of the contract, it is one of the greatest amount of value in ore production for any like period of time which has ever been made from any mine in the state, and after all the work of contracting the many millions of dollars of territory within its properties is made.

Another strong feature of the contract is the guarantee that the Portland Company will not be required to ship more than one car load per day to the Colorado Smelting Company's smelter at Argentine Junction.

REV. DR. TALMAGE.

THE EMINENT DIVINE'S SUNDAY DISCOURSE.

Subject: Spread the Gospel—Efforts of the Churches Should Be Directed Toward Saving Unconverted Souls—Should Get in Sympathy With Strangers.

(Copyright 1895.)

WASHINGTON, D. C.—In this discourse Dr. Talmage points to fields of usefulness that are not yet thoroughly cultivated, and shows the need of more activity. The text is Romans xv., 20, "Yea, so have I strived to preach the gospel, not where Christ was named, lest I should build upon another man's foundation."

In laying out the plan of his missionary tour Paul thought out towns and cities which had not yet been preached to. He goes to Corinth, a city famous for splendor and wickedness, and Jerusalem, where the priesthood and the sanhedrin were ready to leap with both feet upon the Christian religion. He feels he has especial work to do, and he means to do it. What was the grandeur of the Christian confidence that a man ever lived. We modern Christians are not apt to put so much faith in. We build on other people's foundations. If we erect a church, we prefer to have it filled with families all of whom we have company. Do we rather a Sabbath school class, we want good boys and girls, well combed faces, washed, mannered attractive. So a church in this day is apt to be built out of respectable members. Some ministers spend all their time in fishing in other people's ponds, and they throw the line into that church pond, and jerk out a Methodist, and throw the line into another church pond, and bring out a Presbyterian. But there is a religious row in some neighboring church, and a whole school of fish come off from that pond, and we take them all in with one sweep of the net. What is gained? Absolutely nothing for the cause of Christ. What strengthens an army is new recruits. While courteous to those moving from other flocks, we should build our churches not out of other churches, but out of the world, and to build on another man's foundation.

The fact is this is a big world. When in our modern days we have explored the diameter and circumference of this planet we are not going half far enough. Its latitude and longitude and diameter and circumference of want and woe and sin that no figures can calculate. This one spiritual continent west of wretchedness reaches across all seas, and if we were called to give its geographical boundary I would say it was bounded on the north and south and east and west by the great throne of God's mercy and love. Oh, it is a great world! Since I took this morning 18,000 persons have been born, and all these multiplied populations are to be reached by the gospel. In England only one Eastern Arena can cities we are being much crowded, and the age of ground is of great value, but in Western America 500 acres is a small farm, and 20,000 acres is no unusual possession. There is a vast field here and everywhere undeveloped, plenty of room and nothing on another man's foundation.

We need as churches to stop bombarding the world with ideas that have been proof against thirty years of Christian preaching. Also that class which lacks the spirit of evangelism, spending on one chandelier enough to light 500 souls to glory, and in one carved pillar enough to have made a thousand men Pillars in the house of God. Dedicating, and doing less good than many a log cabin meeting-house with tallow candles stuck in wooden sockets, and a minister who has never seen a college and does not know the difference between Greek and Choctaw! We need as churches to get into sympathy with the great outside world, and let him see that none are so broken-hearted or hardly bestead that they will not be welcomed here. Are you some fastidious Christian, "I don't like to be crowded in church. Don't put any one in my pew."

My brother, what will you do in heaven? When a great multitude that no man can number assembles, they will not find room for you. What are the select few to-day assembled in the Christian churches compared with the mightier millions outside of them? Many of the churches are like a hospital that should advertise that its patients must have nothing more than toothache or a "run round" on the ankles, heads, no crushed ankles, no fractured thighs. Room for respectable sinners, respectable sinners and sinners with a gloss on. It is as though a man should build a mill that should do all the work on one acre. He may raise ever so large corn on one acre, but the size of wheat—he would remain poor. The church of God has bestowed its choicest care on one acre, and has enclosed it, and men women in that small inclosure, but the field is the world. That empire of China and South America, Europe, Asia and Africa and all the islands of the sea. It is as though, after a great battle, there were left 50,000 wounded and dying on the field and these surgeons and their time to three patients under their charge. The major general comes in and says to the doctors, "Come out here and look at the nearly 50,000 dying for lack of surgical attendance." No, they say, "these doctors, standing there fanning their patients.

"We have three important cases here, and we are attending to them, and I think we are not positively busy with their wounds if we take up time to keep the flies off." In this awful battle of sin and sorrow, where millions have fallen on millions, do not let us spend all our time in taking care of a few people, and when the commander comes to say, "Come out," say practically, "No, I cannot. I have here a few choice cases and I have my patients off the floor." There are multitudes to-day who have never had any Christian worker look them in the eye and with earnestness in the accentuation say, "Come!" or they would long ago have been in the kingdom. My friends, religion is either a thing or a great reality. If it is a thing, let us dedicate our churches and Christian associations. If it be a reality, then get out of our churches on the way to the bar of God unfitted for the ordeal. And what are we doing?

In order to reach the masses of outsiders we must drop all technicalities out of our sermons. What is the use of talking about the hypostatic union and French encyclopedists and Erastianism and Antinomianism, when we are ignorant and so little understand as if a physician should talk to a consumptive about the laws of inflammation and interstitial tubercle and neurotic typhoid? Many of us come out of the theological seminaries so loaded up that we take the first ten years to shed the ammunition and get down to the real work. Outside of the immense tongue-trade of the contract in the matter of the ore tonnage which it involves for the whole period of the contract, it is one of the greatest amount of value in ore production for any like period of time which has ever been made from any mine in the state, and after all the work of contracting the many millions of dollars of territory within its properties is made.

Another strong feature of the contract is the guarantee that the Portland Company will not be required to ship more than one car load per day to the Colorado Smelting Company's smelter at Argentine Junction.

A FIELD FOR NEW WOMEN.

Feminine Wage Earners a Success at Farmers' and Fancy Occupations.

Of all the new vocations in which men are amazed to see women excelling, farming is, as a feminine achievement, the most astonishing. But when it is considered how large a share women have always had in the hard work of the farms and how much the thrifty farmer has always owed to his thrifty wife, the cause for astonishment lies, not in the success of women as farmers, but in the fact that not till very recent years has she thought or proven herself equal to assuming the responsibility of field culture.

Hegtvedore she has made the dairy and poultry product furnish the groceries and she wearing apparel for herself and children, besides many extras in the way of carpets and furniture, and in doing this she was supposed to reach the limit of her capabilities. She was not supposed to know anything about the reason for rotation of crops, nor of methods of draining and fertilizing. These the farmers discussed with each other, if the "women folks" were present, in the way they talked politics—as far above feminine comprehension as the planets are above the earth, and yet to-day women are working wonders on farms that are under their absolute control.

The latest prodigy is Miss Margaret Rogers, of Monterey County, Cal. She rounds up the cattle on her father's ranch and her own, oversees the branding, clips the lambs' ears, breaks the colts and rides all over the foothills in divided skirts, and on a fiery horse, chasing the stampeded steers, and has even pursued Mexican outlaws, and recaptured some of her stolen sheep.

There are other women in the West running large ranches profitably, and throughout the Middle and Southern States they are turning small places in a way that insures them a comfortable living when, but for this venture, they would have to join the vast army of breadless sewing-girls of the cities and depending upon sewing, boarding-house keeping or factory work for a very uncertain maintenance.

But successful farming on a moderate or small scale is not the proud achievement of country-bred women alone. Just as it has often proved that the city girl makes a most energetic farmer's wife, so it is now proving that a city woman of fair intelligence and education can rent a little farm and manipulate it in various lines of such products of attendance quite as successfully as her country sister.

One reason for this is that the city woman thoroughly understands the needs of different classes of people, and goes in for specialties to cater to them: appreciating the fact, because of her w.de range of observation in the competitive market, that appearances have a vast deal to do with the salableness of the kindly fruits of the earth.

According to the last census there were 312 commercial greenhouses owned and managed by women, or about seven per cent. of the total number of such florist establishments, and all were reported as prosperous and flourishing. A New Jersey woman is raising mushrooms and netting sixty cents a pound for them.

Outside of New York there is a woman who is laying up big money on the sale of violets, and she, too, was a city woman who knew that there would pay well for the biggest and sweetest blooms.

Bee keeping is another profitable source of income for the woman farmer. The honey and wax from the little pound boxes in which the bees make it, or it is strained and sold to wholesale druggists, and as the wax sells by the pound to the salmaking establishments there is no waste in the hive.

There is always ready sale for fine poultry for the table, while if she goes in for egg farming the product of a hundred good hens will alone maintain her and a small family.

And then women are going beyond these industries to knowing how clover, rye, wheat and corn should be planted, harvested and sold, and their success with small fruits proves conclusively that for an intelligent woman *who has not had the special train*ing now demanded of every applicant for all the bread-winning professions or clerkships, there is a living to be had on a few acres—gained in a way that is healthful, agreeable and in close touch with the beauties of nature.—Philadelphia Record.

Newest Fashions.

There is something new in bicycle skirts. The simple "saddle back" with large pleats is still the only style seen, and the Eton jacket supplements the cashmere or French flannel shirt.

One new fad is a little mirror in an enamelled locket that is worn on a long gold chain. At the side of the locket is a pretty design, generally a bird or butterfly in color, and the mirror is concealed.

Some of the cold-weather street boleros and Eton jackets of black royal blue, Russian green and tricolor velvet are elegant. A Scot will be fashionable with long pointed revers and a Robespierre hood of other wool, mink, or other costly fur.

It is said that expensive waists of velvet will be worn next winter in colors and fancy designs. They will open over a waistcoat of white satin silk or lace, and the sleeve shown will be a full puff, with a cuff composed of lace or silk to match the waistcoat.

Many of the newest hats though they are still worn low over the forehead, are cocked up sharply at the back with a big bow of black velvet ribbon, and, serving as a cache peigne, and resembling almost exactly the modern of three or four years ago.

A novelty of the season is the bonnet for the carriage. It is a small affair, resembling in shape the crown of a derby hat, and is worn with a veil, but should never be worn by a young girl, and not by a woman who is past middle age. Velvet and satin in black and white are the favorite materials for these bonnets, but flowers are not worn with them.

Cleaning Baby's Cloak.

Babies' cashmere cloaks can be cleaned at home with magnesia. Get an ounce of powdered magnesia from a chemist, dip a clean rag into it and rub the cloak well all over, turning the rag as it gets soiled. When well covered with the powder take a clean brush and brush it well as it lies on the table. Some people use naphtha, but this is very inflammable and is rather apt to turn the cashmere *sad*dow.

Change the Pictures.

When a room is turned out and the pictures are being cleaned change their positions before hanging them again. Often a picture is by this means noticed and admired afresh by the inmates of a house, and would otherwise probably escape attention from the very fact that it is always in the same place. Adopt this means of change in other articles both ornamental and furniture. Remember always "Variety is charming."

Fixing Up the Floor.

Some women who thought to do with rugs on ordinary floors for the heated period have come to the conclusion that the ordinary floor is not a thing of beauty.

It may be wonderfully improved, however, and, if it is at all decent, transformed into a thing of beauty.

First, you don your rubber gloves and give the boards a coat of ammonia, using a paint brush. Several coats of ammonia will darken wood until those who behold it must fancy it an inheritance from a grandparent, at least.

Then comes the stain, which stain is a matter of taste. After this shellac is often applied, and when dry it is rubbed thoroughly with pumice stone and oil. Still further polish will result by using beeswax and turpentine.

The wax should be finely shredded before it is covered with the turpentine, and that it is left to stand for five or six hours and it should be stirred with a stick occasionally until it is of the consistency of honey, when it is ready for use.

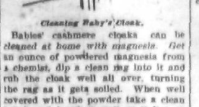

A piece of flannel is better than a brush for the polishing.

It is best to buy a dull finish stain and to do the polishing as already indicated.

The Problem of the Mantel.

The young housekeeper is much better off in a house having only a mantel shelf over the fireplace than with an ordinary over-mantel. In that case she can invest the fireplace with great interest and beauty, and lend it the charm of her individual tastes, making it from floor to ceiling a study in composition.

The following principles should always be followed. In the first place it should be remembered that the space above the mantel has architectural values of its own, and must always be considered in relation to the rest of the room. Certain laws should always be followed, and the question of proportion never neglected. Architecturally considered the space over the mantel-shelf belongs to the rest of the wall space, and its decoration must be carried up to the ceiling, or the line of tops of doors, windows, and fireplace should be balanced. When the architect or builder, however, has left only a bare space over the mantel-shelf, the householder in her decoration should observe the general laws of decoration which he has laid down. Thus when a picture, a mirror or a panel is introduced over the mantel-shelf it takes the place of a panel. Great care must be taken in placing it, so that the golden rule of proportion is violated. Thus a picture or panel not filling the entire space should be so hung that the wall spaces above and below it are properly balanced. A small or unimportant picture is to be avoided, certain straight up-and-down or curved lines are always to be suggested.—Harper's Bazar.

Lemon Sauce—Half a cupful of butter, creamed; add the beaten yolks of three eggs. Beat well and set the dish in a pan of boiling water. Add the beaten whites of the eggs, a tablespoonful of salt, a saltspoonful of white pepper, and the juice of two or three lemons. When it is cooked thick place on the ice. Before serving add half a cupful of cream and one large or two small cucumbers sliced very thin. Let the cucumbers stand an hour in salted ice water after they are sliced.

Milk Puddings—Rice, tapioca and sago should be blanched to make a pudding. Wash the rice, or whatever is required, and put it into a saucepan; cover it with cold water and bring it gradually to boiling point. Let it boil for two minutes, then pour off the water and wash the rice thoroughly. Put it into a buttered dish, cover it with milk and let it cook in a moderately hot oven for two hours. At least a pint of milk should be added for every two ounces of rice, tapioca and sago. The two last named should be boiled until tender before being mixed.

Pumpkin Pudding—Prepare a few pounds of pumpkin as for pies, and to a good deal of the pulp add the usual quantity of milk, sugar, eggs, spice and salt. Bake in a deep dish with a crust around the edge.

Indian Pudding—Scald a pint of milk in a saucepan; when boiling stir in a heaping tablespoonful of Indian meal, and cook for ten minutes, stirring constantly. Add a tablespoonful of butter, two tablespoonfuls of sugar, one teaspoonful of ginger, one teaspoonful of salt, and one cupful of cold milk. Beat two eggs and add them to the mixture, and pour into a buttered pudding dish. Bake slowly for two hours, and serve with cream.

Corn Pudding—Two cups chopped corn, two cups chopped beef, two eggs, one tablespoonful of butter, one teaspoonful of salt, one-half teaspoonful of pepper, one cup of milk. Mix well together and bake in a buttered dish.

Corn Omelet—Cut the corn from six ears of boiled corn and put into a saucepan with a tablespoonful of butter, a teaspoonful of salt, a little pepper and a cupful of milk. Let the mixture boil up once, then set aside to cool. Beat the yolks of four eggs and add to the corn mixture. Beat the whites to a stiff froth and fold into the mixture. Pour into a buttered pan and bake in a moderate oven. Serve at once.

When I came to myself, rocks and a darkened sea beside a split rock. When I came to myself, rocks and ashes and stones were flung in every direction. I thought a thousand years long through and through me. I thought the end of the world had come.

"My darlings! God," I cried, "forgive me! Let me see! Tom once more, and she is his wife!"

I could not support this prayer to be answered. I opened my eyes, and there was something home, crushing and pulling down the ashes. Two horses, with their heads down, were tugging at a wagon-tongue that was fixed in the ashes. Behind the wagon was a wagon-bed, and in the bed was Tom's wife. She was nursing a baby. Tom was standing beside the wagon, with his hand on the horses' heads, and there was Tom's mother.

Something else whispered:

"Read it. If he is false to you, you want to know it—the sooner the better."

I tore it wildly open and read:

"My Darling Tom—How glad I am to say I can see you again. Met you at Goff's Station, on the 26th, at the 6.20 train. I know you will be as glad to see me as I to see you, dear boy! Until then, I am your loving TEENIE."

I was struck dumb. Something seemed to be choking me, to be gripping my very heart. I thought I was going to die then and there.

"Teenie!" I had never heard of her. Whom was this woman whom Tom was going to meet? And why had he not told me? Oh! I saw it all. I knew why I must not go to the station with him. To-day was the 26th. To-night he was to meet "Teenie." Very well. He should have his house in which to receive her then.

I verily believe I was insane as I rose and made preparations to leave the little house which for two years had been paradise to me. Tom had two hundred dollars in one of our bureau drawers—money I had helped him to save by close and pinching economy that summer, towards paying the only note that he had out against him. I took the money and hid it in my bosom. Then I wrote a note and left it on the table—precisely as other women have done when about to wreck their happiness in a fit of jealous anger.

"Tom," I said—"There isn't room in so small a house for you and me—and 'Teenie.' I have taken the money to go home with, but will send it back to you as soon as I get there."

That was all. Not even a good-by. I was so angry.

Then I started on foot. I could take a train at six o'clock, precisely, for the East. It was now three o'clock, and the distance was seven miles. I was a good walker in those days, and could, I thought, easily make it. Oh, how miserable I was as I plodded along that hard, dusty road! How old and worn I felt, and how anxious to get to my mother, where I could die in peace!

Only once did it occur to me that Tom would come in, by and by, from the station, and find my note; that he might be in despair; that his heart would be broken, and he would hurry after me to bring me back. But, indeed, I was not capable of thinking myself. He would be glad to go and meet his "Teenie" and have her to himself. How I could have been so blind as to have married a girl I had met and bride Tom! I am sure I was temporarily insane.

The sun grew very hot, and I found it much harder to walk that seven miles than I had anticipated. But I would not give up. It was probably about five o'clock, and I had some two miles to go, when, looking up, I saw a terrible black cloud coming straight towards me from the west. Cyclone! were not common in those days, and I did not know what it meant, but I had a frightened feeling, and looked for shelter. I had left the pike now, and was on a road which skirted a ravine, wild and rugged. To the right, to the left, there was not a house in sight. My terror knew no bounds. I cried, I screamed. I shrieked for Tom. It was, of course, utterly useless. The awful, yellow cloud filled the atmosphere, which was strangely quiet. Not a leaf stirred, not a bough trembled. The birds had ceased singing. Then, all at once, a terrific blast struck me, and I was lifted and whirled to and fro, and tossed to and fro as if in the grip of the awful monster.

Struggles among it came growing larger and blacker and closed every instant. In my mad rage long I struck my foot against a stone and sprained my ankle. Then I fainted. When I came to myself, rocks and ashes and stones were flung in every direction. I thought a thousand years long through and through me. I thought the end of the world had come.

THE ALTERNATE ROAD LAW.

The alternate road law of 1901 was adopted by the county at the last election by a very large majority. The construction and keeping in repair the roads in the county is one of the most important matters which the citizen must consider. It is a duty which he owes to himself and his neighbors that he should be in nowise negligent in performing any requirements which under the law has fallen to his lot, and as a citizen it is his duty to inform himself of the different methods provided by the legislature for the accomplishment of this purpose, having three alternate systems from which to choose. These different systems represent the views and methods advocated by men who have studied the advantages and disadvantages of the systems in use in West Virginia. Having made a selection let us as citizens obtain from the alternate road law of 1891 every advantage which it may bring to the country by seeing that every stipulation is carried out. The civilization of a community may be and frequently is judged by the condition of the highways. While this may not be always a safe criterion it most certainly indicates the progress, the activity and advancement of agriculture in a country where the roads are properly maintained. The value of real estate is enhanced from a financial, educational, religious social, from any standpoint considered, good roads mean more to a community than perhaps any other work under the superintendence and and administration of the county government.

The articles on education recently published in this paper have been very favorably commented on by several scholarly persons. One eminent scholar and minister, however, regrets that attention had not been called to the materialistic tendencies of the articles and our readers admonished to be on their guard. Had there been room for all the articles prepared, there would have been one devoted to this point especially. In lieu of the proposed article the writer would state in brief that a fatal defect in Mr. Spencer's writings is the assumption that there is nothing wrong with human nature; that our minds and bodies are just as they were when created, and to assert that there is anything wrong with human nature is to charge the Creator with incompetency, while the truth is that though God did make man upright, yet man has thought out many inventions. He relinquished the power or disposition to do right and retained the disposition to do wrong. Hence, the first thing for man to do in order to reform on true and effective lines is to seek the restoration of this lost disposition to do right and be relieved of the disposition to go contrary to God's instructions or commandments. To a person thus minded, very much of Spencer's writings will be of the greatest service in developing whatever is noblest and best in human faculties.

Judge McWhorter is criticised by one of the papers of his district for seeing that a certain negro at Romeoville who had been refused his vote by the ballot commissioners, produced the proper proof and voted. We know of nothing improper in the Judge investigating the question of the voter's eligibility, nor do we consider that the commissioners did wrong to refuse the voter. There are many votes in the debatable ground. We do know however that the Judge among those who know him is above reproach, and that the negress able to qualify and vote beat out his action. During his entire career on the bench Judge McWhorter has never been accused of a base motive.

The election returns gave McKinley 292 votes in the Electoral College. Both houses of the Fifty seventh Congress will be Republican. McKinley's plurality in the State is between ten and twenty thousand. All four Congressional Districts elected Republican candidates. Gaines obtained a good majority in this district. The Republican State ticket was elected and the Legislature will be Republican on joint ballot. Virginia gave Bryan about thirty thousand majority and sends a solid Democratic delegation to Congress. The Confederate pets Bryan's pie by a Kentucky as right as usual and Beckham's is left thousand.

The pa...ers of West Va...ginia is represented by the Democratic majority of 100,000, an increase of 40 per cent. The Legislature of this State is unanimous, and the Democratic majority in both houses will not be materially reduced by the election.

Prof. H. St George Tucker, dean of the law faculty, has been appointed acting president and chairman of the faculty of Washington & Lee University until the meeting of the board of trustees next Spring. It is rumored that the presidency has been offered to ex-President Grover Cleveland.

A good plea to refuse drink is pursued by a gentleman who some times comes to Marlinton. When asked to partake he said: "No, I thank you, I never drink anything before four o'clock in the afternoon." It happened that he was asked to have a drink after four o'clock. His reply was: "I never drink anything after four o'clock in the afternoon."

The present Congress is composed of 357 members. At its coming session it will determine from the census returns upon the basis of apportionment of representation. Were the apportionment made upon the present basis of 173,800, West Virginia would be entitled to one more Congressman. It seems probable that 200,000 will be the basis this time, in which case the State may still be entitled to an increased representation. Should this basis be taken Congress will have 373 members.

A Great Medicine.

"I have used Chamberlain's Colic Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and find it a great medicine" writes E S Phipps, of Portsmouth, Ark. "I suffered of bloody flux. I cannot speak too highly of it." This remedy always wins the good opinion, if not praise, of those who use it. The quick cures which it effects, even in the most severe cases, make it a favorite everywhere. For sale by H. R. In the United States District Court in and for said district, in the matter of Wise Herold, Bankrupt, No 93 in Bankruptcy, petition for discharge. To the Honorable John J. Jackson, Judge of the district court of the United States for the district of West Virginia:

Wise Herold, of Frost, in the county of Pocahontas and State of West Virginia, in said district, respectfully represents that on the 14th day of July, last past, he was duly adjudged bankrupt under the acts of Congress relating to bankruptcy; that he has duly surrendered all his property and rights of property and has fully complied with all the requirements of said acts and of the orders of the court touching his bankruptcy.

Wherefore he prays that he may be decreed by the court to have a full discharge from all debts provable against his estate under said bankrupt acts, except such debts as are excepted by law from such discharge.

Dated this 2nd day of July, A. d. 1900
(Signed) WISE HEROLD,
Bankrupt.

Notes From the Paris Exposition.

The Wanzl Manufacturing Company, at 199 Broadway, New York, show their usual American enterprise by having a very creditable exhibit located in Group XVII. Class 70, at the Paris International Exposition, where they show to great advantage the celebrated Singer Sewing Machine which is used in every country on the globe, both for family and for manufacturing purposes. The writer was highly pleased with this display and observed with much satisfaction that it was favorably commented upon by visitors generally.

The Grand Prize was awarded by the International Jury to Singer Sewing Machines for superior excellence in design, construction, efficiency and for remarkable development and adaptation to every stitching process used in either the family or the factory.

Only One Grand Prize for sewing machines was awarded at Paris, and this distinction of absolutely superior merit confirms the previous action of the International Jury at the World's Columbian Exposition, in Chicago, where Singer Machines received fifty-four distinct awards, being more than were received by all other kinds of sewing machines combined.

Should it be possible that any of our readers are unfamiliar with the celebrated Singer Machine, we would respectfully advise that they call at any of the Singer salesrooms, which can be found in all cities and most towns in the United States."

Does Electricity Kill Trees?

New Haven (Conn.) Special to Philadelphia Inquirer: Indignant citizens who desire to save the noble elms that are the pride of New Haven have threatened to bring suit against the trolley car companies of the city for alleged damages to the trees. The assertion is made that the trolley wires charged with electricity are in some streets held in place by connecting wires fastened to the trees, and that charges of electric fluid are sent into the trees, which are thus killed. The trolley companies have sought to stave off damage suits by an offer to test the scientific correctness of these assertions. Permission has been obtained from the department of public works and police supervision assured for the interesting experiment within the week of charging the big tree in front of City Hall with the full voltage of the trolley system. If the tree dies a score of suits will be filed by property owners, who have been compelled to cut down trees, some of them 150 years old since the trolley ran through the avenues.

courts, it is his duty to think of the interests of his clients; when a clerk is up to an accounts it is his duty to keep his mind upon the column of figures. He who fills up his life with thoughts of self is far from being the highest style of Christian. Jesus is one who said often, "I must stay at night," "I wish I might die before morning." He is now an infidel.

But there are times when we can and ought to give ourselves to the contemplation of this solemn moment when in the well time ends and eternity begins. We must go through that one pass. There is no roundabout way, no bypath, no circuitous route. Die we must, and it will be to us a shameful occurrence or a time of admirable behavior. Our friends may stretch out their hands to keep us back, but no imperfection on their part can hinder us. They might offer large retainers, but death would not take the fee. The breath will fail, and the eyes will close, and the heart will stop. You may hang the couch with the richest tapestry, but when the death care for bed curtains" You may hang the room with the finest works of art, but when death care for pictures"

You may fill the house with the wailings of widowhood and orphanage. Does death mind weeping?

Listen to Paul's battle shout with misfortune, Death is swallowed up in victory! Listen to Miriam's song; look at the glory that hath rent the dungeon and filled the earth and heaven with the music of the falling manacles of despotism and then look at those who have tried to cure themselves by human prescriptions, attempting to heal gangrene with patch of court plaster and to stop the disease of dying empires with the quackery of earthly wisdom. Nothing can speak peace to the soul, nothing can mitigate our crushing burdens, nothing can overcome our spiritual foes, nothing can open our eyes to see the surrounding horses and chariots of salvation that fill all the mountains but the voice and command of Him who stepped one night at Emmaus.

You ought to be willing to exchange your body that has headaches and sideaches and weaknesses innumerable, that limps with the same brain or festers with the thorn or flames on the funeral pyre of fevers, for an immortal body, for an eye that blinks not before the jasper gates and the great white throne. Let us start the way. It may be winter and the earth is a snow shroud. The air is solemn and the forests set on fire by the retreating year—dead nature laid out in state. It may be with your child in the hall in your hand, or you may be in a strange hotel, with a sense of faithful to the last. It may be in the rail train, shot off the switch and tumbling in long reverberation down the embankment. Let us start.

I know not the time, I know not the mode, but the hour will come when I shall be subtracted away, and we shall come down to the time when we have but ten days left, then nine days, then eight days, then seven days, six days, five days, four days, three days, two days, one day. Then hours,—three hours, two hours, one hour. Then only minutes left—five minutes, four minutes, three minutes, two minutes, one minute. Then only seconds left—four seconds, three seconds, two seconds, one second. Gone! The chapter of life ended! The book closed! The pulses at rest! The feet through with the journey! The hands closed from all work! No word on the lips! No breath in the nostril! Hair combed back to lie undisheveled by any human hands. The muscles still. The eyes fixed still. The lungs still. The tongue still. All still. You might put the stethoscope to breast and to forehead and you might put a speaking trumpet to the ear, but you could not wake the deafness. No motion. No throb. No life. Still! Still!

On earth with many of you the evening of the happiest part of the twenty-four hours. You gather about the stand. You talk and laugh and sing. You recount the day. You plan for the morrow. There is nothing easier than to be good natured when everything around you is favorable when there is nothing to pull us on, or forgiving when we have not been provoked, or hopeful when we have no discouragement to fend. But you have felt the trouble of some misfortune. You have come at some time quaked and grounded under the infernal power. You feel that the devil who after you, to get your birthright, graces retreating; you feel that you have been left in the awful power of sin, and he thrown into the dust. The gloom thickened. The first indications of the night were seen. How Pennsylvania Coal Miners Work and Live.

MOST people going for the first time into the region of the great anthracite mines would at once put the mine workers and their families in a class apart from the ordinary human beings, writes Paul Latzke, in the Detroit Free Press. The newspaper accounts have paved the way for this, and the appearance of the men and boys in their working outfit clinches the impression. No other body of laborers in the world carry such strong external evidences of their vocation. Upon the top of their heads where the mining lamp is fixed the peaks of their queer shaped caps, to their feet, shod with great, grimy, thick-soled, clumping boots, the miner-workers bear the obtrusive stamp of their trade. They look uncanny, fierce. Take the most mild mannered and inoffensive little man that lives, clothe him in the miners' regalia, let him hammer for eight or ten hours underground, and he will come up a fearsome object. The most courageous woman from the outside world would run from such a man at the least demonstration. Should she unexpectedly meet him at dark on a lonely road leaving never seen a miner before, she would probably have an attack of hysteria.

The faces of the men are hard and seamed and sallow, and, thick with coal dust, they are almost less than human to the unaccustomed gaze. Their eyes are outlined with crows' feet, no matter how young they may be, and they have a peculiar squinting look, due to their constant working in the half gloom of the coal tunnels. It is recorded of some of the mules that pull coal cars in the mines, that, having worked for years under ground without once coming up, they have gone instantly blind, on being exposed to the daylight. In a measure it is so with the men and boys who spend their working hours day after day underground. The daylight gives them a uncomfortable sensation, and they acquire the habit of screwing up their eyes that finally affects all the muscles of the face.

It is owing to these strongly marked peculiarities that the mine workers are put down at first by newspaper correspondents and writers in the district as something apart. Even the trained observer requires some time to accustom himself to their striking appearance and to realize that after all these men are like other men, and that their lessons, could they have absorbed many of the characteristics of the men at all, after a little while among the miners that he comes to regard them as ordinary workmen. On a Sunday or holiday with the grime washed off their faces, their mining lamps hung away, their working clothes removed, the men look an entirely different lot of human beings. Then it is only by their crows' feet and the paleness of their skins, due to their underground life, that they are to be recognized. The first time I ever saw a considerable body of the miners together was a Sunday mass meeting before the big strike was called. I was amazed at the unlikeness to their pictured appearance. For all that any one could have told the mass meeting might have been at Cooper Union in New York. The only difference was that most of the men —and women, too, for there were lots of women in the crowd—were much better dressed than the crowd that were out at Cooper Union some months ago.

If the miners and mine laborers were engaged in work of an ordinary character, no one would think of putting them down as being underpaid as a class. Compared with other forms of work, mining, even in its highest form, is little above that unskilled labor, and the scale of prices may seem high. But in determining the earnings of miners as compared with the earnings of other laborers, a number of things are to be taken into consideration. The character of their work is extra hazardous. Every time other things menace his life every moment that he is underground. And so shrewdly have the operators managed that the financial penalty for an accident never falls on them. In almost any other pursuit in which an employee is killed his family has a chance of claiming damages. In the coal mines no one ever dreams of putting in such a claim as a legal right. Many fifteen inquiries I made to find a case where a coal operator had been mulcted in damages, for injury and loss of life, but none could be found. There was a hazy story that an underground operator had once paid the family of an unknown driver boy, who was killed. 875. But this case could not be traced within the time at the ordinary man's disposal. Most of the operators make some sort of reparation by furnishing special employment about the works to the men crippled in their employ, and where the father is killed a place is generally found for the boys if there are any in the family. But such a thing as a cash settlement is never dreamed of.

The little chance that the miners had in this direction was skillfully taken from them by a piece of legislation that was passed, "in the interest of miners" and that was hailed with joy by the men at that time. This was the creation of mine examining boards, to insure miners' licenses. Without such license no miner can work. The men foolish ly thought that this would protect them from unskilled competition, and especially from the competition of the foreigners that were pouring into the region. They soon found, however, that the protection didn't protect. The county boards are paid a fee for each license they issue. Naturally county politicians are not going to work against their own politics by refusing licenses to men prepared to pay for the luxury. So the "license" has degenerated into a farce, in so far as it serves as a protection against competition, and danger from the presence of poor workmen. But for the operating companies the measure has proved a great thing. By employing only "licensed" miners they are released legally from all responsibility for accidents. If a miner is buried under tons of rock and rock when he is at work, the fault is his own. If the laborer working at his side is also killed, the laborer's relatives may look to the family of the "licensed" miner for damages, but not to the employer. If there is an explosion of gas, the miner in whose chamber it occurs is the responsible party.

The operator hired him on the strength of his license, the possession of which presupposes that the man knows all about gas, and how to get away from the dangerous fire damp before it accumulates in dangerous quantities.

The fire boss who inspects the mine every morning for gas on behalf of the "miner" Mary Jones, "queen of the mines" and the idol of the miners, occupies a unique place in the world of labor. This kind hearted, philanthropic woman is so loved by the rough delvers of the coal mines in the anthracite regions that with them her word is tantamount to law. Mrs. Jones is fifty six years old, silver-haired and beautiful. Her voice has been sweetly eloquent in behalf of the workers whose cause she has shrewdly have the operators managed that the financial penalty for an accident never falls on them. In almost any other pursuit in which an employee is killed his family has a chance of claiming damages. In the coal mines no one ever dreams of putting in such a claim as a legal right. WHEN DIAZ DIES.

The Overshadowing Question is, What Will Then Happen to Mexico?

"The great question that overshadows everything else in Mexico at present," said a resident of that republic, "is, What will happen when Diaz dies? The President is marvelously well preserved for a man of his age, but in the natural course of events he must soon pass away, and whether the succession can be settled without strife and bloodshed is open to doubt. In the opinion of many conservative people a revolution is inevitable, and, for that reason, great interest attaches incidentally to the status of the standing army. The Mexican military establishment is on a better footing now than it ever has been, but there is still immense room for improvement. It is an undeniable fact that the rank and file of the army are recruited almost entirely from the penitentiary. When a man receives a long sentence he is given the option of serving in the ranks, and is certain to accept, generally in the hope that he will have a chance to escape. It is very curious to see a native company marching from place to place, especially in the southern corps, to which the worst convicts are sent, on the principle of getting them as far away as possible. There are about twice the usual number of officers, and they form a guard at each side of the line, ready to shoot down any private who makes a break for liberty. In each command there are, perhaps, a dozen troopers who can be relied upon, and, as a rule, they compose the last squad, where they can keep an eye on their comrades. The barracks in all garrison towns are surrounded by a high brick wall, surmounted with broken glass, exactly like the wall of a prison, and no soldier is ever allowed out of sight of the officer. Nevertheless, there are numerous escapes, and the annual report of men who are shot while trying to get away is something astounding to one who doesn't understand the system. It is absurd to suppose that any reliance can be placed upon such troops in time of trouble, and now they would act in a revolution is entirely problematical. The officers are at present of a rather superior class. They come mainly from the National Military College and the older element, which was notoriously inefficient, is being rapidly weeded out. Without men, however, they would cut no figure in a crisis."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Lived in Time of George IV.

There died the other day in England an old lady who had social experience such as few women enjoy. She was nearly 100, for Lady Mary Saurin was born on April 28, 1801. She was the daughter of the first Earl of Harrowby, and her girlhood days were passed in the society of the most brilliant men of the beginning of the century. She was 1820 and was one of the conspicuous guests at the garden party given at Buckingham Palace in 1867 to celebrate Queen Victoria's jubilee of reign. One of the recollections of her youth was the arrival of an orderly at her father's house with dispatches announcing the defeat of Napoleon at Waterloo. Some of her other reminiscences of that time dealt with the excitement over the Peterloo massacres, the sensation caused by one of the chartists and the blanketeers and the Cato street conspiracy, which was formed with the object of killing everybody connected with the Liverpool next, including her own father. It was to have been carried out in her father's house. He was to give a dinner to the members of the cabinet, and the conspirators who had heard of it planned to kill all his guests and the host as well. At the age of twenty-seven Lady Mary married Rear-Admiral Saurin and her time was still spent in the society of the greatest men and women in England. She saw four Earls of Harrowby in her life, which was happy until the end.

The Confusion of a Car Conductor.

A new bashfulness among street car conductors was revealed to a patient passenger on an uptown Sixth avenue car the other day. The conductor, who was a youthful specimen, opened conversation by exhibiting a coin of a stranger which confounded a promising, and remarking that many strange things, not to be carried in pocket pieces, came into the hands of himself and his fellow conductors in the course of a year, other items passengers who were unwilling to make change in car fares frequently confessing that confusion who took bad quarters or half dollars by mistake and wrote the conductor's address with which to send passengers said them at the car house to other conductors as a discount of five cents. The repeatedly confessed him, he explained, had made some five cents then to try to guess the coins or to lose the face value of the coins. The other conductors he said, were always ready to make light of the coins and these were, of course, thereby passengers available to whom they might be given in change.—New York Sun.

An Oral Accents Copier.

Although an oral is known for its wisdom it is very seldom that one finds its way into a court of justice. When it does it is a source of delight to those who are present.

One of those wily creatures did just its way into the court room at Tacoma the other day. Court was in session and the judge was trying to get a jury for the case in which the oral was being chiefly interested. The judge was having a hard time of it, for the lawyers were trying to get men on the jury who would be favorable to their side of the case. The oral was interested in the case, and he was trying to get on the jury, but the judge was not willing that he should. Finally the judge asked the oral if he could render a fair and impartial verdict in the case. The oral replied that he could, and the judge accepted him. The oral was then sworn in and took his seat in the jury box. The case was then given to the jury, and they retired to their room to consider the verdict. They were out for some time, and when they came back into court the oral was the only one who had not changed his mind. The judge asked the jury if they had agreed upon a verdict, and the foreman replied that they had not. The judge then asked the oral if he could render a verdict, and he replied that he could. The judge then asked him what the verdict was, and the oral replied that it was for the plaintiff. The judge then asked him if he could render a verdict for the defendant, and the oral replied that he could. The judge then asked him what the verdict was, and the oral replied that it was for the defendant. The judge then asked him if he could render a verdict for the plaintiff, and the oral

REV. DR. TALMAGE.

THE BROOKLYN DIVINE'S SUNDAY DISCOURSE.

Subject: A Precious Rocket—Scion of the House of David in Jehoshebe's Arms—A Lesson From the Slaughter of the Princes—Lead Children to Christ.

Washington, D. C.—In this discourse is a neglected incident of the Bible Dr. Talmage shows some new and startling facts and says that all around us are royal babies which we may help, defend and bless. Text: II. Kings xi., 2: "Jehoshebe, the daughter of King Joram, sister of Ahaziah, took Joash, the son of Ahaziah, and stole him from among the king's sons which were slain, and they hid him, even him and his nurse, in the bedchamber from Athaliah, so that he was not slain."

And he was with her hid in the house of the Lord six years.

Grandmothers are more numerous than their children's children than they were with their own. At forty years of age it is a great thing to be a grandmother, but at seventy the grandmother is a common thing. Some of the finest faces I ever saw in my life were those of grandmothers. There is a certain confectionery for wine. There is a certain confectionery for children. Some grandmother takes out her pockethandkerchief and wipes the sweetness and tears from the face of the little children. Some of her neckerchief and collection descendant of the vine, and she should be proud of it. Let him off this time. I'll be reasonable for her behavior in the future. Mrs. Talmage's mother was a grandmother of unique, boisterous love, and she did. "I don't know what I should have done in my trouble with Grandmothers are not fit to bring up grandchildren. But here is my text: We have a grandmother of the finest type.

I have been at Jerusalem, where the occurrence of the text took place, and the whole scene came vividly before me while I was there—the site of the ancient temple and climbing the towers of the king's palace. Here in the text it is old Athaliah, the royal murderess. She ought to have been honorable. Her father was a king, and her husband was a king. He was a king. And yet we find her plotting for the extermination of the entire royal family, including the royal children. The executioners' knives are sharpened. The palace is one of blood and carnage and ominous. On all sides are shrieks and hands thrown up and struggle and the gasping of dying men, and the cries of mercy, while the floor floats of the palace run with blood. Into this scene of horror the shadow of a great horror, a fleet, footed woman, a stewardess's wife, Jehoshebe by name, stretches out her hand of maternal mercy, saves upon the ground—while that fiend Athaliah is not looking—a weasure, wraps it up tenderly, but in haste, smuggles it secretly, but, then down the stairs of the palace, and then the stairs of the temple, and then into the bedchamber, lest she be discovered in this compassionate abduction. Get her out of the way as quick as you can, for she carries a precious burden, even a young king. With this precious boy in her arms she goes into the line of the ancient temple, the church of olden time, and puts the child of royalty and of high down, sound asleep as he is and unconscious of the peril that has been threatening—and that has been threatening—to shut down forever his mortal existence. Meanwhile old Athaliah, supposing that all the royal family are dead. But the six years expire, and it is time for coronation. The rooms are swept, take the throne and to mock back into the palace and old Athaliah, grandmother.

The arrangements are all made for political revolution. The military come and the ecclesiastics come, and they bring loyalty to the boy Joash and stand around the throne, and the boy is anointed and crowned and the burnished shield. Everything is ready. Now Joash, half affrighted at the sound of trumpet of his coronation, stood at the confirmation of his chances, is brought forth in full regalia. The scroll of authority is put in his hands, the coronet of government is put on his brow, and the people clapping their hands in hearty shout and trumpeted. "What is that?" said Athaliah. "What is that sound?" And she rent her garments. And she flies to see, and on her way they greet her and cry: "Woe, woe, treason, treason!" And she is overtaken, and then all the royal family, but Joash, known as the boy king, and Jehoshebe, fearful with rage, grabbed her mercy, and true to it tattles and stood until the work was done, and then she claimed her right to reason my grandson. You have read in the Bible of Jehoshebe, but from my children, treasure, treasure!"

While she stood there enjoying the multitudes that had come to see the boy king a short cut through a back door at the temple, and was hastened, and along that the battlements of the officers fell on her in the barbecued, and for many a day from the chariot after dragging out many Jezebel was thrown out of the window, and the dogs were running the place as they smelt the gore of the carnage.

The first thing I had you learn from this subject is that the extermination of right is a great sin. Every man, every woman is good she is not to be very good and when she is bad she is not to be very bad. Some people are very bad and the latter sort. She would exterminate the bad sooner or later. Athaliah, David, whose Jesus was to come. There was plenty at work for assassins and undertakers. Athaliah would have had the world find fleeing and God knows people. She would have had the world to be a wreck. In exercise relentless with her immortal ambition. She folds her hands and says: "The work is done." It is not entirely done. Is it? In the exulting clutches of that chronic fiend, the God-murderess, the cause of God and the cause of good gave a throb of hope. There is a God in heaven. It is Joash, the God-murderess's successor. It is Joash, the friend of God, the friend of Heaven, the friend of the Almighty. Each him tenderly nurse him and watch him and pray for him. And all other children, but you cannot kill him. Eternal defenses are thrown all around him. Angels of God encamp round about him, and watch him as from the palace nurse, and the Lord God Almighty is the defense of the Lord, and there she will be safe for six years, and at the end of that time he will come forth with power and exhilaration.

Would you like to see a batch does the world always under evil, and goodness righteousness? Superstition's eyes are put out, and the world is full of light and love? Dominion does not fall to the ground, and the scepter of persecution has been swept through all the ages, and the Bible is the book of the people, and the Sabbath greatest, but did the Lord Jehoshebe? Then look at the boy Joash. Look at him. See the first Bible ever in his hands. See the first Bible ever in his hands. See the Christian minister, as he stands by the throne of Joash, and the Archbishop of Athaliah, the Arabian martyr of Rome and the Bible is the book of the people, and the book of reformation, they made it a law that at the time when they should be read at the time when they should be read, and was read, and was read, and was thel Parton.

HUNDREDTH BIRTHDAY.

"Do you think you would have known me without an introduction?

"I don't believe we should, cousin Luke," answered Joella, cordially, although a little shyly. "You see, we weren't sure you were coming from your last letter, and I don't think that last photograph you sent gran'ther is a very good likeness. We didn't know you, but were just so glad to see you."

"So you think my last picture was a bad one?" asked the young man, laughing. "I wonder which one it was, now. I had several taken at about the same time, and I don't know which you have. Some of them were wretched. I wanted them destroyed, but father liked them and sent some away without my knowledge. Perhaps you have one of those. It's no wonder you didn't know me if you have."

"It wasn't sent without your knowledge anyway," said Kinzy, bluntly, "and you'd better not let gran'ther know you've forgotten the letter that came with it. He thought a great deal of what you wrote, and he's pretty touchy."

"Touchy, is he?" said Luke. "Well, I suppose that's natural at a hundred years old——"

"Ninety-nine," interrupted Kinzy. "It's his hundredth birthday, but he's only ninety-nine years old. He wouldn't wait till next year to celebrate. He said he was going to make sure of the first thing that came along with a hundred in it, in case of accidents."

Luke laughed again, and Joella insisted him into the house to be introduced, while Kinzy went to the barn to find a few more eggs for the guest's supper. The introductions were hardly over before gran'ther fell napping, and Joella led the Western visitor about the house. He was delighted with the old homestead, and she enjoyed his pleasure in its treasures and curiosities. He was especially ardent in his admiration of the family silver.

"It is pretty," she agreed, watching him as he hangled her favorite cream pitcher to admire it. "Don't give me credit for the whole of it, please, for I only polished it. Gran'ther and Kinzy had it in their care for years before I came. I consider it properly cleaned till she can look in it and count her eyelashes."

Luke's enthusiasm soon won the liking of all the household except Kinzy, who persistently confided to Joella that she could not endure him, and refused to give any other reason than that his hair was shiny slick and the toes of his boots too narrow. Moreover, he had praised her playing when she could see he knew better.

The next morning, regardless of his remonstrance, she came defiantly to breakfast with her hair in curlpapers. Joella, as fresh as a lily morning glory in her dainty gingham and pinafore curls unmanageable in vain. There was an angry gleam in Kinzy's gray eyes, and her red head bristled in all directions with irregular paper knobs. Her nose a buggy came in sight, identified at a distance by the projecting legs of the camera as that of the village photographer, who was coming to "take" gran'ther and the household for a family group.

Luke had left the room and Kinzy, as she ran upstairs to let down her hair, knocked at his door to tell him that gran'ther wished him to be in the picture. He opened it quickly in answer that he was sorry, but that he had just been seized with a violent nosebleed, and that they had better proceed without him. Kinzy did proceed, and the photograph was taken without him. When it was completed the photographer wished to try a second, and to the horror of Joella Kinzy ran to see if there was anything she could do for Luke.

"Bub and nature and a cold key doctor," he said through the door, and turned to the window to get the light for the next operation as she approached. It was evident to a blind judge of silver. There was a dent in some there. She knew that the wheel had struck sharply in the front of the house, turned on the grass to be photographed. She stepped back unobserved. Coming to the door, she knocked on his head and the silver was no longer on the dresser. The two stared at each other. Kinzy's heart thumped. Was any one in the village a thief? Was that he sound was with whatever was in that hat. Her first thought was not to let Joella suspect her.

"Luke, I've got a present for you," she called, standing her ears with a fierce blush. "I'm going to give you a piece of my mind. You've been making fun of me behind my back, and I want you to know that I'm not a fool. You can't deceive me. I've seen you with your head in a hat, and I know you've been stealing the silver. I'm going to tell Joella and gran'ther, and you can get out of the house as quick as you can."

Kinzy was thinking fast; the threat decided her.

"I don't believe you're my cousin!" cried. "I don't know who you are! You're a strange man!"

He ran then. She followed, but was only in time to see him spring into the photographer's buggy that stood at the gate and drive furiously away. She saw that he had escaped, and went slowly round the house for the silver, feeling very queer and weak. Then she came in the porch with the valise in her hand and told her story. They were all wondering and exclaiming when hardly fifteen minutes later, a carriage came in sight, and behind it and fastened to it with a rope, was the buggy of the photographer. There was alighted and hurried to the house.

He was all explained very quickly. The thief, who was not Luke, but a young man of about his coloring and build, had traveled with the real Luke and had drawn from him sufficient information concerning family treasures and family affairs to suggest the scheme which had so nearly succeeded. At a junction where it was necessary to change cars he had given Luke false information, leading him to take the wrong train and be carried to a remote village. Luke had, however, taken a special excursion train which brought him back that morning. In riding up from the station with a farmer he had encountered the thief driving the photographer's buggy. The farmer had recognized this and had recognized the stranger who had misled him and then disappeared. Suspecting mischief, they had stopped him, and when his answers proved unsatisfactory had forced him to return with them. He had tried on the way to escape, and they had bound his wrists securely with a scarf and now held him between them, a very crestfallen rascal indeed.

When all was told, gran'ther turned to the real Luke and asked: "You say your name Luke Trent, do you?"

"Yes," answered the young fellow, "but you won't find me so fond of my relatives as to carry off their silver for a souvenir, Grandfather Parton."

The old man chuckled. "That's all right. But I want to know your mother's maiden name and the ages of all your family and a few other things before I turn you loose among my spoons and my granddarters."

"I should say one of your granddaughters was quite capable of taking care of herself and the spoons too," Luke answered, smiling with shy admiration at Kinzy.

"That's so!" assented gran'ther. "Kinzy, you've done well! You keep that silver for your own. You've earned it!"

But there was something Kinzy wanted more than silver. "O gran'ther, I'm sorry I'm cross! Do you forgive me? Oh, my harp! Joella likes it and she can play, but I do hate it so!"

How gran'ther, whose brows looked stormy might have answered if Cousin Luke, who saw the harp standing just within the parlor, had not quickly brought it out to Joella, will never be known. But that is what Luke did, saying with a mischievous look as he did so: "Play, cousin, play 'There's Music in the Air.'"

So Joella played, and played her best. The dimples vines waved above her head and her soft cheeks were flushed with excitement as she touched the strings. Gran'ther looked and listened.

"Taint bad!" he said, shortly" when she had finished. He added, "But if Joella's to have her Aunt Keziah's harp instead o' Kinzy's, which the name reward for Kinzy havin' the bowl an pitcher. Things ought to be di vided fair."

And that is how it happened that on Kinzy's hundredth birthday, when the guests arrived and filled the old homestead to overflowing with friendliness and joy, it was Joella who exercised the functions of "Belle of Scotland" and the old times grew her loved, and Kinzy who, with her straight hair knotted comfortably in her neck, sat in the corner with Cousin Luke, attending to their more private wants—no music on her mind but laughter on her lips and congratulations ringing in her ears with the clapping of glad eyes quickened time and time, or made a perfect pudding.—Youth's Companion.

The History of a Novel.

One of the most popular novels of the day had a strange history which might have been considered tragic if the success had not been known in advance. A New York author, whose books are always sure of a certain degree of popularity, wrote a novel in the last few chapters of a novel. It was to be bright, it was impossible for him to complete the story satisfactorily. So he put his book away and, for two years, it lay in a drawer in his desk. Although the author thought of the work from time to time he could not bring able to get into interest a publisher of the plot. Finally he had all kinds of trouble completing the work and decided to sell it at a price several cheapers in advance of that at which he had originally intended to sell it. He sent a correspondence calling the novel what it is a publisher was arranged and turned out one of the most popular books that appeared during the year. Here is the most prized instance of the kind in the annals of literature during which it was to be completed enough to publish. The author had to supply many details and the author had at one time so discouraged about the ending of the book that he had almost decided to burn it. But he was persuaded to complete it and it has proved one of the most successful books of the year.

Vassar Girls.

The Vassar girls have made for girls and with them they endeavor to make them the supreme degree of independent consideration, the best of which the course of a graduate has to offer. Each girl is required to pay for her own board and tuition, and if she cannot do so she is required to work for it. Many of the girls do this by waiting on table in the dining room, by acting as janitors, by working in the laundry, by teaching in the kindergarten, by working in the library, by acting as assistants in the laboratories, by tending the furnaces, by sewing, by doing typewriting, by acting as agents for the sale of photographs, by acting as agents for the sale of books, by acting as agents for the sale of clothing, by acting as agents for the sale of jewelry, by acting as agents for the sale of furniture, by acting as agents for the sale of carpets, by acting as agents for the sale of rugs, by acting as agents for the sale of curtains, by acting as agents for the sale of draperies, by acting as agents for the sale of upholstery, by acting as agents for the sale of wallpaper, by acting as agents for the sale of paint, by acting as agents for the sale of varnish, by acting as agents for the sale of oil, by acting as agents for the sale of gas, by acting as agents for the sale of electricity, by acting as agents for the sale of water, by acting as agents for the sale of heat, by acting as agents for the sale of light, by acting as agents for the sale of power, by acting as agents for the sale of motion, by acting as agents for the sale of sound, by acting as agents for the sale of color, by acting as agents for the sale of form, by acting as agents for the sale of texture, by acting as agents for the sale of taste, by acting as agents for the sale of smell, by acting as agents for the sale of touch, by acting as agents for the sale of sight, by acting as agents for the sale of hearing, by acting as agents for the sale of speech, by acting as agents for the sale of thought, by acting as agents for the sale of feeling, by acting as agents for the sale of emotion, by acting as agents for the sale of passion, by acting as agents for the sale of love, by acting as agents for the sale of hate, by acting as agents for the sale of fear, by acting as agents for the sale of anger, by acting as agents for the sale of joy, by acting as agents for the sale of sorrow, by acting as agents for the sale of pain, by acting as agents for the sale of pleasure, by acting as agents for the sale of happiness, by acting as agents for the sale of misery, by acting as agents for the sale of life, by acting as agents for the sale of death, by acting as agents for the sale of eternity, by acting as agents for the sale of time, by acting as agents for the sale of space, by acting as agents for the sale of matter, by acting as agents for the sale of energy, by acting as agents for the sale of force

TOBACCO.

Of the genus Nicotiana much has been written and said. Dickens says that you can get more for your money in tobacco than any thing else, and the victim of the habit clings to it as something to take the place of friends, food and home. The habit is generally contracted through curiosity; nothing on earth being so repulsive to man as the first smoke. The effect of the poison is a terrible depression of spirits and violent sickness. There is no telling how many habits there are that could be contracted the same way, for at the beginning the tobacco habit is, to say the least, unpromising. The use of it creates a new want in the system, and the curiosity of the victim is dearly paid for.

It is doubtful if the habit would have taken hold on white people had it not been widely advertised by a medical man of Spain, Nicolo Monardes, as a curealL

Another thing that probably helped to fix the habit was the fact that both Church and State passed laws against its use, about the beginning of the Seventeeth century. In Turkey it was punished by death by torture and having the pipes of smokers thrust through their noses. In Russia the noses of smokers were cut off. James I issued "A Counterblaste to Tobacco." In it described its use as "A custom loathsome to the eye, hateful to the nose, harmful to the brain, dangerous to the lungs, and in the black stinking fume thereof nearest resembling the horrible Stygian smoke of the pit that is bottomless."

The use of tobacco by the aborigines of America was confined to smoking. The habit of chewing was inaugurated principally by sailors who were not allowed to smoke at sea owing to the danger of fire.

The carbon contained in tobacco gives the smoke its blue appearance; ammonia "bites the tongue" and excites the salivary glands; the carbonic acid causes sleepiness, headache and lassitude; oil of tobacco contains the nicotine and other poisons sufficient to kill anything; there is also a certain amount of watery vapour in all tobacco smoke, from which it may be separated.

From the analysis it is hard to see why the use of tobacco does not kill the victim in a few years. As a matter of fact it does not seem to shorten life if used after maturity.

The use of tobacco by children is distinctly harmful as it retards the oxidation of the living tissues. It is classed with alcohol, arsenic, opium, tea and coffee in its deleterious effects.

After the habit is acquired a condition of "tolerance" is established in the system. There are many cases in which men have actually eaten tobacco regularly.

Tobacco has but one place in the Pharmacopeia, and that is as an antidote for strichnine. Many a dog that has gotten an overdose of strychnine at the hands of an enemy could have been saved with tobacco.

If young people can take the seed of a victim and not experiment with the poison, nicotine, on their systems out of idle curiosity, the tribe of tobacco users will decrease.

VARIOLA.

There is no doubt but there are some cases of small-pox in our midst. But there is no need of alarm. The disease is thoroughly diffused throughout the United States, having been brought over by the soldiers during the Spanish war. It is the aftermath of that modern war. A panic is worse than the disease itself. There is no where to go, for we probably have less than any where in West Virginia. The disease, while it is to be dreaded as something loathsome and disagreeable, has not proved as fatal as grip. When a patient takes small pox he should be isolated, and particular care be taken especially after the seventh day, to keep from imparting the disease to any one else.

There are two kinds of vaccine virus used by our doctors. The vaccine is capillary tube which produces but does not maketh sore arm, and the more pond which makes a suppurating sore.

Those who does not believe in may in one hand believe those of pro... ...ed by some which does not "take." Nevertheless the patient is protected by the slight fever and sickness ...ompanies, instead of the se... ...ss of an ulcer.

The second suffers a thousand ...ths [illegible] ...ing as well as the ...ter. It is ...ng more true than ever before that a disease is ...ed. All we can do is be ...ous as regards forms of small ...s, and be not easily frightened ...ough to run into needless ...ations, and go about our ...ness.

Congress met last Monday.

McKinley's plurality in West Virginia is 21,939; White for governor, 18,557.

Pocahontas County by the late census shows a population of 8572, an increase over 1830 of 1658. The various census years since the county was organized show the growth in the population as follows: 1830, 2545; 1840, 2922; 1850, 3598; 1860, 3958; 1870, 4069; 1880, 5591; 1890, 6814; 1900, 8572. This has been a natural growth. The ten years of 1860-70 show an increase of only 111. Webster county adjoing us which had a railroad for several years shows an increase from 4,783 in 1880 to 8,852 in 1900. Pocahontas will probably double its population in the next ten years.

BABY CARRIED IN A VALISE.

The Queer Baggage of an Elderly Male Passenger on an Iowa Railway.

"Carrying a baby in a grip is a new wrinkle on me," remarked an old-time palace car conductor at a Chicago hotel the other night. "It was away out in western Iowa," he continued, "that the incident I am about to relate happened. I had two porters in my car. One was the regular porter, who is familiar with the traveling public, and the other darky was just being broken in. He was on the first run and wanted to catch on to the business. Well, somewhere west of Marshalltown an elderly man climbed on the sleeper. He had two grips, one fat one, the other a mere hand-grip. He remarked to the porter to handle the grips very carefully and to keep them upright.

"The man went into the smoking apartment and ordered his grips placed in his berth. It so happened that the new porter got hold of them and I can never understand how it happened that there wasn't a tragedy on that car, for he took the fat grip and gave it a big toss, landing it up to the top berth. There wasn't a sound.

"Pretty soon the man came out of the smoker and proceeded to retire. He made considerable fuss about the rough way in which his grips had been handled and the finding of the large one upstairs. In the light gone and the baby's voice was heard. The little one cried several times, but always quieted down. The sound was traced to the berth of the man who had been fussing about his grips. Next morning he did not get up and remained in the berth until the train reached Chicago.

"When he left the car the big grip was as heavy as ever and the porter received the same precautions about careful handling. I managed to get around in front of him and asked him if the baby was all right. He looked a little puzzled and then answered in the most indifferent way that it was all right, but had spent a rather restless night. He said he always carried it in the grip to avoid appearance, taking along several bottles of milk when on a long trip."

WHY THE SAILORS WENT DRY.

Their Tub-Loving Captain Had to Have His Fresh-Water Bath Every Morning.

Louis, an old sea dog from Austria, who has sailed the briny deep in his ...llaffin's bay to No Man's Land, enjoys comparing his present position in the American marine service to that he once occupied when living in an East Indiaman from Liverpool to Calcutta, says the New York Sun. The vessel had been becalmed and the water supply ran short during a terrible hot spell. The crew had to exist on moldy sea biscuits, while the captain, a big bully of an Englishman, lived in luxury. The crew did not object to this until one day, when every man was almost prostrated by the heat and lack of sufficient water, they discovered that the captain, knowing the sufferings of the crew, had been taking baths daily in fresh water in a tub in his cabin. Almost an open mutiny broke out, and a squad of the tars, headed by Louis, went aft to see the captain about getting some more drinking water.

He told the captain frankly that they knew of his bathing regularly in his cabin in fresh water, and that every instinct of humanity dictated that he should forego his fresh water baths until he relished yet and give the crew the water which he would otherwise have used for his ablutions. The captain became livid with rage at the "audacity" of the men.

"What!" he shouted. "You blooming lubbers want to take away from me me mornin' tub! Not ye, says I. I won't do without me tub, I can tell ye, says I. Do ye think I can give ye all the crinkin' water ye want? Not me, says I. Get ye'll out o' here."

That ending he gave each man an extra half pint of water, but he had a fresh water bath each morning, nevertheless.

Makes Mrs. McKinley's Shoes.

Beloit, Wis., leads the world in the number of gas engines it manufactures. One firm turns out 100 a week, and another has a capacity almost as large. Both concerns are enlarging their plants. A Philadelphia company formerly held the record, but Beloit also leads in having the greatest number of skilled artisans in proportion to its population, which is 10,000, and particularly is this true as to the number of skilled workers in iron. An interesting *fact in connection with the big fac*tories of Beloit is that they pay out in wages each month an average of nine dollars to every man, woman and child in the city. A Beloit company claims to have the finest ladies' shoes in the world, and Mrs. McKinley, at least, is convinced of the truth of this claim, as she has her footwear made to that city.

Few Printers in Jail.

The first Australian newspaper, the Sydney Gazette, was founded on the March 5, 1803, 15 years after the rise of the colony. The delay was caused through there being no printers among the convicts who represented every profession, including the legal. The plant was brought out in the first fleet, but it could not be used until the authorities sought for printers. Which has been suggested by a writer who has suffered at the hands of compositors that they keep all their crimes for the composing room.

Water-Works.

The railway company has arrang- ged to put in a pumping station here to supply a water tank, and the county court has already put in a gasoline engine and put water in the court house. The town has unfortunately missed the help that it certainly could have gotten from the county court and possibly from the railway company by put- ting in the water works so badly needed by this town.

The plan at the court house is to fill a reservoir on the hill back of the court house by means of a small engine. The water main and the waste pipe are laid in the same ditch. The supply comes from Knapp's Creek.

The work was done by the well known firm of Eagle & Ott, of Ronceverte. It will cost about $1000. The plant consists of a 3½ horse power gasoline engine, an inch pipe and a 3000 gallon reser- voir. The cost of pumping will be a few cents an hour, and three or four hours a week will be all neces- sary for the needs of the court house.

In speaking with Mr Eagle about the facilities for water works here, he said that it was the cheapest place he had ever seen for water- works to be put in. Knapps Creek would furnish an abundant sup- ply and a very short line would put it to a reservoir on top of the spur of Marlin Mountain jutting out in the middle of the town. $3000 would be ample to give the town as fine a system of water works as any one could desire.

Big Law Suit.

An important lawsuit was decid- ed at Huntersville last Saturday, growing out of a horse trade. Some time ago George Rayburn traded horses with William Hamilton. The latter gave his note for $15, boot between horses. This note was assigned to John Andrew Cleek. Hamilton refused to pay the note on maturity, and a suit was brought; McNeil for plaintiff and Rucker for the defendant, Hamilton.

Hamilton filed as an offset a bill of $25 on account of the blind- ness of the horse, and proved a warranty of soundness on the part of Rayburn. A legal battle fol- lowed and many authorities were cited bearing on the question of whether total blindness is a pat- ent or a latent defect. The plain- tiff offset the question of blind- ness by a claim for damages on ac- count of the other horse having the heaves.

When the taking of testimony was ended the question arose who had the opening and closing of the argument, the defendant hav- ing filed an offset greater than the plaintiff's claim. The defendant was allowed to open and close. Upon consideration the court en- tered an order "dismissing suit at defendant's costs."

The costs were large and both parties claimed to be the plaintiff, and there the matter rests.

Cogan, Noble & House.

It was expected that a special term of the Circuit Court would be held this month to disburse the fund applicable to the debts incur- red by subcontractors A. F. House Geo. W. Noble and P. Cogan on railway construction work near Marlinton. These debts amount to about $8,000. The contractors Strang & Co.'s reports show practi- cally nothing due on said work to be applied on said indebtedness. The receiver claims that there is a fund of at least $8,000 over and above all possible offsets. This point will have to be fought out in the courts before there can be a distribution. The final estimates of the cubic yards by the railway engineers on the work show that on the grading work the receiver earned $17,517.13, and on the ma- sonry $8,800.20. He has been paid in cash $2,991.48, leaving the sum of $23,345.65 to be accounted for. And this is in controversy and the subject of an attachment suit.

We make this statement of facts for the information of the an- nerous creditors without comment as we do not believe in discussing a case that is in court. It would take very little provocation, however, for us to wade into print up to the bridle bit about this case of contractors versus laborers.

It is reported that considerable injury was done by the flood to the grading just beyond the tunnel.

ZOLA AND FATHER.

Readers Published About the Latter Must Be Set at Rest.

A new grief has come into the fur-burdened life of Emile Zola, the distinguished French novelist, and it has almost prostrated him. Hitherto he has only suffered for himself; now the memory of his dead father has been attacked, and he is almost frantic in his partisanship for Dreyfus in his battle for honor against the machinations of the army officials has brought this fierce upon Zola. It seems that years ago his father, who was a skilled engineer, emigrated to Austria and assisted in the construction of the first railroad built in Europe. Having completed this work, he entered the French army, served in the Algerian division and retired in 1833 as a civil engineer to Marseilles. The original plans for an extension of the Marseilles harbor were prepared by him. Others were chosen, however, to see the work done, and, disappointed, Francois Zola went to Aix, where the triumph of his labors was to be his lot. The municipal authorities trusted him with the building of the great canal which yet bears his name. In 1847 he died suddenly. Now the enemies of his son are declaring that death was due to suicide in the effort to escape punishment for defrauding the municipality of Aix in the matter of the harbor contract. To vindicate his father's name Emile Zola now avers he will devote his entire life. He recognizes the difficulties in his way—the enmity of the military power—but declares that he will never rest until all suspicion of misfeasance shall be blotted from the name of a father whom he dearly loved.

DUTY IN KIND.

One Case Where a Thieving Turk Was Honest.

The rapacity of Turkish officials of all sorts is notorious, but that of the customs officers exceeds all other kinds. An interesting instance of paying duty in kind is to be recorded. An official of the British embassy bought in Paris a dress for his wife, for which he paid £10. The customs officials valued it at £40 and demanded duty on that amount. The Englishman refused, and, knowing the law, said they might keep the dress, paying him the value they had fixed upon it, less the 4 per cent. This was done, and a month later at the public auction of confiscated goods he bought back the dress for £4, thus getting the dress for nothing and making a profit of £30 on the bargain. Justice is meted out rapidly in Turkey. On one occasion a Kurd picked up a tobacco box in the street, which was promptly claimed by an Armenian. Just as they were coming to blows a policeman interfered. Both Armenian and Kurd claimed the box, when the former suggested that the Kurd should say what was in it. "Tobacco and cigarette paper," promptly answered the Kurd. "Nothing of the sort," cried the Armenian. "It contains only a five piastre piece." The box was gravely opened by the policeman, who then said: "The Armenian is right and the Kurd is a liar." Here he smote the Kurd's head. "Furthermore, Allah be praised!—for my trouble in deciding this complicated case I keep the five piastres."

REV. DR. TALMAGE.

THE EMINENT DIVINE'S SUNDAY DISCOURSE.

Subject: The Golden Calf of Modern Idolatry — The Spirit of Greed Destroys Those Who Are in Its Grasp — Money Got Wrongfully is a Curse.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—In this discourse Dr. Talmage shows how the spirit of greed destroys when it is possessed of a man and that money got in wrong ways is a curse; text, Exodus xxxii, 20, And he took the calf which they had made and burnt it in the fire and ground it to powder and strewed it upon the water and made the children of Israel drink of it.

People will have a god of some kind, and they prefer one of their own making. Here on the Sabbath day, taking off their golden earrings, the men as well as the women, for in those times there was no question as to who was feminine and effeminate. Where did they get these beautiful gold earrings enough to make a calf? Egypt, their late desert? Oh, they borrowed them of the Egyptians when they left Egypt. These earrings were piled on many a pyramid of glittering beauty. Any more earrings to bring? Oh, Aaron, come. Fire is kindled, the earrings are melted and poured into a mold not of an eagle or a war chariot, but of a silly calf. The gold cools down, the mold is taken away, and the calf is up on its feet, and the first temple built in front of the shining calf. Then the people throw up their arms and gyrate and shriek and howl in an ecstasy of worship.

Moses has been six weeks on Mount Sinai, and he comes back and hears the howling and sees the dancing of these golden calf worshipers. It blows his patience, and he takes the two plates of stone on which were written the Ten Commandments and flings them so hard against a rock that they split all to pieces. When a man breaks a law he is apt to break all the Ten Commandments. Moses catches up the golden calf and also throws it into a hot fire until it is melted all out of shape and then pulverizes it—not by the appliance of any mechanical metallic steel, but by the ancient appliance of sitter or by the old-fashioned pestle and mortar and the mixture a nauseating draft. He takes this pulverized golden calf and throws it into the only brook which is accessible, and the people are compelled to drink of that brook, or not drink at all.

But they did not drink all the glittering stuff thrown on the surface. Some of it flows down the surface of the brook—for the river and then flows on down the river to the sea—and the sea takes it up and bears it to the mouth of all the rivers, and when the tides set back the remains of this golden calf were carried up into the Potomac and the Hudson and the Thames and the Clyde and the Tiber. And now go out and they skim the glittering surface, and they bring it ashore and they make another golden calf, and England and Australia break off their golden earrings to augment the pile, and in the days of financial excitement and struggle all these things are melted together, and when we make the looking and worshiping what will come of it, lo, we find that the golden calf of Bethel is worship has become the golden calf of European and American worship.

Pull away, brother curtain, and you see the golden calf of modern idolatry. It is not, like that of Bethel, made out of sticks or stone, but it has an ear so sensitive that it can hear the whispers on Wall street and Third street, Fifth Street, and the footfalls in the Bank of England and the flutter of the Frenchman's heart on the bourse. He has an eye so keen that it can see the rust on the farm of Michigan wheat and the blight in the Maryland peach orchard and the trampled grain under the hoof of the Russian war charger. It is so mighty that it swings any way it will the world's shipping. It has its foot on all the marts of the world as its pedestal

Aerial Navigation a Fact--Von Zeppelin's Ship Flies.

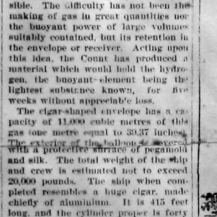

The second trial of Count Zeppelin's colossal airship is described in press reports from Friedrichshafen as being a notable success. After rising to a height of about two thousand feet, the vessel remained poised at that level for three quarters of an hour, then made a series of tacks, and went through certain turning maneuvers, afterward traveling with the wind in what is described as "a generally circular direction" for about six miles, the velocity of the wind at this time being about eight miles an hour. It is said that later, in a freshening breeze, the air ship turned and "made head way" against the wind. Eventually the vessel descended with "great ease and steadiness to the lake," and was towed to its shed. The stability and steering powers of the airship are described as being excellent.

If the above reports are correct, we still know as little about the actual practical value of Count Zeppelin's machines as we did before. It has been proved merely that an airship of this kind can ascend, maintain its equilibrium, and be navigated in any desired direction, provided the wind does not much exceed the strength of a gentle breeze. It has yet to be shown that in stronger winds, say from twenty to fifty miles an hour, this airship can perform the same evolutions. If it should show that it is able to maintain a speed of, say, only twenty miles an hour against a strong wind, aerial navigation by the balloon type of airship will have an enormous stride in these closing days of the century. Enough has been accomplished to render the further trials of Count Zeppelin's costly and carefully thought out design a matter of world-wide interest.

The idea upon which Count Von Zeppelin's success, so far attained, appears to be based, is that the envelope or outer portion of the balloon should be of such material as to hold the contained gas for as long a period as possible. The difficulty has not been the making of gas in great quantities nor the buoyant power of large volumes suitably contained, but its retention in the envelope or receiver. A thing upon this idea, the Count has produced a material which would hold the hydrogen, the buoyant element being the lightest substance known, for five weeks without appreciable loss.

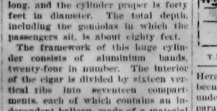

The cigar-shaped envelope has a capacity of 11,000 cubic metres of this gas (or more exactly 388,500 cubic feet). The exterior of the balloon is covered with a protective shrinace of pegamoid and silk. The total weight of the ship and crew is estimated not to exceed 20,000 pounds. The ship when completed resembles a huge cigar, made chiefly of aluminum. It is 415 feet long, and the cylinder proper is forty feet in diameter. The total depth, including the gondolas in which the passengers sit, is about eighty feet.

The framework of this huge cylinder consists of aluminum bands, twenty-four in number. The interior of the cigar is divided by sixteen vertical rib- into seventeen compartments, each of which contains an independent balloon, made of a material which the manufacturer calls "ballonin." The first ascent was to have taken place in October, 1899, but the balloon proved to be too small to fill the requirements, and the first ascent did not take place until July 2, 1900, when it was seen that it was more than likely to be a success.

COUNT VON ZEPPELIN.

The motive power of the big airship is furnished by four screws or propellers attached to the sides of the cigar, actuated by two 16-horse-power motors of fifteen horse-power each, and capable of turning at the rate of 1200 revolutions per minute. These propellers are so arranged as to be reversible. The action of each propellers on air not being sufficiently well known to the inventor and his friends, the exact speed that can be attained has not been ascertained, but it is said that the speed of the ship can be varied at will from fifteen to twenty miles an hour.

He served in the German army during the French war and it is said that no small part of his inspiration in ballooning was derived from his experiences as a scout on a dangerous trip during that war, and by the desire to see better methods of obtaining information. It is believed that a balloon which can be directed at will—can maintain its equilibrium and descent together without danger to the life of occupants or to the structure—has been last attained.

Count von Zeppelin is satisfied with the performance of his airship.

In a conversation with a New York Herald correspondent he said it had been proved that it was absolutely under the control of the steering apparatus.

This apparatus, by the way, was not in most perfect order on the first ascent.

One of the two rudders below the machine, at the stern, would not work freely. Thus, instead of moving parallel with each other, the rudders frequently formed an angle.

This defect hampered Count von Zeppelin very much indeed.

It is to this fault that he attributes the general movement noticed in the trial toward the left, for at no time did the machine make a decided flight to the right.

The Count also remarked that his descent happened earlier than he intended.

"My aim," he said, "was to return to the floating pontoon whence we started. I had steered the airship around and was heading directly for this pontoon, when, in coming down somewhat from the elevation we had been floating at, the gas began to escape from one of the balloons.

"This threw the point of the airship much lower than I was prepared for, and one descent became too rapid.

"I threw out some ballast and worked the rudder that changes the air ship's plane and direction, but it was of no use. The machine had too great an impetus, and the descent was unavoidable."

Question in general is somewhat unsettled.

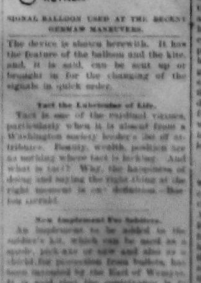

Of course, the decisive trial has not yet been made, for the machine is still in the experimental stage, though an air ship that can be sent up and brought in for the changing of the signals in quick order.

The Dust of Ocean.

A "dusty" ocean highway sounds almost incredible. Yet those who are familiar with sailing ships know that, no matter how careful, the decks may how little work of any kind may be done during the day, nevertheless, if the decks are not swept at nightfall, an enormous quantity of dust will quickly collect. Of course, on the modern "liner" the burning of hundreds of tons of coal in a twenty-four hours, and the myriads of footfalls daily, would account for a considerable accommodation of dust, but on a wind-jammer, manned with a dozen hands or less, no such dust-producing agencies are at work. And yet the records of sailing ships show that they collect more dust than does a steamer, which is probably accounted for by the fact that while the dust-laden smoke blows clear of the steamer, the large area of canvas spread by the sailer acts as a dust collector.—The Mariner.

THE MUSHROOM FAD.

A New Means of Pin Money For Women Who Have Cellars.

Mushroom growing is said to be the latest fad that has attacked Baltimore, and interesting stories of the success, both material and financial that private growers of mushrooms are meeting with are being circulated. The owners of a brewing establishment no longer in operation in the southwestern section of the city have been converted into mushroom farms by some enterprising growers, and it is said that they are yielding very satisfactory crops.

Besides these growers, who have gone into the business on an extensive scale a number of women have started smaller farms in the cellars of the houses in which they live. According to the figures given by Theodore Eckhardt these women farmers run a big chance of adding very considerably to their pin money.

The yield from a fifteen-foot bed, Mr. Eckhardt said, should be about ninety pecks in three months. The cost of the bed would be about $10. The mushrooms would sell for 75 cents a peck, bringing the farmer $67.50, making a gain of $57.50 on the undertaking.

The things that are necessary for success in mushroom growing, according to Mr. Eckhardt, are, first, the cellars in which they are to be grown, and this must be so arranged that the plants can be kept at a temperature of from sixty to seventy degrees; second, good ventilation, as plenty of fresh air is essential. Arrangements must be available also by which the soil can be kept moist.

Good manure, rich in phosphate, must be used to form the foundation of the bed, which will be built preferably upon a dirt floor. Two loads will be necessary for a bed fifteen feet long. The mushroom spawn can be procured in the shape of bricks from the florists and nurserymen. The temperature of the bed must be tested, and no planting must be done until it is below ninety-five degrees. Then the bricks can be broken in half-inch pieces and distributed evenly over the bed.

In eight or ten days a white threadlike growth will begin to appear, and when this is noticed the bed must be covered to the depth of one-half to three-quarters of an inch with sandy loam. The beds are built in conical shape, starting from a base about three feet wide and building up to about two and a half feet high, with a width of about ten inches on top. A frame of six-inch boards may be used to keep the bed in place.

The expenses will be: For manure, $4; labor, $2.50; six bricks of mushrooms spawn, $1; loam, $2.50.—Baltimore Sun.

A Snake That Crows.

There exists in Venezuela a species of snake of an exceedingly venomous and rabbit character. This snake utters a cry that is the almost exact replica of a cock crow. The unwary traveler when walking through the bush will be astonished to hear near at hand this extraordinary crowing. He proceeds toward the spot, when the snake darts out and slings the unfortunate man in its terrible forked tongue. If not taken promptly in hand, the sting will in nine cases out of ten turn out to be fatal.

The natives of Venezuela are very superstitious. And the vagaries of the rattlesnake they have a curious belief. They affirm that if a rattlesnake is captured and the bones in its tail which form the rattle removed the snake will never rest until it has sought out the man that committed the theft and exacted vengeance for the robbery.

They cite instances of men who have taken the rattles and gone far from their own to be followed by the infuriated snake. Whether or not there is any truth in this is matter of conjecture. If half the tales that are told have any truth in them, it would seem superfluous to animate the superstition.

Some Odd Conclusions.

The proper study of mankind is man—said Pope. How long have we been here? The united books of Canon Isaac say we fished there more than 20,000 years ago. The coral reefs of Southern Florida show that we were located there 10,000 years ago. It is said by the sages of twelve that both boys and girls are of the same weight. When man and women have attained their full development they weigh at most twenty times as much as at birth. Their height is about three and one-fourth times greater than at birth. In old age man and woman lose from thirteen to twenty per cent of their weight and about one-third of their height. Man does not require his complete growth until he has completed his twenty-fifth year. At this age his maximum weight at forty and begins to wane sensibly at sixty. Woman attains her maximum weight at fifty,

We have observed the effect of [illegible] ordinary country newspaper. We believe that it pays the hustler to advertise. The advertisement is a standing reminder that the merchant is ready to receive friends and is willing to ask them to call. It is hard to tell what does take a man to one store of a dozen or so when he has ridden a mile or so to town. He could not tell himself. Everything he has seen and heard has some effect in causing him to select the store at which he will do business. A great deal of advertising, some favorable and some unfavorable, is done by word of mouth, free gratis, but the space in the newspaper can be used to speak in your favor every time. It contradicts the report that you are selling coffee a cent too high on the pound.

Some men worry about their advertisements not being read. Be ing busy answering dums and worrying over the future, they find but a moments satisfaction in the paper that will shortly write up their assignment. They do not realize the peace and plenty of the farmer's household where the paper is read as it ought to be, and the children learn the alphabet from the big letters in your name. If you could make a sign so big and hang it so high that every person in the county could see it, you would only accomplish what a county newspaper of good circulation can do for you at slight expense.

An advertiser that a newspaper man loses is one who has nothing to boast of. He puts in an editorial that he is tearing the home out on a certain corner, and he cannot deliver the goods. A visit to his store is a disappointment—it is not what it is cracked up to be. He has not the goods, which are old and high priced, and the advertisement does not pay.

A newspaper man always dislike to pull a deadbeat out of a hole. There is nothing that embarrasses a newspaper man so to make a success out of a bowling failure.

There can be little doubt that in a town where competition runs any figure that the most successful merchants work hard on their advertisements, getting them up and sending them in just as the printer is looking up the forms. Whether or their advertising is the cause of the party subscribing "Liberty" their success or the effect is the question. But it goes that a man that is on every body's mouth, their advertisements interest Advertisers, and prosperity people turn to him naturally for the goods he handles. Don't be afraid to put your money in advertisements and plenty of printer's ink and then the people will find you out.

"HO! for Cricket!!—Royal Game!!"

"Come all and join in praises
Of England's premier game,
Come sound again o'er land and main
Its never dying fame;
And summon forth a manly band,
With bat and ball and stumps in hand,
To play old Englands game!"

X

Now, gentle but mountainous readers! "Cricket" is more than a game—it is an institution!—it is part of the British Empire, and a Briton's heritage. In what Englishman is there not born a true cricketing instinct, and what Englishman wandering on a foreign strand does not feel proud if he sees cricket being played there, for he can truly say that it is the birthright of the English people. It is a noble game, and full of the great est interest. The English Duke of Wellington, who won so many victories on foreign soil, la' a favorite saying to the effect that the great "Battle of Waterloo" was won on the Eton College playing grounds and in the English hunting fields—thereby implying that the Pluck, Skill and Heroic Daring which these two manly sports (Cricket and Fox-Hunting) cultivate and encourage in the rising generation, were of special service in after years when grim and ghastly War, with all its horrors, had to be fought in. The "Iron Duke" was right! Long, long may such Sports flourish and prosper!

X

"When Autumn is flaunting his banner of pride
For glory that Summer had fled,
Arrayed in the robes of his royalty, dyed
In tawny and orange and red!
When the oak is set rife with the vigor of life,
Though his acorns are dropping below
Through brambie and brake shall the echoes awake,
To the ring of a clear 'Tally-ho!' "

X

Yes! "Tally-ho" was the cheery hallow of the "Fairfield Farmer," when he heard the good news that there was to be a Cricket Match in "Bushwhacker Park," at the end of September—for he dearly loves a good game of Cricket, and is, forsooth an excellent bowler—"more power to his elbow!" Well, "me heartie!" the wickets were pitched, the sod mowed and rolled, (much to the astonishment of the "King of All the Gaulies," who exament on the pike, with his full grub-wagon, "Isn't the grass short enough already?") and all got ready for the glorious day in which the Fairfield Farmers and the Bushwhackers were to do battle for the championship.

X

"With changes and with chances
The innings come and go,
Alternating advances
Of ecstasy and woe:
And now 'tis all confiding,
A c! now—for who can tell?—
See! Charlie Bruce is bowling—
It yet may all be well!"

X

"Ten score to make or yield her,
Shall Randolph save the match?
Bowl, bowler! go it, fielder!
Catch, wicket keeper, catch!
Our vain attempts controlling
They drive the leather no'
Old Wilson is a-bowling,
And down the wickets go!"

X

Captain Lawson, having "spec'd the spin," elected that the "Randolph Rioters" should try their batting prowess. Frank Cleverdon, (the "Pro.") soon knocked up a spanking score; Lawson, of the "Cumberland Knockabouts," secured a "tenner," whilst Miles, of the "York Yorricks," and Mackenzie, of the "Cockermouth Catchmaidens," were scored with brilliant "does a eggs!" All out for "94" was the record on the score sheet, kindly and efficiently kept by Mr Chas. Bruce. The "Pocahontas Punters" then had their innings. L. Yoke, of the "Kent Kartens," scoring ten whilst that promising "colt" D. Hodgson, of the "M. C. C." London, played a most excellent game for 26 runs ("c a b" Captain Bruce, of the "Devonshire Lads," notched a neat dozen, and so did Colonel Holden, of the "Bushwhacker Volunteers," who had I-B his sound and polish at home, but still made his mark at wicket, in one of the balls banged a bit! Squire Wilson, of the "Marlinton Merry boys," made a fine style for 11 That for the "Punters" 70 runs.

The "Rioters" being in their innings for the home and glory of "Old Randolph, played right manfully in their second innings. Frank Cleverdon completed a fine 18 (including a "three" and four "fours") before he was "bowled out" by Wilson, at which his "total" of 25 runs was scored, and then fell victims to the fine "Punters" 28

BRAKEMAN HURT.

Serious Accident on the Greenbrier.

Last Sunday night Jack Lilliard, a brakeman of the night crew on the train known as No. 33d, lost both feet under the trucks of a box car. The train came up from below last Sunday and the night crew took it at Marlinton, Mr Courtney conductor and Mr Eubanks engineer. They were conveying a load of rails and other material and supplies to the front as track laying was to recommence the next day.

At the second crossing of the Greenbrier they found a box car on the track which was being loaded with rope and tools used in placing the big girder bridg across the river. This car was to be pushed on to the Clover Lick siding and left and he brought back and dropped at the same place. Too train proceeded, pushing eight cars before the engine.

The rules of the company require that a man be on both ends of the train when in motion. Lilliard was seat ahead with a lantern, and was seated on the front end of the box.

At the big curve above the tunnel the lightly loaded car jumped the track and went into the river. The patent coupling releases its hold when a car jumps the track, and for this reason the other cars kept the track.

The car went into the river and turned tracks up. As the car left the track Lilliard jumped to the hillside, but fell in the track. The front trucks of the next car passed over his legs just above the ankle, crushing them off. Rev. extricated himself from under the car so that the hind trucks did not strike him.

The train was going at the rate of about ten miles an hour and the engineer pulled it up in a car's length of the place of the accident. There was no special reason for the car to jump the track except that the road was new and had never been surfaced up.

The wounded man was placed in the cab of the engine and carried to Clover Lick. Dr Price was there and was called to render surgical aid. The patient was in no condition to be operated upon, and a special train set out to Ronceverte to convey him to Clifton Forge by No. 4. The train had to proceed with caution, owing to the fact that it was in No 158's division, and had to send a lever car ahead. They missed running into Ronceverte in time to catch No 4, and Dr Gates and Dr Price dressed his wounds. While in a state of collapse there is every hope that the unfortunate man will rally from the shock and live.

A somewhat similar accident occurred on the lower division some weeks ago. A brakeman was standing with one foot on one car and the other foot on another. The cars came uncoupled and he fell on the track and had both legs cut off. He lived but a few hours.

Lilliard came from Madison Court House, Virginia, and has had but a month's experience in railroading. He was well liked by and many friends in Marlinton by his gentlemanly appearance and manners. It is believed that he carried no accident policy what ever.

Quarantine Notice.

At a meeting of the Local Board of Health of Randolph County Present Dr Perry Bosworth, Elihu Ward and G. N. Wilson, members of said Boad, and Jared L. Wamsley, Prosecuting Attorney.

It appearing to the Board that small pox or some other infectious disease is now prevailing in the county of Pocahontas and it is therefore ordered that quarantine be and the same is hereby declared against said County, and all persons are hereby prohibited from coming into the County of Randolph from the County of Pocahontas without the consent of the President of this Board.

Every person who shall fail or refuse to comply with this order or any order hereafter made by this Board or who shall come into this County from the County of Pocahontas without the consent of the President of this Board, will be prosecuted against according to law and if suspected of having been exposed to said disease will be confined in the pest house of this County provided for the purpose.

The President of this Board is hereby empowered to place guards on the roads leading into this County from the County of Pocahontas and the line of the said two Counties, whose duty it shall be to enforce the provisions of this order, and are hereby authorized to take in charge any person coming into this County from the County of Pocahontas in violation of this order and prevent its entry into this County of Randolph.

By the people of this County are requested to report to the President of this Board any violation of this order and the parties so violating the same will be dealt with according to law.

PERRY BOSWORTH,
President of Board of Health Randolph County.

Shooting in Mingo County.

At Williamson, Mingo County, S. Davis Stokes, a lawyer, and Democratic nominee for State Senate of his district, and Rev John E. Wohl a Presbyterian evangelist, had a shooting affray, in which Stokes was dangerously wounded and Wohl was instantly killed.

Wohl had preached a sermon directed against the german club, of which Stokes was leader. They had had some words about it, and quarreled again in front of Wohl's house. Hot words had passed when Wohl rushed at Stokes and drawing a revolver shot him thro' the body. Stokes fell, and when Wohl fired a second time, shot him through the head. Wohl was instantly killed. The quarrel does not seem to have involved any questions of importance, and the whole tradegy must be attributed to the pernicious habit of carrying revolvers.

Rev John E. Wohl was an evangelist of the Synod of Virginia and was a forceful eloquent preacher. He preached at the Richland church in Greenbrier for a while. He has a number of acquaintances in this county.

Kelly—Burner.

Married, December 5, 1900, at the home of the bride, near Gillespie, Miss Roberta Alice Kelly to Thomas Lloyd Burner, of Phillips, Barbour County, W. Va., by Rev J. W. McNeil. The attendants were Miss Virgie Gillespie and Sandy Burner, Miss Minnie Burner and Wade Kelly. The bride is well thought of by all who know her, and the groom is a promising young business man who has been clerking for R. B. Kerr, the merchant at Durbin. The guests, numbering about forty, were nicely entertained by being treated to cake, lemonade and candy, which seemed to enjoy. The bridal couple left immediately after the ceremony for Phillipi, where they will visit friends and relatives for a few weeks. They expect to make their home at Durbin, W. Va. They have many friends to welcome them there and wish them a long and happy life. May their path be strewn with flowers.

A FRIEND.

Wolford—Bussard.

In the midst of the heavy storm of mingled rain and snow last Friday afternoon December 7, 1900, a picturesque marriage service occurred at Inframonte, West Marlinton when Thomas Jefferson Wolford and Miss Ella Irene Bussard were joined in holy matrimony; Wm. T. Price officiating minister. The bride is a daughter of the late Samson Bussard near Clover Lick. The groom is a citizen of Grayson County, Kentucky, and is a railway employe. The parties were attended and introduced by Mr Price and Miss Bosworth, and affable editor of the Marlinton Messenger.

GREEN BANK.

We are having an open winter; no snow to amount to anything; weather neither cold nor hot.

J. H. Curry had a very severe attack of neuralgia of the stomach last Friday. He was working at the shoe bench when it struck him and he had to be carried to his home. The family physican being summoned he was soon relieved after in tense suffering. He said he thought his his time had come. He is easy but not well yet.

Mrs Jane Curry is visiting in Green Bank at this time, going from house to house on her rolling chair.

Married, December 5, 1900, near Durbin, Mr Burner and Miss Roberta Kelley, by Rev J. W. McNeel.

L. J. R. Dysard has sold his store at Durbin to J. D. Wilmouth and has moved to Green Bank again.

Benick Sutton has sold his lumber which he contemplated building a house with to L. J. R. Dysard. Mr Sutton will leave for Cartersville, Virginia, in a few days.

The King's Daughters Society of Green Bank have put two King Hooks in the church at this place and will have it papered soon. W. A. Eldridge has undertaken to hang the paper. They hope some person will be kind enough to bring a load of dry wood.

Rev J. McNeil preached a very good sermon last Sunday, and will preach services at Dunmore this week.

There has been many I Told You So's about the flood and went out on the railroad while ago. Well several reasons might be offered but my idea is it was because the breaking of the Sabbath. God says remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy and then shall do no work, and has this from Almost Say, verily Man has undertaken to do man's will instead God's will. Ye people is a judgment sent to a sinful world to make man's will and show God's power on earth as ruler. If any person in Christ Sabbath breaking continue and neglect judgment will be executed on such. Remember Sabbath and keep it holy. Man you might work's for under his God and for to make it safer for it, but God will provide those who do not obey his law. This is a warning to those who are guilty of breaking the Sabbath.

NEXT MONDAY.

FOR THE TIMES.

Talking It Over With The Leader.

Oh, don't you remember the election, John Holt,
The time that they done us so brown,
But they shook in the country November the fifth,
And was it skeered plumb to death in the town;
A. B. White, your gifted opponent, John Holt,
His mustache was too big for his face,
But when he was skeered he could hustle, John Holt,
And he made it all right in the race.

And don't you remember Steve Elkins, John Holt,
Steve Elkins who kills with his frown,
The McKinley clubs yell when he sends them the buttons,
And raise thunder all over the town
Steve Elkins was skeered for his togs, John Holt,
And he brought on a barrel of tin,
And he scattered it over the landscape, John Holt,
And divil-a-bit could we we win.

And don't you forgit to remember, John Holt,
He's got delegates more than enough,
They're as poor as they make 'em and as hungry as wolves,
And they're after Steve Elkin's stuff,
He got thirty six more than he needed, John Holt,
And he'll find it expensive and high
Before he gets back in the Senate, John Holt, He'll experience a sweet "buy and buy."

EDRAY.

Our people are becoming very cautious about the smallpox and are getting vaccinated. Henry Poage's is the last case of smallpox we have heard of. He has been very sick, but is better now.

The heaviest snow fall as yet this season was Friday night. Persons in from the mountains Saturday told us the snow was six inches deep on the high lands.

That noted tree from which A. N. Taylor gathered a swarm of bees last summer has been chopped down and manufactured into lumber at William Sharp's mill.

Some of Rev Athinson's friends hauled him some wood last Friday and received an expression of thanks and good wishes from the preacher for their kindness.

Dr Price has been very busy looking after the welfare of the sick since his return from Baltimore. We learn that his much esteemed father is one of his patients just now. We hope that Mr Price will soon recover from his illness.

The snow fell on Tuesday night did some damage to our telephone lines. Geo. P. Moore and John E. Barlow were out on Saturday repairing them.

Samuel B. Moore was over to his Elk River farm last week looking after his interests there.

Isaac Sharp is getting along very well with his house considering the unfavorable weather. Joseph Wood is doing the carpenter work. Samuel Baxter is building the chimney.

A Mr Wolford, a contractor on the Greenbrier railroad, and Miss E. I. Bazzard, of Clover Creek passed here on Friday on their way to Marlinton, where the two were made one.

J. W. Tyler and wife have returned from their visit at Lobelia.

We have not of course reached the winter solstice but to all appearance the winter is here. According to the Centennial Almanack it will be mild; corresponding with the winter of 1893-94. There are also other theories advanced, indicating an easy winter, such as the scarcity of fuel, the ground squirrel's preparation for winter, the light open corn husk, the woolly worm's appearance, &c. Looking however at the position and movement of some of the planets which offset the ecrin the idea, seems to me that this month will continue cold and stormy to the end, that there will be a cold snap the last of January, and the balance of the winter will be moderate if not very warm. Look out also for a good storm from one about the last of March or the first of April.

GLADE HILL.

Very cold and plenty of mud.

Fount Arbogast was a pleasant caller in this part last week.

Revs Pullin and Callison were holding a series of meetings at the Buzzard Church last week.

Chris Dilley, Lawrence Nottingham, Harrison Shoots and others were over from Leather Bark last Sunday.

There is quite a small pox scare in this part. Without a doubt some of the people are going to die with fright. It is worse than the disease in its worst form.

The funeral services of Mrs Geo. W. Arbogast will be preached at the Buzzard church December 16 at 11 on by Rev Chas Arbogast.

Walter Arbogast and Miss Lockridge made a flying trip to Marlinton last week.

Mr and Mrs Marvin Wooddell of this place are visiting at Arbovale.

A series of meetings is going on at Mace Chapel this week.

Mr and Mrs Sherman Wooddell of this place are visiting at Dunmore this week. Mr Wooddell is a brother of Rev. J. W. Wooddell of this place.

HIGHLAND COUNTY, VA.

J. C. Loury, of Huntersville, representing Dingnid Bros., of Lynchburg, Va., was a welcome guest in our town, where he spent the Sabbath.

The familiar face of E. H. Moore of academy, representing Armstrong, Cater & Co., was recognized on our streets last week.

E. M. Arbogast, of Marlinton, has been here since last week.

Ed Taylor and bride, nee Miss Patterson, of Dunmore, who have been visiting in the Crabbottom and Doe Hill neighborhoods for a few days, passed through town on their way to Capt Gilmore's.

S. G. Dever, of Mill Gap, returned last week from a visit to his son Paul, who has been quite sick near Huntersville.

William Hevener and S. W. Sterrett, as representatives of Highland Lodge A. F. and A. M., have gone to Richmond to attend the meeting of the Grand Lodge, which convenes tomorrow.

B. H. Hansel, whose death occurred at McDowell a short time ago, who was superintendent of schools of this county, formerly lived near Academy, W. Va. He was an upright, honorable Christian gentleman, and had filled his office with credit.

Samuel Lightner, one of Highland's honored citizens, died near Valley Centre last Friday. Those who were intimately acquainted with Mr and Mrs Lightner know well how to appreciate them, and we know it was a treat not to be forgotten to have had the pleasure of partaking of their hospitality. His wife preceded him just one week to that house not made with hands eternal in the heavens.

Will Quindore died last evening at McDowell. This makes two deaths in that family, Miss Irma having died last Thursday. They died of typhoid fever which is raging at McDowell. There are several cases at present.

Miss Elsie Byant, of McDowell, is very low with fever and fears are entertained as to her recovery.

New Warship Is Tested.

The expectations of the naval officials were more than equaled in the speed trial of the new battleship Alabama recently. The floating fighting machine covered the prescribed course at such remarkable time that the title, "Queen of the Navy," has been conferred upon her. An average speed of 17 knots per hour was made for a period of four hours, although this speed is not as remarkable as that made by the Iowa, still the performance of the Alabama is considered phenomenal, within the trial the craft was not overworked, and after finishing the course was pronounced in good condition. Five sister ships, the Massachusetts, Indiana, Kentucky, Kearsarge, and Kearsarge, were used as stake boats in the trial. A triangular course was arranged and the spectacle was witnessed by many people. The vessel is the product of American shipbuilders. It was constructed by the Cramps at Philadelphia and guaranteed to do at least 16 knots per hour. The trial showed that she could do 17 without trouble, and it is thought that the time in the trial trip may yet be surpassed.

Quincy Girl to Teach in Honolulu.

Miss Clara Uecke of 418 South 12th street, the well-known kindergarten teacher, is going to teach in Honolulu, Hawaiian islands. Miss Uecke left today for Chicago, whence she goes to San Francisco, thence to sail for Honolulu. The kindergarten in which she will teach is under control of the government. The selection of Miss Uecke will undoubtedly be a good thing for the schools, for she has had some ten years' experience, with marked success everywhere, and to her fine capabilities is united a charming personality. The young lady is a daughter of F. William Uecke, an employe at the Jaeffer Governor works, and she and Mrs. John Ahern, wife of the chief of police, are half-sisters.—Quincy Journal, Aug. 27.

PLENTY OF BOOKS.

Libraries of Four Nations with Millions of Volumes.

The British Museum, situated on Great Russell street, in London, was founded in 1753. It contains collections of antiquities, drawings prints and a library of about two million volumes, 85,000 MSS. and 45,000 charters. The Harleian MSS., purchased in 1753, and the Royal Library, largely taken from the monasteries by Henry VIII., and 65,000 volumes given by George III. and George IV., raised the library to a position of great importance. The first great Egyptian acquisition consists of the objects taken with the French army in 1801. The Assyrian, Babylonian and Greek collections are undoubtedly the best in any contemporary museum. The present building, finished in 1847, is one of the best structures of the "classic revival." It was designed by Sir Robert Smirke, completed by his brother. Sidney Smirke, and was commenced very early in the nineteenth century. About 50,000 volumes are added annually. Modern publications in Britain are added free of expense by receiving a grain a copy of every book entered at Stationer's Hall. La Bibliotheque Nationale, the great French library, is the largest in the world. It has been called successively la Bibliotheque du Roi, Royale, Nationale and Imperiale. The Bibliotheque du Roi was originally in the Palais de la Cite, consisting of the library of King John. He bequeathed it to Charles V., who received it and collected a library of 910 volumes in the Louvre. This was sold to the Duke of Bedford. Louis XI. partly repaired this loss and added the first results of the new invention of printing. Louis XII. established it at Blois, incorporating it with the Orleans library. The Gruthuyse collection was next added to it. Francis I. transferred the library to Fontainebleau, and placed it in charge of John Budle. Henry II. made obligatory the deposit of one copy of every book published in the kingdom. Henry IV. brought it back to Paris, where it changed in location frequently, before resting in its present quarters in the Palais Mazarin, Rue Richelieu. Napoleon I. increased the government grant, and under his care the library was much enlarged. It contains about three million volumes and about a hundred thousand MSS., besides collections of prints and medals. It is especially rich in Oriental manuscripts. The Royal library of Berlin was founded by the Great Elector, Frederick William, and opened in 1661. The University of Berlin, is not 100 much to say, is the leading university in the world. It is attended annually by about 6,000 students, and has a faculty of about 200 professors and teachers. It has a most magnificent library. The two libraries combined contain about 2,250,000 volumes and nearly 50,000 MSS. The Library of Congress, as the National library of the United States is called, was founded in 1800, and is supported by the national government. It contains upwards of a million volumes (250,000 pamphlets). Liberal provisions are made for the yearly addition of volumes through purchase, and in addition, the copyright law requires that every new publication shall be deposited in the library without charge. Although the library of Congress is not as rich in manuscripts and rare books as its great European rivals, on account of its more recent beginning, it is nevertheless richly stocked with the books that can be obtained by purchase in these later days, and its purchasing committee are always alert to secure treasures from such private collections as are from time to time thrown on the market.

REV. DR. TALMAGE.

THE EMINENT DIVINE'S SUNDAY DISCOURSE.

Subject: Everyday Religion—It Is Good in Business and Politics—The Example of Daniel, Who Was Never Too Busy to Worship God.—Advice to Christians.

(Copyrighted.)

WASHINGTON, D. C.—This discourse of Dr. Talmage is appropriate for all seasons, but especially in these times of great agitation. The text is Daniel vi. 10: "Then the king commanded, and they brought Daniel and cast him into the den of lions."

Darius was king of Babylon, and the young man Daniel was so much a favorite with him that he made him prime minister, or secretary of state. But no man could gain such a high position without exciting the envy and jealousy of the people. There were demagogues in Babylon who were so appreciative of their own abilities that they were offended at the elevation of this young man. Old Babylon was afraid of young Elijah. The hills or the cedar the more set it is to be riven of the lightning. These demagogues asked the king to make a decree that anybody that made a petition to any one except the king during a period of thirty days should be put to death. King Darius, not suspecting any foul play, makes that decree. The demagogues have accomplished all they want because they know that no one can keep Daniel from sending petitions before God for thirty days.

So far from being afraid, Daniel goes on with his applications three times a day and is found on his house top making prayer. He is caught in the act. He is condemned to be devoured by the lions. Rough executioners of the law seize him and hasten to the arena. I hear the low growl of it's wild beasts, and I see them pawing the dust, and as they put their assembly to the ground the solid earth quakes with their bellowing. I see their open red and I almost hear the fiery eyeballs snap in the darkness. These monsters approach Daniel. They have an appetite keen with hunger. With one stroke of their paw or one snatch of their teeth, he was hurled to his death in the bottom of the arena. But what a strange welcome Daniel receives from these hungry monsters. They fawn around him. They put the head of her wife and children into the den of the lions. He looks in. All is silent. His heart stops. He feels that the very ferocity has departed, his gathering all his strength, he shouts through the bars of the roof, "Oh, Daniel, is the God whom thou servest personally able to deliver thee?" There comes rolling up from the den darkness a deep voice which says, "Oh, king, live forever. My God has sent His angel to shut the lions' mouths that they have not hurt me." Then Daniel is brought out from the den. The demagogues are hurled into it, and no sooner have they struck the bottom of the den than their flesh was rent, and their bones crushed and their blood spouted through the rifts of the rock, and as the lions smelled the mocks trembled at their roar, they announce to all ages that while God will defend His people, the way of the unruly shall perish.

Learn first from this subject that the greatest art of life is to commit in the care of many is the cause of success. What had Daniel done that he should be flung to the lions? He had become prime minister. They could not forgive him for that, and behold in him a fourth of unsanctified human nature as seen in all ages of the world. So long as you are crushed in property, so long as you are running the gantlet between landlord and Knickerbocker, so long as you are hard work to educate your children, there are people who will say, Poor man, I am sorry, but he ought to succeed, poor man. But after awhile the tide turns in your favor, and that is the time for investment you made. You bought just at the right time. Fortune becomes good humored and smiles upon you. You are in some department successful and your competitors shall some one. Time would be cruel to sympathize with you stand along the street, and they scowl at you from under the rim of their hats. Not such a word or two as you pass by them. "Stuck up, proud as Lucifer, as full of dignity," says another. "Will burst soon."

was a thief. Every cent he ever got into house is laid on their hearts. Your horse's hoofs went over their nerves. Every item of your success has been to them an item of discomfiture and despair. Just as soon as an evil report can be put about you it flies, if you are more virtuous, if you are more strong, if you are more intelligent, if you can't shudder on the prospect of success.

The road to honor and success is with in reach of the enemy's guns. Jealousy says, "Stay down or I'll knock you down." I do not like you, says the snowflake to the snowbird. Why don't you like me?" asks the snowbird. "I don't like snowflake, "you are going up and I am crying down."

Young merchants, young lawyers, young doctors, young mechanics, young artists, young statesmen, at certain times have to come to sympathize with you, but now that you are becoming a master of your particular employment, and know how it is now, young lawyers, young doctors, young artists, young statesmen, look out for me! The greatest crime that you can commit is success in any department.

Again, my subject impresses me with the value of decision of character in any department of life. Daniel was a man who himself his adherence to the religion of the land he would be hurled to the lions, but having set his compass well, he sailed right on. For the lack of that element of decision of character many men, like Daniel, many men are ruined for this world, and for God they failed to ruin. A great many at forty years of age are not settled in any respect, because they have not decision of character to make up their minds. Perhaps they will go west; perhaps they will go south; perhaps they will go north; perhaps they will go east; perhaps they will go to the city; perhaps they will go to the country; perhaps they will invest in real estate or in railroads; perhaps they will go to the law; perhaps they will go to the ministry; and you see the result of their indecision. Why, there are men in the city of Brooklyn who have been waiting for Gilmore and the next for Charleston and the next for Washington, and they have not gone yet. There are men on the sea of life rocking backward and forward and rocking so long that they have not yet got out of the harbor. I found a house in the Canadian wilds and a man commenced to build a house in the summer of the time, the corner of all others I ever saw. Long trees were cast right and there they are. Some of them have fallen. Whenever the proprietor of Niagara comes down there he will see the unfinished house. Some men are by nature in full blast. Their work is done as soon as it is begun. Their work is done as soon as it is begun. Their work is done as soon as it is begun

In about an hour we reached Bois Blanc, and I stepped ashore and inspected my forces. There was little for me to do except to see that the choppers did not shirk, and I thought I should have an easy time of it, but when I ascended to the men sat on the bench and smoked their pipes, and struck me that there was more loud talking and joking than I had expected to hear. There were French-Canadian voyageurs and boatmen, Indians and half-breeds, all ready for a laugh and a song, and no other class of men would have put up with their hardships and privations so cheerfully. [illegible] the chopping [illegible] the work was over, I gave the word and they went back to their wood-cutting, but some of them moved sullkily, and I fancied they did not work as industriously as in the morning. I suspected they had made up their minds that I was only a boy and that they could do as they pleased, and this suspicion frightened me. There I was, alone with twenty-five men, some of them three or four times as old as myself, and if I lost control of them I should be disgraced. Somehow the day of describing had entirely gone out of my mind, you see. Although I was scared, you mustn't think I showed the white feather. No, all the afternoon I moved among the men, speaking a quiet word now and then, but never attempting any bullying. But things plainly grew worse rather than better.

I could not imagine what was the matter with the men, until late in the day I happened to pass near Joe Rolette and noticed a strong odor of whiskey. In an instant I understood. Joe and Alec must have brought some liquor from Mackinac. Before morning the whole crew would be drunk!

What I apprehended politics that Alec's jacket had been carefully spread over some large object in the bottom of the canoe. I had paid little attention to it at the time, supposing that it was merely a bundle of clothes, but now I knew it had been a jug.

Now that I had definite knowledge, my anger was quickly succeeded by [illegible] and in a little while I had myself well in hand. I stepped quietly forward a few paces and listened for a moment.

"Have I much did you bring from Mackinac, Joe?" asked the other chap, now speaking in French, which was then almost as familiar to me as English.

"A big [illegible] and the [illegible] gruesome word all right—some of your [illegible] and water, as they always [illegible] Joe's got it down in a bottle in his pocket and he's given some of the boys a taste, but he's saving the rest for [illegible]."

"Have you any more?"

"Not much, I won't!" he cried, and I fired.

The bullet went just where I had intended—I could shoot with any man in those days. It flew so close to his ear that he dropped the flask in alarm. The whiskey gurgled out on the moss. He still held the jug. For an instant he faced me, and then I dropped the empty rifle into my left hand, stepped forward and said, "Give it here!"

It was years before I could quite make up my mind why Alec obeyed me. Of course the bullet whispered something to his nerves as it went by, and I suppose I looked determined. But there was another reason—I was not really alone. Back of me was the whole power of the fur company, with its thousands of employes under the command of men who were afraid of nothing, and who knew perfectly how to deal with a drunken, rebellious voyageur. Alec had a knife at his belt, and he could have killed me then and there; but he knew that if he did his own life would not have been safe anywhere between Quebec and the Rocky Mountains.

I carried the jug down to the beach and smashed it on a rock in full sight of the whole crew, who had heard the shot and had hastily gathered to see what it meant. Joe Rolette gave an angry exclamation, and stepped forward as if he were about to interfere, but a hand was laid heavily on his shoulder and a well-known voice said in his ear, "Let him alone!"

It was Hermidas Paquin, the oldest and best voyageur in the crew, who spoke, and Joe stood still.

That evening several of the men, Joe and Alec among them, held a consultation, and in a few minutes Joe came over to where I sat, a little apart from the men.

"My friend," said he, in a wheedling tone, "what about Alec, will you?"

"If you two behave yourselves," I told him, "I will not tell them about Alec or about you."

"About me?" cried Joe. "Why, I didn't do anything. It was Alec."

"I know all about it," I said, "and I don't want to hear anything more from you. Not another word! If you do your work quietly and peaceably, I won't say anything; but if there is any more trouble, you will know what to expect."

Joe went back to report to his comrades, and they seemed relieved; but it was a very silent and sullen crew of men who toot out their pipes and tobacco and sat down for the regular evening smoke.

It was a lovely summer evening; no wind, and the lines of the camp-fire went straight toward the sky. The stars came out one after another, and a loon was calling somewhere, far away across the water. I never heard a loon crying and calling without thinking of that loon. It was the most memorable evening of my life.

No voyageur could hold anger on such a night, when he was well fed and enjoying the twilight. Somebody cracked a joke. Some one else began to hum a tune. In five minutes the men were all talking and laughing as if nothing had ever happened to disturb their good nature, and my victory was complete.

Three days later the wood-cutting was finished and I was back at Mackinac again—a man and a devoted clerk to the company, thanks to the wise kindness and kindliness of Mr. Crooks.—Youth's Companion.

BREAKING THE SABBATH.

Last week a correspondent advanced the idea that the Sunday flood which damaged the railway very considerably was a manifestation of the displeasure of the Almighty caused by the Sunday work which had been more or less in evidence since the work was begun. Without going into the question of whether sin is punished in such a summary manner, we will talk about the observance of the Sabbath. The railroad contractors in question did not violate the Sabbath laws to any great extent. Beyond the moving of derricks, changing camps and foreing for something to eat little labor always knocked off that day and observed the blessed Sabbath to considerable extent by shootin craps.

The average railroad darkey is so much more virtuous and clean when working than any other way it seems a pity that the observance of the day must stop there.

We never knew but one case where a man who was distinctly an ungodly man held to the belief advanced by some of the best people—that Sunday breaking will bring a calamity. That man had been fishing one bright Sunday when a bolt from a clearsky struck a nearby tree and shocked him within an inch of life. Never, even in the heart of the wilderness, where the word of the Lord is not preached and there is no Sunday, would he delight in the insocuous delights of fishing on the sacred day.

What constitutes breaking of the Sabbath depends largely in what community you live. With our native folk, descended largely from the Covenanters of Scotland, the Sabbath is observed more strictly than in any other country in the world. The training of a mountain boy is to attend church in the morning and studying the hardest and dryest Biblical lessons in the afternoon. The day is marked with a feeling of restraint which he can never throw off. After he becomes a man in stature he throws off some of these impositions as he feels them for a few years and leads a reckless and wordly life, going so far perhaps as to provide himself with a sweer word. He marries, and declares that he will never subject his children to a like restraint. He spends his Sundays in eating more dinner than is good for him, and quarreling over his wife. By the time his children are old enough to be taken the hair of the head and forced into devotional exercises, it has gradually dawned on him that he owes much to that early course of sprouts, and he puts his own children through the same long dry as-dust lesson by force and by arms.

To a man who has been taught the observance of the Sabbath to keep him the violation is a sin. When he breaks it he is doing something he believes to be wrong, a very dangerous thing to do, for when you need not the Voice, you hardened on the conscience and break down your moral force. You destroy the particular element of your element of your mental makeup which makes you worthy.

The rule of observance of the Sabbath is peculiar to a community. Our rule broadly stated is that a moderate amount of cooking is to be done, no mail is to be cut, and the stock fed but not salted; no agricultural labor is to be performed. A man may travel to worts home. Horses may be ridden a short distance and neighborhood calls made, but bicycle travel is prohibited. Fifteen minutes sewing is allowed if the Sunday-go-to-meeting clothes are found lacking in buttons. Young men can go on the keel for a wife. Many of our young men have made their fortunes on a Sunday evening by asking for what they wanted. Whgaming which corresponds to railroading was especially looked down on. The result was that Monday or Tuesday a train of any one could be seen outfitted board and Friday or Saturday the way on would get in. If a man was caught out on Sunday it was generally for some special cause. There are many things which are now the matter too, such as writing letters on Sunday and doing them the day before or the day after, buying or have nails, splitting kindling wood, taking out a deed to record, having a board to come to work next day, greasing the buggy to have going to church and the like.

Anything made a matter of principle and adhered to makes a man stronger and stronger. It had been a principle of the Jews to feed their cattle on the Sabbath as well as the rest of the week, but Christ broke down this principle and showed that the spirit and not the letter of the law was to be observed.

He plucked and ate the corn. He healed the man with the withered hand. He made clay and anointed the blind man's eyes and restored his sight. He cured a man of palsy and told him to carry home his bed—all on the Sabbath.

Paul especially enjoined fairness and forbearance in all things, one of them being in regard to Sunday observances: "One man esteemeth one day above another; another esteemeth every day alike. Let every man be fully persuaded in his own mind."—Rom. xiv, 5, and verses following. Again in Colossians, ii, 16: "Let no man therefore judge you in meat, or in drink, or in the new moon, or in respect to a holy day, or of Sabbath days." The whole trend of the Bible's teaching is to the effect that many worthy people will be surprised to meet certain people in the world to come.

Luther, Calvin, Knox and the other Reformers objected to the observance of a Sabbath from a religious point of view, recommending it as a day of rest beneficial as a social institution, the view that our courts take of it today. Martin Luther says in his writings: "The Ten Commandments do not apply to us Gentiles and Christians but only to the Jews."

Knox in his Confession of Faith says not a word of the Sabbath and not until 1644 was the proper observance of the Sabbath enjoined, and that by the Westminister standards of faith.

Think of it, Izaak Walton could pursue his business as a hosier of Fleet Street six days in the week, and fish on Sunday and still preserve his Christian integrity. It was in those good old days.

With all the restraint that the church infuses into the Sabbath day we are better and stronger for it perhaps, and though we may sigh for the days when it was right to fish on the Sabbath, it is better to observe it as a day of rest.

"Sweet day, so cool, so calm, so bright,
The bridal of the earth and sky,
The dews shall weep thy fall tonight,
For thou must die."

SOMETHING TO THINK ABOUT.

The tedium of a sick room is gently relieved if something falls under the eye worth thinking about.

Henry II of England said this that is well worth more than a passing glance: "Be zealous, but not a zealot."

Mrs G. A. Taylor hit the nail on the head when she it as her opinion that "It is possible to have dark views of ourselves without humility." Now owing to such a possibility there are people excessively proud of their humility, so called, and take much pride in looking and doing ugly.

Longfellow used to say: "Most people would succeed in small things if they were not troubled with great ambitions."

Victor Hugo writes: "My idea is this, Ever go Onward. If God had intended that a man should go backward He would have given him an eye in the back of his head."

Here is another of Mrs G. A. Taylor's beautiful thoughts: "There is a beauty and a safety in preserving a well defined boundary between the church and the world. It should be visible to which you wish to belong."

Mr Godet, an eminent Frenchman says. "The faithful believer is described as a servant waiting over night for the arrival of his master. That there may be no delay in opening the door he keeps himself awake, up and ready to go. The lighted lamp is at his hand; he has even food ready against the time of his return."

Order of Publication.

State of West Virginia } ss.
Pocahontas County }

At rules held in the circuit court of Pocahontas County, on Monday December 3rd, 1900.

B. A. Yeager, Special Receiver of Noble & House, and Cogan, Noble & House, ... Plaintiff vs
J. J. Strang and Wm. Kinifick, trading and doing business as Stang & Co., W. R. Hymen and Greenbrier Railway Co.... Defts

In Chancery.

The object of this suit is to subject the assets of the defendants, John J. Strang and Wm. Kinifick, partners trading and doing business as J. J. Strang Co, within the jurisdiction of this court, to the payment of a debt of $23,315.65, due H. A. Yeager, Special Receiver of Cogan, Noble & House and Noble & House.

This day came the plaintiff by his attorneys, and on their motion, and it appearing by affidavit filed, that the defendants, John J. Strang and Wm. Kinifick, are non-residents of this State, it is ordered that they do appear here within one month after the first publication hereof and do what is necessary to protect their interest in this suit.

United States of America, } ss.
District of W. Va. }

In the United States District Court in and for said district, in the matter of Wise Herold, Bankrupt, No 95 in Bankruptcy, petition for discharge. To the Honorable John J. Jackson, Judge of the district court of the United States for the district of West Virginia:

Wise Herold, of Frost, in the county of Pocahontas and State of West Virginia, in said district, respectfully represents that on the 14th day of July, last past, he was duly adjudged bankrupt under the acts of Congress relating to bankruptcy; that he has duly surrendered all his property and rights of property and has fully complied with all the requirements of said acts and of the orders of the court touching his bankruptcy.

Wherefore he prays that he may be decreed by the court to have a full discharge from all debts provable against his estate under said bankrupt acts, except such debts as are excepted by law from such discharge.

Dated this 2nd day of July, a. d. 19..0
(Sine1) WISE HER-LD,
Bankrupt.

ORDER OF NOTICE THEREON.

District of West Virginia, ss.
On this 20th day of October, a. d. 1900 on reading the foregoing petition it is Ordered by the Court, that a hearing be had upon the same on the 16th day of November, a. d. 1900, before said court, at Charleston, in said district, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon; and that notice thereof be published in The Pocahontas Times, a newspaper printed in said district, and that all known creditors and other persons in interest may appear at the time and place so fixed and show cause, if any they have, why the prayer of said petitioner should not be granted.

And it is further ordered by the court that the clerk shall send by mail to all known creditors copies of said petition and this order addressed to them at their places of residence as stated.

Witness the Honorable John J. Jackson, Judge of the said court, and the seal thereof, at Charleston, in said district, on the 20th day of October, a. d. 1900. Attest:

A Gentle Reminder:

Pass Our Doors and You Pass a Chance to Make Money

Things are Great and Small

Only by comparison. The more you compare our prices with others the more you become impressed with our great big Bargains. Others save money and get the best goods by purchasing here, so can you.

The People Who Buy of Us are convinced we are lower than the lowest. Any time you may call we can show new goods at right prices. We are selling goods so fast we are having trouble in getting them from the railroad.

Complete line Xmas Goods

We have a very large line of Holiday Goods. You will do well to examine our line before purchasing

Yours Respectfully,

Wouldn't it Make you Mad?

Thoroughly satisfied within yourself that you are buying your Goods cheaper than your neighbor who buys exclusively from THE GOLDEN STORE, while you have shopped at the cheap places and got all of their Bargains.

Wouldn't it Jar You?

When you compare a jacket your neighbor bought at GOLDEN for $2.98 strictly all wool Kersey or Beaver. It wears well, fits well and looks well, while your jacket, for which you paid $4, is made of a cheap fuzzy cloth which will give no satisfaction.

Good Goods at Cheap Goods Prices

In looking over my goods I find that I have too many skirts to move I will cut the price from $1.75 to 98c.

A lady of good authority remarked after looking over Golden's line of Jackets that his his Jackets were of the latest style and reasonable in price. If you think you will want a new Jacket for the holidays you will do well by examining his new line which he has just received.

It don't take much of a judge to tell the bargains Golden is offering in Ladies Capes. They are worth $2, for $1.25; double cape, trimmed in fur and braid.

Best Clipper Braid Flour, $4.25

Best red flannel double breasted undershirts, 98c.

Here is something that will interest every house-keeper: Pure Linen Table Cloth, in 2-4 and 3-4 length, worth 85c a yard, only 50c.

A pair of nice kid gloves, the kind that sells for $1, will make a nice Xmas present for the most fastidious lady. A pair of men's astrican wool lined gloves will be appreciated by every man as a gift.

If you want a lap robe, storm and rain proof, try Golden's robes at $1.68. They are made of heavy plush lined with rubber.

Duck coats, blanket lined, interlined with rubber, $1.68.

THE GOLDEN STORE.

COOPER & CO.

THE FIRST TRAIN TO MARLINTON,

Brought SAMUEL COOPER & CO., its first car load of goods—the first carload of store goods ever received in the county.

SAMUEL COOPER

Will welcome old friends and new at his place of business in Marlinton.

He has a full line of general merchandise, namely, Dress and Gents Furnishing Goods, Dry Goods, Notions, Boots and Shoes and all other things found in a well appointed store.

Ladies' Hats made to order in Millinery Department as well.

A fine line of Ladies and Children Capes and Jackets in the latest styles. Don't clothing for a year when you can get a suit for the price of a pair of pants? We have all the popular goods of every description at the market price. All we ask from customers is a fair trial.

Samuel Cooper & Co.

Regular Traffic Begins.

Monday regular trains began to run on the new railroad. A train consisting of Engine 98 and two cars, a passenger coach and a combination passenger and baggage coach came up the line slightly behind time, having been delayed at Beaver Creek where a siding is being put in.

The depot agent for Marlinton, S. I. Fleshman, came up on the train and immediately took charge of the affairs. He set up a temporary office in postoffice. By the end of box cars he expects to handle the freight at this point to the best possible advantage. The passenger trains are four cents a mile, a ticket from Marlinton to Ronceverte being $2.35.

The following schedule went into effect Monday:

Daily, Except Sunday.

Leave		Arrive
1 p. m.	Marlinton	12 m.
1.20	Buckeye	11.40 a m
1.30	Beaver Creek	11.30
1.45	Seybert	11.15
2.15	Beard's	10.45
2.40	Droop Mt.	10.20
3.15	Renick	9.45
3.25	Spring Creek	9.35
4	Anthony	9
4.15	Keister	8.45
4.30	Little Sulphur	8.10
5	Whitesmith Junc.	8
5.15	Ronceverte	7.45 a m

An effort has been made to have the mail put on the train at Renick. The first train to leave Marlinton carried with it about 150 darkies who had come down from Pitts' camp at the head of the county. They filled the passenger coach and overflowed on the flat car behind, which was piled up with baggage. They were bound for the Sunny South. The white passengers find the smoker to themselves.

Mr Fleshman, the new agent, comes from Buckhorn here. He is a Greenbrier man, having been raised in Frankford. About 17 years ago he carried the mail on the old stage line from Huntersville to Lewisburg. He is married and will make himself a home here as soon as convenient.

As soon as the carpenter force finishes the water tank on which it is now working it will be moved to the depot. It is rumored that we are to have a very fine slate covered depot, 40x132 feet.

In computing the time of arrival and departure of trains the reader will remember that the railroad time is an hour faster than the local, which is the time kept at Clifton Forge. Mr Gill is conductor in charge of the passenger train.

B. T. Dixon is train master and chief train dispatcher. He comes from Hinton and will have his [illegible]

Freight rates until further classification will be fot the hundred for car load lots and 10cts for less amounts.

R. H. Beaton who has been superintendent of the Lexington branch will be superintendent of of this road.

The youth's Companion had recently a story of a schoool house sliding down Wolf Creek into a canyon on the banks of Greenbrier River, in November, 1766. It is written for the truth but is news to us folks.

A great outrage is reported from Highland county. R. H. Blagg, of Monterey, had nine pieces of hog meat stolen one night. Searching the neighbors' houses led him to the one which cost him $7.50 more and did not bring back the bacon.

Stephen Miller died of small-pox in a railroad camp above Windsor's last Monday. The disease developed in virulent form from the first and he succumbed to its poisonous effects. He was a resident of the vicinity of Mill Point, and leaves a wife and children.

Married, at West Marlinton Monday morning, December 17 1900, by Rev W. T. Price, Samuel Wilson, of Fairfield County, Ohio, to Caroline, and Elizabeth Kidd, of Amherst county, Virginia. These are colored persons and were railway employees in Strang's Camp. The left for their homes on the southbound train in order to marry there and independent[illegible]. They were chaperoned by a lady colored friend from Washington in very genteel style.

We are now quarantined on all sides. Both County having established a quarantine against at last week. With the outbreak in Pocahontas county however it behooves every body to see that we are well disposed with the long delightful winter before us. Vaccinate.

The small-pox situation is improving. More cases should be reported in order that the patients be quarantined. Every one should be vaccinated at once. Let us keep down the disease as much as possible. Let us not have it or new Marlinton for three weeks merely and our people are so thoroughly vaccinated that it not likely that any more will develop.

Last of the original mortgages of the [illegible] executed at the home of Jacob F. Kee, near Bartleton, on the 10th December 12 1900, given by Jacob Moore to Peter Moore, for $1,000 and recorded in Deed Book [illegible] page 1[illegible] was released by Peter Moore to Jacob Moore at the home of the latter on the 17th December 1900. The mortgage was held by postponement by Peter Moore for a number of years. The mortgage was executed before the Civil War and was held as a memento of the days when Jacob Moore was a slave and Peter Moore was the owner of same. For many years after the war Jacob Moore paid the interest on the mortgage to Peter Moore, and when the latter died the mortgage was held by his heirs. The principal and interest was paid in full by Jacob Moore, and the mortgage released. The original mortgage is a curiosity and is preserved by Jacob Moore.

Forgery Case.

Charles Haney produced a forged order for pay for 450 ties at the office of Johnson, Briggs & Pitts. The firm is getting out about 300,000 ties along the new railroad and have bought ties on innumerable tracts of land. These ties are let to contract to cutters, and then are counted by the contractors' foremen and taken up by them. The foreman has a form that he fills up showing so many ties made by a certain man on a certain piece of land. This voucher when present ed at the office is taken up and a check given him.

In this particular instance Haney appeared with one of the forms filled in with a pencil, purporting to be signed by a foreman, crediting Joe Wilson. The paper being in pencil was enough to arouse the suspicion of Mr Eubank, bookkeeper of the company. He refused to pay it and upon communication with W. P. Pitts the suspicion that the order was a forgery was confirmed. The boy Haney was arrested near Hillsboro and brought back to jail. His defense is that he picked up the order in the road and seeing who it was on turned it into the office. It is said that he cannot write himself.

Rev Woll's Sermon.

The sermon which led to the quarrel in which Rev John E. Woll was killed contained the following passages, supposed to apply to some of the society people of the town:

After introductory remarks he said: "You have read in the history of a great people about the dance held in a European city the night before the combined forces of the world crushed the man of destiny at Waterloo, and how revelry ceased at the growling of the distant cannon. But, my friends, that rumbling, though awful it may have been, will be as the voice of some sweet singer of old when compared with the sounds which those who now dance shall hear on the last day amid the crash of worlds.

"Voices that last night laughed with gayety shall then shriek with the damned, and forms that a few days ago moved to the sound of the violins shall writhe in the torture of eternal fire. Lips that today may have clung in loving kisses shall then forever be parched and dried; eyes that now look love shall then burst from their sockets, and the fair hair that now weaves about thesmarble of a beautiful brow the meshes of a net of gold shall in that awful day be turned into flames. Would that my tongue could picture and in words paint the fearful scene!

"Turn, my friends, before you die. Abandon your evil practices. Repent. Then you will be so long as you are salved by the touch of the dance. Again I say unto you that the white light and glare of the ball room are the shrouds of many probity and womanly purity, and when those die your life is a living hell. You call it the social whirl. It is the whirligig of the devil and upon it are riding the young people of this town. Beware, beware!"

FROST.

Fine weather at this time.

Miss Ada Sharp, of Huntersville, is visiting her relatives at this place.

Ross Callison and Pullins are conducting a protracted meeting at New Hope.

E. A. Spitzer, the merchant, has moved to Anthony's Creek. A. L. Dilley will occupy the vacated store house. Success to him.

D. L. Sharp and Price Moore are off to the depot for H. & H.

The Cove Hill school is progressing nicely under the management of B. Williams.

Mrs Scott Kelley is very sick at this writing. JEALOUSY.

Workmen are busy opening a trench for the piping from the pump house to the Marlinton tank. The pump house is near Knapps Creek bridge.

The first three days of the week were poultry days, and a large amount was brought in. Corn in the wheel and corn in the crates sold at the rate of $4.25 per bushel, and the grain market looks as if it might be stimulated.

E. S. Moore and Reese Pritchard, brother of A. B. McLaughlin, of Greenbrier County, two of his neighborhood near Edray, had a good stock coming into the county as stock raising is the main forte of Pocahontas. Mr McLaughlin sent his son Rev. H. W. McLaughlin one of his fine cows.

At Further, McDowell County, Jesse H. Chambers, a merchant of that place shot and killed Ed Thompson and had a falling out with Chambers and came into his place with a drawn revolver, and was shot down by Chambers. Both are, we understand residents of Kentucky, and the shooting was justifiable. Judge Chambers is a brother of Judge Chambers.

The Log River war ceased on a peace made in the form of a note to a small body under the command of General Andrew Lewis. The note was sent by Logan's brother Virgoe along the Ohio. They exhausted without success a long and tedious search for the Indians, and returned to the settlements after burning the Indian villages. The note was dashed from the hands of the messenger by the Indians as they were doubled from the ambush, and the war continued. Logan's speech was sent to Lord Dunmore, and there was no more war.

DUNMORE.

And then it got a little cool.

J. B. Walker and family have gone to Virginia.

W. M. Arbogast was in town Saturday night.

Arbogast, McElwee & Yeager sold a large tract of timber land near the mouth of Nettlington's Creek to a Pennsylvania Company.

150 men left Durbin Sunday.

We understand the railroad grading is done to Durbin.

The track laying will reach the city of Cass this week.

Mrs Julie Lockridge is out on a visit.

Miss Flora Nottingham left Saturday for Ohio.

A. W. Zinn has returned to Huntersville.

Jacob K. Taylor is quite ill.

A. M. McLaughlin was up.

H. M. Moore has his fine gray mare badly hurt by a piece of plank running in her side.

Joe Bazzard has kept the Marlinton people in potatoes since the flood.

We understand there will be a special passenger train Friday from Ronceverte to Forest Station, that is Nettington's Creek.

And then Ora Eskridge moved.

Geo. S. Taylor is up.

Reece Pritchard has built a thundering big barn.

On last Tuesday Dr Austin bought 600 pounds of turkeys and chickens.

Quite a good many deer and rabbits have been killed.

There are various kinds of cutters There are snow cutters, mud cutters, hay and straw cutters; there are mud cutters and there are shoe cutters, but at Cass they sell the No 1 AA Cutter Shoe at $4.15. The best shoe made and that's no lie.

Died, November 26, Peter Olivers child, age 5 months.

Died November 28, John Griffin's child aged 11 months.

Died, December 6, at Durbin, Big Tom Kelley.

We understand the phone line is almost completed from Durbin to Hutterville.

Wagoning and horseback riding around the Snake Den is a thing of the past. If the County Court don't build those Stoney Bottom people a road they get balloons in order to go to mill.

Judge C. F. Moore spent several days at Cass last week.

J. S. Mathews has gone to Baltimore.

Jo Taylor and lady have returned from Virginia.

Jacob Jr has gone to Huttonsville.

Miss Maggie Campbell home from Bolivar.

The weather is too cold for old Mrs Pooh to be out.

A happy Xmas to all.

MR POOH.

MILL POINT.

Good morning, Mr Editor—Fine morning. Mill Point has awakened from her long sleep, and thought she would drop you a line.

Vaccination is the order of the day.

Mr Hill and Mr Gay, of Edray, were in this neighborhood last week taking pictures and were kept quite busy for a day or two. They also sang for the people of Stamping Creek.

Some small-pox in this neighborhood. C. B. Grimes has closed his school on account of it.

We are sorry to hear that Stephen Miller is dangerously ill with small-pox at a railroad camp just above Allen Kennison's. There is very little hope of his recovery.

Henry McClure has been ill for some time with fever.

Rev Whitesell has closed his meeting on Stamping Creek.

James Grimes wears a bland smile these days—its another boy.

Mr Ware and son killed a fine deer and fawn the other day.

Wesley Sibert has been visiting his uncle, W. W. Buckanan.

Keep your shoes blacked—there are signs of a wedding in the air.

MARGUERITE PEARL.

Brave Men Fall

Victims to stomach, liver and kidney troubles as well as women, and all feel the results in loss of appetite, poison in the blood, backache, nervousness, headache and tired listless run-down feeling. But there is no need to feel like that. J. F. Gardner, of Idaville, Ind., says: "Electric Bitters are just the thing for a man when he don't care whether he lives or dies. It gave me new strength and a good appetite. I can now eat anything and sleep like a top." Only 50c. Sold by Harry R. Echols, Marlinton; R. J. Brown, Mill Point; E. L. Beard & Co., Academy; H. S. Beaman, Beard's Valley; S. F. Myles, Falling Spring.

Pneumonia Prevented.

Among the tens of thousands who have used Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for colds and lagrippe not a single case has developed into pneumonia, so far as we have been able to learn. Whitfield & Co., 10 Wabash Ave Chicago, one of the most prominent druggists in that city, is speaking of this fact. We have yet to learn of a case of pneumonia following the use of this remedy for lagrippe in many months of its use. It is certainly prompt and complete recovery for this disease and is rapidly growing in favor with the people. For sale by all druggists.

Quarantine Notice.

At a meeting of the Local Board of Health of Randolph County, Present Dr Perry Bosworth, Elihu Ward and G. N. Wilson, members of said Board, and Jared L. Wamsley, Prosecuting Attorney.

It appearing to the Board that small-pox or some other infectious disease is now prevailing in the County of Pocahontas, it is therefore ordered that quarantine be and the same is hereby declared against said County, and all persons are hereby prohibited from coming into the County of Randolph from the County of Pocahontas except by the permission of the President of this Board.

Every person who shall fail or refuse to comply with this order or any order hereafter made by this Board or who shall come into this County from the County of Pocahontas without the consent of the President of this Board, will be proceeded against according to law and if suspected of having been exposed to said disease will be placed in the pest house of this County provided for the purpose.

The President of this Board is hereby empowered to place guards upon the roads leading into this County from the County of Pocahontas near the line of the said two Counties, whose duty it shall be to enforce the provisions of this order, and are hereby authorized to take in charge any person violating any provision thereof and either compel said person to return to said County of Pocahontas or place him in said pest house.

All the people of this County are requested to co operate with this board and do all in their power to prevent the spread of said disease, and are further requested to stay at their homes as closely as they can as long as said disease prevails.

To Cure Leprosy in Two Days

This is to certify that I have discovered a sure cure for leprosy. Any person who has this disease can write to me and I will send them a receipt free of charge. I do not wish to make any money out of this discovery. I have been afflicted with this disease for many years and have tried many doctors and many remedies, but found no relief. I am now entirely cured by the use of this remedy. Address, Mrs. Mary Summers, Box 45, Bellaire, Ohio.

To our friends and patrons:

It has been circulated through the country, more in particular by merchants who hope to make some gains by doing so, that there is Small pox in our town, and a few have gone so far as to state without any cause whatever that some of our clerks have it, and various other reports too numerous and marvelous to mention. To these we say that they are UNTRUE IN EVERY INSTANCE, and that every precaution to avoid danger. Our Stores are not closed but OPEN. This scare has, of course, CUT TRADE during the past twenty days and as only

SHEETS OF BREAD.

Indian Women Bake Them in the American Desert.

If you wish to dine off a sheet of bread, you must go to the great American desert and ask the women of the Moki Indians to bake it for you. But if you are wise, you will not require too closely into the details of the process. The preparation of the bread, in sheets hardly thicker than a sheet of paper, is a real art among the Moki women. A corner in the principal room is set aside for the accommodation of a shallow trough, walled in with slabs of stone set on end. The trough is divided into three compartments, and in these the first process of bread-making takes place. When bread is to be made, a girl kneels behind each compartment. Shelled corn is then put on the flat stone in the first compartment, and with a coarse oblong stone the first girl proceeds to rub it. The coarse meal thus prepared is passed on to the next compartment. Here it is again rubbed with a stone less coarse, and passed on to the third stage. The result is a decidedly floury meal. With a brush which is made of dried grass bound together with a string of cotton, and with which the floor is swept between times, the meal is then gathered up and mixed with water to a thick batter. Then comes in the art of the baker. She takes a single handful of the batter and spreads it over a long, flat stone, under which a fire has been for some time burning. The batter is made to cover thinly the entire surface. When one side is baked she takes the bread by a corner and pulls it off dexterously, turning it the other side up. When it is done, a long, flat basket receives it, and the baker turns the edges all around, so that the air can get at it. Sheet after sheet is baked until the basket is piled high with the blue bread, or "pik," which the baker pronounces "peka." No salt is used in the batter, and the pik has a sweetish taste. It is usually blue, partaking of the color of the corn from which it is made. It is eaten dry or in a sort of soup. When the men go on a journey they take pik made into rolls, very much as one would roll up a sheet of wet paper, the bread being of about the same thickness as the paper. The stones upon which the bread is baked are prepared by the old women of the tribe with great secrecy and much ceremony. They are very valuable, and are handed down as heirlooms from mother to daughter. The first stage in the process, so says Popular Science News, is smoothing and filling of the surface of the stone with hot pitch. It is then smoked and rubbed for many days, with an accompaniment of rude chanting. As far as a white man may know the first rubbing is with a smooth stone, the next with pieces of wood, while the finishing work is done with the bare hands. The result is a jet black, smooth surface, to which the pik does not stick in baking.

REV. DR. TALMAGE.

THE EMINENT DIVINE'S SUNDAY DISCOURSE.

Subject: The Welfare of Others — We Should Banish Selfishness—Job Delivered From Evil When He Prayed For Friends—Happy From Doing Good.

(COPYRIGHTED.)

WASHINGTON, D. C. — In this discourse Dr. Talmage warns on narrowness of view and urges a life helpful to others; text, Job xlii, 10, "And the Lord turned the captivity of Job when he prayed for his friends."

Comparatively few people read this last chapter of the book of Job. The earlier chapters are so full of thrilling incident, so many words are used describing awful ailments and terrific disaster, of domestic infelicity, of staccato passage of scrambling address, of magnificent proclaimed, of utterances showing Job to have been the greatest scientist of his day, an astronomer, a geographer, and zoologist, and electrician, and poet, that most readers have no heart to get to that text, which strangely and mysteriously, announces that the Lord turned the captivity of Job when he prayed for his friends."

Well, if you will not explain it to me, I will explain it to you. The healthiest, the most recuperative thing on earth to do to stop thinking so much about ourselves and go to thinking about the welfare of others. Job had been studying his own misfortunes, but the more he thought about his bad luck and his disaster and called up while he supplicated God in behalf of Eliphaz the Temanite, Bildad the Shuhite, and Zophar the Naamathite. Job's trouble was the greatest scientist of his day, an astronomer, a geographer, and zoologist, and electrician, and poet, that most readers have no heart to get to that text, which strangely and mysteriously, announces that the Lord turned the captivity of Job when he prayed for his friends."

Well, if you will not explain it to me, I will explain it to you. Job had been studying his own misfortunes, but the more he thought about his bad luck and his disaster and called up while he supplicated God in behalf of Eliphaz the Temanite, Bildad the Shuhite, and Zophar the Naamathite his trouble. given you. It should add a thousand per cent. to your worldly prosperity. Job xlii, 10, "The Lord gave Job twice as much as he had before."

What we all need is to get out of ourselves and go to helping others, whether friends or foes. As beautiful an instance of this we can see as I found last summer in London in the person of Florence Nightingale, the heroine of hospitals and of battlefields. She never was in hospitals. The lounge on which she lies prostrate is a long way from the field, though she has passed into the eighties, she trains nurses for schools, and her influence is felt in the hospitals established in South Africa, while her memory is full of the story of Bethlehem, Bernstorf and Inkermann, where England and France and Russia grappled. She told me that she had no peace of mind after she undertook to alleviate suffering and that since she began that work she had never seen an hour's sickness. She has also concentrated her life by classic attainments, her social position, her influential relatives, her literary power, her philanthropy. For her whole life for others, and her face shows it. I think as much of heaven as is to be spent in it as the prospect of entrance. Tennyson's "Charge of the Light Brigade" is not more thrilling to me than the womanly bravery and nerve that took care of those who were shot from the saddles of the "Immortal six hundred."

My text enthrones prayer and gives it a sceptre to wave over our temporal and eternal affairs. Under God it saved Job and fixed up his finances and restored his family affairs. Job had a family affair that he tried fourteen decades. "But," some one says, "I do not believe in prayer for friends after all." Then you do not think that God is going to change the world's moral machinery for the rescue of souls? Then you do not think that God will change the law of nature at our request, but He will save just as much as we ask Him to do. Neither do I think that God will change the law of nature at our request, but He will save just as much as we ask Him through natural law.

Not a physician of any skill, allopathic or homœopathic, or eclectic, or hydropathic, or electric, but has some time been surprised that his power was thought to be in the pulse, suddenly relaxes its grasp of the patient, and he recovers. Not one law of nature but has fractured it. Why? Because it is given the sudden turn to that illness.

A business man is on the verge of irretrievable—mortgages against him foreclosing, goods to be sold for some reason or other at a sacrifice, ruin impending. He will go to thinking about the welfare of others, and he does nothing else for months, but the more he thought about his bad trouble the poorer he seemed, the more he thought of his calamities the more they hurt, the more he thought of his troubles the more irretrievable became the conjugal relation, the more he thought of his house down town the more terrific seemed the ejectment. His misfortunes grew blacker and blacker, but there was to come a reversal of these conditions. One day he said to himself: "I have been dwelling too much on my own family ailments and my wife's temper and my bereavements. It is time I began to think about others and do something for others, and I will start some by praying for my three friends." They did dropped upon his knees, and as he did so the Lord turned the captivity of his trouble and set all right. Hear it, all ye ages of time and all ye ages of eternity, the Lord turned the captivity of Job when he prayed for his friends."

The field with most of us is too much self cultivation—our health, our fortunes, our advancement, our social position, our pleasures, our losses, our defeats, our sufferings, our persecution, our life, our death, our immortality. Of course we are to look after these things, but there is a world and in a time of such activities and vicissitudes and temptations we must look after our own spiritual welfare, and if we do we will go under. Do one will wait for others to take care of you. Take care of yourself, and then it will not hinder our preservation and prosperity to look after the spiritual necessities and prayers so as to take up the cries. The law in the natural world would seem to be that we must look after ourselves. The centripetal force in nature would throw everything in toward the center, but the centrifugal force in nature would throw everything out from the center, but the centripetal and the centrifugal work harmoniously together. So we must look after ourselves and the centrifugal work after others, and then all will be well.

Some one asked a soldier of Stonewall Jackson the secret of the great general's influence over his men. "Does your general abuse you, swear at you, to make you work?" "Swear!" replied the soldier. "No! Ewell does the swearing; Stonewall does the praying. When Stonewall wants us to march he looks at us sadly, just as if he were sorry for us, and says, 'Men, we have got to go,' and we march without a minute's petition for either the one or the other. Then some of those remarks shown to be once, the importance, the blessedness of prayer, suppose we try to do what Job did when he prayed for his friends. Job's deliverance from evil against those who were kind to us we never could reach the high point of religious experience in which we could pray for those who annoy us and make us feel worse than we did before we met them. That is the furthest that was an Alp, to the top of which we feared we could never climb, but we think God that by the impossible test grace we have reached that height at last. Let us pray! Oh, Christ, who didst pray for Thine enemies, we send a letter without a brief sequence of my thoughts heavenward. I never change my mind about the matter, but

WHAT SAID THE WIND?

BY ALDEN DENHAM.

(His thought.)

The wind is scattering the leaves,
The clouds rush up the sky,
The vagrant snow-flakes find no rest,
But wild and loss until fly,
And still thought wanders with the wind,
Returning but to say
"Oh, how grim as the wind blows,
And none may bid it stay."

Effect of Rain on Fungus.

Have you ever noticed the effect of rain upon people in any busy store? Customers are constantly coming in with their hands in their pockets, but they manage to keep to the right, passing each other in the aisles and dodging, but as soon as the weather clears and the sun comes out they are forced to look for the name of dress goods and they just will find them occupying all one of the aisles and on a third floor. Then they demand to see what kind of goods you have in stock and they just will keep you busy for an hour or two before they get through. What the rain does to customers it does to fungus. It makes it grow.

him and fired, killing him instantly.

The robbers at once commanded the conductor to pull the bell rope. He did so, and as the train slowed up they sprang off and quickly disappeared in the darkness, followed by a futile volley of shots from the now thoroughly aroused passengers.

When Bessie recovered consciousness she found the passengers in the wildest state of excitement, and her horror and indignation knew no bounds when told of the brutal murder of the poor man whose bravery cost him his life.

She experienced a feeling of relief, however, when she learned that it had not been the man who was collecting the money and other valuables, but another—a taller one, who had fired the shot with such terrible effect.

The girl was filled with a sickening dread and bitter humiliation as she again thought of Frank. Not many hours before she was actually wondering whether or not she loved him, almost deciding that she did.

How she had been deceived! She knew now that she had but allowed herself to be dazzled by his compliments and flattered by his attentions, that love had taken no part in the affair, and it was with shame that she remembered having compared him with Harry.

Yes, he was different, and she was glad. But how dare she think of Harry—so good and true? She was entirely unworthy of him, and it would serve her only as she deserved if, during her absence, he had found pleasure in the society of some girl more worthy of him than she, who had been so vain and silly.

A telegram to Bessie's aunt at Chicago brought the happy news of the great improvement of Bessie's mother, and when the train reached Potosi her father was there to meet them with the glad tidings of sure and speedy recovery.

Harry, too, was at the station and found an opportunity to ask in a whisper:

"Bessie, have you decided?"

The almost inaudible "Yes, Harry," sent the blood from the young man's face, leaving him very pale.

"Am I to be happy at last, Bess?" he asked.

The glance which she gave him, even when she said, "Not now, Harry, please," brought the color again to his face, for he knew she had decided in his favor.

Bessie's relatives were greatly surprised when it became known that she and Aunt Sue were in the midst of that daring "hold up." They thought it extremely fortunate that no one was seriously wounded, but Bessie's watch having been accidentally dropped on the bed instead of going into the bag of the robber carried for that purpose.

Several days passed before the papers reported the capture of the train robbers, but neither was taken alive, one having been killed while trying to escape from a farmhouse, the other shooting himself in order to escape death in the flames, his shelter having been fired by the sheriff's posse.

The man was described as handsome Dick Powers, who always dressed well, was well educated, and had every appearance of a gentleman. He was known by several names, and had been often seen in Denver.

One evening, about a week after her return to Potosi Harry said:

"Bessie, you have not given me your final answer now, as you promised? Will you be my wife?"

"Yes, Harry," she said slowly, "if you are still willing to trust your happiness in the hands of one so romantic and foolish as I."

When, a few moments later, she managed to escape from the embrace and kisses which threatened to smother her, she said:

"You have had your way, Harry, for I certainly have had all the romance I want."

"But, Bessie, darling, you could hardly call a train robbery romantic," he replied.

"Why not exactly," she answered. "Yet that had something to do with my cure."—Waverley Magazine.

Nuts as an Article of Food.

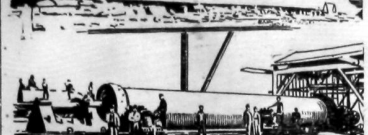

Nuts, which not so long ago were regarded as the special property of squirrels and small boys, are coming to be considered more and more as essential articles of staple diet. As a result, the nut production of this country is increasing. The almond is useful not only as a part of the nut and fruit course, but can be added with advantage to any apple or fruit mixture, either cooked or raw. Brittle Char lotten, turnovers and even pie crust sauce are often improved by the powdered nut. For invalids to whom sugar barred almond meats or gelatine form an important addition to the bill of fare. These preparations are made into breads, biscuits, crackers, blanc mange, etc.

The peanut is valued for its nourishing properties, containing as it does more nitrogenous matter than meat or eggs. Fried from its oil and ground it is used for bread, or with the oil becomes useful as a tonic. Prunes, almonds and walnuts are used largely for confections.

LATEST TRIUMPH IN THE INDUSTRIAL WORLD.

Look at this immense block of granite shown at the top of the picture and think of the amount of work that must be put upon it to convert it into a perfectly round, high-polished column. Then look at the companion picture taken only a few days later with the granite already reduced to cylindrical form ready for the polishing process. The machine which works this rapid transformation is the latest triumph in the industrial world. It is called a stone lathe, and the work that it has been doing since it was installed has demonstrated that it is a success. This lathe was built in Philadelphia, and has been installed in the granite quarries at Vinalhaven, Me., where columns of many sizes are being turned out for the Cathedral of St. John the Divine, New York City. This great new cathedral is to have no less than thirty-two granite columns fifty-four feet long by six feet in diameter, which will weigh when completed 100 tons each. In addition to this it will have innumerable columns of smaller dimensions. In length the lathe that will perform this work is eighty-six feet, and when in working order it weighs 1,135 tons. It has swings six feet six inches by sixty feet long, and it has eight cutters. Each tool takes out acut three inches deep, the entire eight cutters reducing the column twenty-four inches in diameter at one pass over the stone. The block of granite in the illustration weighs 310 tons; it is sixty-seven feet long, eight and a half feet high by seven feet wide.

Gun With a Remarkable Range

The 16-Inch Rifle and the 20-Inch Smooth-Bore Compared.

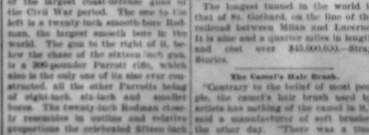

In our recent article of the new army sixteen-inch gun, we described the construction of this powerful weapon and gave some particulars of its remarkable ballistic powers. It was shown that if the gun were set up at the Battery, New York, with an angle of elevation of forty degrees, and fired with a full charge of smokeless powder, the shell would reach a maximum height of five and three-quarter miles, and range to a distance of just under twenty-one miles. With a view to showing what a vast area would be dominated by such a gun, we present the accompanying map of New York City and vicinity, from which our cosmopolitan readers may readily determine whether their nightly ride of one hour, more or less, into the suburbs would be sufficient to place them beyond its zone of fire.

By the courtesy of the War Department, we are enabled to present the accompanying photograph showing a full-sized model of the sixteen-inch army gun, suspended above two of the largest coast-defense guns of the Civil War period. The one to the left is a fifteen-inch Rodman smoothman, the largest smooth bore in the world. The gun to the right of it, below the chase of the sixteen-inch gun, is a 300-pounder Parrott rifle, which also is the only one of its size ever constructed, all the other Parrotts being of eight-inch, six-inch and smaller bores. The twenty-inch Rodman smooth bore resembles in outline and relative proportions the celebrated fifteen-inch smooth bores, of which so many were used in the Civil War, the difference in this gun is twenty feet three and a half inches, the maximum diameter five feet four inches, the diameter of the muzzle is two feet ten inches, and the total weight 115,000 pounds. For the sake of comparison we recapitulate

MAP OF NEW YORK AND VICINITY SHOWING AREA DOMINATED BY FIRE OF SIXTEEN-INCH GUN.

Switzerland enjoys the unenviable distinction of having a larger percent age of lunatics than any other country.

In Switzerland a favorite dish is boiled chestnuts mashed fine and served with whipped cream.

In proportion to its size, Switzerland has more inns than any other country in the world. The entertainment of tourists has become the chief industry of the land, and has been officially computed to bring in $25,000,000 a year.

Little Switzerland comes up with 125,000 men, of whom 102,507 are infantry, 8758 cavalry and 21,632 artillery. The cost of her army annually is about $3,750,000.

The waterfalls of Switzerland are being rapidly utilized for the driving of electric dynamos, and it is rare to find a place of any size which is not well lighted by the power of some mountain stream.

The longest tunnel in the world is that of St. Gothard, on the line of the railroad between Milan and Zurich. It is nine and a quarter miles in length and cost over $45,000,000.—Stray Stories.

The Camel's Hair Brush.

"Contrary to the belief of most people, the camel's hair brush used by artists has nothing of the camel in it," said a manufacturer of soft brushes the other day. "There was a time when real camel's hair was used for this purpose, and only of the desert, however, has long been superseded by the homely little squirrel. Not only is squirrel's hair very much less costly by than camel's hair, but it is softer, more pliable and far more durable. At the present day it is doubtful if you could find a a card house. The next process after the cutting is finished is the turning. This is usually done by women, and very picturesque they look in their great sun bonnets to preserve their complexions, though they are tanned already with exposure to the keen air and hot sun of the moors.

They busily and carefully turn each turf, and, coming to the end, begin all over again, as the peats have to be turned so many times before they are in proper order for use. After they have been turned well they are piled up in what is locally termed "hoyles," that is to say, about six peats underneath, and say five on top. They are left like this for a few days, and are then piled up in "ruckles," which are shaped something like attenuated hayricks.

Peat, like everything else, varies in price according to a good or bad season, and is also appreciably cheaper in summer than in winter. There are various ways of buying and selling. The richer man buys his turf by the load, the poor man by the piece, very much like one man purchases a ton of coal while his poorer neighbor buys a sack or a "hundred." A wagon-load of turf costs about fifteen shillings on the moor, and is hauled or carted at the purchaser's expense. A cart such as in the accompanying illustration, is called a turf cart proper, and would hold about five or possibly six hundredweight.

Turf burns a great deal faster than coal, and in new fashioned grates is hardly suitable; but a good big fire of peat on an open hearth, is, to my mind, a picture, and beside one to do away with the old-world chimney corners and inglenook.

A peat fire has one drawback; when once in it should never be allowed to go out, or it is very difficult to relight, as with that old-fashioned inconvenience the glowing ashes are carried into fence, and with the addition of fresh peat the fire is made to burn up again. There are many old-fashioned sweet houses in Somerset that still retain one of the open hearths and a chimney corner, and I have often sat in one and heard the "yarns" always told in that great fire-place.

The great fuse of most owners is to keep the turf dry, and to this end many peats it has all been taken out for extensive repairs of its existence by the extensive repairs of its existence by the extensive repairs of its existence by the ...ACCIDENT IN NEBRASKA.

We clip from the Evening News, of Plattsmouth, Nebraska, the following account of the death of a son of Wash Young. Mr. Young is a native of this county, a son of the late George Young:

George, the nine-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Wash Young, lies cold in death at the home of his parents, four miles west of this city, as a result of a sad accident, which befell him late yesterday afternoon. After school yesterday he went to the barn and saddled his pony in order to go out into the pasture after the cows. Mr. Young, who had been to town, came home about 9 o'clock and found the boy had not returned. The father at once set out to search for the missing boy, but found no trace of him. He returned to the house, thinking that the lad had probably put in an appearance in the meantime. Finding that he had not done so, Mr. Young decided to make another and more thorough search of the premises—this time accompanied by his dog. As if by instinct the dog bounded ahead and led Mr. Young directly to a place where a sad sight was revealed. The pony was standing in a hollow, which, from a distance, slightly hid them from view. The animal had evidently stumbled while galloping down the incline, falling on top of the unfortunate lad.

Thinking that the boy had only been stunned by the fall, Mr. Young immediately got him out from under the horse and carried him home.

Dr. Schildknecht was at once summoned by telephone, but when the physician arrived he found that the little fellow had been dead for several hours. His neck had been broken, and the pony suffered a similar fracture.

The members of the afflicted family have the sincere sympathy of the entire community.

The funeral will be held Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock from the family residence. Rev. Ass Sleeth of the Methodist church will conduct the services.

A telegraph office has been established at Marlinton. Tickets are sold by the Marlinton agent, Mr. Fleshman, to every point. The new railroad is referred to in the late circular issued by President Stevens of the C. & O. as the Greenbrier Division, announcing as superintendent and general agent H. C. Broughton, office at Rosecrevie. Contractors have commenced improvements on the yard at Rosecrevie.

The state of Oregon has hit upon a device to make men sober that would delight Wooly himself. Every man who drinks has to take out a license costing him $5 a year, and every saloon is armed with a document he cannot be served with liquor at any hotel or saloon. Every six months the names of all persons who take out license are to be published in the paper so that the wives and families of those who are authorized to drink.—Exchange.

Some apprehension exists in consequence of the Winter brothers both being taken sick soon after their return from Hull Kramer's road camp near Marlinton. An agent was sent to ascertain whether the sickness was contracted in the camp from smallpox. Up to last account the physicians had discovered no symptoms of the disease in the case of the Winter brothers.

A Leaf from My Note-Book.

I pick up my Note-Book this morning, December 17, and give you a leaf from it. Starting on a ramble from the Pine Bush heights, or as Senator McNeil suggests Pine Tree, being too large to be called a bush, we mark sign of decay on it as we pass on our way. This tree has braved many a storm but none of them seem to have injured it like the memorable thunder storm of the 28th of last May. Our favorite tree may die from the injury received in that storm.

We hasten on to Big Spring on our way to the Mountain. Passing that there is exchanging a few words of good cheer and pleasantry with Prof. D. L. Barlow and others as we go. There is some delay in the work at William Sharp & Co's saw mill as the engine needs some repairs. We do sincerely hope that those people connected with this mill will soon get under head way again and do good and paying work in their line of business. Prof Barlow is just getting his planer in operation. Mr Barlow, in this work with his planer, confers a favor not only on the mill, but perhaps later on, feed mill, bids fair not only to utilize the waters from these beautiful springs which come gushing out from the mountain side, but to do a good paying business here.

In our ramble we do not forget to give a call to Taylor at the McLaughlin mill a passing notice. Mr T. is comfortable and happy. He is a good miller and we hope he may always have a grist to grind.

But passing Taylor Moore's neat and quiet dome on a nice elevation to the left of us we would, if time would permit, like to say at least "How do you do," to him and his, but on we go and pass Asa Barlow's residence, recently built, among those beautiful sugar trees, also is from home, busy hauling walnut logs. We admire the location and will go on to Uncle Henry Barlow's home. Here in the yard we find Anderson Barlow and George VanRiseman preparing wood to keep Uncle Henry and his folks this winter. On inquiry we learn that the old gentleman is sick. We go in and talk matters over and find him better. He is not too sick to talk and joke. Uncle Henry is three score and ten years old with three or four years additional. We hope he may see at least several winters yet in this life and then go finally to a clime that is blessed and glorious in the "sweet fields of Eden," where we will all want to be found in due turn to leave this mundane sphere.

The "Good-Bye" is given, and away we go to reach A. C. Curry's dwelling place high on the mountain above Stony Creek before night fall. Glancing to and fro at things generally on our way we have no time to take notes, but hurry on up the valley, around the mountain and go winding up until we reach the level and healthful top where Amos Curry lives. We learned here the name of the mountain, but not noting it at once we have forgotten it. Here and about here we stayed nearly twenty-four hours. In our walks we reach William Vanreenan's quiet home, but Will had taken his gun and gone into the mountains, and we did not see him. We are told that Joseph Barlow is preparing to build a house here and move into it as soon as practicable. Mr Vanreenan talks some of moving to Williams River.

We talked with Mr Curry about things generally, but neither of us said "yes" to every thing the other said, but we got along well together. If you want to have a social talk visit our friend Curry.

DUNMORE.

A Happy New Year, Mum.

Peace on earth; good will to men.

Paddy Gay, of Elkins, was in town last week looking for fine horses. Mr. Gay has the largest and best equipped livery stable in the State of Elkins.

Emory Conrad has opened up a barber's shop at Arbervale.

Miss Gertie Yeager is visiting in town.

We were at Cass Saturday and saw the first passenger train and the pay car come in. Capt. Frazier was in charge. Quite a crowd of people was present, and everybody was very lively. The big store at that place will receive about six car loads of goods this week.

The daughters of Dr. Moomaw, Dr. Austin and E. S. Moore came home Friday from Lewisburg to stay a while.

Most all the logs from the fall road and timber camps are home this week.

The County Court should make some arrangements about some of the county roads at the January term. The roads must be fixed up before they become impassable. Today they are just off. The roots it will cost to repair them. These should also be something done at once with the new road down Locust Creek to Cass. It is almost impossible to get there with a wagon.

The people of Dunmore and Green Bank gave Rev H. W. McLaughlin a remarkable pounding Monday night.

Deputy Sheriff Shamis took a pet house at Frederick Keeper.

Master Winford McElwee was badly hurt Saturday by a horse he was riding falling on him. He was not able to walk and he was carried home in a wagon. He is reported to be getting along well.

Mrs Andrew Woodell of Beaver, Beckley, is quite ill at this writing.

Mrs Mary Ann Woodell, relict of the late Andrew Woodell, is on the sick list at this writing.

The Misses Moomaw and Austin came up on the train last Friday to spend Xmas at home.

J. H. Curry is on the sick list, don't think he is taking small pox.

Mrs Lorine Nottingham is visiting her daughter, Mrs J. H. Curry, who is on the sick-list.

There will be a watch meeting at Wesley Chapel on December 31st by Rev J. W. McNeil.

E. O. Moore is on the sick list.

We hope the road overseer will remove the blockade in the road near the post office.

BUSH—DILLEY.

Married, At the residence of the bride's father, Clark Dilley, Henry E. Bush and Miss Sarah C. Dilley, Rev J. W. McNeil officiating. After the ceremony all the friends present sat down to a bountiful dinner which was enjoyed by all. May their married life be as bright as the day on which they were married, without a cloud.

DIED.

Memorial.

Died, November 25, 1900, Robert Keith, infant son of P. P. and L. J. Oliver, aged 4 months and 28 days.—An empty cradle on earth, but a bright little angel has gone to swell the angel band in heaven. May the sorrowing parents bow in submission to the will of God, who said suffer the little children to come unto me, for of such is the Kingdom of heaven." We know he cannot return to them but they can go to him. As death has left an empty void this world can never fill. For they knew not how dearly they loved him until he was gone.

Our father knows best and we trust him,
He takes back the jewel he gave;
Christ knoweth our sorrow,
For he has wept at the grave.

This world be dreary without him:
Our path is wet with our tears,
But out of the night of our sorrow
The dawn of the morning appears.

JOHN B. KENNISON.

Died, December 18, 1900, at his home near Hillsboro, Pocahontas County, John Barlow Kennison, aged more than 80 years. This worthy and much esteemed citizen was a grandson of Charles Kennison, one of the two brothers who were the earliest pioneers of the Little Levels. Our lamented friend passed a busy life farming and operating a flourishing blacksmith business. He was a noted expert at the anvil, and by patient industry and judicious economy acquired a fine property now occupied by his children. He was a devoted adherent of the Methodist church for many years. From youth to old age all who knew him had a good word for John B. Kennison.

W. T. P.

JACOB K. TAYLOR.

Died, at his home Tuesday night, December 18, 1900, at 11 p. m. Jacob K. Taylor, 66 years old. Mr Taylor had been afflicted for about a year with some sort of throat trouble, but bore it all without a murmur. He was a member of the M. E. Church South, and his funeral sermon was preached Thursday by his son Rev John A. Taylor, assisted by Revs McNeil and McLaughlin, his six oldest sons acting as pall bearers—first, Jacob B.; and J. Edward; second, Daniel and William; third, Rev John A. and G. S. His other two sons Ham and Frank were present, also his daughters Mrs Andrew Moore, of Hutlonsville, and Miss Sallie. Mrs Cook was not there.—Mr Taylor leaves a wife and twelve children and hosts of friends to mourn him. He was a black smith and farmer, and served through the war from 1861 to 1865. He was born in Rockingham County, Va., and lived in Pocahontas County about 41 years. He was a good citizen. Peace to his ashes.

CIRCUIT COURT.

Judge McWhorter came up Wednesday and held a special term of the court. The case of the subcontractors Cogan, Noble & House was taken up and S. J. Payne moved to dismiss the attachment suit against Strang & Co. on the ground that it tied up the funds of Strang & Co. Geo. J. McCanna for the railroad company attacked the attachment proceedings also representing the garnishee.

The attorneys for the receiver and the creditors opposed the motion on the ground that if the money was paid over there would be danger of loss to the creditors.

The court released the attachment as far as it applied to the land and personal property but held the attachment as far as it applied to the money in the railway company's hands, and ordered Commissioner Bratton proceed with the report and finish in time possible for a special term to be held in January.

The attorney for the railroad company attacked the mechanic's liens filed by some of the laborers of Cogan, Noble & House and the court held the liens not good. The protection afforded laborers by our mechanic's lien law amounts to nothing in this State and every effort to amend the law so that a large corporation may be held responsible for work done by laborers for its contractors has been defeated in the legislature. The law as it stands now is a dead letter.

A decree of sale was entered in the partition case of Lottie R. Hill vs. George Simmons and others for the sale of 114½ acres of land which Jacob Simmons willed to his six youngest children. The land not being susceptible of partition it was considered best to sell it and divide the proceeds.

The case of Burnsides vs. Greenbrier Railway Company was heard on bill and demurrer. The demurrer was sustained and the plaintiff given leave to amend. This is a case in which 3.90 acres of land belonging to infants was taken for the right of way for the railroad for $1.00 damages and involves the question of just compensation. The land was partly farm land and partly a sugar camp. The owners not knowing the result of the action of the railroad condemnation proceedings waited until the statutory time had elapsed without protesting. They now ask a review of the case and just compensation.

In the case of Cogan, Noble & House there is a wide difference between the parties. The creditors who are so numerous that you might as well call them for short, the public, claim that they should be paid in full and that the earnings under the contracts of grading and bridge building are sufficient to pay them. On the other hand Strang & Co claim that nearly all the funds that would be available to the indebtedness which is nearly $9000 has been used to finish the work.

The accounts are long and complex and the public will have to remain calm until the courts decide who is right in the contention.

Geo. W. McClintic spent Christmas in Marlinton.

Try Compound Syrup of White Pine for coughs and colds. It is absolutely safe and reliable. Formula on each bottle, and is recommended by all physicians. Prepared and for sale by Harry R. Echols, Druggist.

Christmas passed off quietly in Marlinton. Some drunk to the health of the season but since the town authorities have taken to making a charge for using the town as a place to whoop it up, it is considered the proper thing to be drunk and act sober, while being sober and acting drunk is a grave offense.

B. F. Hamilton has moved into his new building near the crossing and desires his friends to know of his present whereabouts. The building ranks among the best in the place. He will take poultry on Thursday, Dec. 27th, and will be more than pleased to see his patrons on that day and at all times. He takes this opportunity to express his hearty thanks for their liberal patronage in the past and feels sure he is now able to do better by them in the future.

To our customers and friends—We wish you a merry Christmas and a happy and prosperous New Year. With these greetings, permit us also to convey our appreciation of your support and patronage. Our business during the past year has surpassed our most sanguine expectations. We feel grateful to you for our success and heartily thank you for it. Assuring a continuance of your patronage, and hoping that the new century may bring much happiness and joy to you and yours, we beg to remain,

Yours very respectfully,

A newspaper's real educator; there are many kinds of educators but the man who spends money judiciously and liberally is better able to impart his knowledge than the man who has little or nothing to spend.

THE SUN is The Highest Type of a Newspaper.

The Sun's special correspondents throughout the United States, as well as in Europe, South Africa, China, and in fact all over the world, make it an uptodate newspaper.

The market reports and commercial features put the farmer, the merchant and the broker in close touch with the markets at Baltimore, Norfolk, Charleston, New York, Chicago, Philadelphia and other places which are prominent centers.

From now on the news of the world, as well as the national and political questions will arise, making probably the most eventful period in the country's history.

This together with the corps of editors and reporters at Baltimore, Washington and New York, make The Sun invaluable to its readers.

"About five years ago I was troubled with catarrh of the lower bowel," says C. T. Chisholm, 484 Dearborn Ave., Chicago, and although I consulted several eminent physicians who prescribed for me I found their remedies failed in any way to relieve me and the trouble almost became chronic. After suffering several months, I one day concluded to try Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and I beg to assure you that I was completely relieved of the disease that had cost me so much trouble and annoyance. I am pleased to say I have not suffered from it since."

Getting Thin

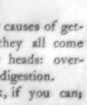

is all right, if you are too fat; and all wrong, if too thin already.

Fat, enough for your habit, is healthy; a little more, or less, is no great harm. Too fat, consult a doctor; too thin, persistently thin, no matter what cause, take Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil.

There are many causes of getting too thin; they all come under these two heads: overwork and under-digestion.

Stop over-work, if you can; but, whether you can or not, take Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil, to balance yourself with your work. You can't live on it—true—but, by it, you can. There's a limit, however, you'll pay for it.

Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil is the readiest cure for "can't eat," unless it comes of your doing no work—you can't long be well and strong, without some sort of activity.

The genuine has this picture on it, take no other.

If you have not tried it, send for free sample, its agreeable taste will surprise you. SCOTT & BOWNE Chemists, 409 Pearl Street, New York.

Coated

Look at your tongue. Is it coated?

Then you have a bad taste in your mouth every morning. Your appetite is poor, and food distresses you. You have frequent headaches and are often dizzy. Your stomach is weak and your bowels are always constipated.

There's an old and reliable cure:

Ayer's Pills

Don't take a cathartic dose and then stop. Better take a laxative dose each night, just enough to cause one good free movement the day following.

You feel better the very next day. Your appetite returns, your dyspepsia is cured, your headaches pass away, your tongue clears up, your liver acts well, and your bowels no longer give you trouble.

Price, 25 cents. All druggists.

"I have taken Ayer's Pills for 20 years, and I consider them the best made. One pill does us more good than half a box of any other kind I have ever tried."

ANCIENT SUN-DIALS.

The Earliest Was Probably a Nomad Chief's Spear.

It is probable that the earliest sun-dial was simply the spear of some nomad chief stuck upright in the ground before his tent. Amongst those desert wanderers, keen to observe their surroundings, it would not be a difficult thing to notice that the shadow shortened as the sun rose higher in the sky, and that the shortest shadow always pointed in the same direction—north. The recognition would have followed very soon that his noonday shadow changed its length from day to day. A six-foot spear would give a shadow at noonday in latitude 40 of twelve feet at one time of the year, or less than two feet at another. This instrument, so simple, so easily carried, so easily set up, may well have begun the scientific study of astronomy, for it best itself to measurement, and science is measurement; and probably we see it expressed in permanent form in the obelisks of Egyptian solar temples, though these, no doubt, were related merely as solar emblems ages after their use as actual instruments of observation had ceased. An upright stick, carefully plumbed, standing on some level surface, may, therefore, well make the first advance from the natural horizon. A knob on the top of the stick will be found to render the shadow more easily observed.

INSIDE YOUR WATCH.

Hundreds of Tons of Study on the Balance Wheel.

If you own a watch open it and look at the little wheel, springs and screws, such an indispensable part of the whole wonderful machine. The busy little balance wheel alone is the result of hundreds of years of study and experiment. The watch I have before me is composed of 98 pieces, and its manufacture embraces more than 2,000 distinct and separate operations. Some of the smallest screws are so minute that (the unaided eye cannot distinguish them from the steel filings or specks of dirt. Under a powerful magnifying glass a perfect screw is revealed. The slit in the head is two one-thousandths of an inch wide. It takes 300,000 of these screws to weigh a pound, and a pound is worth $1,585. The hairspring is a strip of the finest steel about 9½ inches long, a hundredth part of an inch wide and twenty-seven ten-thousandths of an inch thick. It is coiled up in spiral form and finely tempered. The process of tempering was long held a secret by a few fortunate ones possessing it, and even now is not generally known. Their manufacture requires great skill and care. The strip is gauged to twenty one-thousandths of an inch, but no measuring instrument has yet been devised capable of the fine enough gauging to determine beforehand by the size of the strip what the strength of the finished spring will be. A twenty-thousandth part of an inch difference in the thickness of the strip makes a difference in the timing of a watch of about six minutes per hour. The value of these springs when finished and placed in watches is enormous in proportion to the material from which they are made. A comparison will give a good idea. A ton of gold is worth $627,916. A ton of steel made up into hairsprings when in watches is worth $7,883,290—more than twelve and one-half times the value of pure gold. Hairspring wire weighs one-twentieth of a grain to the inch. One mile of wire weighs less than half a pound. The balance gives five vibrations every second, 300 every minute, 18,000 every hour, 432,000 every day and 157,680,000 every year. As each vibration it rotates about one and a quarter times, which makes 197,100,000 revolutions every year. In order that we may better understand the enormous amount of labor performed by these tiny works let us make a few comparisons. Take, for illustration, a locomotive with six foot driving wheels. Let its wheels be run till they shall have given the same number of revolutions that a watch gives in one year and they will have covered a distance equal to twenty-eight completed circuits of the earth. All this a watch does without other attention than winding once every twenty-four hours. When we compare with this the frequent repairs an engine receives we certainly ought to be willing to have our watches cleaned once a year.—Chicago News.

Our Postal System.

For the first time since 1883 our postal revenues exceeded the expenditures. In that year there was a surplus of nearly $3,000,000, the second and last surplus, so easily carried, so easily set up, may well have begun the scientific study of astronomy, for it best itself to measurement, and science is measurement; and probably we see it expressed in permanent form in the obelisks of Egyptian solar temples, though these, no doubt, were related merely as solar emblems ages after their use as actual instruments of observation had ceased. An upright stick, carefully plumbed, standing on some level surface, may, therefore, well make the first advance from the natural horizon. A knob on the top of the stick will be found to render the shadow more easily observed.

REV. DR. TALMAGE.

THE EMINENT DIVINE'S SUNDAY DISCOURSE.

Subject: The Faith of Rahab—There Is Mercy For All Sinners—Cheer For All Who Are Engaged in Life's Battles—Meaning of the Sun's Standing Still.

(Copyright, 1899.)

WASHINGTON, D. C.—In this discourse Dr. Talmage follows Joshua on his triumphal march and speaks encouraging words to all who are engaged in the battles of this life; text, Joshua i, 5, "There shall not any man be able to stand before thee all the days of thy life."

Moses was dead. A beautiful tradition says the Lord kissed him and in that act drew forth the soul of the dying lawgiver. He had been buried; only one person at the funeral—the same One who kissed him. But God never takes a man away from any place of usefulness until He has some one ready to replace him. The Lord does not go looking around amid a great vacancy for a candidate to fill some one especially fitted for the vacated position. He makes a man for that place. Moses has passed off the stage, and Joshua, the hero, puts his foot on the platform of history so solidly that all the ages echo with the tramp. He was a magnificent fighter, but he always fought on the right side, and he never fought unless God told him to fight. He got his military equipment from God who gave him the promise at the start, "Be ready to replace him. The Lord does not go looking around amid a great va- cancy for a candidate to fill some one especially fitted for the vacated position. He makes a man for that place. Moses has passed off the stage, and Joshua, the hero, puts his foot on the platform of history so solidly that all the ages echo with the tramp. He was a magnificent fighter, but he always fought on the right side, and he never fought unless God told him to fight. He got his military equipment from God who gave him the promise at the start, "Be strong and of a good courage, for unto this people shalt thou divide for an inheritance the land which I sware unto their fathers to give them. Only be strong and very courageous, that thou mayest observe to do according to all the law which Moses my servant commanded thee; turn not from it to the right hand or to the left, that thou mayest prosper whithersoever thou goest. This book of the law shall not depart out of thy mouth; but thou shalt meditate therein day and night, that thou mayest observe to do according to all that is written therein; for then thou shalt make thy way prosperous, and then thou shalt have good success. Have not I commanded thee? Be strong and of a good courage; be not afraid, neither be thou dismayed, for the Lord thy God is with thee whithersoever thou goest." Joshua was a man of prayer, and he prayed for the sun to stand still. Some have thought that the sun did not stand still, but that the earth stopped its revolution. But the Bible says the sun stood still, and I believe it. Joshua was a military man, and he knew that the longer the daylight continued the more time he had to fight. He
